History: Subsec. 70(9.11) renumbered (from (9.1)) and amended by 2007, c. 2, subsec. 10(1), applicable to a disposition, that occurs after May 1, 2006, of a property unless the disposition was before 2007 and the taxpayer elects in writing in the taxpayer's return of income for the taxation year in which the disposition occurred to have subsec. 70(9.1), as it read on May 1, 2006, apply to the disposition. Subsec. 70(9.1) formerly read:

(9.1) Transfer of farm property from trust to settlor's children — Where any property in Canada of a taxpayer that is land or depreciable property of a prescribed class has been transferred or distributed to a trust described in subsection (6) or subsection 73(1) (as that subsection applied to transfers before 2000) or a trust to which subparagraph 73(1.01)(c)(i) applies and the property or a replacement property for that property in respect of which the trust has made an election under subsection 13(4) or 44(1) was, immediately before the death of the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner who was a beneficiary under the trust, used in the business of farming and has, on the death of the spouse or common-law partner and as a consequence of the death, been transferred or distributed to and vested indefeasibly in an individual who was a child of the taxpayer and who was resident in Canada immediately before the death of the spouse or common-law partner, the following rules apply:

(a) subsections 104(4) and (5) do not apply to the trust in respect of the property,

(b) the trust shall be deemed to have, immediately before the spouse's or common-law partner's death, disposed of the property and received proceeds of disposition therefor equal to

(i) where the property was depreciable property of a prescribed class, the lesser of the capital cost and the cost amount to the trust of the property immediately before the death, and

(ii) where the property is land (other than land to which subparagraph (i) applies), its adjusted cost base to the trust immediately before the death, and the child shall be deemed to have acquired the property at the time of the death at a cost equal to those proceeds,

(c) where any depreciable property of a prescribed class that is deemed by paragraph (b) to have been disposed of by the trust is acquired by a child of the taxpayer as a consequence of the spouse's or common-law partner's death (other than where the trust's proceeds of disposition of the property under paragraph (b) are redetermined under subsection 13(21.1)) and the amount that was the capital cost to the trust of the property exceeds the amount determined under paragraph (b) to be the cost to the child of the property, for the purposes of sections 13 and 20 and any regulations made for the purpose of paragraph 20(1)(a),

(i) its capital cost to the child shall be deemed to be the amount that was its capital cost to the trust, and

(ii) the excess shall be deemed to have been allowed to the child in respect of the property under regulations made for the purpose of paragraph 20(1)(a) in computing income for taxation years that ended before the child acquired the property, and

(d) where the property of the trust that is deemed by paragraph (b) to have been disposed of is acquired by a child of the taxpayer as a consequence of the spouse's or common-law partner's death and the trust's proceeds of disposition of the property under paragraph (b) are redetermined under subsection 13(21.1), notwithstanding paragraph (b),

(i) where the property was depreciable property of a prescribed class and the amount that was its capital cost to the trust exceeds the amount so redetermined under subsection 13(21.1), for the purposes of sections 13 and 20 and any regulations made for the purpose of paragraph 20(1)(a),

(A) its capital cost to the child shall be deemed to be the amount that was its capital cost to the trust, and

(B) the excess shall be deemed to have been allowed to the child in respect of the property under regulations made for the purpose of paragraph 20(1)(a) in computing income for taxation years that ended before the child acquired the property, and

(ii) where the property is land (other than land to which subparagraph (i) applies), its cost to the child shall be deemed to be the amount that was the trust's proceeds of disposition as redetermined under subsection 13(21.1), except that, where the trust so elects in its return of income under this Part for its taxation year in which the spouse or common-law partner died, paragraph (b) shall be read as follows:

"(b) the trust shall be deemed to have, immediately before the spouse's or common-law partner's death, disposed of the property and received proceeds of disposition therefor equal to such amount as the trust elects in its return of income under this Part for the year in which the spouse or common-law partner died, not greater than the greater of nor less than the lesser of

(i) where the property was depreciable property of a prescribed class,

(A) its fair market value immediately before the death, and

(B) the lesser of the capital cost and the cost amount to the trust of the property immediately before the death, and

(ii) where the property is land (other than land to which subparagraph (i) applies),

(A) its fair market value immediately before the death, and

(B) its adjusted cost base to the trust immediately before the death,

and the child shall be deemed to have acquired the property at the time of the death at a cost equal to those proceeds, except that for the purpose of this paragraph, where the elected amount exceeds the greater of the amounts determined under clauses (i)(A) and (B) or (ii)(A) and (B), as the case may be, it shall be deemed to be equal to the greater thereof, and where the elected amount is less than the lesser of the amounts determined under clauses (i)(A) and (B) or (ii)(A) and (B), as the case may be, it shall be deemed to be equal to the lesser thereof,".

The opening words of subsec. 70(9.1) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 52(6), applicable to transfers and distributions from trusts that occur after 1999. Where a particular transfer or distribution to a trust referred to in amended subsec. 70(9.1) occurred before 2001, in applying that subsec. to a transfer or distribution from the trust that occurs after 1997, it shall be read without reference to the words "or common-law partner" and to the Modernization of Benefits and Obligations Act, 2000, c. 12, unless

(a) the particular transfer or distribution occurred after 1997;

(b) the death referred to in that subsec. occurs after 1997; and

(c) either

(i) at the time of the particular transfer or distribution referred to in para. (a), the taxpayer was a spouse of the individual whose death is referred to in para. (b), or

(ii) because of an election under s. 144 of 2000, c. 12, sections 130 to 142 of that Act applied, at the time of the particular transfer or distribution referred to in para. (a), to the taxpayer and the individual whose death is referred to in para. (b).

The opening words formerly read:

(9.1) Transfer of farm property from spouse's [or common-law partner's] trust to settlor's children — Where any property in Canada of a taxpayer that is land or depreciable property of a prescribed class has been transferred or distributed to a trust described in subsection (6) or subsection 73(1) and the property or a replacement property therefor in respect of which the trust has made an election under subsection 13(4) or 44(1) was, immediately before the death of the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner who was a beneficiary under the trust, used in the business of farming and has, on the death of the spouse or common-law partner and as a consequence thereof, been transferred or distributed to and become vested indefeasibly in a child of the taxpayer who was resident in Canada immediately before the death of the spouse or common-law partner, the following rules apply:

Subsec. 70(9.1) amended by 2000, c. 12, Sch. 2, s. 1, to replace "spouse" with "spouse or common-law partner", and by Sch. 2, s. 7 to replace "spouse's"with "spouse's or common-law partner's", applicable to 2001 et seq., in force July 31, 2000. See also the transitional rules reproduced in the History to 248(1)"common-law partner".

All that portion of subsec. 70(9.1) following para. (a) substituted by 1994, c. 21, subsec. 33(9), applicable to dispositions and acquisitions occurring after 1992. That portion of the subsec. formerly read:

(b) the trust shall be deemed to have disposed of the property immediately before the death of the taxpayer's spouse and to have received proceeds of disposition therefor equal to,

(i) where the property was depreciable property of the trust of a prescribed class, that proportion of the undepreciated capital cost to the trust immediately before the death of the spouse of all of the depreciable property of the trust of that class that the fair market value at that time of the property was of the fair market value at that time of all of the depreciable property of the trust of that class, and

(ii) where the property was land, its adjusted cost base to the trust immediately before the death of the spouse, and the child shall be deemed to have acquired the property for an amount equal to those proceeds, and

(c) where any depreciable property of the trust of a prescribed class that is deemed by paragraph (b) to have been disposed of by the trust has been acquired by a child of the taxpayer by virtue of the death of the taxpayer's spouse and the amount that was the capital cost to the trust of that property exceeds the amount determined under paragraph (b) to be the cost to the child of that property, for the purposes of sections 13 and 20 and any regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a),

(i) the capital cost to the child of the property shall be deemed to be the amount that was the capital cost to the trust of the property, and

(ii) the excess shall be deemed to have been allowed to the child in respect of the property under regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a) in computing income for taxation years before the acquisition by the child of the property,

except that, where the trust has so elected in its return of income under this Part for its taxation year in which the taxpayer's spouse died, paragraph (b) shall be read as follows:

"(b) the trust shall be deemed to have disposed of the property immediately before the death of the taxpayer's spouse and to have received proceeds of disposition therefor equal to such amount as the trust has elected, not greater than the greater of or less than the lesser of

(i) where the property was depreciable property of a prescribed class,

(A) the fair market value of the property immediately before the death of the spouse, and

(B) that proportion of the undepreciated capital cost to the trust immediately before the death of the spouse of all the depreciable property of that class of the trust that the fair market value at that time of the property disposed of was of the fair market value at that time of all the depreciable property of that class of the trust, and

(ii) where the property was land not described in subparagraph (i),

(A) the fair market value of the land immediately before the death of the spouse, and

(B) the adjusted cost base to the trust of the land immediately before the death of the spouse, and the child shall be deemed to have acquired the property for an amount equal to those proceeds, except that for the purposes of this paragraph, where the elected amount exceeds the greater of the amounts determined under subparagraphs (i) and (ii), it shall be deemed to be equal to the greater thereof, and where the elected amount is less than the lesser of the amounts determined under those subparagraphs, it shall be deemed to be equal to the lesser thereof; and".

Para. 70(9.1)(a) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 28(13), applicable after December 20, 1991. That para. formerly read:

(9.2) When subsec. (9.21) applies — Subsection (9.21) applies to a taxpayer and a child of the taxpayer in respect of a property of the taxpayer in respect of which subsection (5) would, if this Act were read without reference to this subsection, apply to the taxpayer and the child if

(a) the property was, immediately before the death of the taxpayer, a share of the capital stock of a family fishing corporation of the taxpayer, an interest in a family fishing partnership of the taxpayer, a share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation of the taxpayer or an interest in a family farm partnership of the taxpayer;

(b) the child of the taxpayer was resident in Canada immediately before the day on which taxpayer died; and

(c) as a consequence of the death of the taxpayer, the property is transferred to and becomes vested indefeasibly in the child within the period ending 36 months after the death of the taxpayer or, if written application has been made to the Minister by the taxpayer's legal representative within that period, within any longer period that the Minister considers reasonable in the circumstances.

(9.21) Transfer of family farm and fishing corporations and partnerships — If, because of subsection (9.2), this subsection applies to the taxpayer and a child of the taxpayer in respect of a property of the taxpayer that has been transferred to the child as a consequence of the death of the taxpayer, the following rules apply:

(a) where the taxpayer's legal representative does not elect, in the taxpayer's return of income under this Part for the taxation year in which the taxpayer died, to have paragraph (b) apply to the taxpayer in respect of the property,

(i) paragraphs (5)(a) and (b) and section 69 do not apply to the taxpayer and the child in respect of the property,

(ii) where the property is, immediately before the death of the taxpayer, a share of the capital stock of a family fishing corporation of the taxpayer, or a share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation of the taxpayer,

(A) the taxpayer is deemed to have

(I) disposed of the property immediately before the taxpayer's death, and

(II) received proceeds of disposition in respect of that disposition equal to the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer, immediately before the time of that disposition, of the property, and

(B) the child is, immediately after the time of the disposition, deemed to have acquired the property at a cost equal to the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition in respect of that disposition determined under clause (A), and

(iii) where the property is, immediately before the death of the taxpayer, a partnership interest described in paragraph (9.2)(a) (other than a partnership interest to which subsection 100(3) applies),

(A) the taxpayer is, except for the purpose of paragraph 98(5)(g), deemed not to have disposed of the property as a consequence of the taxpayer's death,

(B) the child is deemed to have acquired the property at the time of the taxpayer's death at a cost equal to the cost to the taxpayer of the interest immediately before the time that is immediately before the time of the taxpayer's death, and

(C) each amount required by subsection 53(1) or (2) to be added or deducted in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer, immediately before the time of the taxpayer's death, of the property is deemed to be an amount required by subsection 53(1) or (2) to be added or deducted in computing, at any time at or after the time of the taxpayer's death, the adjusted cost base to the child of the property; and

(b) where the taxpayer's legal representative elects, in the taxpayer's return of income under this Part for the taxation year in which the taxpayer died, to have this paragraph apply to the taxpayer in respect of the property,

(i) paragraphs (5)(a) and (b) and section 69 do not apply to the taxpayer and the child in respect of the property,

(ii) subject to subparagraph (iii), where the property is, immediately before the taxpayer's death, a share of the capital stock of a family fishing corporation of the taxpayer, a share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation of the taxpayer, an interest in a family fishing partnership of the taxpayer or an interest in a family farm partnership of the taxpayer,

(A) the taxpayer is deemed to have

(I) disposed of the property immediately before the taxpayer's death, and

(II) received, at the time of the disposition of the property, proceeds of disposition in respect of the disposition of the property equal to the amount that the taxpayer's legal representative designates, which must not be greater than the greater of nor less than the lesser of

1. the fair market value of the property immediately before the taxpayer's death, and

2. the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the property immediately before the time of the disposition,

(B) the child is, immediately after the time of the disposition, deemed to have acquired the property at a cost equal to the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition in respect of the disposition of the property determined under clause (A),

(C) except for the purpose of this clause, where the amount designated by the taxpayer's legal representative under subclause (A)(II) exceeds the greater of the amounts determined under sub-subclauses (A)(II)1 and 2 in respect of the property, the amount designated is deemed to be equal to the greater of those amounts, and

(D) except for the purpose of this clause, where the amount designated by the taxpayer's legal representative under subclause (A)(II) is less than the lesser of the amounts determined under sub-subclauses (A)(II)1 and 2 in respect of the property, the amount designated is deemed to be equal to the lesser of those amounts, and

(iii) where the property is, immediately before the death of the taxpayer, a partnership interest described in paragraph (9.2)(a) (other than a partnership interest to which subsection 100(3) applies), and the taxpayer's legal representative further elects, in the taxpayer's return of income under this Part for the taxation year in which the taxpayer died, to have this subparagraph apply to the taxpayer in respect of the property,

(A) the taxpayer is, except for the purpose of paragraph 98(5)(g), deemed not to have disposed of the property as a consequence of the taxpayer's death,

(B) the child is deemed to have acquired the property at the time of the taxpayer's death at a cost equal to the cost to the taxpayer of the interest immediately before the time that is immediately before the death of the taxpayer, and

the taxpayer, immediately before the time of the taxpayer's death, of the property is deemed to be an amount required by subsection 53(1) or (2) to be added or deducted in computing, at any time at or after the taxpayer's death, the adjusted cost base to the child of the property.

History: Subsec. 70(9.21) renumbered (from (9.2)) and amended by 2007, c. 2, subsec. 10(1), applicable to a disposition, that occurs after May 1, 2006, of a property unless the disposition was before 2007 and the taxpayer elects in writing in the taxpayer's return of income for the taxation year in which the disposition occurred to have subsec. 70(9.2), as it read on May 1, 2006, apply to the disposition. Subsec. 70(9.2) formerly read:

(9.2) Transfer of family farm [or fishing] corporations and partnerships — Where at any time property of a taxpayer that was, immediately before the taxpayer's death, a share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation of the taxpayer or an interest in a family farm partnership of the taxpayer to which subsection (5) would otherwise apply is, as a consequence of the death, transferred or distributed to a child of the taxpayer who was resident in Canada immediately before the death and it can be shown, within the period ending 36 months after the death or, where written application therefor has been made to the Minister by the taxpayer's legal representative within that period, within such longer period as the Minister considers reasonable in the circumstances, that the property has vested indefeasibly in the child,

(a) subsection (5) does not apply in respect of the property, and

(b) where the property is a share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have, immediately before the taxpayer's death, disposed of the property and received proceeds of disposition therefor equal to its adjusted cost base to the taxpayer immediately before the death, and the child shall be deemed to have acquired the property at the time of the death at a cost equal to those proceeds, and

(c) where the property is an interest in a family farm partnership (other than an interest in a partnership to which subsection 100(3) applies),

(i) the taxpayer shall, except for the purpose of paragraph 98(5)(g), be deemed not to have disposed of the property as a consequence of the taxpayer's death,

(ii) the child shall be deemed to have acquired the property at the time of the death at a cost equal to the cost to the taxpayer of the interest, and

(iii) each amount added or deducted in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the property shall be deemed to be required by subsection 53(1) or (2) to be added or deducted, as the case may be, in computing its adjusted cost base to the child, except that, where the taxpayer's legal representative so elects in the taxpayer's return of income under this Part for the year in which the taxpayer died, paragraph (c) does not apply and paragraph (b) shall be read as follows:

"(b) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have, immediately before the taxpayer's death, disposed of the property and received proceeds of disposition therefor equal to such amount as the legal representative elects in the taxpayer's return of income under this Part for the year in which the taxpayer died, not greater than the greater of nor less than the lesser of

(i) its fair market value immediately before the death, and

(ii) its adjusted cost base to the taxpayer immediately before the death, and the child shall be deemed to have acquired the property at the time of the death at a cost equal to those proceeds, except that for the purpose of this paragraph, where the elected amount exceeds the greater of the amounts determined under subparagraphs (i) and (ii), it shall be deemed to be equal to the greater thereof, and where the elected amount is less than the lesser of the amounts determined under subparagraphs (i) and (ii), it shall be deemed to be equal to the lesser thereof, and,".

All that portion of subsec. 70(9.2) following para. (a) substituted by 1994, c. 21, subsec. 33(10), applicable to dispositions and acquisitions occurring after 1992. That portion of the subsec. formerly read:

(b) where the property is a share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have disposed of the property immediately before the taxpayer's death and to have received proceeds of disposition therefor equal to its adjusted cost base to the taxpayer immediately before the death, and the child shall be deemed to have acquired the property for an amount equal to the proceeds, and

(c) where the property is an interest in a family farm partnership (other than an interest in a partnership to which subsection 100(3) applies),

(i) the taxpayer shall, except for the purposes of paragraph 98(5)(g), be deemed not to have disposed of the property as a consequence of the taxpayer's death,

(ii) the child shall be deemed to have acquired the property for an amount equal to the cost thereof to the taxpayer, and

(iii) each amount added or deducted in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the property shall be deemed to be required by subsection 53(1) or (2) to be added or deducted, as the case may be, in computing the adjusted cost base to the child of the property, except that, where the legal representative of the taxpayer so elects in the taxpayer's return of income under this Part for the year in which the taxpayer died, paragraph (c) does not apply and paragraph (b) shall be read as follows:

That portion of subsec. 70(9.2) preceding para. (b) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 28(14), applicable to dispositions occurring after 1992. That portion formerly read:

(9.2) Transfer of family farm corporations and partnerships — Where at any particular time after April 10, 1978 property of a taxpayer that was, immediately before the taxpayer's death, a share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation of the taxpayer or an interest in a family farm partnership of the taxpayer to which paragraphs (5)(a) and (c) would otherwise apply has, on or after the death of the taxpayer and as a consequence thereof, been transferred or distributed to a child of the taxpayer who was resident in Canada immediately before the death of the taxpayer and it can be shown, within the period ending 36 months after the death of the taxpayer or, where written application therefor has been made to the Minister by the taxpayer's legal representative within that period, within such longer period as the Minister considers reasonable in the circumstances, that the property has become vested indefeasibly in the child, the following rules apply:

(a) paragraphs (5)(a) and (c) are not applicable to the property;

All that portion of subsec. 70(9.2) following para. (a) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 48(5), applicable to transfers, distributions and acquisitions occurring after January 15, 1987. That portion formerly read:

(b) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have disposed of the property immediately before the taxpayer's death and to have received proceeds of disposition therefor equal to its adjusted cost base to the taxpayer immediately before the taxpayer's death and the child shall be deemed to have acquired the property for an amount equal to those proceeds except that, where the legal representative of the taxpayer has so elected in the taxpayer's return of income under this Part for the year in which the taxpayer died, paragraph (b) shall be read as follows:

"(b) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have disposed of the property immediately before the taxpayer's death and to have received proceeds of disposition therefor equal to such amount as the legal representative has elected, not greater than the greater of or less than the lesser of

(i) the fair market value of the property immediately before the taxpayer's death, and

(ii) the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the property immediately before the taxpayer's death,

and the child shall be deemed to have acquired the property for an amount equal to those proceeds, except that for the purposes of this paragraph, where the elected amount exceeds the greater of the amounts determined under subparagraphs (i) and (ii), it shall be deemed to be equal to the greater thereof, and where the elected amount is less than the lesser of the amounts determined under those subparagraphs, it shall be deemed to be equal to the lesser thereof."

(9.3) When subsec. (9.31) applies — Subsection (9.31) applies to a trust and a child of the settlor of the trust in respect of a property in respect of which subsection 104(4) would, if this Act were read without reference to this subsection, apply to the trust as a consequence of the death of the beneficiary under the trust who was a spouse or a common-law partner of the settlor of the trust if

(a) the property (or property for which the property was substituted) was transferred to the trust by the settlor and was, immediately before that transfer, a share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation of the settlor, a share of the capital stock of a family fishing corporation of the settlor, an interest in a family farm partnership of the settlor or an interest in a family fishing partnership of the settlor;

(b) subsection (6), subsection 73(1) (as that subsection applied to transfers before 2000) or subparagraph 73(1.01)(c)(i) applied to the settlor and the trust in respect of the transfer referred to in paragraph (a);

(c) the property is, immediately before the beneficiary's death,

(i) a share of the capital stock of a Canadian corporation that would, immediately before that beneficiary's death, be a share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation of the settlor, if the settlor owned the share at that time and paragraph (a) of the definition "share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation", in subsection (10) were read without the words "in which the person or a spouse, common-law partner, child or parent of the person was actively engaged on a regular and continuous basis (or, in the case of property used in the operation of a woodlot, was engaged to the extent required by a prescribed forest management plan in respect of that woodlot)",

(ii) a share of the capital stock of a Canadian corporation that would, immediately before the beneficiary's death, be a share of the capital stock of a family fishing corporation of the settlor, if the settlor owned the share at that time and paragraph (a) of the definition "share of the capital stock of a family fishing corporation" in subsection (10) were read without reference to the words "in which the individual, the individual's spouse or common-law partner, a child of the individual or a parent of the individual was actively engaged on a regular and continuous basis", or

(iii) a partnership interest in a partnership that carried on the business of farming or fishing in Canada in which it used all or substantially all of the property;

(d) the child of the settlor was, immediately before that beneficiary's death, resident in Canada; and

(e) as a consequence of that beneficiary's death, the property is transferred to and becomes vested indefeasibly in the child within the period ending 36 months after that beneficiary's death or, if written application has been made to the Minister by the taxpayer's legal representative within that period, within any longer period that the Minister considers reasonable in the circumstances.

(9.31) Transfer of family farm or fishing corporation or family farm or fishing partnership from trust to children of settlor — If, because of subsection (9.3), this subsection applies to the trust and a child of the settlor of the trust in respect of a property of the trust that has been distributed to the child as a consequence of the death of the beneficiary under the trust who was a spouse or common-law partner of the settlor of the trust, the following rules apply:

(a) where the trust does not elect, in its return of income under this Part for the taxation year in which the beneficiary died, to have paragraph (b) apply to the trust in respect of the property

(i) section 69 and subsection 104(4) do not apply to the trust and the child in respect of the property,

(ii) where the property is, immediately before the beneficiary's death, a share described in subparagraph (9.3)(c)(i) or (ii),

(A) the trust is deemed to have

(I) disposed of the property immediately before the beneficiary's death, and

(II) received proceeds of disposition in respect of that disposition equal to the adjusted cost base to the trust of the property immediately before the time of that disposition, and

(B) the child is, immediately after the time of the disposition, deemed to have acquired the property at a cost equal to the trust's proceeds of disposition in respect of that disposition of the property determined under clause (A), and

(iii) where the property is, immediately before the beneficiary's death, a partnership interest described in subparagraph (9.3)(c)(iii) (other than a partnership interest to which subsection 100(3) applies),

(A) the trust is, except for the purpose of paragraph 98(5)(g), deemed not to have disposed of the property as a consequence of the beneficiary's death,

(B) the child is deemed to have acquired the property, at the time of the beneficiary's death, at a cost equal to the cost to the trust of the interest immediately before the time that is immediately before the time of the beneficiary's death, and

(C) each amount required by subsection 53(1) or (2) to be added or deducted in computing the adjusted cost base to the trust, immediately before the beneficiary's death, of the property is deemed to be an amount required by subsection 53(1) or (2) to be added or deducted in computing, at or after the time of the beneficiary's death, the adjusted cost base to the child of the property; and

(b) where the trust elects, in its return of income under this Part for the taxation year in which the beneficiary died, to have this paragraph apply to the trust in respect of the property

(i) subsection 104(4) does not apply to the trust in respect of the property and section 69 does not apply to the trust or the child in respect of the transfer of the property,

(ii) subject to subparagraph (iii), where the property is, immediately before the beneficiary's death, a share of the capital stock of a corporation described in subparagraph (9.3)(c)(i) or (ii) or a partnership interest described in subparagraph (9.3)(c)(iii),

(A) the trust is deemed to have

(I) disposed of the property immediately before the beneficiary's death, and

(II) received, at the time of the disposition of property, proceeds of disposition in respect of the disposition of the property equal to the amount that the trust designates, which must not be greater than the greater of nor less than the lesser of

1. the fair market value of the property immediately before the beneficiary's death, and

2. the adjusted cost base to the trust of the property immediately before the beneficiary's death, and

(B) the child is, immediately after the time of the disposition of the property, deemed to have acquired the property at a cost equal to the trust's proceeds of disposition in respect of that disposition of the property determined under clause (A),

(iii) where the property is, immediately before that beneficiary's death, a partnership interest described in subparagraph (9.3)(c)(iii) (other than a partnership interest to which subsection 100(3) applies), and the trust further elects, in its return of income under this Part for the taxation year in which the beneficiary died, to have this subparagraph apply to the trust in respect of the property,

(A) the trust is, except for the purpose of paragraph 98(5)(g), deemed not to have disposed of the property as a consequence of the beneficiary's death,

(B) the child is deemed to have acquired the property, at the time of the beneficiary's death, at a cost equal to the cost to the trust of the property immediately before the time that is immediately before the beneficiary's death, and

(C) each amount required by subsection 53(1) or (2) to be added or deducted in computing, immediately before the beneficiary's death, the adjusted cost base to the trust of the property is deemed to be an amount required by subsection 53(1) or (2) to be added or deducted in computing, at or after the time of the beneficiary's death, the adjusted cost base to the child of the property,

(iv) except for the purpose of this subparagraph, where the amount designated by the trust under subclause (ii)(A)(II) exceeds the greater of the amounts determined under sub-subclauses (ii)(A)(II)1 and 2 in respect of the property, the amount designated is deemed to be equal to the greater of those amounts, and

(v) except for the purpose of this subparagraph, where the amount designated by the trust under subclause (ii)(A)(II) is less than the lesser of the amounts determined under sub-subclauses (ii)(A)(II)1 and 2 in respect of the property, the amount designated is deemed to be equal to the lesser of those amounts.

History: Subsec. 70(9.31) renumbered (from (9.3)) and amended by 2007, c. 2, subsec. 10(1), applicable to a disposition, that occurs after May 1, 2006, of a property unless the disposition was before 2007 and the taxpayer elects in writing in the taxpayer's return of income for the taxation year in which the disposition occurred to have subsec. 70(9.3), as it read on May 1, 2006, apply to the disposition. Subsec. 70(9.3) formerly read:

(9.3) Transfer of family farm [or fishing] corporation or partnership from trust to children of settlor — Where property of a taxpayer has been transferred or distributed to a trust described in subsection (6) or 73(1) (as that subsection applied to transfers before 2000) or a trust to which subparagraph 73(1.01)(c)(i) applies and the property was,

(a) immediately before the transfer or distribution, a share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation of the taxpayer or an interest in a family farm partnership of the taxpayer, and

(b) immediately before the death of the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner who was a beneficiary under the trust,

(i) a share in the capital stock of a Canadian corporation that would be a share in the capital stock of a family farm corporation if paragraph (a) of the definition "share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation" in subsection (10) were read without the words "in which the person or a spouse, common-law partner, child or parent of the person was actively engaged on a regular and continuous basis (or, in the case of property used in the operation of a woodlot, was engaged to the extent required by a prescribed forest management plan in respect of that woodlot)", or

(ii) an interest in a partnership that carried on the business of farming in Canada in which it used all or substantially all of its property, and has, at any time after April 10, 1978, on the death of the spouse or common-law partner and as a consequence thereof, been transferred or distributed to and become vested indefeasibly in a child of the taxpayer who was resident in Canada immediately before the death of the spouse or common-law partner, the following rules apply:

(c) subsection 104(4) does not apply to the trust in respect of the property,

(d) where the property is a share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation, the trust shall be deemed to have disposed of the share immediately before the death of the spouse or common-law partner and to have received proceeds of disposition therefor equal to its adjusted cost base to the trust immediately before the death of the spouse or common-law partner, and the child shall be deemed to have acquired the property for an amount equal to those proceeds, and

(e) where the property is an interest in a family farm partnership (other than an interest in a partnership to which subsection 100(3) applies),

(i) the trust shall, except for the purposes of paragraph 98(5)(g), be deemed not to have disposed of the property as a consequence of the death of the spouse or common-law partner,

(ii) the child shall be deemed to have acquired the property for an amount equal to the cost thereof to the trust, and

(iii) each amount added or deducted in computing the adjusted cost base to the trust of the property shall be deemed to be required by subsection 53(1) or (2) to be added or deducted, as the case may be, in computing the adjusted cost base to the child of the property,

except that, where the trust so elects in its return of income under this Part for its taxation year in which the spouse or common-law partner died, paragraph (e) shall not apply and paragraph (d) shall be read as follows:

"(d) the trust shall be deemed to have disposed of the property immediately before the death of the spouse or common-law partner and to have received proceeds of disposition therefor equal to such amount as the trust elects, not greater than the greater of or less than the lesser of

(i) the fair market value of the property immediately before the death of the spouse or common-law partner, and

(ii) the adjusted cost base to the trust of the property immediately before the death of the spouse or common-law partner,

and the child shall be deemed to have acquired the property for an amount equal to those proceeds, except that for the purposes of this paragraph, where the elected amount exceeds the greater of the amounts determined under subparagraphs (i) and (ii), it shall be deemed to be equal to the greater thereof, and where the elected amount is less than the lesser of the amounts determined under those subparagraphs, it shall be deemed to be equal to the lesser thereof,".

Subpara. 70(9.3)(b)(i) amended by 2002, c. 9, subsec. 27(2), applicable to transfers and distributions of property that occur after December 10, 2001. The subpara. formerly read:

(i) a share in the capital stock of a Canadian corporation that would be a share in the capital stock of a family farm corporation if paragraph (a) of the definition "share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation" in subsection (10) were read without the words "in which the person or a spouse, common-law partner, child or parent of the person was actively engaged on a regular and continuous basis", or

The opening words of subsec. 70(9.3) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 52(7), applicable to transfers and distributions from trusts that occur after 1999. Where a particular transfer or distribution to a trust referred to in amended subsec. 70(9.1) occurred before 2001, in applying that subsec. to a transfer or distribution from the trust that occurs after 1997, it shall be read without reference to the words "or common-law partner" and to the Modernization of Benefits and Obligations Act, 2000, c. 12, unless

(a) the particular transfer or distribution occurred after 1997;

(b) the death referred to in that subsec. occurs after 1997; and

(c) either

(i) at the time of the particular transfer or distribution referred to in para. (a), the taxpayer was a spouse of the individual whose death is referred to in para. (b), or

(ii) because of an election under s. 144 of 2000, c. 12, sections 130 to 142 of that Act applied, at the time of the particular transfer or distribution referred to in para. (a), to the taxpayer and the individual whose death is referred to in para. (b).

The opening words formerly read:

(9.3) Transfer of family farm corporation or partnership from spouse's [or common-law partner's] trust to children of settlor — Where property of a taxpayer has been transferred or distributed to a trust described in subsection (6) or 73(1) and the property was,

Subsec. 70(9.3) amended by 2000, c. 12, Sch. 2, s. 1, to replace "spouse" with "spouse or common-law partner", and by Sch. 2, s. 8 to replace "spouse,"with "spouse, common-law partner,", applicable to 2001 et seq., in force July 31, 2000. (i) a share in the capital stock of a Canadian corporation that would be a share in the capital stock of a family farm corporation if paragraph (a) of the definition "share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation" in subsection (10) were read without the words "and in which that person or that person's spouse or child was actively engaged" and subparagraph (b)(ii) of that definition were read without the words "in which that person or that person's spouse or child was actively engaged", or

Para. 70(9.3)(c) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 28(16), applicable after December 20, 1991. That para. formerly read:

(c) subsection 104(4) is not applicable to the property;

All that portion of subsec. 70(9.3) following para. (c) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 48(6), applicable to transfers, distributions and acquisitions occurring after January 15, 1987. That portion formerly read:

(d) the trust shall be deemed to have disposed of the property immediately before the death of the taxpayer's spouse and to have received proceeds of disposition therefor equal to its adjusted cost base to the trust immediately before the death of that spouse, and the child shall be deemed to have acquired the property for an amount equal to those proceeds,

except that, where the trust has so elected in its return of income under this Part for its taxation year in which the taxpayer's spouse died, paragraph (d) shall be read as follows:

"(d) the trust shall be deemed to have disposed of the property immediately before the death of the taxpayer's spouse and to have received proceeds of disposition therefor equal to such amount as the trust has elected, not greater than the greater of or less than the lesser of

(i) the fair market value of the property immediately before the death of the spouse, and

(ii) the adjusted cost base to the trust of the property immediately before the death of the spouse,

and the child shall be deemed to have acquired the property for an amount equal to those proceeds, except that for the purposes of this paragraph, where the elected amount exceeds the greater of the amounts determined under subparagraphs (i) and (ii), it shall be deemed to be equal to the greater thereof, and where the elected amount is less than the lesser of the amounts determined under those subparagraphs, it shall be deemed to be equal to the lesser thereof."

(2) Election by legal representative and transferee re reserves — Where property of a taxpayer that is a right to receive any amount has, on or after the death of the taxpayer and as a consequence thereof, been transferred or distributed to the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner described in paragraph 70(6)(a) or to a trust described in paragraph 70(6)(b) (in this subsection referred to as the "transferee"), if the taxpayer was resident in Canada immediately before the taxpayer's death and the taxpayer's legal representative and the transferee have executed jointly an election in respect of the property in prescribed form,

(a) any amount in respect of the property that would, but for paragraph (1)(a), (b), (d) or (e), as the case may be, have been deductible as a reserve in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year in which the taxpayer died shall,

(i) notwithstanding subsection (1), be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year in which the taxpayer died,

(ii) be included in computing the transferee's income for the transferee's first taxation year ending after the death of the taxpayer, and

(iii) be deemed to be

(A) an amount that has been included in computing the transferee's income from a business for a previous year in respect of property sold in the course of the business,

(B) an amount that has been included in computing the transferee's income for a previous year as a commission in respect of an insurance contract, other than a life insurance contract,

(C) an amount that by virtue of subsection 59(1) has been included in computing the transferee's income for a preceding taxation year, or

(D) for the purposes of subsection 64(1.1)[9], an amount that by virtue of paragraph 59(3.2)(c) has been included in computing the transferee's income for a preceding taxation year and to be an amount deducted by the transferee pursuant to paragraph 64(1.1)(a)[9] in computing the transferee's income for the transferee's last taxation year ending before the death,

as the case may be;

(b) any amount in respect of the property that could, but for paragraph (1)(c), have been claimed under subparagraph 40(1)(a)(iii) or 44(1)(e)(iii) in computing the amount of any gain of the taxpayer for the year shall,

and to have been acquired at that time by the transferee for an amount equal to those proceeds.

Proposed Amendment — Application of S.C. 2001, c. 17, s. 53 amendment

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — non-resident trusts), s. 24, will amend the application of the amendment made to subsec. 73(1) by S.C. 2001, c. 17, s. 53 to read as follows, deemed in force on June 14, 2001:

Subsec. 73(1) amended by 2001, c. 17, s. 53, applicable to transfers that occur after 1999 except that, in respect of transfers that occur after 1999 and before 2007, for the purpose of subsec. 73(1), the residence of a transferee trust shall be determined without reference to s. 94, as it reads in its application to taxation years that end before 2007.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Subsection 73(1) generally provides for a tax-free disposition of capital property if it is transferred by an individual to the individual's spouse, common-law partner or a trust for the exclusive benefit of the spouse or common-law partner during the lifetime of the spouse or common-law partner. For subsection 73(1) to apply, the transferor and transferee must both be resident in Canada at the time of the transfer. Where the transferee is a trust, in respect of transfers that occur in 2000 or 2001, the residency requirement is determined without reference to subsection 94(1) as it read before 2002.

This amendment to the Income Tax Amendments Act, 2000 [S.C. 2001, c. 17 — ed.], ensures that, in applying subsection 73(1) in respect of transfers that occur after 1999 and before 2007, the residence of a transferee will be determined without reference to section 94 of the Act, as it reads in its application to taxation years that end before 2007.

Subsec. 73(1) amended by 2000, c. 12, Sch. 2, s. 1, to replace "spouse" with "spouse or common-law partner", by Sch. 2, s. 7, to replace "spouse's"with "spouse's or common-law partner's"; and by Sch. 2, s. 9, to replace "marriage" with "marriage or common-law partnership", applicable to 2001 et seq., in force July 31, 2000. See also the transitional rules reproduced in the History to 248(1)"common-law partner".

Para. 73(1)(d) repealed by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 29(1), applicable with respect to transfers of property occurring after 1992. Para. (d) formerly read:

(d) an individual of the opposite sex, under an order for the support or maintenance of the individual, made by a competent tribunal in accordance with the laws of a province, where the individual and the taxpayer cohabited in a conjugal relationship before the date of the order,

Para. 73(1)(d) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), s. 50, applicable with respect to transfers occurring after July 13, 1990. Para. 73(1)(d) formerly read:

(d) an individual pursuant to a decree, order or judgment of a competent tribunal made in accordance with prescribed provisions of the law of a province if that individual either entered into a written agreement with the taxpayer in accordance with those provisions or is a person within a prescribed class of persons referred to in those provisions,

(iii) either

(A) the individual or the individual's spouse is, in combination with the other, entitled to receive all of the income of the trust that arises before the later of the death of the individual and the death of the spouse and no other person may, before the later of those deaths, receive or otherwise obtain the use of any of the income or capital of the trust, or

(B) the individual or the individual's common-law partner is, in combination with the other, entitled to receive all of the income of the trust that arises before the later of the death of the individual and the death of the common-law partner and no other person may, before the later of those deaths, receive or otherwise obtain the use of any of the income or capital of the trust.

History: Subsec. 73(1.01) added by 2001, c. 17, s. 53, applicable to transfers that occur after 1999 except that,

(a) in respect of transfers that occur in 2000 and subject to para. (b),

(i) subsec. 73(1.01) shall be read without reference to the words "or common-law partner", "or common-law partner's" and "or common-law partnership", and

(ii) subpara. 73(1.01)(c)(iii) shall be read as follows:

(iii) the individual or the individual's spouse is, in combination with the other, entitled to receive all of the income of the trust that arises before the later of the death of the individual and the death of the spouse and no other person may, before the later of those deaths, receive or otherwise obtain the use of any of the income or capital of the trust.

(b) para. (a) does not apply to a transfer at any time by an individual to or for the benefit of another individual where, because of an election under s. 144 of 2000, c. 12, ss. 130 to 142 of that Act applied at that time to those individuals.

Selected Cases: Antle v. R., [2010] 4 C.T.C. 2327 (TCC); aff'd 2010 CarswellNat 3894 (FCA) (Spousal trust arrangements were improperly executed and ineffective. Capital gain taxed in transferor's hands).

(1.02) Exception for transfers — Subsection (1.01) applies to a transfer of property by an individual to a trust the terms of which satisfy the conditions in subparagraph (1.01)(c)(ii) or (iii) only where

(a) the trust was created after 1999;

(b) either

(i) the individual had attained 65 years of age at the time the trust was created, or

(ii) the transfer does not result in a change in beneficial ownership of the property and there is immediately after the transfer no absolute or contingent right of a person (other than the individual) or partnership as a beneficiary (determined with reference to subsection 104(1.1)) under the trust; and

(c) in the case of a trust the terms of which satisfy the conditions in subparagraph (1.01)(c)(ii), the trust does not make an election under subparagraph 104(4)(a)(ii.1).

Related Provisions: 104(1.1) — Restricted meaning of "beneficiary".

History: Subsec. 73(1.02) added by 2001, c. 17, s. 53, applicable to transfers that occur after 1999 except that, in respect of transfers that occur before March 16, 2001, subpara. 73(1.02)(b)(ii) shall be read as follows:

(ii) no person (other than the individual) or partnership has any absolute or contingent right as a beneficiary under the trust (determined with reference to subsection 104(1.1)); and

(1.1) Interpretation — For greater certainty, a property is, for the purposes of subsections (1) and (1.01), deemed to be property of the individual referred to in subsection (1) that has been transferred to a particular transferee where,

(a) under the laws of a province or because of a decree, order or judgment of a competent tribunal made in accordance with those laws, the property

(i) is acquired or is deemed to have been acquired by the particular transferee,

(ii) is deemed or declared to be property of, or is awarded to, the particular transferee, or

(iii) has vested in the particular transferee; and

(b) the property was or would, but for those laws, have been a capital property of the individual referred to in subsection (1).

Related Provisions: 70(9.1), (9.11), (9.3), (9.31) — Transfer of farm or fishing property from spouse trust to settlor's children.

History: Subsec. 73(1.1) amended by 2001, c. 17, s. 53, applicable to transfers that occur after 1999. The subsec. formerly read:

(1.1) Interpretation — For greater certainty, where, under the laws of a province or because of a decree, order or judgment of a competent tribunal made in accordance with those laws, a person referred to in subsection (1)

(a) acquires or is deemed to have acquired,

(b) is deemed or declared to have or is awarded, or

(c) has vested in that person, property that was or would, but for those provisions, have been a capital property of the taxpayer referred to in subsection (1), that property shall, for the purposes of that subsection, be deemed to be capital property of the taxpayer that has been transferred to that person.

The opening words of subsec. 73(1.1) substituted by 1994, c. 21, s. 34, applicable to transfers occurring after July 13, 1990. The opening words formerly read:

(1.1) Interpretation — For greater certainty, where, by the operation of prescribed provisions of the law of a province or by virtue of a decree, order or judgment of a competent tribunal made in accordance with those provisions, a person referred to in subsection (1)

Regulations: 6500(2) (prescribed provisions; no longer needed).

I.T. Application Rules: 20(1.1).

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-325R2: Property transfers after separation, divorce and annulment.

(1.2) [Repealed under former Act]

(2) Capital cost and amount deemed allowed to spouse, etc., or trust — Where a transferee is deemed by subsection (1) to have acquired any particular depreciable property of a prescribed class of a taxpayer for an amount determined under paragraph (1)(e) and the capital cost to the taxpayer of the particular property exceeds the amount determined under that paragraph, for the purposes of sections 13 and 20 and any regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a)

(a) the capital cost to the transferee of the particular property shall be deemed to be the amount that was the capital cost to the taxpayer thereof; and

(b) the excess shall be deemed to have been allowed to the transferee in respect of the particular property under regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a) in computing income for taxation years before the acquisition thereof.

Proposed Amendment — 73(2)

(2) Capital cost and amount deemed allowed to spouse, etc., or trust — If a transferee is deemed by subsection (1) to have acquired any particular depreciable property of a prescribed class of a taxpayer for an amount determined under paragraph (1)(b) and the capital cost to the taxpayer of the particular property exceeds the amount determined under that paragraph, in applying sections 13 and 20 and any regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a)

(a) the capital cost to the transferee of the particular property is deemed to be the amount that was the capital cost to the taxpayer of the particular property; and

(b) the excess is deemed to have been allowed to the transferee in respect of the particular property under regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a) in computing income for taxation years before the acquisition of the particular property.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 37, will amend subsec. 73(2) to read as above, applicable to transfers that occur after 1999.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 73(2) applies where a person ("transferor") transfers depreciable capital property ("DCP") of a prescribed class to a taxpayer ("transferee") in circumstances in which subsection 73(1) applies. If the capital cost to the transferor of the DCP is greater than the amount at which the transferee is deemed under subsection 73(1) to have acquired the DCP, subsection 73(2) ensures that the proper amount of capital cost allowance allowed to the transferor is available for recapture on a subsequent disposition of the DCP by the transferee.

Subsection 73(2) is amended to replace the reference to paragraph 73(1)(e) with a reference to paragraph 73(1)(b). Paragraph 73(1)(b) now provides for the amount at which the transferee is deemed to acquire property on a transfer to which subsection 73(1) applies.

I.T. Application Rules: 20(1.1) (where property owned since before 1972).

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-209R: Inter vivos gifts of capital property to individuals directly or through trusts; IT-325R2: Property transfers after separation, divorce and annulment.

(3) When subsec. (3.1) applies — Subsection (3.1) applies to a taxpayer and a child of the taxpayer in respect of property that has been transferred, at any time, by the taxpayer to the child, where

(a) the property was, immediately before the transfer, land in Canada or depreciable property in Canada of a prescribed class, of the taxpayer, or any eligible capital property in respect of a fishing or farming business carried on in Canada by the taxpayer;

Proposed Amendment — 73(3)(a)

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), s. 13, will amend para. 73(3)(a) to delete the word "immediately", applicable to dispositions of property that occur after May 1, 2006, other than a disposition in respect of which a taxpayer has made a valid election under subsection 11(5) of the Budget Implementation Act, 2006, No. 2 S.C. 2007, c. 2.

Technical Notes: Subsection 73(3) provides a tax-deferral for an inter vivos transfer of farm or fishing property by a taxpayer to a child of the taxpayer. Paragraph 73(3)(a) is amended to remove the word "immediately", such that the property need not be used in the farming or fishing business immediately before the transfer in order to qualify for this rollover.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Feb. 27, 2008:

Ms. Donna Lee, Meyers Norris Penny LLP, Calgary, AB

Dear Ms. Lee:

I am writing in response to your letter dated October 3, 2007 in which you identified an issue with respect to a change in the application of subsections 73(3) and 73(3.1) of the Income Tax Act (Act). In your letter you noted that the addition of the words "immediately before the transfer" in paragraph 73(3)(a) of the Act may result in an overly restrictive interpretation regarding the application of subsection 73(3.1) of the Act.

We agree with your concern that new subsection 73(3) of the Act may be overly restrictive with regards to the circumstances under which parents are permitted to transfer farm assets including land, depreciable property and eligible capital property to their children on a tax deferred basis. As such, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister that paragraph 73(3)(a) of the Act be amended to remove the word "immediately". If our recommendation is acted upon, we anticipate that the amendments would be included in a future technical bill and would apply with respect to taxation years that end on or after May 6, 2006. While I cannot offer any assurance that the Minister will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(b) the child of the taxpayer was resident in Canada immediately before the transfer; and

(c) the property has been used principally in a fishing or farming business in which the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner, a child of the taxpayer or a parent of the taxpayer was actively engaged on a regular and continuous basis (or in the case of property used in the operation of a woodlot, was engaged to the extent required by a prescribed forest management plan in respect of that woodlot).

Related Provisions: 250 — Resident in Canada.

History: Subsec. 73(3) added (former (3) becoming (3.1)) by 2007, c. 2, subsec. 11(3), applicable to a disposition, that occurs after May 1, 2006, of a property unless the disposition was before 2007 and the taxpayer elects in writing in the taxpayer's return of income for the taxation year in which the disposition occurred to have subsec. 73(3), as it read on May 1, 2006, apply to the disposition. For earlier History to 73(3), see under 73(3.1).

Regulations: 7400 (prescribed forest management plan).

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-268R4: Inter vivos transfer of farm property to child; IT-373R2: Woodlots.

(3.1) Inter vivos transfer of farm or fishing property to child — If, because of subsection (3), this subsection applies to the taxpayer and a child of the taxpayer in respect of a property transferred by the taxpayer to the child of the taxpayer, the following rules apply:

(a) where, immediately before the transfer, the property was depreciable property of a prescribed class, the taxpayer is deemed to have disposed of the property, at the time of the transfer, for proceeds of disposition equal to

(i) in any case to which neither subparagraph (ii) nor (iii) applies, the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition otherwise determined,

(ii) the greater of the amounts referred to in clauses (A) and (B), if the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition otherwise determined exceed the greater of

(A) the fair market value of the property immediately before the time of the transfer, and

(B) the lesser of

(I) the capital cost to the taxpayer of the property, and

(II) the amount, determined immediately before the time of the disposition of the property, that is that proportion of the undepreciated capital cost of property of that class to the taxpayer that the capital cost to the taxpayer of the property is of the capital cost to the taxpayer of all property of that class that had not, at or before that time, been disposed of, or

(iii) if the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition otherwise determined are less than the lesser of the amounts referred to in clauses (ii)(A) and (B), the lesser of those amounts;

(b) where the property transferred was land, the taxpayer is deemed to have disposed of the property at the time of the transfer for proceeds of disposition equal to,

(i) in any case to which neither subparagraph (ii) nor (iii) applies, the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition otherwise determined,

(ii) the greater of the amounts referred to in clauses (A) and (B), if the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition otherwise determined exceed the greater of

(A) the fair market value of the land immediately before the time of the transfer, and

(B) the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the land immediately before the time of the transfer, or

(iii) if the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition otherwise determined are less than the lesser of the amounts referred to in clauses (ii)(A) and (B), the lesser of those amounts;

(c) where, immediately before the transfer, the property was eligible capital property, the taxpayer is deemed to have disposed of the property, at the time of the transfer, for proceeds of disposition equal to,

(i) in any case to which neither subparagraph (ii) nor (iii) applies, the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition otherwise determined,

(ii) the greater of the amounts referred to in clauses (A) and (B), if the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition otherwise determined exceed the greater of

(A) the fair market value of the property immediately before the time of the transfer, and

(B) the amount determined by the formula

$$4/3 (A \times B/C)$$

where

A is the taxpayer's cumulative eligible capital in respect of the business,

B is the fair market value of the property immediately before the transfer, and

C is the fair market value immediately before the transfer of all the taxpayer's eligible capital property in respect of the business, or

(iii) if the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition otherwise determined are less than the lesser of the amounts referred to in clauses (ii)(A) and (B), the lesser of those amounts;

(d) subsection 69(1) does not apply to the taxpayer and the child in respect of the property;

(e) the child is deemed to have acquired the property at a cost equal to the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition in respect of the disposition of the property determined under

(i) where the property is depreciable property of the taxpayer, paragraph (a), and

(ii) where the property is land of the taxpayer, paragraph (b);

(f) if the property was, immediately before the transfer, an eligible capital property of the taxpayer in respect of a business, the child is deemed to have acquired

(i) where the child does not continue to carry on the business, a capital property, immediately after the transfer, at a cost equal to the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition in respect of the disposition of the property determined under paragraph (c),

(ii) where the child continues to carry on the business, an eligible capital property and to have made an eligible capital expenditure at a cost equal to the total of

(A) the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition referred to in paragraph (c), and

(B) 4/3 of the amount determined by the formula

$$(A \times B/C) - D$$

where

A is the amount, if any, determined for F in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) in respect of the business immediately before the transfer,

B is the fair market value of the property immediately before the transfer,

C is the fair market value immediately before the transfer of all the taxpayer's eligible capital property in respect of the business, and

D is the amount, if any, included under paragraph 14(1)(a) in computing the taxpayer's income as a result of the disposition, and

(iii) for the purpose of determining at any subsequent time the child's cumulative eligible capital in respect of the business, an amount equal to 3/4 of the amount determined under subparagraph (ii) is to be added to the amount otherwise determined for P in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5);

(g) for the purpose of determining, in respect of any disposition of the property, after the time of the transfer, the amount deemed to be the child's taxable capital gain, and the amount to be included in computing the child's income, there shall be added to the amount otherwise determined for Q in respect of the business in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5), the amount determined by the formula,

where

A is the amount, if any, determined for Q in that definition in respect of the business immediately before the time of the transfer,

B is the fair market value, immediately before that time, of the transferred property, and

C is the fair market value immediately before that time of all the taxpayer's eligible capital property in respect of the business; and

(h) where the property is depreciable property of a prescribed class of the taxpayer and the capital cost to the taxpayer of the property exceeds the cost to the child of the property, for the purposes of sections 13 and 20 and any regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a),

(i) the capital cost to the child of the property is deemed to be the amount that was the capital cost to the taxpayer of the property immediately before the transfer, and

(ii) the excess is deemed to have been allowed to the child in respect of the property under regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a) in computing income for taxation years that ended before the the child acquired the property.

History: Subsec. 73(3.1) renumbered (from (3)) and amended by 2007, c. 2, subsec. 11(3), applicable to a disposition, that occurs after May 1, 2006, of a property unless the disposition was before 2007 and the taxpayer elects in writing in the taxpayer's return of income for the taxation year in which the disposition occurred to have subsec. 73(3), as it read on May 1, 2006, apply to the disposition. Subsec. 73(3) formerly read:

(3) Inter vivos transfer of farm [or fishing] property to child — For the purposes of this Part, if at any time any land in Canada or depreciable property in Canada of a prescribed class of a taxpayer or any eligible capital property in respect of a business carried on in Canada by a taxpayer is transferred by the taxpayer to a child of the taxpayer who was resident in Canada immediately before the transfer, and the property was, before the transfer, used principally in a farming business in which the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner or any of the taxpayer's children was actively engaged on a regular and continuous basis (or, in the case of property used in the operation of a woodlot, was engaged to the extent required by a prescribed forest management plan in respect of that woodlot),

(a) where the property transferred was depreciable property of a prescribed class, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have disposed of the property at the time of the transfer for proceeds of disposition equal to,

(i) in any case to which neither subparagraph (ii) nor (iii) applies, the proceeds of disposition otherwise determined,

(ii) if the proceeds of disposition otherwise determined exceeded the greater of

(A) the fair market value of the property immediately before the time of the transfer, and

(B) that proportion of the undepreciated capital cost to the taxpayer immediately before the time of the transfer of all of the depreciable property of the taxpayer of that class that the fair market value at that time of the property so transferred was of the fair market value at that time of all of the depreciable property of the taxpayer of that class,

the greater of the amounts referred to in clauses (A) and (B), or

(iii) if the proceeds of disposition otherwise determined were less than the lesser of the amounts referred to in clauses (ii)(A) and (B), the lesser of those amounts;

(b) where the property transferred was land, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have disposed of the property at the time of the transfer for proceeds of disposition equal to,

(i) in any case to which neither subparagraph (ii) nor (iii) applies, the proceeds of disposition otherwise determined,

(ii) if the proceeds of disposition otherwise determined exceeded the greater of

(A) the fair market value of the land immediately before the time of the transfer, and

(B) the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the land immediately before the time of the transfer,

the greater of the amounts referred to in clauses (A) and (B), or

(iii) if the proceeds of disposition otherwise determined were less than the lesser of the amounts referred to in clauses (ii)(A) and (B), the lesser of those amounts;

(b.1) where the property transferred was eligible capital property, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have disposed of the property at the time of the transfer for proceeds of disposition equal to,

(i) in any case to which neither subparagraph (ii) nor (iii) applies, the proceeds of disposition otherwise determined,

(ii) if the proceeds of disposition otherwise determined exceeded the greater of

(A) the fair market value of the property immediately before the time of the transfer, and

(B) the amount determined by the formula

$$\frac{4}{3}\left(A \times \frac{B}{C}\right)$$

where

A is the cumulative eligible capital of the taxpayer in respect of the business,

B is the fair market value of the property immediately before the transfer, and

C is the fair market value immediately before that time of all eligible capital property of the taxpayer in respect of the business,

the greater of the amounts referred to in clauses (A) and (B), or

(iii) if the proceeds of disposition otherwise determined were less than the lesser of the amounts referred to in clauses (ii)(A) and (B), the lesser of those amounts;

(c) subsection 69(1) does not apply in determining the proceeds of disposition of the depreciable property, the land or the eligible capital property;

(d) the child shall be deemed to have acquired the depreciable property or the land, as the case may be, for an amount equal to the proceeds of disposition determined under paragraph (a) or (b), respectively;

(d.1) where the property transferred was eligible capital property of the taxpayer, the child shall be deemed to have acquired a capital property, immediately after the transfer, at a cost equal to the proceeds of disposition determined under paragraph (b.1), except that, where the child continues to carry on the business previously carried on by the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner or any of the taxpayer's children, the taxpayer shall be deemed to have acquired an eligible capital property and to have made an eligible capital expenditure at a cost equal to the total of

(i) the proceeds of disposition referred to in paragraph (b.1), and

(ii) 4/3 of the amount determined by the formula and, for the purpose of determining at any subsequent time the child's cumulative eligible capital in respect of the business, an amount equal to 3/4 of the amount determined under subparagraph (ii) shall be added to the amount otherwise determined in respect thereof for P in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5);

(d.2) for the purposes of determining after the time of the transfer

(i) the amount deemed by subparagraph 14(1)(a)(v) to be the child's taxable capital gain, and

(ii) the amount to be included under subparagraph 14(1)(a)(v) or paragraph 14(1)(b) in computing the child's income in respect of any subsequent disposition of the property of the business, there shall be added to the amount otherwise determined for Q in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount, if any, determined for Q in that definition in respect of the business of the taxpayer immediately before the time of the transfer,

B is the fair market value immediately before that time of the property transferred, and

C is the fair market value immediately before that time of all eligible capital property of the taxpayer in respect of the business; and

(e) where the child is deemed to have acquired depreciable property of a prescribed class of the taxpayer for an amount determined under paragraph (d) and the capital cost to the taxpayer of the property exceeds the amount determined under that paragraph, for the purposes of sections 13 and 20 and any regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a),

(i) the capital cost to the child of the property shall be deemed to be the amount that was the capital cost to the taxpayer thereof, and

(ii) the excess shall be deemed to have been allowed to the child in respect of the property under regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a) in computing income for taxation years before the acquisition thereof.

Para. 73(3)(c) amended by the said c. 2, subsec. 11(1), applicable to dispositions that occur after December 20, 2002. It formerly read:

(c) section 69 does not apply in determining the proceeds of disposition of the depreciable property, the land or the eligible capital property;

The opening words of subsec. 73(3) amended by 2002, c. 9, s. 28, applicable to transfers of property that occur after December 10, 2001. The opening words formerly read:

(3) For the purposes of this Part, where at any time any land in Canada or depreciable property in Canada of a prescribed class of a taxpayer or any eligible capital property in respect of a business carried on in Canada by a taxpayer is transferred by the taxpayer to a child of the taxpayer who was resident in Canada immediately before the transfer, and the property was, before the transfer, used principally in the business of farming in which the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner or any of the taxpayer's children was actively engaged on a regular and continuous basis, Subsec. 73(3) amended by 2000, c. 12, Sch. 2, s. 1, to replace "spouse" with "spouse or common-law partner", applicable to 2001 et seq., in force July 31, 2000. See also the transitional rules reproduced in the History to 248(1)"common-law partner".

(ii) the amount to be included under paragraph 14(1)(b) in computing the child's income

That portion of subsec. 73(3) preceding para. (a) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 29(2), applicable to transfers occurring after 1992. That portion formerly read:

(3) Inter vivos transfer of farm property by farmer to his child — For the purposes of this Part, where at any time after 1971 any land in Canada or depreciable property in Canada of a prescribed class of a taxpayer or any eligible capital property in respect of a business carried on in Canada by a taxpayer has been transferred by a taxpayer to a child of the taxpayer who was resident in Canada immediately before the transfer, and the property was, immediately before the transfer, used by the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse or any of the taxpayer's children in the business of farming, the following rules apply:

Cl. 73(3)(b.1)(ii)(B) and all that portion of para. (d.1) following subpara. (i) amended, and para. (d.2) added, by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsecs. 29(3) to (5), applicable to transfers by a taxpayer occurring after the beginning of the first fiscal period of the taxpayer's business beginning after 1987. Those portions formerly read:

(B) 4/3 of the taxpayer's cumulative eligible capital in respect of the business immediately before the time of the transfer,

(ii) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the amount, if any, determined for F in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) in respect of the business of the taxpayer immediately before the time of the transfer

exceeds

(B) the amount, if any, included in the income of the taxpayer by reason of subparagraph 14(1)(a)(iv) as a result of the disposition, and, for the purposes of determining at any time the child's cumulative eligible capital in respect of the business, an amount equal to the amount determined under subparagraph (ii) shall be added to the amount otherwise determined for P in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5); and

(4) When subsec. (4.1) applies — Subsection (4.1) applies to a taxpayer and a child of the taxpayer in respect of property that has been transferred, at any time, to the child if

(a) the child was resident in Canada immediately before the transfer; and

(b) the property was, immediately before the transfer, a share of the capital stock of a family fishing corporation of the taxpayer, a share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation of the taxpayer, an interest in a family fishing partnership of the taxpayer or an interest in a family farm partnership of the taxpayer (within the meaning assigned by subsection 70(10)).

Related Provisions: 250 — Resident in Canada.

History: Subsec. 73(4) added (former (4) becoming (4.1)) by 2007, c. 2, subsec. 11(3), applicable to a disposition, that occurs after May 1, 2006, of a property unless the disposition was before 2007 and the taxpayer elects in writing in the taxpayer's return of income for the taxation year in which the disposition occurred to have subsec. 73(4), as it read on May 1, 2006, apply to the disposition. See History to 73(4.1) for the former wording of subsec. 73(4).

(4.1) Inter vivos transfer of family farm or fishing corporations and partnerships — If, because of subsection (4), this subsection applies to the taxpayer and the taxpayer's child in respect of the transfer of the property by the taxpayer to the child,

(a) subject to paragraph (c), where the property was, immediately before the transfer, a share of the capital stock of a family fishing corporation of the taxpayer, a share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation of the taxpayer, an interest in a family fishing partnership of the taxpayer or an interest in a family farm partnership of the taxpayer, the taxpayer is deemed to have disposed of the property at the time of the transfer for proceeds of disposition equal to,

(i) in any case to which neither subparagraph (ii) nor (iii) applies, the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition otherwise determined,

(ii) the greater of the amounts referred to in clauses (A) and (B), if the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition otherwise determined exceed the greater of

(A) the fair market value of the property immediately before the time of the transfer, and

(B) the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the property immediately before the time of the transfer, or

(iii) if the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition otherwise determined are less than the lesser of the amounts referred to in clauses (ii)(A) and (B), the lesser of those amounts;

(b) subject to paragraph (c), where the property is, immediately before the transfer, a share of the capital stock of a family fishing corporation of the taxpayer, a share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation of the taxpayer, an interest in a family fishing partnership of the taxpayer or an interest in a family farm partnership of the taxpayer, the child is deemed to have acquired the property for an amount equal to the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition in respect of the disposition of the property determined under paragraph (a);

(c) where the property is, immediately before the transfer, an interest in a family fishing partnership of the taxpayer, or an interest in a family farm partnership of the taxpayer (other than a partnership interest to which subsection 100(3) applies), the taxpayer receives no consideration in respect of the transfer of the property and the taxpayer elects, in the taxpayer's return of income under this Part for the taxation year which includes the time of the transfer, to have this paragraph apply in respect of the transfer of the property,

(i) the taxpayer is, except for the purpose of paragraph 98(5)(g), deemed not to have disposed of the property at the time of the transfer,

(ii) the child is deemed to have acquired the property at the time of the transfer at a cost equal to the cost to the taxpayer of the interest immediately before the transfer, and

(iii) each amount required by subsection 53(1) or (2) to be added or deducted in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer, immediately before the transfer, of the property is deemed to be an amount required by subsection 53(1) or (2) to be added or deducted in computing at any time at or after the time of the transfer, the adjusted cost base to the child of the property; and

(d) subsection 69(1) does not apply to the taxpayer and the child in respect of the property.

History: Subsec. 73(4.1) renumbered (from (4)) and amended by 2007, c. 2, subsec. 11(3), applicable to a disposition, that occurs after May 1, 2006, of a property unless the disposition was before 2007 and the taxpayer elects in writing in the taxpayer's return of income for the taxation year in which the disposition occurred to have subsec. 73(4), as it read on May 1, 2006, apply to the disposition. Subsec. 73(4) formerly read:

(4) Inter vivos transfer of family farm corporations and partnerships — For the purposes of this Part, where at any particular time after April 10, 1978 a taxpayer has transferred property to a child of the taxpayer who was resident in Canada immediately before the transfer, and the property was, immediately before the transfer, a share of the capital stock of a family farm corporation of the taxpayer or an interest in a family farm partnership of the taxpayer (within the meaning assigned by subsection 70(10)), the following rules apply:

(a) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have disposed of the property at the time of the transfer for proceeds of disposition equal to,

(i) in any case to which neither subparagraph (ii) nor (iii) applies, the proceeds of disposition otherwise determined,

(ii) if the proceeds of disposition otherwise determined exceeded the greater of

(A) the fair market value of the property immediately before the time of the transfer, and

(B) the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the property immediately before the time of the transfer,

the greater of the amounts referred to in clauses (A) and (B), or

(iii) if the proceeds of disposition otherwise determined were less than the lesser of the amounts referred to in clauses (ii)(A) and (B), the lesser of those amounts;

(b) subsection 69(1) does not apply in determining the proceeds of disposition of the property; and

(c) the child shall be deemed to have acquired the property for an amount equal to the proceeds of disposition determined under paragraph (a).

Para. 73(4)(b) amended by the said c. 2, subsec. 11(2), applicable to dispositions after December 20, 2002. It formerly read:

(b) section 69 does not apply in determining the proceeds of disposition of the property; and

(5) Disposition of a NISA — Where at any time a taxpayer disposes of an interest in the taxpayer's NISA Fund No. 2, an amount equal to the balance in the fund so disposed of shall be deemed to have been paid out of the fund at that time to the taxpayer except that,

(a) where the interest is disposed of to the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner, former spouse or common-law partner or an individual referred to in paragraph (1)(d) (as it applies to transfers of property that occurred before 1993) in settlement of rights arising out of their marriage or common-law partnership, on or after the breakdown of the marriage or common-law partnership, that amount shall not be deemed to have been paid to the taxpayer if

(i) the disposition is made under a decree, order or judgment of a competent tribunal or, in the case of a spouse or common-law partner or former spouse or common-law partner, a written separation agreement, and

(ii) the taxpayer elects in the taxpayer's return of income under this Part for the taxation year in which the property was disposed of to have this paragraph apply to the disposition; and

(b) where the interest is disposed of to a taxable Canadian corporation in a transaction in respect of which an election is made under section 85, an amount equal to the proceeds of disposition in respect of that interest shall be deemed to be paid, at that time, to the taxpayer out of the taxpayer's NISA Fund No. 2.

Possible Future Amendment — "Family Tax Cut" income splitting

Here for Canada*, Conservative Party election platform (conservative.ca), April 2011: Family Tax Cut

The record shows we believe strongly in fairness for Canadian families and in respecting the choices families make, according to their needs and priorities.

But there is more to be done, especially under the federal income tax system. As it stands, couples with the same number of children and the same total income are not treated equally.

A two-income couple, in which one spouse earns more than the other, pays more federal income tax than a two-income couple in which the two spouses earn equal amounts. And a single-income couple pays even more.

We will soon be in a position to take an historic step forward to achieve greater fairness for families. We will establish the Family Tax Cut income-sharing for couples with dependent children under 18 years of age.

This will give spouses the choice to share up to $50,000 of their household income, for federal income-tax purposes. This important new measure will be implemented when the federal budget is balanced within our next full term of office.

The result will be significant tax relief for approximately 1,8 million Canadian families — each of them saving, on average, $1,300 per year.

Most of all, it will ensure that the federal income tax system respects and supports the choices that families make.

It will increase fairness for single-income couples. And it will ease the burden on double-income families, by allowing them to keep more of what they earn and to benefit more from having a second income.

(2) [Attribution rule —] Transfers and loans to minors — If an individual has transferred or lent property, either directly or indirectly, by means of a trust or by any other means whatever, to or for the benefit of a person who was under 18 years of age (other than an amount received in respect of that person either as a consequence of the operation of subsection 122.61(1) or under section 4 of the Universal Child Care Benefit Act) and who

(a) does not deal with the individual at arm's length, or

(b) is the niece or nephew of the individual,

any income or loss, as the case may be, of that person for a taxation year from the property or from property substituted for that property, that relates to the period in the taxation year throughout which the individual is resident in Canada, is deemed to be income or a loss, as the case may be, of the individual and not of that person unless that person has, before the end of the taxation year, attained the age of 18 years.

Related Provisions: 56(2) — Indirect payments; 56(4.1) — Interest free or low interest loans; 69(1)(b) — Transfer not at arm's length deemed to be disposition at fair market value; 74.1(3) — Repayment of existing indebtedness; 74.3 — Transfer or loan to a trust; 74.4(4) — Benefit not granted to designated person; 74.5(1) — Transfer for fair market value consideration; 74.5(2) — Loan for value; 74.5(3) — Spouses living apart; 74.5(6) — Back-to-back loans or transfers; 74.5(7) — Guarantees; 74.5(9) — Transfer or loan to a trust; 74.5(11) — Artificial transactions; 74.5(12) — Attribution rules — exemption; 74.5(13) — No attribution of split income subject to kiddie tax; 75(1) — Transfer before May 23, 1985; 82(2) — Attributed dividends deemed received by taxpayer; 96(1.8) — Transfer or loan of partnership interest; 160(1)(d) — Transferee jointly liable for transferor's tax on the attributed income; 212(12) — No non-resident withholding tax where income attributed; 248(5) — Substituted property.

History: Subsec. 74.1(2) amended by 2007, c. 2, s. 12, applicable in respect of amounts received after June 30, 2006. It formerly read:

> (2) Where an individual has transferred or lent property, either directly or indirectly, by means of a trust or by any other means whatever, to or for the benefit of a person who was under 18 years of age (other than an amount received in respect of that person as a consequence of the operation of subsection 122.61(1)) and who

74.2 (1) [Spousal attribution —] Gain or loss deemed that of lender or transferor — Where an individual has lent or transferred property (in this section referred to as "lent or transferred property"), either directly or indirectly, by means of a trust or by any other means whatever, to or for the benefit of a person (in this subsection referred to as the "recipient") who is the individual's spouse or common-law partner or who has since become the individual's spouse or common-law partner, the following rules apply for the purposes of computing the income of the individual and the recipient for a taxation year:

(a) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of the recipient's taxable capital gains for the year from dispositions of property (other than listed personal property) that is lent or transferred property or property substituted therefor occurring in the period (in this subsection referred to as the "attribution period") throughout which the individual is resident in Canada and the recipient is the individual's spouse or common-law partner

(ii) the total of the recipient's allowable capital losses for the year from dispositions occurring in the attribution period of property (other than listed personal property) that is lent or transferred property or property substituted therefor shall be deemed to be a taxable capital gain of the individual for the year from the disposition of property other than listed personal property;

(b) the amount, if any, by which the total determined under subparagraph (a)(ii) exceeds the total determined under subparagraph (a)(i) shall be deemed to be an allowable capital loss of the individual for the year from the disposition of property other than listed personal property;

(c) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount that the total of the recipient's gains for the year from dispositions occurring in the attribution period of listed personal property that is lent or transferred property or property substituted therefor would be if the recipient had at no time owned listed personal property other than listed personal property that was lent or transferred property or property substituted therefor

(ii) the amount that the total of the recipient's losses for the year from dispositions of listed personal property that is lent or transferred property or property substituted therefor would be if the recipient had at no time owned listed personal property other than listed personal property that was lent or transferred property or property substituted therefor, shall be deemed to be a gain of the individual for the year from the disposition of listed personal property;

(d) the amount, if any, by which the total determined under subparagraph (c)(ii) exceeds the total determined under subparagraph (c)(i) shall be deemed to be a loss of the individual for the year from the disposition of listed personal property; and

(e) any taxable capital gain or allowable capital loss or any gain or loss taken into account in computing an amount described in paragraph (a), (b), (c) or (d) shall, except for the purposes of those paragraphs and to the extent that the amount so described is deemed by virtue of this subsection to be a taxable capital gain or an allowable capital loss or a gain or loss of the individual, be deemed not to be a taxable capital gain or an allowable capital loss or a gain or loss, as the case may be, of the recipient.

74.3 (1) [Attribution rule —] Transfers or loans to a trust — Where an individual has lent or transferred property (in this section referred to as "lent or transferred property"), either directly or indirectly, by means of a trust or by any other means whatever, to a trust in which another individual who is at any time a designated person in respect of the individual is beneficially interested at any time, the following rules apply:

(a) for the purposes of section 74.1, the income of the designated person for a taxation year from the lent or transferred property shall be deemed to be an amount equal to the lesser of

(i) the amount in respect of the trust that was included by virtue of paragraph 12(1)(m) in computing the income for the year of the designated person, and

(ii) that proportion of the amount that would be the income of the trust for the year from the lent or transferred property or from property substituted therefor if no deduction were made under subsections 104(6) or (12) that

(A) the amount determined under subparagraph (i) in respect of the designated person for the year

(B) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount determined under subparagraph (i) for the year in respect of the designated person or any other person who is throughout the year a designated person in respect of the individual; and

(b) for the purposes of section 74.2, an amount equal to the lesser of

(i) the amount that was designated under subsection 104(21) in respect of the designated person in the trust's return of income for the year, and

(ii) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is a taxable capital gain for the year from the disposition by the trust of the lent or transferred property or property substituted therefor

exceeds

(B) the total of all amounts each of which is an allowable capital loss for the year from the disposition by the trust of the lent or transferred property or property substituted therefor, shall be deemed to be a taxable capital gain of the designated person for the year from the disposition of property (other than listed personal property) that is lent or transferred property.

(2) Definition of "designated person" — In this section, "designated person", in respect of an individual, has the meaning assigned by subsection 74.5(5).

Origin of subsec. 74.3(2): R.S.C. 1985, c. 1 (5th Supp.).

Definitions [s. 74.3]: "allowable capital loss" — 38(b), 248(1); "amount" — 248(1); "beneficially interested" — 248(25); "designated person" — 74.3(2), 74.5(5); "individual" — 248(1); "listed personal property" — 54, 248(1); "property" — 248(1); "substituted" — 248(5); "taxable capital gain" — 38(a), 248(1); "taxation year" — 249; "trust" — 104(1), 248(1), (3).

74.4 (1) Definitions — In this section,

"designated person", in respect of an individual, has the meaning assigned by subsection 74.5(5);

Origin of 74.4(1)"designated person": R.S.C. 1985, c. 1 (5th Supp.).

"excluded consideration", at any time, means consideration received by an individual that is

(a) indebtedness,

(b) a share of the capital stock of a corporation, or

(c) a right to receive indebtedness or a share of the capital stock of a corporation.

(2) [Attribution rule —] Transfers and loans to corporations — Where an individual has transferred or lent property, either directly or indirectly, by means of a trust or by any other means whatever, to a corporation and one of the main purposes of the transfer or loan may reasonably be considered to be to reduce the income of the individual and to benefit, either directly or indirectly, by means of a trust or by any other means whatever, a person who is a designated person in respect of the individual, in computing the income of the individual for any taxation year that includes a period after the loan or transfer throughout which

(a) the person is a designated person in respect of the individual and would have been a specified shareholder of the corporation if the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1) were read without reference to paragraphs (a) and (d) of that definition and if the reference therein to "any other corporation that is related to the corporation" were read as a reference to "any other corporation (other than a small business corporation) that is related to the corporation",

(b) the individual was resident in Canada, and

(c) the corporation was not a small business corporation, the individual shall be deemed to have received as interest in the year the amount, if any, by which

(d) the amount that would be interest on the outstanding amount of the loan or transferred property for such periods in the year if the interest were computed thereon at the prescribed rate of interest for such periods

exceeds the total of

(e) any interest received in the year by the individual in respect of the transfer or loan (other than amounts deemed by this subsection to be interest),

(f) all amounts included in the individual's income for the taxation year pursuant to subsection 82(1) or 90(1) in respect of taxable dividends received (other than dividends deemed by section 84 to have been received) by the individual in the year on shares that were received from the corporation as consideration for the transfer or as repayment for the loan that were excluded consideration at the time the dividends were received or on shares substituted therefor that were excluded consideration at that time, and

(g) where the designated person is a specified individual in relation to the year, the amount required to be included in computing the designated person's income for the year in respect of all taxable dividends received by the designated person that

(i) can reasonably be considered to be part of the benefit sought to be conferred, and

(ii) are included in computing the designated person's split income for any taxation year.

Related Provisions: 56(4.1) — Interest free or low interest loan to individual; 74.4(4) — Benefit not granted to a designated person; 82(2) — Attributed dividends deemed received by individual; 120.4 — Kiddie tax; 160(1)(d) — Transferee jointly liable for transferor's tax on the attributed income; 248(5) — Substituted property. See also at end of s. 74.4.

History: Para. 74.4(2)(f) amended by 2007, c. 2, subsec. 43.1(2), applicable to amounts received after 2005. It formerly read:

(f) ¾ of all taxable dividends received (other than dividends deemed by section 84 to have been received) by the individual in the year on shares that were received from the corporation as consideration for the transfer or as repayment for the loan that were excluded consideration at the time the dividends were received or on shares substituted therefor that were excluded consideration at that time, and

Para. 74.4(2)(g) added by 2000, c. 19, s. 10, applicable to 2000 et seq.

Para. 74.4(2)(a) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), s. 52, applicable to 1987 et seq. with respect to loans and transfers made after October 27, 1986. Para. 74.4(2)(a) formerly read:

(a) the person is a designated person in respect of the individual and would have been a specified shareholder of the corporation if the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1) were read without reference to paragraphs (a) and (d) of that definition,

Regulations: 4301(c) (prescribed rate of interest for 74.4(2)(d)).

(3) Outstanding amount — For the purposes of subsection (2), the outstanding amount of a transferred property or loan at a particular time is

(a) in the case of a transfer of property to a corporation, the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the property at the time of the transfer exceeds the total of

(i) the fair market value, at the time of the transfer, of the consideration (other than consideration that is excluded consideration at the particular time) received by the transferor for the property, and

(ii) the fair market value, at the time of receipt, of any consideration (other than consideration that is excluded consideration at the particular time) received by the transferor at or before the particular time from the corporation or from a person with whom the transferor deals at arm's length, in exchange for excluded consideration previously received by the transferor as consideration for the property or for excluded consideration substituted for such consideration;

(b) in the case of a loan of money or property to a corporation, the amount, if any, by which

(i) the principal amount of the loan of money at the time the loan was made, or

(ii) the fair market value of the property lent at the time the loan was made,

as the case may be, exceeds the fair market value, at the time the repayment is received by the lender, of any repayment of the loan (other than a repayment that is excluded consideration at the particular time).

(4) Benefit not granted to a designated person — For the purposes of subsection (2), one of the main purposes of a transfer or loan by an individual to a corporation shall not be considered to be to benefit, either directly or indirectly, a designated person in respect of the individual, where

(a) the only interest that the designated person has in the corporation is a beneficial interest in shares of the corporation held by a trust;

(b) by the terms of the trust, the designated person may not receive or otherwise obtain the use of any of the income or capital of the trust while being a designated person in respect of the individual; and

(c) the designated person has not received or otherwise obtained the use of any of the income or capital of the trust, and no deduction has been made by the trust in computing its income under subsection 104(6) or (12) in respect of amounts paid or payable to, or included in the income of, that person while being a designated person in respect of the individual.

74.5 (1) Transfers for fair market consideration — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, subsections 74.1(1) and (2) and section 74.2 do not apply to any income, gain or loss derived in a particular taxation year from transferred property or from property substituted therefor if

(a) at the time of the transfer the fair market value of the transferred property did not exceed the fair market value of the property received by the transferor as consideration for the transferred property;

(b) where the consideration received by the transferor included indebtedness,

(i) interest was charged on the indebtedness at a rate equal to or greater than the lesser of

(A) the prescribed rate that was in effect at the time the indebtedness was incurred, and

(B) the rate that would, having regard to all the circumstances, have been agreed on, at the time the indebtedness was incurred, between parties dealing with each other at arm's length,

(ii) the amount of interest that was payable in respect of the particular year in respect of the indebtedness was paid not later than 30 days after the end of the particular year, and

(iii) the amount of interest that was payable in respect of each taxation year preceding the particular year in respect of the indebtedness was paid not later than 30 days after the end of each such taxation year; and

(c) where the property was transferred to or for the benefit of the transferor's spouse or common-law partner, the transferor elected in the transferor's return of income under this Part for the taxation year in which the property was transferred not to have the provisions of subsection 73(1) apply.

(2) Loans for value — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, subsections 74.1(1) and (2) and section 74.2 do not apply to any income, gain or loss derived in a particular taxation year from lent property or from property substituted therefor if

(a) interest was charged on the loan at a rate equal to or greater than the lesser of

(i) the prescribed rate that was in effect at the time the loan was made, and

(ii) the rate that would, having regard to all the circumstances, have been agreed on, at the time the loan was made, between parties dealing with each other at arm's length;

(b) the amount of interest that was payable in respect of the particular year in respect of the loan was paid not later than 30 days after the end of the particular year; and

(c) the amount of interest that was payable in respect of each taxation year preceding the particular year in respect of the loan was paid not later than 30 days after the end of each such taxation year.

(3) Spouses [or common-law partners] living apart — Notwithstanding subsection 74.1(1) and section 74.2, where an individual has lent or transferred property, either directly or indirectly, by means of a trust or by any other means whatever, to or for the benefit of a person who is the individual's spouse or common-law partner or who has since become the individual's spouse or common-law partner,

(a) subsection 74.1(1) does not apply to any income or loss from the property, or property substituted therefor, that relates to the period throughout which the individual is living separate and apart from that person because of a breakdown of their marriage or common-law partnership; and

(b) section 74.2 does not apply to a disposition of the property, or property substituted therefor, occurring at any time while the individual is living separate and apart from that person because of a breakdown of their marriage or common-law partnership, if an election completed jointly with that person not to have that section apply is filed with the individual's return of income under this Part for the taxation year that includes that time or for any preceding taxation year.

History: Subsec. 74.5(3) amended by 2000, c. 12, Sch. 2, s. 1, to replace "spouse" with "spouse or common-law partner", and by Sch. 2, s. 9, to replace "marriage" with "marriage or common-law partnership", applicable to 2001 et seq., in force July 31, 2000. See also the transitional rules reproduced in the History to 248(1)"common-law partner".

Para. 74.5(3)(b) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), s. 53, applicable to transfers of property made after May 22, 1985 and loans outstanding on or after May 22, 1985. Para. 74.5(3)(b) formerly read:

(b) section 74.2 does not apply with respect to a disposition of the property, or property substituted therefor, during the period throughout which the individual is living separate and apart from that person by reason of a breakdown of their marriage, if the individual files with the individual's return of income under this Part for the taxation year during which the individual commenced to so live separate and apart from that person an election completed jointly with that person not to have that section apply.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-394R2: Preferred beneficiary election; IT-434R: Rental of real property by individual; IT-511R: Interspousal and certain other transfers and loans of property.

(4) Idem — No amount shall be included in computing the income of an individual under subsection 74.4(2) in respect of a designated person in respect of the individual who is the spouse or common-law partner of the individual for any period throughout which the individual is living separate and apart from the designated person by reason of a breakdown of their marriage or common-law partnership.

Related Provisions: See at end of s. 74.5.

History: Subsec. 74.5(4) amended by 2000, c. 12, Sch. 2, s. 1, to replace "spouse" with "spouse or common-law partner", and by Sch. 2, s. 9, to replace "marriage" with "marriage or common-law partnership", applicable to 2001 et seq., in force July 31, 2000. See also the transitional rules reproduced in the History to 248(1)"common-law partner".

(5) Definition of "designated person" — For the purposes of this section, "designated person" in respect of an individual, means a person

(a) who is the spouse or common-law partner of the individual; or

(b) who is under 18 years of age and who

(i) does not deal with the individual at arm's length, or

(ii) is the niece or nephew of the individual.

History: Subsec. 74.5(5) amended by 2000, c. 12, Sch. 2, s. 1, to replace "spouse" with "spouse or common-law partner", applicable to 2001 et seq., in force July 31, 2000. See also the transitional rules reproduced in the History to 248(1)"common-law partner".

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-394R2: Preferred beneficiary election; IT-511R: Interspousal and certain other transfers and loans of property.

(6) Back to back loans and transfers — Where an individual has lent or transferred property

(a) to another person and that property, or property substituted therefor, is lent or transferred by any person (in this subsection referred to as a "third party") directly or indirectly to or for the benefit of a specified person with respect to the individual, or

(b) to another person on condition that property be lent or transferred by any person (in this subsection referred to as a "third party") directly or indirectly to or for the benefit of a specified person with respect to the individual,

the following rules apply:

(c) for the purposes of sections 74.1, 74.2, 74.3 and 74.4, the property lent or transferred by the third party shall be deemed to have been lent or transferred, as the case may be, by the individual to or for the benefit of the specified person, and

(d) for the purposes of subsection (1), the consideration received by the third party for the transfer of the property shall be deemed to have been received by the individual.

Related Provisions: 74.5(8) — "Specified person". See also at end of s. 74.5.

Selected Cases [subsec. 74.5(6)]: St-Pierre v. R., [2008] 5 C.T.C. 271 (FCA) ("Series" concept in subsec. 248(10) inapplicable).

(7) Guarantees — Where an individual is obligated, either absolutely or contingently, to effect any undertaking including any guarantee, covenant or agreement given to ensure the repayment, in whole or in part, of a loan made by any person (in this subsection referred to as the "third party") directly or indirectly to or for the benefit of a specified person with respect to the individual or the payment, in whole or in part, of any interest payable in respect of the loan, the following rules apply:

(a) for the purposes of sections 74.1, 74.2, 74.3 and 74.4, the property lent by the third party shall be deemed to have been lent by the individual to or for the benefit of the specified person; and

(b) for the purposes of paragraphs (2)(b) and (c), the amount of interest that is paid in respect of the loan shall be deemed not to include any amount paid by the individual to the third party as interest on the loan.

Related Provisions: 74.5(8) — "Specified person". See also at end of s. 74.5.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-394R2: Preferred beneficiary election; IT-510: Transfers and loans of property made after May 22, 1985 to a related minor; IT-511R: Interspousal and certain other transfers and loans of property.

(8) Definition of "specified person" — For the purposes of subsections (6) and (7), "specified person", with respect to an individual, means

(a) a designated person in respect of the individual; or

(b) a corporation, other than a small business corporation, of which a designated person in respect of the individual would have been a specified shareholder if the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1) were read without reference to paragraphs (a) and (d) of that definition.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-394R2: Preferred beneficiary election; IT-510: Transfers and loans of property made after May 22, 1985 to a related minor; IT-511R: Interspousal and certain other transfers and loans of property.

(9) Transfers or loans to a trust — Where a taxpayer has lent or transferred property, either directly or indirectly, by means of a trust or by any other means whatever, to a trust in which another taxpayer is beneficially interested, the taxpayer shall, for the purposes of this section and sections 74.1 to 74.4, be deemed to have lent or transferred the property, as the case may be, to or for the benefit of the other taxpayer.

Related Provisions: 74.3(1) — Transfer or loan to a trust; 248(25) — Beneficially interested.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-394R2: Preferred beneficiary election; IT-510: Transfers and loans of property made after May 22, 1985 to a related minor; IT-511R: Interspousal and certain other transfers and loans of property.

(10) [Repealed]

History: Subsec. 74.5(10) repealed by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), s. 30, applicable after 1990. (See subsec. 248(25).) Subsec. (10) formerly read:

(10) Beneficially interested — For the purposes of this section and sections 74.1 to 74.4, a taxpayer is beneficially interested in a trust if the taxpayer has any right (whether immediate or future, whether absolute or contingent or whether conditional on or subject to the exercise of a discretionary power by any person or persons) to receive any of the income or capital of the trust either directly from the trust or indirectly through one or more other trusts.

(11) Artificial transactions — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, sections 74.1 to 74.4 do not apply to a transfer or loan of property where it may reasonably be concluded that one of the main reasons for the transfer or loan was to reduce the amount of tax that would, but for this subsection, be payable under this Part on the income and gains derived from the property or from property substituted therefor.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-394R2: Preferred beneficiary election; IT-510: Transfers and loans of property made after May 22, 1985 to a related minor; IT-511R: Interspousal and certain other transfers and loans of property.

(12) Where sections 74.1 to 74.3 do not apply — Sections 74.1, 74.2 and 74.3 do not apply in respect of a transfer by an individual of property

(a) as a payment of a premium under a registered retirement savings plan under which the individual's spouse or common-law partner is, immediately after the transfer, the annuitant (within the meaning of subsection 146(1)) to the extent that the premium is deductible in computing the income of the individual for a taxation year;

(a.2) as a payment of a contribution under a registered disability savings plan;

(b) as or on account of an amount paid by the individual to another individual who is the individual's spouse or common-law partner or a person who was under 18 years of age in a taxation year and who

(i) does not deal with the individual at arm's length, or

(ii) is the niece or nephew of the individual, that is deductible in computing the individual's income for the year and is required to be included in computing the income of the other individual; or

(c) to the individual's spouse or common-law partner,

(i) while the property, or property substituted for it, is held under a TFSA of which the spouse or common-law partner is the holder, and

(ii) to the extent that the spouse or common-law partner does not, at the time of the contribution of the property under the TFSA, have an excess TFSA amount (as defined in subsection 207.01(1)).

Related Provisions: 146(5.1) — Amount of spousal RRSP premiums deductible; 146(8.3) — Attribution on spousal RRSP payments if withdrawn soon; 146(21.1) — Contribution to Saskatchewan Pension Plan deemed to be RRSP premium for purposes of 74.5(12)(a).

History: Para. 74.5(12)(a.1) repealed by 2011, c. 24, s. 17, applicable to transfers made after 2010. It formerly read:

(a.1) as an amount contributed under a provincial pension plan prescribed for the purposes of paragraph 60(v) under which the individual's spouse or common-law partner is, immediately after the transfer, the annuitant (within the meaning assigned by subsection 146(1)) or the owner of the account under the plan to the extent that the amount does not exceed the amount by which the amount prescribed for the purposes of subparagraph 60(v)(ii) for the year in respect of the plan exceeds the total of all other contributions to the plan for the year to the account of the spouse or common-law partner under the plan;

(2) Trusts [revocable, etc.] — Where, by a trust created in any manner whatever since 1934, property is held on condition

(a) that it or property substituted therefor may

(i) revert to the person from whom the property or property for which it was substituted was directly or indirectly received (in this subsection referred to as "the person"), or

(ii) pass to persons to be determined by the person at a time subsequent to the creation of the trust, or any income or loss from the property or from property substituted for the property, and any taxable capital gain or allowable capital loss from the disposition of the property or of property substituted for the property, shall, during the existence of the person while the person is resident in Canada, be deemed to be income or a loss, as the case may be, or a taxable capital gain or allowable capital loss, as the case may be, of the person.

(b) that, during the existence of the person, the property shall not be disposed of except with the person's consent or in accordance with the person's direction,

(3) Exceptions — Subsection (2) does not apply to property held in a taxation year

(a) by a trust governed by a deferred profit sharing plan, an employee benefit plan, an employees profit sharing plan, a registered disability savings plan, a registered education savings plan, a registered pension plan, a registered retirement income fund, a registered retirement savings plan, a registered supplementary unemployment benefit plan, a retirement compensation arrangement or a TFSA;

Proposed Amendment — 75(3)(a)

(a) by a trust governed by a deferred profit sharing plan, an employee benefit plan, an employees profit sharing plan, a pooled registered pension plan, a registered disability savings plan, a registered education savings plan, a registered pension plan, a registered retirement income fund, a registered retirement savings plan, a registered supplementary unemployment benefit plan, a retirement compensation arrangement or a TFSA;

Application: The December 14, 2011 draft legislation, s. 7, will amend para. 75(3)(a) to read as above, in force or deemed in force on the day of the coming into force of S.C. 2012, c. 16 (Bill C-25, Royal Assent June 18, 2012), Pooled Registered Pension Plans Act.

Technical Notes: Subsection 75(3) exempts a number of trusts from the attribution rule in subsection 75(2), under which any income or loss from trust property held by certain reversionary trusts can be attributed for tax purposes to the persons from whom the property was received. Paragraph 75(3)(a) exempts certain trusts governed by plans such as registered pension plans, registered retirement savings plans, and employee benefit plans.

Paragraph 75(3)(a) is amended to add trusts governed by pooled registered pension plans (PRPPs) to the list of exempt trusts. For further information regarding PRPPs, please see the commentary on new section 147.5.

(b) by an employee life and health trust, an employee trust, a related segregated fund trust (within the meaning assigned by paragraph 138.1(1)(a)), a trust described in paragraph (a.1) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1), or a trust described in paragraph 149(1)(y);

Proposed Amendment — 75(3)(b)

(b) by an employee life and health trust, an employee trust, a private foundation that is a registered charity, a related segregated fund trust (within the meaning assigned by paragraph 138.1(1)(a)), a trust described by paragraph (a.1) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1), or a trust described by paragraph 149(1)(y);

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, s. 10, will amend para. 75(3)(b) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Subsection 75(3) exempts property held by certain trusts from the application of subsection 75(2). Absent subsection 75(3), income or losses from property is in certain circumstances attributed for income tax purposes to the person from whom the property was received by the trust.

Paragraph 75(3)(b) is amended to apply to property held by a trust that is a private foundation and a registered charity.

(c) by a trust that

(i) is not resident in Canada,

(ii) is resident in a country under the laws of which an income tax is imposed,

(iii) is exempt under the laws referred to in subparagraph (ii) from the payment of income tax to the government of the country of which the trust is a resident, and

(iv) was established principally in connection with, or the principal purpose of which is to administer or provide benefits under, one or more superannuation, pension or retirement funds or plans or any funds or plans established to provide employee benefits;

(c.1) by a qualifying environmental trust; or

Proposed Addition — 75(3)(c.2), (c.3)

(c.2) by a trust if the person from whom the trust acquired the property is, in respect of the trust, an electing contributor as defined in subsection 94(1);

(c.3) by a trust that is non-resident, but would be resident in Canada for the purpose of computing its income for the year if the definition "resident contributor" in subsection 94(1) were read without reference to its paragraph (a); or

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — non-resident trusts), s. 4, will add para. 75(3)(c.2), applicable to taxation years that end after March 4, 2010; and para. 75(3)(c.3) (as corrected by Department of Finance Erratum, September 1, 2010), applicable to taxation years that begin after 2000 except that, for taxation years that end before 2007, it shall be read as follows:

(c.3) by a trust that is non-resident, but would be resident in Canada for the purpose of computing its income for the year if section 94, as it reads in its application to the 2007 taxation year, had applied to the trust for the year and the definition "resident contributor" in that section were read without reference to its paragraph (a); or

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Subsection 75(2) generally provides for the attribution of income derived from certain trust property to a person resident in Canada where the property was received by the trust from the person and can revert to the person (or pass to other persons determined by that person). Subsection 75(3) exempts property held by certain trusts from this attribution rule.

Subsection 75(3) is amended by adding references to new paragraphs 75(3)(c.2) and (c.3).

New paragraph 75(3)(c.2) applies to a property of a trust if the trust acquired the property from an "electing contributor" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) in respect of the trust. An electing contributor is a person that has validly elected under section 94 to have new subsection 94(16) apply in respect of the person and the trust. Under these circumstances, paragraph 75(2)(c.2) ensures that subsection 94(16), and not 75(2), applies in determining amounts to be attributed to the person from the trust in respect of the property. See also the commentary on subsection 107(4.1).

New paragraph 75(3)(c.3) ensures that subsection 75(2) does not apply to property held by a trust in respect of which all of the contributors are either non-resident or recent immigrants to Canada (i.e., none of the contributors to the trust has been resident in Canada for more than 60 months). This exception is consistent with similar 60-month exemptions in section 94 (see subsection 94(3) and [para. (a) of each of — ed.] the definitions "connected contributor" and "resident contributor" in subsection 94(1)) and section 94.2.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 9, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

I am responding to your faxed letter to Mr. Victor Pietrow dated April 30, 2001 concerning the Legislative Proposals and Explanatory Notes on Taxation of Non-Resident Trusts and Foreign Investment Entities (the "Legislative Proposals") released by the Department of Finance by way of Finance Canada News Release number 2000-050, dated June 22, 2000. As you may know, Finance Canada News Release number 2000-064, dated September 7, 2000, states that the implementation date for the Legislative Proposals will be delayed by one year, to taxation years beginning after 2001.

One of the Legislative Proposals is to amend subsection 75(3) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") to exempt what may be termed "60 month immigration trusts" from the application of subsection 75(2) of the Act. In your letter, you have suggested that the implementation date in respect of the proposed subsection 75(3) amendment should remain as taxation years beginning after 2000.

From a tax policy standpoint, we have no objections to your suggestion. Consequently, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister that the proposed subsection 75(3) amendment be revised so that

- in respect of trust taxation years beginning after 2001, it is substantially in the form announced on June 22, 2000, and
- in respect of any particular trust taxation year that begins in 2001, there is an exemption from subsection 75(2) for a trust that, pursuant to the Act as it reads in its application to trust taxation years commencing after 2001, is non-resident for the purposes of computing the trust's income for the particular year, notwithstanding that there is a person who is, at the end of the particular year, both resident in Canada and a contributor (as defined in section 94, as it reads in its application to trust taxation years commencing after 2001) to the trust.

We advise, however, that the proposed subsection 75(3) amendment is part and parcel of the Legislative Proposals and that at this juncture it would be premature to speculate as to whether we would be prepared to propose an amendment to subsection 75(3) for tabling in the House of Commons except in conjunction with the Legislative Proposals.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

75.1 (1) Gain or loss deemed that of transferor — Where

(a) subsection 73(3) or (4) applied to the transfer of property (in this subsection referred to as "transferred property") by a taxpayer to a child of the taxpayer,

(b) the transfer was made at less than the fair market value of the transferred property immediately before the time of the transfer, and

(c) in a taxation year, the transferee disposed of the transferred property and did not, before the end of that year, attain the age of 18 years,

the following rules apply:

(d) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of the transferee's taxable capital gains for the year from dispositions of transferred property

exceeds

(ii) the total of the transferee's allowable capital losses for the year from dispositions of transferred property, shall, during the lifetime of the transferor while the transferor is resident in Canada, be deemed to be a taxable capital gain of the transferor for the year from the disposition of property,

(e) the amount, if any, by which the total determined under subparagraph (d)(ii) exceeds the total determined under subparagraph (d)(i) shall, during the lifetime of the transferor while the transferor is resident in Canada, be deemed to be an allowable capital loss of the transferor for the year from the disposition of property, and

(f) any taxable capital gain or allowable capital loss taken into account in computing an amount described in paragraph (d) or the amount described in paragraph (e) shall, except for the purposes of those paragraphs, to the extent that the amount so described is deemed by virtue of this subsection to be a taxable capital gain or an allowable capital loss of the transferor, be deemed not to be a taxable capital gain or an allowable capital loss, as the case may be, of the transferee.

Related Provisions: 74.2(2) — Deemed gain or loss.

History: Para. 75.1(1)(a) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), s. 54, applicable to property transferred after 1989. Para. 75.1(1)(a) formerly read:

(a) a taxpayer has, after 1971, transferred property (in this subsection referred to as "transferred property") to a child of the taxpayer in circumstances where subsection 73(3) applied in respect of the transfer,

(2) Definition of "child" — For the purposes of this section, "child" of a taxpayer includes a child of the taxpayer's child and a child of the taxpayer's child's child.

Proposed Addition — 75.2

75.2 Rules applicable with respect to "qualifying trust annuity" — If an amount paid to acquire a qualifying trust annuity with respect to a taxpayer was deductible under paragraph 60(l) in computing the taxpayer's income,

(a) any amount that is paid out of or under the annuity at any particular time after 2005 and before the death of the taxpayer is deemed to have been received out of or under the annuity at the particular time by the taxpayer, and not to have been received by any other taxpayer; and

(b) if the taxpayer dies after 2005

(i) an amount equal to the fair market value of the annuity at the time of the taxpayer's death is deemed to have been received, immediately before the taxpayer's death, by the taxpayer out of or under the annuity, and

(ii) for the purpose of subsection 70(5), the annuity is to be disregarded in determining the fair market value (immediately before the taxpayer's death) of the taxpayer's interest in the trust that is the annuitant under the annuity.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 38, will add s. 75.2, applicable after 2005.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New section 75.2 provides attribution rules in respect of a "qualifying trust annuity" with respect to a taxpayer (as defined in new subsection 60.011(2)), the purchase price of which is deductible by the taxpayer under paragraph 60(l). A distinguishing feature of such an annuity is that the annuitant thereunder is a qualifying trust under which the taxpayer is a beneficiary.

Paragraph 75.2(a) deems any amount paid out of or under such an annuity at any time after 2005 and before the taxpayer's death to have been received at that time by the taxpayer. The taxpayer is required, by paragraph 56(1)(d.2) of the Act, to include this amount in computing the taxpayer's income for the year in which they are deemed to have received the amount, as would be the case if the taxpayer were the annuitant under the annuity. Paragraph 75.2(a) also deems the amount not to have been received by any other taxpayer, thus ensuring that the amount, although payable to the trust that is the annuitant under the annuity, is disregarded in determining the trust's income for tax purposes.

Paragraph 75.2(b) contains special provisions that apply where a taxpayer who was entitled to a deduction under paragraph 60(l) for the purchase price of a qualifying trust annuity with respect to the taxpayer dies after 2005. Subparagraph 75.2(b)(i) deems the taxpayer to have received, immediately before death, an amount out of or under the annuity equal to the fair market value of the annuity at that time. This amount is included, also under paragraph 56(1)(d.2), in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year that includes that time.

Subparagraph 75.2(b)(ii) provides for the annuity to be disregarded in determining, for the purpose of subsection 70(5), the fair market value of the taxpayer's interest in the trust that is the annuitant under the annuity. Subsection 70(5) deems a deceased taxpayer to have disposed of each capital property owned by the taxpayer immediately before death for proceeds equal to the fair market value of the property at that time. To the extent that subsection 70(5) deems a taxpayer who dies after 2005 to have disposed of an interest in a trust that is the annuitant under a qualifying trust annuity with respect to the taxpayer, subparagraph 75.2(b)(ii) ensures — by disregarding the annuity in determining the fair market value of the taxpayer's interest in the trust — that the taxpayer is not subject to double taxation with respect to the annuity.

Related Provisions: 60.011(2) — Qualifying trust annuity; 160.2(2.1), (2.2) — Joint and several liability for tax under 75.2.

Definitions [s. 75.2]: "amount" — 248(1); "qualifying trust annuity" — 60.011(2), 248(1); "taxpayer" — 248(1); "trust" — 104(1), 248(1), (3).

76. (1) Security in satisfaction of income debt — Where a person receives a security or other right or a certificate of indebtedness or other evidence of indebtedness wholly or partially as payment of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, a debt that is then payable, the amount of which debt would be included in computing the person's income if it were paid, the value of the security, right or indebtedness or the applicable portion thereof shall, notwithstanding the form or legal effect of the transaction, be included in computing the person's income for the taxation year in which it is received.

Related Provisions: 214(4) — Non-resident — securities.

History: Subsec. 76(1) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), s. 55, applicable to securities, rights, certificates of indebtedness and other evidences of indebtedness received after July 13, 1990. Subsec. 76(1) formerly read:

76. (1) Security in satisfaction of income debt — Where a person has received a security or other right or a certificate of indebtedness or other evidence of indebtedness wholly or partially as, in lieu of payment of, or in satisfaction of, a debt that was then payable, the amount of which debt would be included in computing the person's income if it had been paid, the value of the security, right or indebtedness or the applicable portion thereof shall, notwithstanding the form or legal effect of the transaction, be included in computing the person's income for the taxation year in which it was received.

Selected Cases [subsec. 76(1)]: Nellis v. R., [1986] 2 C.T.C. 216 (FCTD) (Mortgage received in satisfaction of debt was security in lieu of payment and included in income); *Pendray Farms Ltd. et al. v. (2) Idem — Where a security or other right or a certificate of indebtedness or other evidence of indebtedness is received by a person wholly or partially as payment of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, a debt before the debt is payable, but is not itself payable or redeemable before the day on which the debt is payable, it shall, for the purpose of subsection (1), be deemed to be received by the person holding it at that time when the debt becomes payable.

History: Subsec. 76(2) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), s. 55, applicable to securities, rights, certificates of indebtedness and other evidences of indebtedness received after July 13, 1990. Subsec. 76(2) formerly read:

> (2) Idem — Where a security or other right or a certificate of indebtedness or other evidence of indebtedness has been received by a person wholly or partially as, in lieu of payment of, or in satisfaction of, a debt before the debt was payable, but was not itself payable or redeemable before the day on which the debt was payable, it shall, for the purpose of subsection (1), be deemed to have been received when the debt became payable by the person holding it at that time.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-77R: Securities in satisfaction of an income debt (archived).

(3) Section enacted for greater certainty — This section is enacted for greater certainty and shall not be construed as limiting the generality of the other provisions of this Part by which amounts are required to be included in computing income.

(4) [Grain] Debt deemed not to be income debt — Where a cash purchase ticket or other form of settlement prescribed pursuant to the Canada Grain Act or by the Minister is issued to a taxpayer in respect of grain delivered in a taxation year of a taxpayer to a primary elevator or process elevator and the ticket or other form of settlement entitles the holder thereof to payment by the operator of the elevator of the purchase price, without interest, stated in the ticket for the grain at a date that is after the end of that taxation year, the amount of the purchase price stated in the ticket or other form of settlement shall, notwithstanding any other provision of this section, be included in computing the income of the taxpayer to whom the ticket or other form of settlement was issued for the taxpayer's taxation year immediately following the taxation year in which the grain was delivered and not for the taxation year in which the grain was delivered.

77. [Repealed]

History: S. 77 repealed by 1995, c. 21, s. 52, applicable to exchanges occurring after October 1994. S. 77 formerly read:

> 77. Bond conversion — Where a bond of a debtor is acquired by a taxpayer in exchange for another bond of the same debtor and
> (a) the terms of the bond for which it was exchanged conferred on the holder thereof the right to make the exchange, and
> (b) the amount payable to the holder of the bond on its maturity is the same as the amount that would have been payable to the holder of the bond for which it was exchanged on the maturity of that bond,
> the cost of the bond so acquired and the sale price of the bond for which it was exchanged shall be deemed to be,
> (c) in the event that the bond that was exchanged was property described in an inventory of a business carried on by the taxpayer, the amount at which it had been valued at the end of the last complete fiscal period of the business preceding the exchange, or
> (d) in any other event, the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the bond that was exchanged, immediately before the exchange.

78. (1) Unpaid amounts — Where an amount in respect of a deductible outlay or expense that was owing by a taxpayer to a person with whom the taxpayer was not dealing at arm's length at the time the outlay or expense was incurred and at the end of the second taxation year following the taxation year in which the outlay or expense was incurred, is unpaid at the end of that second taxation year, either

(a) the amount so unpaid shall be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the third taxation year following the taxation year in which the outlay or expense was incurred, or

(b) where the taxpayer and that person have filed an agreement in prescribed form on or before the day on or before which the taxpayer is required by section 150 to file the taxpayer's return of income for the third succeeding taxation year, for the purposes of this Act the following rules apply:

(i) the amount so unpaid shall be deemed to have been paid by the taxpayer and received by that person on the first day of that third taxation year, and section 153, except subsection 153(3), is applicable to the extent that it would apply if that amount were being paid to that person by the taxpayer, and

(ii) that person shall be deemed to have made a loan to the taxpayer on the first day of that third taxation year in an amount equal to the amount so unpaid minus the amount, if any, deducted or withheld therefrom by the taxpayer on account of that person's tax for that third taxation year.

(2) Idem — Where an amount in respect of a deductible outlay or expense that was owing by a taxpayer that is a corporation to a person with whom the taxpayer was not dealing at arm's length is unpaid at the time when the taxpayer is wound up, and the taxpayer is wound up before the end of the second taxation year following the taxation year in which the outlay or expense was incurred, the amount so unpaid shall be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year in which it is wound up.

Related Provisions: 80(1)"excluded obligation"(c) — Obligation not subject to debt forgiveness rules.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-109R2: Unpaid amounts; IT-126R2: Meaning of "Winding-up".

(3) Late filing — Where, in respect of an amount described in subsection (1) that was owing by a taxpayer to a person, an agreement in a form prescribed for the purposes of this section is filed after the day on or before which the agreement is required to be filed for the purposes of paragraph (1)(b), both paragraphs (1)(a) and (b) apply in respect of the said amount, except that paragraph (1)(a) shall be read and construed as requiring 25% only of the said amount to be included in computing the taxpayer's income.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-109R2: Unpaid amounts.

(4) Unpaid remuneration and other amounts — Where an amount in respect of a taxpayer's expense that is a superannuation or pension benefit, a retiring allowance, salary, wages or other remuneration (other than reasonable vacation or holiday pay or a deferred amount under a salary deferral arrangement) in respect of an office or employment is unpaid on the day that is 180 days after the end of the taxation year in which the expense was incurred, for the purposes of this Act other than this subsection, the amount shall be deemed not to have been incurred as an expense in the year and shall be deemed to be incurred as an expense in the taxation year in which the amount is paid.

Related Provisions: 37(11) — SR&ED expense must be claimed as such even if not deductible due to 78(4); 78(5) — 78(4) takes priority over 78(1); 80(1)"excluded obligation"(c) — Obligation not subject to debt forgiveness rules; 127(9)"investment tax credit"(m) — investment tax credit must be claimed as such even if not deductible due to 78(4); 127(26) — Unpaid amounts re investment tax credit; 248(1)"salary deferral arrangement"(k) — No SDA where bonus paid within 3 years.

History: Subsec. 78(4) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), s. 56, to add "a superannuation or pension benefit, a retiring allowance", applicable to expenses incurred after July 1990.

Related Provisions: 79.1(1)"creditor" — Definition applies to s. 79.1.

"debt" includes an obligation to pay an amount under a mortgage, hypothecary claim or similar obligation or under a conditional sales agreement;

Related Provisions: 79.1(1)"debt" — Definition applies to s. 79.1.

"person" includes a partnership;

Related Provisions: 79.1(1)"person" — Definition applies to s. 79.1.

"property" does not include

(a) money, or

(b) indebtedness owed by or guaranteed by the government of a country, or a province, state, or other political subdivision of that country;

Related Provisions: 79.1(1)"property" — Definition applies to s. 79.1.

"specified amount" at any time of a debt owed or assumed by a person means

(a) the unpaid principal amount of the debt at that time, and

(b) unpaid interest accrued to that time on the debt.

Related Provisions: 79.1(1)"specified amount" — Definition applies to s. 79.1.

History: The definition "creditor" in subsec. 79(1) amended to add "hypothecary claim" and replace "shall be deemed" with "is deemed" by 2001, c. 17, s. 209, in force on June 14, 2001.

The definition "debt" in subsec. 79(1) amended to add the words "hypothecary claim" by the said c. 17, s. 209, in force on June 14, 2001.

(2) Surrender of property — For the purposes of this section, a property is surrendered at any time by a person to another person where the beneficial ownership of the property is acquired or reacquired at that time from the person by the other person and the acquisition or reacquisition of the property was in consequence of the person's failure to pay all or part of one or more specified amounts of debts owed by the person to the other person immediately before that time.

Related Provisions: 79.1(2) — Seizure of property by creditor; 180.2(1)"adjusted income" — No OAS clawback on gain to which 79(2) applies.

(3) Proceeds of disposition for debtor — Where a particular property is surrendered at any time by a person (in this subsection referred to as the "debtor") to a creditor of the debtor, the debtor's proceeds of disposition of the particular property shall be deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all specified amounts of debts of the debtor that are in respect of properties surrendered at that time by the debtor to the creditor and that are owing immediately before that time to the creditor;

B is the total of all amounts each of which is a specified amount of a debt that is owed by the debtor immediately before that time to a person (other than the creditor), to the extent that the amount ceases to be owing by the debtor as a consequence of properties being surrendered at that time by the debtor to the creditor;

C is the total of all amounts each of which is a specified amount of a particular debt that is owed by the debtor immediately before that time to a person (other than a specified amount included in the amount determined for A or B as a consequence of properties being surrendered at that time by the debtor to the creditor), where

(a) any property surrendered at that time by the debtor to the creditor was security for

(i) the particular debt, and

(ii) another debt that is owed by the debtor immediately before that time to the creditor, and

(b) the other debt is subordinate to the particular debt in respect of that property;

D is

(a) where a specified amount of a debt owed by the debtor immediately before that time to a person (other than the creditor) ceases, as a consequence of the surrender at that time of properties by the debtor to the creditor, to be secured by all properties owned by the debtor immediately before that time, the lesser of

(i) the amount, if any, by which the total of all such specified amounts exceeds the portion of that total included in any of the amounts determined for B or C as a consequence of properties being surrendered at that time by the debtor to the creditor, and

(ii) the amount, if any, by which the total cost amount to the debtor of all properties surrendered at that time by the debtor to the creditor exceeds the total amount that would, but for this description and the description of F, be determined under this subsection as a consequence of the surrender, and

(b) in any other case, nil;

E is

(a) where the particular property is surrendered at that time by the debtor in circumstances in which paragraph 69(1)(b) would, but for this subsection, apply and the fair market value of all properties surrendered at that time by the debtor to the creditor exceeds the amount that would, but for this description and the description of F, be determined under this subsection as a consequence of the surrender, that excess, and

(b) in any other case, nil;

F is the total of all amounts each of which is the lesser of

(a) the portion of a particular specified amount of a particular debt included in the amount determined for A, B, C or D in computing the debtor's proceeds of disposition of the particular property, and

(b) the total of

(i) all amounts included under paragraph 6(1)(a) or subsection 15(1) in computing the income of any person because the particular debt was settled, or deemed by subsection 80.01(8) to have been settled, at or before the end of the taxation year that includes that time,

(ii) all amounts renounced under subsection 66(10), (10.1), (10.2) or (10.3) by the debtor in respect of the particular debt,

(iii) all amounts each of which is a forgiven amount (within the meaning assigned by subsection 80(1)) in respect of the debt at a previous time that the particular debt was deemed by subsection 80.01(8) to have been settled,

(iv) where the particular debt is an excluded obligation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 80(1)), the particular specified amount, and

(v) the lesser of

(A) the unpaid interest accrued to that time on the particular debt, and

(B) the total of

(I) the amount, if any, by which the total of all amounts included because of section 80.4 in computing the debtor's income for the taxation year that includes that time or for a preceding taxation year in respect of interest on the particular debt exceeds the total of all amounts paid before that time on account of interest on the particular debt, and

(II) such portion of that unpaid interest as would, if it were paid, be included in the amount determined under paragraph 28(1)(e) in respect of the debtor;

G is the fair market value at that time of the particular property; and

H is the fair market value at that time of all properties surrendered by the debtor to the creditor at that time.

Related Provisions: 13(21)"proceeds of disposition"(h) — Inclusion for depreciable property rules; 15(1.21)(b) — Inclusion under 79(3) ignored for calculating shareholder benefit from forgiven amount; 18(9.3) — Rule where debtor previously prepaid interest; 79(2) — Meaning of "surrendered"; 79(4) — Subsequent payment by debtor; 79(5) — Where amount included in consequence of properties being surrendered before the year; 79(7) — Where debt denominated in foreign currency; 80(1)"forgiven amount"B(f) — Debt forgiveness rules do not apply; 87(2)(h.1) — Amalgamations — continuing corporation; 118(2)B — Inclusion under s. 79 ignored for old age credit threshold; 122.5(1)"adjusted income"(a)(ii), 122.6"adjusted income"(a)(ii), 122.7(1)"adjusted net income"(b), 180.2(1)"adjusted income"(a)(ii) — Inclusion under s. 79 ignored for GST/HST credit threshold, Child Tax Benefit threshold, Working Income Tax Benefit threshold and Old Age Security clawback threshold; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

(4) Subsequent payment by debtor — An amount paid at any time by a person as, on account of or in satisfaction of, a specified amount of a debt that can reasonably be considered to have been included in the amount determined for A, C or D in subsection (3) in respect of a property surrendered before that time by the person shall be deemed to be a repayment of assistance, at that time in respect of the property, to which

(a) subsection 39(13) applies, where the property was capital property (other than depreciable property) of the person immediately before its surrender;

(b) paragraph 20(1)(hh.1) applies, where the cost of the property to the person was an eligible capital expenditure;

(c) the description of E in the definition "cumulative Canadian exploration expense" in subsection 66.1(6), the description of D in the definition "cumulative Canadian development expense" in subsection 66.2(5) or the description of D in the definition "cumulative Canadian oil and gas property expense" in subsection 66.4(5), as the case may be, applies, where the cost of the property to the person was a Canadian exploration expense, a Canadian development expense or a Canadian oil and gas property expense; or

(d) paragraph 20(1)(hh) applies, in any other case.

(5) Subsequent application with respect to employee or shareholder debt — Any amount included under paragraph 6(1)(a) or subsection 15(1) in computing a person's income for a taxation year that can reasonably be considered to have been included in the amount determined for A, C or D in subsection (3) as a consequence of properties being surrendered before the year by the person shall be deemed to be a repayment by the person, immediately before the end of the year, of assistance to which subsection (4) applies.

Forms: T2 SCH 11: Transactions with shareholders, officers, or employees.

(6) Surrender of property not payment or repayment by debtor — Where a specified amount of a debt is included in the amount determined at any time for A, B, C or D in subsection (3) in respect of a property surrendered at that time by a person to a creditor of the person, for the purpose of computing the person's income, no amount shall be considered to have been paid or repaid by the person as a consequence of the acquisition or reacquisition of the surrendered property by the creditor.

Advance Tax Rulings: ATR-6: Vendor reacquires business assets following default by purchaser.

(7) Foreign exchange — Where a debt is denominated in a currency (other than Canadian currency), any amount determined for A, B, C or D in subsection (3) in respect of the debt shall be determined with reference to the relative value of that currency and Canadian currency at the time the debt was issued.

Related Provisions: 261(2)(b) — 79(7) overrides general currency conversion rules; 261(5)(c), (f)(i) — Functional currency reporting.

History [s. 79]: S. 79 amended by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 26(1), applicable to property acquired or reacquired after February 21, 1994, other than property acquired or reacquired pursuant to a court order made before February 22, 1994. Subsec. 26(3) of 1995, c. 21, provides that where a taxpayer so elects in writing filed with the Minister of National Revenue, para. 79(f) shall apply to the taxpayer in respect of property reacquired by the taxpayer after 1991 as if it read as follows:

(e.1) where the property is capital property of the taxpayer and was disposed of by the taxpayer to the other person in the year and subsequently reacquired by the taxpayer in the year, the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the property shall be deemed to be the lesser of the proceeds of disposition of the property to the taxpayer (determined without reference to this paragraph) and the amount that is the greater of

(i) the amount, if any, by which such proceeds (determined without reference to this paragraph) exceeds such portion of the proceeds as is represented by the taxpayer's claim, and

(ii) the cost amount to the taxpayer of the property immediately before its disposition by the taxpayer;

(f) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have reacquired the property at the amount, if any, by which the cost at that time of the taxpayer's claim exceeds the amount described in subparagraph (e)(i) or (ii) in respect of that property or the amount, if any, by which the proceeds of disposition of the property are reduced because of paragraph (e.1), as the case may be;

S. 79 formerly read:

79. Mortgage foreclosures and conditional sales repossessions — Where, at any time in a taxation year, a taxpayer who

(a) was a mortgagee or other creditor of another person who had previously acquired property, or

(b) had previously sold property to another person under a conditional sales agreement, has acquired or reacquired the beneficial ownership of the property in consequence of the other person's failure to pay all or any part of an amount (in this section referred to as the "taxpayer's claim") owing by that person to the taxpayer, the following rules apply:

(c) there shall be included, in computing the other person's proceeds of disposition of the property, the principal amount of the taxpayer's claim plus all amounts each of which is the principal amount of any debt that had been owing by the other person, to the extent that it has been extinguished by virtue of the acquisition or reacquisition, as the case may be,

(d) any amount paid by the other person after the acquisition or reacquisition, as the case may be, as, on account of or in satisfaction of the taxpayer's claim shall be deemed to be a loss of that person, for that person's taxation year in which payment of that amount was made, from the disposition of the property,

(e) in computing the income of the taxpayer for the year,

(i) the amount, if any, claimed by the taxpayer under subparagraph 40(1)(a)(iii) or 44(1)(e)(iii) in computing the taxpayer's gain for the immediately preceding taxation year from the disposition of the property, and

(ii) the amount, if any, deducted under paragraph 20(1)(n) in computing the income of the taxpayer for the immediately preceding year in respect of the property,

shall be deemed to be nil,

(f) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have acquired or reacquired, as the case may be, the property at the amount, if any, by which the cost at that time of the taxpayer's claim exceeds the amount described in subparagraph (e)(i) or (ii), as the case may be, in respect of the property,

(g) the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the taxpayer's claim shall be deemed to be nil, and

(h) in computing the taxpayer's income for the year or a subsequent year, no amount is deductible in respect of the taxpayer's claim by virtue of paragraph 20(1)(l) or (p).

Subpara. 79(e)(i) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), s. 57, to add "or 44(1)(e)(iii)", applicable

(a) to property in respect of which a taxpayer has claimed an amount under subpara. 44(1)(e)(iii) and that was reacquired by the taxpayer after 1985 and before July 13, 1990, where the taxpayer so elects before July 1991, and

(b) to property acquired or reacquired after July 12, 1990, and, notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5), such assessments of tax, interest and penalties shall be made as are necessary to give effect to an election made pursuant to para. (a).

"property" has the meaning assigned by subsection 79(1);

"specified amount" has the meaning assigned by subsection 79(1);

"specified cost" to a person of a debt owing to the person means

(a) where the debt is capital property of the person, the adjusted cost base to the person of the debt, and

(b) in any other case, the amount, if any, by which

(i) the cost amount to the person of the debt

exceeds

(ii) such portion of that cost amount as would be deductible in computing the person's income (otherwise than in respect of the principal amount of the debt) if the debt were established by the person to have become a bad debt or to have become uncollectable.

Related Provisions: 20(1)(p), 20(4)–(4.2), 50(1) — Provisions allowing deductions for bad debts.

(2) Seizure of property — Subject to subsection (2.1) and for the purpose of this section, a property is seized at any time by a person in respect of a debt where

(a) the beneficial ownership of the property is acquired or reacquired at that time by the person; and

(b) the acquisition or reacquisition of the property is in consequence of another person's failure to pay to the person all or part of the specified amount of the debt.

Related Provisions: 50(1) — Deemed disposition of debt on bad debt, windup, insolvency or bankruptcy; 79(2) — Surrender of property by debtor; 79.1(2.1) — Exception — foreign resource property; 138(11.93)(a) — Section 79.1 does not apply to insurer.

History: Subsec. 79.1(2) amended by 2001, c. 17, s. 57, applicable in respect of property acquired or reacquired after February 27, 2000. The subsec. formerly read:

(2) For the purposes of this section, a property is seized at any time by a person in respect of a debt where the beneficial ownership of the property is acquired or reacquired at that time by the person and the acquisition or reacquisition of the property was in consequence of another person's failure to pay to the person all or part of the specified amount of the debt.

(2.1) Exception — For the purpose of this section, foreign resource property is deemed not to be seized at any time from

(a) an individual or a corporation, if the individual or corporation is non-resident at that time; or

(b) a partnership (other than a partnership each member of which is resident in Canada at that time).

History: Subsec. 79.1(2.1) added by 2001, c. 17, s. 57, applicable in respect of property acquired or reacquired after February 27, 2000.

(3) Creditor's capital gains reserves — Where a property is seized at any time in a particular taxation year by a creditor in respect of a debt, for the purpose of computing the income of the creditor for the particular year, the amount claimed by the creditor under subparagraph 40(1)(a)(iii) or 44(1)(e)(iii) in computing the creditor's gain for the preceding taxation year from any disposition before the particular year of the property shall be deemed to be the amount, if any, by which the amount so claimed exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is an amount determined under paragraph (6)(a) or (b) in respect of the seizure.

(4) Creditor's inventory reserves — Where a property is seized at any time in a particular taxation year by a creditor in respect of a debt, for the purpose of computing the income of the creditor for the particular year, the amount deducted under paragraph 20(1)(n) in computing the income of the creditor for the preceding taxation year in respect of any disposition of the property before the particular year shall be deemed to be the amount, if any, by which the amount so deducted exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is an amount determined under paragraph (6)(a) or (b) in respect of the seizure.

(5) Adjustment where disposition and reacquisition of capital property in same year — Where a property is seized at any time in a taxation year by a creditor in respect of one or more debts and the property was capital property of the creditor that was disposed of by the creditor at a previous time in the year, the proceeds of disposition of the property to the creditor at the previous time shall be deemed to be the lesser of the amount of the proceeds (determined without reference to this subsection) and the amount that is the greater of

(a) the amount, if any, by which the amount of such proceeds (determined without reference to this subsection) exceeds such portion of the proceeds as is represented by the specified amounts of those debts immediately before that time, and

(b) the cost amount to the creditor of the property immediately before the previous time.

(6) Cost of seized properties for creditor — Where a particular property is seized at any time in a taxation year by a creditor in respect of one or more debts, the cost to the creditor of the particular property shall be deemed to be the amount, if any, by which the total of

(a) that proportion of the total specified costs immediately before that time to the creditor of those debts that

(i) the fair market value of the particular property immediately before that time

is of

(ii) the fair market value of all properties immediately before that time that were seized by the creditor at that time in respect of those debts, and

(b) all amounts each of which is an outlay or expense made or incurred, or a specified amount at that time of a debt that is assumed, by the creditor at or before that time to protect the creditor's interest in the particular property, except to the extent the outlay or expense

Proposed Amendment — 79.1(6)(b) opening words

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — bijuralism), s. 203, will amend the opening words of para. 79.1(6)(b) by substituting "creditor's interest, or for civil law the creditor's right," for "creditor's interest", to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 12(4).

(i) was included in the cost to the creditor of property other than the particular property,

(ii) was included before that time in computing, for the purposes of this Act, any balance of undeducted outlays, expenses or other amounts of the creditor, or

(iii) was deductible in computing the creditor's income for the year or a preceding taxation year

exceeds

(c) the amount, if any, claimed or deducted under paragraph 20(1)(n) or subparagraph 40(1)(a)(iii) or 44(1)(e)(iii), as the case may be, in respect of the particular property in computing the creditor's income or capital gain for the preceding taxation year or the amount by which the proceeds of disposition of the creditor of the particular property are reduced because of subsection (5) in respect of a disposition of the particular property by the creditor occurring before that time and in the year.

Related Provisions: 79.1(3) — Capital gains reserve; 79.1(4) — Inventory reserve.

(7) Treatment of debt — Where a property is seized at any time in a taxation year by a creditor in respect of a particular debt,

(a) the creditor shall be deemed to have disposed of the particular debt at that time;

(b) the amount received on account of the particular debt as a consequence of the seizure shall be deemed

(i) to be received at that time, and

(ii) to be equal to

(A) where the particular debt is capital property, the adjusted cost base to the creditor of the particular debt, and

(B) in any other case, the cost amount to the creditor of the particular debt;

(c) where any portion of the particular debt is outstanding immediately after that time, the creditor shall be deemed to have reacquired that portion immediately after that time at a cost equal to

(i) where the particular debt is capital property, nil, and

(ii) in any other case, the amount, if any, by which

(A) the cost amount to the creditor of the particular debt

exceeds

(B) the specified cost to the creditor of the particular debt; and

(d) where no portion of the particular debt is outstanding immediately after that time and the particular debt is not capital property, the creditor may deduct as a bad debt in computing the creditor's income for the year the amount described in subparagraph (c)(ii) in respect of the seizure.

Related Provisions: 79.1(8) — No deduction for principal amount of bad debt; 142.4(3)(a) — Disposition of specified debt obligation.

(8) Claims for debts — Where a property is seized at any time in a taxation year by a creditor in respect of a debt, no amount in respect of the debt

(a) is deductible in computing the creditor's income for the year or a subsequent taxation year as a bad, doubtful or impaired debt; or

(b) shall be included after that time in computing, for the purposes of this Act, any balance of undeducted outlays, expenses or other amounts of the creditor as a bad, doubtful or impaired debt.

Related Provisions: 50(1)(a) — Deemed disposition of bad debt; 79.1(7)(d) — Deduction by creditor for bad debt.

History: Subsec. 79.1(8) amended by 1998, c. 19, s. 110, applicable

(a) to taxation years that end after September 1997; and

(b) to a taxpayer's taxation years that end after 1995 and before October 1997 where the taxpayer files an election in accordance with para. 81(11)(b).

The subsec. formerly read:

(8) Claims for bad and doubtful debts — Where a property is seized at any time in a taxation year by a creditor in respect of a debt, no amount in respect of the principal amount of the debt shall be

(a) deductible in computing the creditor's income for the year or a subsequent taxation year as a bad or doubtful debt; or

(b) included after that time in computing, for the purposes of this Act, any balance of undeducted outlays, expenses or other amounts of the creditor as a bad or doubtful debt.

S. 79.1 added by 1995, c. 21, s. 26, applicable to property acquired or reacquired after February 21, 1994, other than property acquired or reacquired pursuant to a court order made before February 22, 1994.

"debtor" includes any corporation that has issued a distress preferred share and any partnership;

Related Provisions: 80.01(1)"debtor" — Definition applies to s. 80.01; 80.04(1) — Definition applies to s. 80.04.

"directed person" at any time in respect of a debtor means

(a) a taxable Canadian corporation or an eligible Canadian partnership by which the debtor is controlled at that time, or

(b) a taxable Canadian corporation or an eligible Canadian partnership that is controlled at that time by

(i) the debtor,

(ii) the debtor and one or more persons related to the debtor, or

(iii) a person or group of persons by which the debtor is controlled at that time;

Related Provisions: 80.04(1) — Definition applies to s. 80.04; 256(6), (6.1) — Meaning of "controlled".

"distress preferred share" issued by a corporation means, at any time, a share issued after February 21, 1994 (other than a share issued pursuant to an agreement in writing entered into on or before that date) by the corporation that is a share described in paragraph (e) of the definition "term preferred share" in subsection 248(1) that would be a term preferred share at that time if that definition were read without reference to paragraphs (e) and (f);

Related Provisions: 61.3(1)(b)D, 61.3(2)(b)D — Deduction of principal amount of distress preferred share in determining debt forgiveness reserve; 80.01(1)"distress preferred share" — Definition applies to s. 80.01; 80.02(1) — Definition applies to s. 80.02; 80.03(1)(a) — Definition applies to s. 80.03.

"eligible Canadian partnership" at any time means a Canadian partnership none of the members of which is, at that time,

(a) a non-resident owned investment corporation,

(b) a person exempt, because of subsection 149(1), from tax under this Part on all or part of the person's taxable income,

(c) a partnership, other than an eligible Canadian partnership, or

(d) a trust, other than a trust in which no non-resident person and no person described in paragraph (a), (b) or (c) is beneficially interested;

Related Provisions: 80.04(1) — Definition applies to s. 80.04; 102(1) — Canadian partnership.

"excluded obligation" means an obligation issued by a debtor where

(a) the proceeds from the issue of the obligation

(i) were included in computing the debtor's income or, but for the expression "other than a prescribed amount" in paragraph 12(1)(x), would have been so included,

(ii) were deducted in computing, for the purposes of this Act, any balance of undeducted outlays, expenses or other amounts, or

(iii) were deducted in computing the capital cost or cost amount to the debtor of any property of the debtor,

(b) an amount paid by the debtor in satisfaction of the entire principal amount of the obligation would be included in the amount determined under paragraph 28(1)(e) or section 30 in respect of the debtor,

(c) section 78 applies to the obligation, or

(d) the principal amount of the obligation would, if this Act were read without reference to sections 79 and 80 and the obligation were settled without any amount being paid in satisfaction of its principal amount, be included in computing the debtor's income because of the settlement of the obligation;

Related Provisions: 79(3)F(b)(iv) — Proceeds of disposition for debtor; 80(1)"forgiven amount"B(j) — Debt forgiveness rules do not apply to principal amount of excluded obligation; 80(2)(a) — Debt forgiveness rules do not apply to obligation settled as consideration for share described in para. (c).

"excluded property" means property of a non-resident debtor that is treaty-protected property or that is not taxable Canadian property;

Related Provisions: 111(9) — Losses ignored while taxpayer is non-resident.

History: The definition "excluded property" in subsec. 80(1) amended by 1999, c. 22, s. 21, applicable to 1998 et seq. The definition formerly read:

"excluded property" at any time means property of a non-resident debtor that would not be taxable Canadian property of the debtor if it were disposed of at that time by the debtor;

"excluded security" issued by a corporation to a person as consideration for the settlement of a debt means

(a) a distress preferred share issued by the corporation to the person, or

(b) a share issued by the corporation to the person under the terms of the debt, where the debt was a bond, debenture or note listed on a designated stock exchange in Canada and the terms for the conversion to the share were not established or substantially modified after the later of February 22, 1994 and the time that the bond, debenture or note was issued;

History: Para. (b) of the definition "excluded security" in subsec. 80(1) amended to substitute "designated stock exchange" for "prescribed stock exchange" by 2007, c. 35, s. 21, applicable after December 13, 2007.

"forgiven amount" at any time in respect of a commercial obligation issued by a debtor is the amount determined by the formula

$$A - B$$

where

A is the lesser of the amount for which the obligation was issued and the principal amount of the obligation, and

B is the total of

(a) the amount, if any, paid at that time in satisfaction of the principal amount of the obligation,

(b) the amount, if any, included under paragraph 6(1)(a) or subsection 15(1) in computing the income of any person because of the settlement of the obligation at that time,

(c) the amount, if any, deducted at that time under paragraph 18(9.3)(f) in computing the forgiven amount in respect of the obligation,

(d) the capital gain, if any, of the debtor resulting from the application of subsection 39(3) to the purchase at that time of the obligation by the debtor,

(e) such portion of the principal amount of the obligation as relates to an amount renounced under subsection 66(10), (10.1), (10.2) or (10.3) by the debtor,

(f) any portion of the principal amount of the obligation that is included in the amount determined for A, B, C or D in subsection 79(3) in respect of the debtor for the taxation year of the debtor that includes that time or for a preceding taxation year,

(g) the total of all amounts each of which is a forgiven amount at a previous time that the obligation was deemed by subsection 80.01(8) or (9) to have been settled,

(h) such portion of the principal amount of the obligation as can reasonably be considered to have been included under section 80.4 in computing the debtor's income for a taxation year that includes that time or for a preceding taxation year,

(i) where the debtor is a bankrupt at that time, the principal amount of the obligation,

(j) such portion of the principal amount of the obligation as represents the principal amount of an excluded obligation,

(k) where the debtor is a partnership and the obligation was, since the later of the creation of the partnership or the issue of the obligation, always payable to a member of the partnership actively engaged, on a regular, continuous and substantial basis, in those activities of the partnership that are other than the financing of the partnership business, the principal amount of the obligation, and

(l) the amount, if any, given at or before that time by the debtor to another person as consideration for the assumption by the other person of the obligation;

"relevant loss balance" at a particular time for a commercial obligation and in respect of a debtor's non-capital loss, farm loss, restricted farm loss or net capital loss, as the case may be, for a particular taxation year means the amount of such loss that would be deductible in computing the debtor's taxable income or taxable income earned in Canada, as the case may be, for the taxation year that includes that time if

(a) the debtor had sufficient incomes from all sources and sufficient taxable capital gains,

(b) subsections (3) and (4) did not apply to reduce such loss at or after that time, and

(c) paragraph 111(4)(a) and subsection 111(5) did not apply to the debtor, except that, where the debtor is a corporation the control of which was acquired at a previous time by a person or group of persons and the particular year ended before the previous time, the relevant loss balance at the particular time for the obligation and in respect of such loss for the particular year shall be deemed to be nil unless

(d) the obligation was issued by the debtor before, and not in contemplation of, the acquisition of control, or

(e) all or substantially all of the proceeds from the issue of the obligation were used to satisfy the principal amount of another obligation to which paragraph (d) or this paragraph would apply if the other obligation were still outstanding;

Related Provisions: 80(15)(c)(iv)(B) — Application of para. (e) of definition where obligation issued by partnership; 80.04(4)(h)(ii) — Application of para. "successor pool" at any time for a commercial obligation and in respect of an amount determined in relation to a debtor means the portion of that amount that would be deductible under subsection 66.7(2), (2.3), (3), (4) or (5), as the case may be, in computing the debtor's income for the taxation year that includes that time, if

(a) the debtor had sufficient incomes from all sources,

(b) subsection (8) did not apply to reduce the amount so determined at that time,

(c) the year ended immediately after that time, and

(d) paragraphs 66.7(2.3)(a), (4)(a) and (5)(a) were read without reference to the expressions "30% of", "30% of" and "10% of", respectively, except that the successor pool at that time for the obligation is deemed to be nil unless

(e) the obligation was issued by the debtor before, and not in contemplation of, the event described in paragraph (8)(a) that gives rise to the deductibility under subsection 66.7(2), (2.3), (3), (4) or (5), as the case may be, of all or part of that amount in computing the debtor's income, or

(f) all or substantially all of the proceeds from the issue of the obligation were used to satisfy the principal amount of another obligation to which paragraph (e) or this paragraph would apply if the other obligation were still outstanding;

Related Provisions: 80(15)(c)(iv)(B) — Application of para. (f) of definition where obligation issued by partnership; 80.04(4)(h)(ii) — Application of para. (f) of definition on agreement to transfer forgiven amount; 256(8) — Deemed acquisition of shares.

History: The portion of the definition "successor pool" in subsec. 80(1) before para. (f) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 58(1), applicable to taxation years that begin after 2000. The portion formerly read:

> "successor pool" at any time for a commercial obligation and in respect of an amount determined in relation to a debtor means such portion of that amount as would be deductible under subsection 66.7(2), (3), (4) or (5), as the case may be, in computing the debtor's income for the taxation year that includes that time, if
> (a) the debtor had sufficient incomes from all sources,
> (b) subsection (8) did not apply to reduce the amount so determined at that time,
> (c) the year ended immediately after that time, and
> (d) paragraphs 66.7(4)(a) and (5)(a) were read without reference to the expressions "30% of" and "10% of", respectively, except that the successor pool at that time for the obligation shall be deemed to be nil unless

(e) the obligation was issued by the debtor before, and not in contemplation of, the event described in paragraph (8)(a) that gives rise to the deductibility under subsection 66.7(2), (3), (4) or (5), as the case may be, of all or part of that amount in computing the debtor's income, or

"unrecognized loss" at a particular time, in respect of an obligation issued by a debtor, from the disposition of a property means the amount that would, but for subparagraph 40(2)(g)(ii), be a capital loss from the disposition by the debtor at or before the particular time of a debt or other right to receive an amount, except that where the debtor is a corporation the control of which was acquired before the particular time and after the time of the disposition by a person or group of persons, the unrecognized loss at the particular time in respect of the obligation is deemed to be nil unless

(a) the obligation was issued by the debtor before, and not in contemplation of, the acquisition of control, or

(b) all or substantially all of the proceeds from the issue of the obligation were used to satisfy the principal amount of another obligation to which paragraph (a) or this paragraph would apply if the other obligation were still outstanding.

(d) [applicable fraction] — the applicable fraction of the unapplied portion of a forgiven amount at any time in respect of an obligation issued by the debtor is in respect of a loss for any other taxation year[10], the fraction required to be used under section 38 for that year;

(e) [where applicable fraction reduces loss] — where an applicable fraction (as determined under paragraph (d)) of the unapplied portion of a forgiven amount is applied under subsection (4) to reduce at any time a loss for a taxation year, the portion of the forgiven amount so applied shall, except for the purpose of reducing the loss, be deemed to be the quotient obtained when the amount of the reduction is divided by the applicable fraction;

(f) [cumulative eligible capital] — where 3/4 of the unapplied portion of a forgiven amount is applied under subsection (7) to reduce cumulative eligible capital, except for the purpose of reducing the cumulative eligible capital, the portion of the forgiven amount so applied shall be deemed to be 4/3 of the amount of the reduction;

(g) [amount paid in satisfaction of debt] — where a corporation issues a share (other than an excluded security) to a person as consideration for the settlement of a debt issued by the corporation and payable to the person, the amount paid in satisfaction of the debt because of the issue of the share is deemed to be equal to the fair market value of the share at the time it was issued;

Related Provisions: 51(1) — Conversion of convertible debt into shares.

(g.1) [amount paid in satisfaction of debt] — where a debt issued by a corporation and payable to a person is settled at any time, the amount, if any, that can reasonably be considered to be the increase, as a consequence of the settlement of the debt, in the fair market value of shares of the capital stock of the corporation owned by the person (other than any shares acquired by the person as consideration for the settlement of the debt) is deemed to be an amount paid at that time in satisfaction of the debt;

(h) [debt replaced with debt] — where any part of the consideration given by a debtor to another person for the settlement at any time of a particular commercial debt obligation issued by the debtor and payable to the other person consists of a new commercial debt obligation issued by the debtor to the other person

(i) an amount equal to the principal amount of the new obligation shall be deemed to be paid by the debtor at that time, because of the issue of the new obligation, in satisfaction of the principal amount of the particular obligation, and

(ii) the new obligation shall be deemed to have been issued for an amount equal to the amount, if any, by which

(A) the principal amount of the new obligation

exceeds

(B) the amount, if any, by which the principal amount of the new obligation exceeds the amount for which the particular obligation was issued;

(j) ["related" and "controlled"] — for the purpose of determining, at any time, whether 2 persons are related to each other or whether any person is controlled by any other person, it shall be assumed that

(i) each partnership and each trust is a corporation having a capital stock of a single class of voting shares divided into 100 issued shares,

(ii) each member of a partnership and each beneficiary under a trust owned at that time the number of issued shares of that class that is equal to the proportion of 100 that

(A) the fair market value at that time of the member's interest in the partnership or the beneficiary's interest in the trust, as the case may be

is of

(B) the fair market value at that time of all members' interests in the partnership or all beneficiaries' interests in the trust, as the case may be, and

(iii) where a beneficiary's share of the income or capital of a trust depends on the exercise by any person of, or the failure by any person to exercise, any discretionary power, the fair market value at any time of the beneficiary's interest in the trust is equal to

(A) where the beneficiary is not entitled to receive or otherwise obtain the use of any of the income or capital of the trust before the death after that time of one or more other beneficiaries under the trust, nil, and

(B) in any other case, the total fair market value at that time of all beneficiaries' interests under the trust;

Related Provisions: 257 — Formulas cannot calculate to less than zero.

(n) [where debt owed by partnership] — except for the purposes of this paragraph, where

(i) a commercial debt obligation issued by a debtor is settled at any time,

(ii) the debtor is at that time a member of a partnership, and

(iii) the obligation was, under the agreement governing the obligation, treated immediately before that time as a debt owed by the partnership, the obligation shall be considered to have been issued by the partnership and not by the debtor;

(o) [where joint liability for debt] — notwithstanding paragraph (n), where a commercial debt obligation for which a particular person is jointly liable with one or more other persons is settled at any time in respect of the particular person but not in respect of all of the other persons, the portion of the obligation that can reasonably be considered to be the particular person's share of the obligation shall be considered to have been issued by the particular person and settled at that time and not at any subsequent time;

(o) notwithstanding paragraph (n), if a commercial debt obligation, for which a particular person is liable with one or more other persons, is settled at any time in respect of the particular person but not in respect of all of the other persons, the portion of the obligation that can reasonably be considered to be the particular person's share of the obligation shall be considered to have been issued by the particular person and settled at that time and not at any subsequent time;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — bijuralism), s. 204, will amend para. 80(2)(o) to read as above, to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 12(4).

(p) [death of debtor] — a commercial debt obligation issued by an individual that is outstanding at the time of the individual's death and settled at a subsequent time shall, if the estate of the individual was liable for the obligation immediately before the subsequent time, be deemed to have been issued by the estate at the same time and in the same circumstances as the obligation was issued by the individual; and Related Provisions: 80(2)(q) — Where debt settled within 6 months of death.

(q) [death of debtor] — where a commercial debt obligation issued by an individual would, but for this paragraph, be settled at any time in the period ending 6 months after the death of an individual (or within such longer period as is acceptable to the Minister and the estate of the individual) and the estate of the individual was liable immediately before that time for the obligation

(i) the obligation shall be deemed to have been settled at the beginning of the day on which the individual died and not at that time,

(ii) any amount paid at that time by the estate in satisfaction of the principal amount of the obligation shall be deemed to have been paid at the beginning of the day on which the individual died,

(iii) any amount given by the estate at or before that time to another person as consideration for assumption by the other person of the obligation shall be deemed to have been given at the beginning of the day on which the individual died, and

(iv) paragraph (b) shall not apply in respect of the settlement to interest that accrues within that period, except that this paragraph does not apply in circumstances in which any amount is because of the settlement included under paragraph 6(1)(a) or subsection 15(1) in computing the income of any person or in which section 79 applies in respect of the obligation.

Related Provisions: 6(15.1)(d), 15(1.21)(d) — 80(2)(q) ignored for employee and shareholder benefit purposes; 80(2)(p) — Where debt not settled within 6 months of death.

History: Para. 80(2)(d) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 58(2), applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000. The para. formerly read:

(d) [applicable fraction] — the applicable fraction of the unapplied portion of a forgiven amount at any time in respect of an obligation issued by a debtor is

(i) in respect of a loss for a taxation year that ends after 1989, ¾,

(ii) in respect of a loss for a taxation year that ended before 1988, ½, and

(iii) in respect of a loss for any other taxation year, the fraction required to be used under section 38 for that year;

Para. 80(2)(g) amended and para. (g.1) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 111(2), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994. Para. (g) formerly read:

(g) the amount paid in satisfaction of a debt issued by a corporation and payable to a person shall

(i) where any part of the consideration given to the person for the settlement of the debt consists of a share (other than an excluded security) issued by the corporation to the person, be deemed to be equal to the total of

(A) the fair market value of the share at the time it was issued, and

(B) the amount, if any, that can reasonably be considered to be the increase, as a consequence of the settlement of the debt, in the fair market value of other shares of the capital stock of the corporation owned by the person, and

(ii) in any other case, be deemed to include the amount described in clause (i)(B);

(3) Reductions of non-capital losses — Where a commercial obligation issued by a debtor is settled at any time, the forgiven amount at that time in respect of the obligation shall be applied to reduce at that time, in the following order,

(a) the debtor's non-capital loss for each taxation year that ended before that time to the extent that the amount so applied

(i) does not exceed the amount (in subsection (4) referred to as the debtor's "ordinary non-capital loss at that time for the year") that would be the relevant loss balance at that time for the obligation and in respect of the debtor's non-capital loss for the year if the description of E in the definition "non-capital loss" in subsection 111(8) were read without reference to the expression "the taxpayer's allowable business investment loss for the year", and

(ii) does not, because of this subsection, reduce the debtor's non-capital loss for a preceding taxation year;

(b) the debtor's farm loss for each taxation year that ended before that time, to the extent that the amount so applied

(i) does not exceed the amount that is the relevant loss balance at that time for the obligation and in respect of the debtor's farm loss for the year, and

(ii) does not, because of this subsection, reduce the debtor's farm loss for a preceding taxation year; and

(c) the debtor's restricted farm loss for each taxation year that ended before that time, to the extent that the amount so applied

(i) does not exceed the amount that is the relevant loss balance at that time for the obligation and in respect of the debtor's restricted farm loss for the year, and

(ii) does not, because of this subsection, reduce the debtor's restricted farm loss for a preceding taxation year.

Related Provisions: 31(1.1)(b) — Reduction in restricted farm loss; 80(2)(c) — Order of application of rules; 80(2)(m) — Reduction cannot exceed the amount of losses; 80(4)(a) — Reduction of allowable business investment loss carryforward; 111(8)"farm loss"C — Reduction in farm loss; 111(8)"non-capital loss"D.2 — Reduction in non-capital loss.

(4) Reductions of capital losses — Where a commercial obligation issued by a debtor is settled at any time, the applicable fraction of the remaining unapplied portion of a forgiven amount at that time in respect of the obligation shall be applied to reduce at that time, in the following order,

(a) the debtor's non-capital loss for each taxation year that ended before that time to the extent that the amount so applied

(i) does not exceed the amount, if any, by which

(A) the relevant loss balance at that time for the obligation and in respect of the debtor's non-capital loss for the year

exceeds

(B) the debtor's ordinary non-capital loss (within the meaning assigned by subparagraph (3)(a)(i)) at that time for the year, and

(ii) does not, because of this subsection, reduce the debtor's non-capital loss for a preceding taxation year; and

(b) the debtor's net capital loss for each taxation year that ended before that time, to the extent that the amount so applied

(i) does not exceed the relevant loss balance at that time for the obligation and in respect of the debtor's net capital loss for the year, and

(ii) does not, because of this subsection, reduce the debtor's net capital loss for a preceding taxation year.

Related Provisions: 80(2)(c) — Order of application of rules; 80(2)(e) — Determination of applicable fraction; 80(2)(m) — Reduction cannot exceed the amount of losses; 111(8)"net capital loss"D — Reduction in net capital loss; 111(8)"non-capital loss"D.2 — Reduction in non-capital loss.

(5) Reductions with respect to depreciable property — Where a commercial obligation issued by a debtor is settled at any time, the remaining unapplied portion of the forgiven amount at that time in respect of the obligation shall be applied, in such manner as is designated by the debtor in a prescribed form filed with the debtor's return of income under this Part for the taxation year that includes that time, to reduce immediately after that time the following amounts:

(a) the capital cost to the debtor of a depreciable property that is owned by the debtor immediately after that time; and

(b) the undepreciated capital cost to the debtor of depreciable property of a prescribed class immediately after that time.

(6) Restriction with respect to depreciable property — Where a commercial obligation issued by a debtor is settled at any time,

(a) an amount may be applied under subsection (5) to reduce, immediately after that time, the capital cost to the debtor of a depreciable property of a prescribed class only to the extent that

(i) the undepreciated capital cost to the debtor of depreciable property of that class at that time

exceeds

(ii) the total of all other reductions immediately after that time to that undepreciated capital cost; and

(b) an amount may be applied under subsection (5) to reduce, immediately after that time, the capital cost to the debtor of a depreciable property (other than a depreciable property of a prescribed class) only to the extent that

(i) the capital cost to the debtor of the property at that time

exceeds

(ii) the amount that was allowed to the debtor before that time under Part XVII of the Income Tax Regulations in respect of the property.

Regulations: 1105 (prescribed classes of depreciable property).

(7) Reductions of cumulative eligible capital — Where a commercial obligation issued by a debtor is settled at any time, 3/4 of the remaining unapplied portion of the forgiven amount at that time in respect of the obligation shall be applied (to the extent designated in a prescribed form filed with the debtor's return of income under this Part for the taxation year that includes that time) to reduce immediately after that time the cumulative eligible capital of the debtor in respect of each business of the debtor (or, where the debtor is at that time non-resident, in respect of each business carried on in Canada by the debtor).

Related Provisions: 14(5)"cumulative eligible capital"F:P.1 — Reduction in cumulative eligible capital; 80(2)(c) — Order of application of rules; 80(2)(f) — Rule where cumulative eligible capital reduced; 80(2)(m) — Reduction cannot exceed the amount of cumulative eligible capital; 80(13)D(a) — Income inclusion of remaining balance; 80(16) — Designation by CRA where debtor fails to designate; 80.04(4)(b) — Transfer of forgiven amount after maximum designations; 220(3.21)(a) — Late filing, amendment or revocation of designation; 253 — Extended meaning of carrying on business in Canada.

(8) Reductions of resource expenditures — Where a commercial obligation issued by a debtor is settled at any time, the remaining unapplied portion of the forgiven amount at that time in respect of the obligation shall be applied (to the extent designated in a prescribed form filed with the debtor's return of income under this Part for the taxation year that includes that time) to reduce immediately after that time the following amounts:

(a) where the debtor is a corporation resident in Canada throughout that year, each particular amount that would be determined in respect of the debtor under paragraph 66.7(2)(a), (2.3)(a), (3)(a), (4)(a) or (5)(a) if paragraphs 66.7(2.3)(a), (4)(a) and (5)(a) were read without reference to the expressions "30% of", "30% of" and "10% of", respectively, as a consequence of the acquisition of control of the debtor by a person or group of persons, the debtor ceasing to be exempt from tax under this Part on its taxable income or the acquisition of properties by the debtor by way of an amalgamation or merger, where the amount so applied does not exceed the successor pool immediately after that time for the obligation and in respect of the particular amount;

(b) the cumulative Canadian exploration expense (within the meaning assigned by subsection 66.1(6)) of the debtor;

(c) the cumulative Canadian development expense (within the meaning assigned by subsection 66.2(5)) of the debtor;

(d) the cumulative Canadian oil and gas property expense (within the meaning assigned by subsection 66.4(5)) of the debtor;

(e) the total determined under paragraph 66(4)(a) in respect of the debtor, where

(i) the debtor is resident in Canada throughout that year, and

(ii) the amount so applied does not exceed such portion of the total of the debtor's foreign exploration and development expenses (within the meaning assigned by subsection 66(15)) as were incurred by the debtor before that time and would be deductible under subsection 66(4) in computing the debtor's income for that year if the debtor had sufficient income described in subparagraph 66(4)(b)(ii) and if that year ended at that time; and

(f) the cumulative foreign resource expense (within the meaning assigned by subsection 66.21(1)) of the debtor in respect of a country.

(9) Reductions of adjusted cost bases of capital properties — Where a commercial obligation issued by a debtor is settled at any time and amounts have been designated under subsections (5), (7) and (8) to the maximum extent permitted in respect of the settlement, subject to subsection (18)

(a) the remaining unapplied portion of the forgiven amount at that time in respect of the obligation shall be applied (to the extent designated in a prescribed form filed with the debtor's return of income under this Part for the taxation year that includes that time) to reduce immediately after that time the adjusted cost bases to the debtor of capital properties (other than shares of the capital stock of corporations of which the debtor is a specified shareholder at that time, debts issued by corporations of which the debtor is a specified shareholder at that time, interests in partnerships that are related to the debtor at that time, depreciable property that is not of a prescribed class, personal-use properties and excluded properties) that are owned by the debtor immediately after that time;

(b) an amount may be applied under this subsection to reduce, immediately after that time, the capital cost to the debtor of a depreciable property of a prescribed class only to the extent that

(i) the capital cost immediately after that time to the debtor of the property (determined without reference to the settlement of the obligation at that time)

exceeds

(ii) its capital cost immediately after that time to the debtor for the purposes of paragraphs 8(1)(j) and (p), sections 13 and 20 and any regulations made for the purpose of paragraph 20(1)(a) (determined without reference to the settlement of the obligation at that time); and

(c) for the purposes of paragraphs 8(1)(j) and (p), sections 13 and 20 and any regulations made for the purpose of paragraph 20(1)(a), no amount shall be considered to have been applied under this subsection.

(12) Capital gain where current year capital loss — Where a commercial obligation issued by a debtor (other than a partnership) is settled at any time in a taxation year and amounts have been designated by the debtor under subsections (5), (7), (8) and (9) to the maximum extent permitted in respect of the settlement,

(a) the debtor shall be deemed to have a capital gain for the year from the disposition of capital property (or, where the debtor is non-resident at the end of the year, taxable Canadian property), equal to the lesser of

(i) the remaining unapplied portion of the forgiven amount at that time in respect of the obligation, and

(ii) the amount, if any, by which the total of

(A) all of the debtor's capital losses for the year from the dispositions of properties (other than listed personal properties and excluded properties), and

(B) twice the amount that would, because of subsection 88(1.2), be deductible under paragraph 111(1)(b) in computing the debtor's taxable income for the year, if the debtor had sufficient income and taxable capital gains for the year,

exceeds the total of

(C) all of the debtor's capital gains for the year from the dispositions of such properties (determined without reference to this subsection), and

(D) all amounts each of which is an amount deemed by this subsection to be a capital gain of the debtor for the year as a consequence of the application of this subsection to other commercial obligations settled before that time; and

(b) the forgiven amount at that time in respect of the obligation shall be considered to have been applied under this subsection to the extent of the amount deemed by this subsection to be a capital gain of the debtor for the year as a consequence of the application of this subsection to the settlement of the obligation at that time.

Related Provisions: 80(2)(c) — Order of application of rules.

History: Cl. 80(12)(a)(ii)(B) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 58(5) to replace the expression "4/3 of" with the word "twice", applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000 except that, for a taxation year of a debtor that includes February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000, or began after February 28, 2000 and ended before October 17, 2000, the reference to the word "twice" shall be read as a reference to the expression "the fraction that is the reciprocal of the fraction in para. 38(a), as amended by 2001, c. 17, that applies to the debtor for the year, multiplied by".

(13) Income inclusion — Where a commercial obligation issued by a debtor is settled at any time in a taxation year, there shall be added, in computing the debtor's income for the year from the source in connection with which the obligation was issued, the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the remaining unapplied portion of the forgiven amount at that time in respect of the obligation,

B is the lesser of

(a) the total of all amounts designated under subsection (11) by the debtor in respect of the settlement of the obligation at that time, and

(b) the residual balance at that time in respect of the settlement of the obligation,

C is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount specified in an agreement filed under section 80.04 in respect of the settlement of the obligation at that time,

(a) where the debtor has designated amounts under subsections (5), (7), (8), (9) and (10) to the maximum extent permitted in respect of the settlement, the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is an unrecognized loss at that time, in respect of the obligation, from the disposition of a property

exceeds

(ii) twice the total of all amounts each of which is an amount by which the amount determined before that time under this subsection in respect of a settlement of an obligation issued by the debtor has been reduced because of an amount determined under this paragraph, and

(b) in any other case, nil, and

E is

(a) where the debtor is a partnership, 1, and

(b) in any other case, ½.

History: Subpara. (a)(ii) of the description of D in subsec. 80(13) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 58(6), to replace the expression "4/3 of" with the word "twice", applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000 except that, for a taxation year of a debtor that includes February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000, or began after February 28, 2000 and ended before October 17, 2000, the reference to the word "twice" shall be read as a reference to the expression "the fraction that is the reciprocal of the fraction in para. 38(a), as amended by 2001, c. 17, that applies to the debtor for the year, multiplied by".

Para. (b) of the description of E in subsec. 80(13) amended by the said c. 17, subsec. 58(7), to replace the number "0.75" with the fraction "1/2", applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000 except that, for a taxation year of a debtor that includes February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000, or began after February 28, 2000 and ended before October 17, 2000, the reference to the fraction "1/2" shall be read as a reference to the fraction in para. 38(a), as amended by 2001, c. 17, that applies to the debtor for the year.

Para. (b) of the description of B in subsec. 80(13) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 111(3), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994. The para. formerly read:

(b) the total of

(i) the residual balance at that time in respect of the settlement of the obligation, and

(ii) the amount, if any, by which the amount determined for C in respect of the settlement exceeds the amount determined for A in respect of the settlement,

(14) Residual balance — For the purpose of subsection (13), the residual balance at any time in a taxation year in respect of the settlement of a particular commercial obligation issued by a debtor is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the gross tax attributes of directed persons at that time in respect of the debtor

exceeds the total of

(b) the value of A in subsection (13) in respect of the settlement of the particular obligation at that time,

(c) all amounts each of which is

(i) the amount, if any, by which the value of A in subsection (13) in respect of a settlement before that time and in the year of a commercial obligation issued by the debtor exceeds the value of C in that subsection in respect of the settlement,

(ii) the value of A in subsection (13) in respect of a settlement of a commercial obligation that is deemed by paragraph 80.04(4)(e) to have been issued by a directed person in respect of the debtor because of the filing of an agreement under section 80.04 in respect of a settlement before that time and in the year of a commercial obligation issued by the debtor, or

(iii) the amount specified in an agreement (other than an agreement with a directed person in respect of the debtor) filed under section 80.04 in respect of the settlement before that time and in the year of a commercial obligation issued by the debtor, and

(d) all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of a settlement at a particular time before that time and in the year of a commercial obligation issued by the debtor equal to the least of

(i) the total of all amounts designated under subsection (11) in respect of the settlement,

(ii) the residual balance of the debtor at the particular time, and

(iii) the amount, if any, by which the sum of the values of A and B in subsection (13) in respect of the settlement exceeds the value of C in that subsection in respect of the settlement.

Related Provisions: 80(14.1) — Meaning of "gross tax attributes".

History: Subsec. 80(14) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 111(4), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994. The subsec. formerly read:

(14) For the purpose of subsection (13), the residual balance at any time in a taxation year in respect of the settlement of a particular commercial obligation issued by a debtor is the amount, if any, by which the total of

(a) all amounts each of which is an amount that would be applied under any of subsections (3) to (10) and (12) in respect of the settlements of separate commercial obligations issued by directed persons at that time in respect of the debtor if

(i) those obligations were issued at that time by those directed persons and were settled immediately after that time,

(ii) an amount equal to the forgiven amount at that time in respect of the particular obligation were the forgiven amount immediately after that time in respect of each of those obligations,

(iii) amounts were designated under subsections (5), (7), (8), (9) and (10) by those directed persons to the maximum extent permitted in respect of the settlement of each of those obligations, and

(iv) no amounts were designated under subsection (11) by any of those directed persons in respect of the settlement of any of those obligations, and

(b) where the debtor is a partnership, all amounts each of which is 1/4 of an amount deducted because of paragraph (c) or (d) in computing the residual balance at that time in respect of the settlement of the particular obligation,

exceeds the total of

(c) all amounts each of which is 4/3 of the amount that would be included under subsection (13) in computing the debtor's income for the year in respect of the settlement at or before that time of a commercial obligation issued by the debtor if the amounts determined for B and D in subsection (13) were nil,

(d) all amounts each of which is 4/3 of an amount that would, if the amount determined for D in subsection (13) were nil, be included under subsection (13) in computing the income of any of those directed persons in respect of the settlement of an obligation that is deemed by paragraph 80.04(4)(e) to have been issued by the directed person because of the filing of an agreement under section 80.04 in respect of the settlement at or before that time and in the year of a commercial obligation issued by the debtor,

(e) all amounts each of which is an amount specified in an agreement (other than an agreement with any of those directed persons) filed under section 80.04 in respect of the settlement at or before that time and in the year of a commercial obligation issued by the debtor, and

(f) all amounts each of which is the lesser of

(i) the total of all amounts designated under subsection (11) in respect of the settlement before that time and in the year of another commercial obligation issued by the debtor, and

(ii) the residual balance of the debtor at that previous time.

(14.1) Gross tax attributes — The gross tax attributes of directed persons at any time in respect of a debtor means the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that would be applied under any of subsections (3) to (10) and (12) in respect of a settlement of a separate commercial obligation (in this subsection referred to as a "notional obligation") issued by directed persons at that time in respect of the debtor if the following assumptions were made:

(a) a notional obligation was issued immediately before that time by each of those directed persons and was settled at that time;

(b) the forgiven amount at that time in respect of each of those notional obligations was equal to the total of all amounts each of which is a forgiven amount at or before that time and in the year in respect of a commercial obligation issued by the debtor;

(c) amounts were designated under subsections (5), (7), (8), (9) and (10) by each of those directed persons to the maximum extent permitted in respect of the settlement of each of those notional obligations; and

(d) no amounts were designated under subsection (11) by any of those directed persons in respect of the settlement of any of the notional obligations.

History: Subsec. 80(14.1) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 111(4), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994.

(15) Members of partnerships — Where a commercial debt obligation issued by a partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "partnership obligation") is settled at any time in a fiscal period of the partnership that ends in a taxation year of a member of the partnership,

(a) the member may deduct, in computing the member's income for the year, such amount as the member claims not exceeding the relevant limit in respect of the partnership obligation;

(b) for the purpose of paragraph (a), the relevant limit in respect of the partnership obligation is the amount that would be included in computing the member's income for the year as a consequence of the application of subsection (13) and section 96 to the settlement of the partnership obligation if the partnership had designated amounts under subsections (5), (7), (8), (9) and (10) to the maximum extent permitted in respect of each obligation settled in that fiscal period and if income arising from the application of subsection (13) were from a source of income separate from any other sources of partnership income; and

(c) for the purposes of this section and section 80.04,

(i) the member shall be deemed to have issued a commercial debt obligation that was settled at the end of that fiscal period,

(ii) the amount deducted under paragraph (a) in respect of the partnership obligation in computing the member's income shall be treated as if it were the forgiven amount at the end of that fiscal period in respect of the obligation referred to in subparagraph (i),

(iii) subject to subparagraph (iv), the obligation referred to in subparagraph (i) shall be deemed to have been issued at the same time at which, and in the same circumstances in which, the partnership obligation was issued,

(iv) where the member is a corporation the control of which was acquired at a particular time that is before the end of that fiscal period and before the corporation became a member of the partnership and the partnership obligation was issued before the particular time,

(A) subject to the application of this subparagraph to an acquisition of control of the corporation after the particular time and before the end of that fiscal period, the obligation referred to in subparagraph (i) shall be deemed to have been issued by the member after the particular time, and

(B) paragraph (e) of the definition "relevant loss balance" in subsection (1), paragraph (f) of the definition "successor pool" in that subsection and paragraph (b) of the definition "unrecognized loss" in that subsection do not apply in respect of that acquisition of control, and

(v) the source in connection with which the obligation referred to in subparagraph (i) was issued shall be deemed to be the source in connection with which the partnership obligation was issued.

Related Provisions: 4(1) — Income from a source; 20(1)(uu) — Deduction for amount allowed under para. 80(15)(a); 61.2:A(b) — Effect of para. 80(15)(a) on reserve for individuals; 61.2:A(b), 61.3(1)(a)(ii), 61.3(2)(a)(ii), 61.4(a)A(ii) — Reserve in respect of debt forgiven; 80(1) — "Person" includes a partnership; 80(2)(n) — Commercial debt obligation issued by partner — deemed issued by partnership; 80(13)E(a) — Income inclusion where debtor is partnership; 80(14)(b) — Residual balance where debtor is partnership; 80(18) — Limitation on designation by partnership; 96(3) — Designation by partners; 139.1(18) — Holding corporation deemed not to acquire control of insurer on demutualization; 256(6)–(9) — Whether control acquired; 256(8) — Deemed acquisition of shares.

(16) Designations by Minister — Where a commercial obligation issued by a debtor is settled at any time in a taxation year and, as a consequence of the settlement an amount would, but for this subsection, be deducted under section 61.2 or 61.3 in computing the debtor's income for the year and the debtor has not designated amounts under subsections (5) to (11) to the maximum extent possible in respect of the settlement,

(a) the Minister may designate amounts under subsections (5) to (11) to the extent that the debtor would have been permitted to designate those amounts; and

(b) the amounts designated by the Minister shall, except for the purpose of this subsection, be deemed to have been designated by the debtor as required by subsections (5) to (11).

(17) [Repealed]

History: Subsec. 80(17) repealed by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 111(5), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994. The subsec. formerly read:

(17) Income inclusion where residual balance a positive amount — Where a commercial obligation issued by a corporation is settled at any time in a taxation year and, as a consequence of the settlement an amount is deducted under section 61.3 in computing the corporation's income for the year, unless the corporation has commenced to wind up on or before the day that is 12 months after the end of the year there shall be added in computing the corporation's income for the year from the source in connection with which the obligation was issued 50% of the lesser of

(a) the total of all amounts designated under subsection (11) by the corporation in respect of the settlement of the obligation at that time, and

(b) the amount, if any, by which the lesser of

(i) the residual balance (within the meaning assigned by subsection (14)) of the corporation at that time in respect of the settlement of the obligation, and

(ii) the amount, if any, by which the amount deducted under section 61.3 in computing the corporation's income for the year exceeds the amount, if any, deducted because of paragraph 37(1)(f.1) in determining the balance determined under subsection 37(1) in respect of the corporation after the year because of an amount deducted under section 61.3 in computing the corporation's income for the year exceeds the total of all amounts included because of this subsection in computing the corporation's income for the year in respect of a settlement before that time of a commercial obligation issued by the corporation.

(18) Partnership designations — Where a commercial obligation issued by a partnership is settled at any time after December 20, 1994, the amount designated under subsection (9), (10) or (11) in respect of the settlement by the partnership to reduce the adjusted cost base of a capital property acquired shall not exceed the amount, if any, by which the adjusted cost base at that time to the partnership of the property exceeds the fair market value at that time of the property.

History [s. 80]: S. 80 substituted by 1995, c. 21, s. 27, applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994, except that

(a) the amended section does not, other than for the purposes of subsections 6(15) and (15.1) and 15(1.2) and (1.21) and section 79, apply to any obligation settled or extinguished

Subsec. 80(4) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), s. 58, applicable to interest in respect of debts or other obligations settled or extinguished after May 9, 1985, except that, in its application to interest accruing before July 14, 1990, the subsec. shall be read as follows:

> (4) For the purposes of subsections (1) and (3), an amount of interest in respect of a debt or other obligation of a taxpayer shall be deemed to be a debt or other obligation issued by the taxpayer that
> (a) has a principal amount, and
> (b) was issued by the taxpayer for an amount, > equal to the portion of the amount of the interest that was deducted, or would, but for subsection 18(2) or (3.1) or section 21, be deductible, in computing the taxpayer's income under this Part for a taxation year.

Subsec. (4) formerly read:

> (4) Principal for interest payable — For the purposes of subsections (1) and (3), an amount of interest payable by a taxpayer on a debt or other obligation shall be deemed to have a principal amount equal to the portion thereof that was deducted, or would, but for subsection 18(2) or (3.1) or section 21, have been deductible, in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year under this Part.

80.01 (1) Definitions — In this section,

"commercial debt obligation" has the meaning assigned by subsection 80(1);

"commercial obligation" has the meaning assigned by subsection 80(1);

"debtor" has the meaning assigned by subsection 80(1);

"distress preferred share" has the meaning assigned by subsection 80(1);

"forgiven amount" has the meaning assigned by subsection 80(1) except that, where an amount would be included in computing a person's income under paragraph 6(1)(a) or subsection 15(1) as a consequence of the settlement of an obligation if the obligation were settled without any payment being made in satisfaction of its principal amount, "forgiven amount" in respect of that obligation has the meaning assigned by subsection 6(15.1) or 15(1.21), as the case may be;

"person" has the meaning assigned by subsection 80(1);

"specified cost" at any time to a person of an obligation means,

(a) where the obligation is capital property of the person at that time, the adjusted cost base at that time to the person of the obligation, and

(b) in any other case, the cost amount to the person of the obligation.

(2) Application — For the purposes of this section,

(a) paragraphs 80(2)(a), (b), (j), (l) and (n) apply; and

(b) a person has a significant interest in a corporation at any time if the person owned at that time

(i) shares of the capital stock of the corporation that would give the person 25% or more of the votes that could be cast under all circumstances at an annual meeting of shareholders of the corporation, or

(ii) shares of the capital stock of the corporation having a fair market value of 25% or more of the fair market value of all the issued shares of the capital stock of the corporation and, for the purposes of this paragraph, a person shall be deemed to own at any time each share of the capital stock of a corporation that is owned, otherwise than because of this paragraph, at that time by another person with whom the person does not deal at arm's length.

(3) Deemed settlement on amalgamation — Where a commercial obligation or another obligation (in this subsection referred to as the "indebtedness") of a debtor that is a corporation to pay an amount to another corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "creditor") is settled on an amalgamation of the debtor and the creditor, the indebtedness shall be deemed to have been settled immediately before the time that is immediately before the amalgamation by a payment made by the debtor and received by the creditor of an amount equal to the amount that would have been the creditor's cost amount of the indebtedness at that time if

(a) the definition "cost amount" in subsection 248(1) were read without reference to paragraph (e) of that definition; and

(b) that cost amount included amounts added in computing the creditor's income in respect of the portion of the indebtedness representing unpaid interest, to the extent those amounts have not been deducted in computing the creditor's income as bad debts in respect of that unpaid interest.

Related Provisions: 80(3)–(13) — Treatment of obligation deemed to have been settled.

(4) Deemed settlement on winding-up — Where there is a winding-up of a subsidiary to which the rules in subsection 88(1) apply and

(a) a debt or other obligation (in this subsection referred to as the "subsidiary's obligation") of the subsidiary to pay an amount to the parent, or

(b) a debt or other obligation (in this subsection referred to as the "parent's obligation") of the parent to pay an amount to the subsidiary is, as a consequence of the winding-up, settled at a particular time without any payment of an amount or by the payment of an amount that is less than the principal amount of the subsidiary's obligation or the parent's obligation, as the case may be,

(c) where that payment is less than the amount that would have been the cost amount to the parent or subsidiary of the subsidiary's obligation or the parent's obligation immediately before the particular time if the definition "cost amount" in subsection 248(1) were read without reference to paragraph (e) of that definition and the parent so elects in a prescribed form on or before the day on or before which the parent is required to file a return of income pursuant to section 150 for the taxation year that includes the particular time, the amount paid at that time in satisfaction of the principal amount of the subsidiary's obligation or the parent's obligation shall be deemed to be equal to the amount that would be the cost amount to the parent or the subsidiary, as the case may be, of the subsidiary's obligation or the parent's obligation immediately before the particular time if

(i) the definition "cost amount" in subsection 248(1) were read without reference to paragraph (e) of that definition, and

(ii) that cost amount included amounts added in computing the parent's income or the subsidiary's income in respect of the portion of the indebtedness representing unpaid interest, to the extent that the parent or the subsidiary has not deducted any amounts as bad debts in respect of that unpaid interest, and

(d) for the purposes of applying section 80 to the subsidiary's obligation, where property is distributed at any time in circumstances to which paragraph 88(1)(a) or (b) applies and the subsidiary's obligation is settled as a consequence of the distribution, the subsidiary's obligation shall be deemed to have been settled immediately before the time that is immediately before the time of the distribution and not at any later time.

Related Provisions: 50(1)(b)(ii) — Deemed disposition of debt or shares on winding-up; 80(3)–(13) — Treatment of obligation deemed to have been settled; 80.01(5) — Where distress preferred share issued; 220(3.2), Reg. 600(b) — Late filing or revocation of election under 80.01(4)(c).

Advance Tax Rulings: ATR-66: Non-arm's length transfer of debt followed by a winding-up and a sale of shares.

Forms: T2027: Election to deem amount of settlement of a debt or obligation.

(5) Deemed settlement on winding-up — Where there is a winding-up of a subsidiary to which the rules in subsection 88(1) apply and, as a consequence of the winding-up, a distress preferred share issued by the subsidiary and owned by the parent (or a distress preferred share issued by the parent and owned by the subsidiary) is settled at any time without any payment of an amount or by the payment of an amount that is less than the principal amount of the share,

(a) where the payment was less than the adjusted cost base of the share to the parent or the subsidiary, as the case may be, immediately before that time, for the purposes of applying the provisions of this Act to the issuer of the share, the amount paid at that time in satisfaction of the principal amount of the share shall be deemed to be equal to its adjusted cost base to the parent or to the subsidiary, as the case may be; and

(b) for the purposes of applying section 80 to the share, where property is distributed at any time in circumstances to which paragraph 88(1)(a) or (b) applies and the share is settled as a consequence of the distribution, the share shall be deemed to have been settled immediately before the time that is immediately before the time of the distribution and not at any later time.

Related Provisions: 50(1)(b)(ii) — Deemed disposition of debt or shares on winding-up; 80(3)–(13) — Treatment of obligation deemed to have been settled; 80.02(2)(c) — Meaning of "settled" for distress preferred shares; 88(1)(b) — Determination of proceeds of disposition to parent.

(5.1) Deemed settlement on SIFT trust wind-up event — If a trust that is a SIFT wind-up entity is the only beneficiary under another trust (in this subsection referred to as the "subsidiary trust"), and a capital property that is a debt or other obligation (in this subsection referred to as the "subsidiary trust's obligation") of the subsidiary trust to pay an amount to the SIFT wind-up entity is, as a consequence of a distribution from the subsidiary trust that is a SIFT trust wind-up event, settled at a particular time without any payment of an amount or by the payment of an amount that is less than the principal amount of the subsidiary trust's obligation

(a) paragraph (b) applies if

(i) the payment is less than the amount that would have been the adjusted cost base to the SIFT wind-up entity of the subsidiary trust's obligation immediately before the particular time, and

(ii) the SIFT wind-up entity elects, in prescribed form on or before the SIFT wind-up entity's filing-due date for the taxation year that includes the particular time, to have paragraph (b) apply;

(b) if this paragraph applies, the amount paid at the particular time in satisfaction of the principal amount of the subsidiary trust's obligation is deemed to be equal to the amount that would be the adjusted cost base to the SIFT wind-up entity of the subsidiary trust's obligation immediately before the particular time if that adjusted cost base included amounts added in computing the SIFT wind-up entity's income in respect of the portion of the indebtedness representing unpaid interest, to the extent that the SIFT wind-up entity has not deducted any amounts as bad debts in respect of that unpaid interest; and

(c) for the purposes of applying section 80 to the subsidiary trust's obligation, the subsidiary trust's obligation is deemed to have been settled immediately before the time that is immediately before the distribution.

History: Subsec. 80.01(5.1) added by 2009, c. 2, s. 17, applicable after July 14, 2008.

(6) Specified obligation in relation to debt parking — For the purpose of subsection (7), an obligation issued by a debtor is, at a particular time, a specified obligation of the debtor where

(a) at any previous time (other than a time before the last time, if any, the obligation became a parked obligation before the particular time),

(i) a person who owned the obligation

(A) dealt at arm's length with the debtor, and

(B) where the debtor is a corporation, did not have a significant interest in the debtor, or

(ii) the obligation was acquired by the holder of the obligation from another person who was, at the time of that acquisition, not related to the holder or related to the holder only because of paragraph 251(5)(b); or

(b) the obligation is deemed by subsection 50(1) to be reacquired at the particular time.

Related Provisions: 80(2)(j), 80.01(2)(a) — Special rules for determining the meaning of "related" and "arm's length"; 80.01(7) — Meaning of "parked obligation".

(7) Parked obligation — For the purposes of this subsection and subsections (6), (8) and (10),

(a) an obligation issued by a debtor is a "parked obligation" at any time where at that time

(i) the obligation is a specified obligation of the debtor, and

(ii) the holder of the obligation

(A) does not deal at arm's length with the debtor, or

(B) where the debtor is a corporation and the holder acquired the obligation after July 12, 1994 (otherwise than pursuant to an agreement in writing entered into on or before July 12, 1994), has a significant interest in the debtor; and

(b) an obligation that is, at any time, acquired or reacquired in circumstances to which subparagraph (6)(a)(ii) or paragraph (6)(b) applies shall, if the obligation is a parked obligation immediately after that time, be deemed to have become a parked obligation at that time.

Related Provisions: 80(2)(j), 80.01(2)(a) — Special rules for determining the meaning of "related" and thence "arm's length"; 80.01(6) — Meaning of "specified obligation".

(8) Deemed settlement after debt parking — Where at any particular time after February 21, 1994 a commercial debt obligation that was issued by a debtor becomes a parked obligation (otherwise than pursuant to an agreement in writing entered into before February 22, 1994) and the specified cost at the particular time to the holder of the obligation is less than 80% of the principal amount of the obligation, for the purpose of applying the provisions of this Act to the debtor

(a) the obligation shall be deemed to have been settled at the particular time; and

(b) the forgiven amount at the particular time in respect of the obligation shall be determined as if the debtor had paid an amount at the particular time in satisfaction of the principal amount of the obligation equal to that specified cost.

Related Provisions: 40(2)(e.1), (e.2), (g)(ii) — Stop-loss rules on disposition of debt; 50(1)(a) — Deemed disposition of bad debt; 79(3)F(b)(i), (iii) — Where property surrendered to creditor; 80(1)"forgiven amount"B(g) — Debt forgiveness rules do not apply if parked obligation subsequently forgiven; 80(3)–(13) — Treatment of obligation deemed to have been settled; 80.01(7) — Meaning of "parked obligation"; 80.01(10) — Subsequent payments; 80.01(11) — Foreign currency fluctuation to be ignored.

(9) Statute-barred debt — Where at any particular time after February 21, 1994 a commercial debt obligation issued by a debtor that is payable to a person (other than a person with whom the debtor is related at the particular time) becomes unenforceable in a court of competent jurisdiction because of a statutory limitation period and the obligation would, but for this subsection, not have been settled or extinguished at the particular time, for the purpose of applying the provisions of this Act to the debtor, the obligation shall be deemed to have been settled at the particular time.

Related Provisions: 80(1)"forgiven amount"B(g) — Debt forgiveness rules do not apply; 80(2)(j), 80.01(2)(a) — Special rules for determining the meaning of "related"; 80(3)–(13) — Treatment of obligation deemed to have been settled; 80.01(10) — Subsequent payments; 80.01(11) — Foreign currency fluctuation to be ignored.

(10) Subsequent payments in satisfaction of debt — Where a commercial debt obligation issued by a debtor is first deemed by subsection (8) or (9) to have been settled at a particular time, at a subsequent time a payment is made by the debtor of an amount in satisfaction of the principal amount of the obligation and it cannot reasonably be considered that one of the reasons the obligation became a parked obligation or became unenforceable, as the case may be, before the subsequent time was to have this subsection apply to the payment, in computing the debtor's income for the taxation year (in this subsection referred to as the "subsequent year") that includes the subsequent time from the source in connection with which the obligation was issued, there may be deducted the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount of the payment,

B is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the principal amount of the obligation

exceeds the total of

(b) all amounts each of which is a forgiven amount at any time

(i) in the period that began at the particular time and ended immediately before the subsequent time, and

(ii) at which a particular portion of the obligation is deemed by subsection (8) or (9) to be settled in respect of the particular portion, and

(c) all amounts paid in satisfaction of the principal amount of the obligation in the period that began at the particular time and ended immediately before the subsequent time, and

C is the amount, if any, by which the total of

(a) all amounts deducted under section 61.3 in computing the debtor's income for the subsequent year or a preceding taxation year,

(b) all amounts added because of subsection 80(13) in computing the debtor's income for the subsequent year or a preceding taxation year in respect of a settlement under subsection (8) or (9) in a period during which the debtor was exempt from tax under this Part on its taxable income, and

(c) all amounts added because of subsection 80(13) in computing the debtor's income for the subsequent year or a preceding taxation year in respect of a settlement under subsection (8) or (9) in a period during which the debtor was non-resident (other than any of those amounts added in computing the debtor's taxable income or taxable income earned in Canada)

exceeds the total of

(d) the amount, if any, deducted because of paragraph 37(1)(f.1) in determining the balance determined under subsection 37(1) in respect of the debtor immediately after the subsequent year, and

(e) all amounts by which the amount deductible under this subsection in respect of a payment made by the debtor before the subsequent time in computing the debtor's income for the subsequent year or a preceding year has been reduced because of this description.

Related Provisions: 3, 4(1) — Income from a source; 20(1)(uu) — Deduction for amount allowed under subsec. 80.01(10); 80.01(7) — Meaning of "parked obligation"; 87(2)(l.21) — Amalgamations — continuing corporation; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: Subsec. 80.01(10) amended by 2001, c. 17, s. 59 to replace the number "0.75" in the formula with the number "0.5", applicable to taxation years that end after Feb. 27, 2000 except that, where a taxation year of a debtor includes Feb. 28, 2000 or Oct. 17, 2000, or began after Feb. 28, 2000 and ended before Oc. 17, 2000, the reference to the fraction "1/2" in the subsec. shall be read as a reference to the fraction in para. 38(a), as amended by 2001, c. 17, that applies to the debtor for the year.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 161, will amend the application of the amendment made to subsec. 80.01(10) by S.C. 2001, c. 17, s. 59, deemed in force on June 14, 2001, to read as follows:

Subsec. 80.01(10) amended by 2001, c. 17, s. 59 to replace the number "0.75" in the formula with the number "0.5", applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000 except that, for a taxation year of a debtor that includes either February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000 or began after February 28, 2000 and ended before October 17, 2000, the reference to the fraction "½" shall be read as a reference to the fraction in para. 38(a) that applied to the debtor for the year in which the commercial debt obligation was deemed to have been settled.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 59(2) of the Income Tax Amendments Act, 2000 is amended to provide that, in computing a debtor's income for a particular taxation year, the fraction in paragraph 38(a) of the Income Tax Act to be applied in respect of the settlement of a commercial debt obligation is the fraction in that paragraph that applied to the debtor in the debtor's taxation year in which the obligation was deemed to have been settled instead of the fraction in that paragraph that applies to the debtor in the particular taxation year.

This change corrects a technical deficiency, and is deemed to have come into force on June 14, 2001.

(11) Foreign currency gains and losses — Where an obligation issued by a debtor is denominated in a currency (other than the Canadian currency) and the obligation is deemed by subsection (8) or (9) to have been settled, those subsections do not apply for the purpose of determining any gain or loss of the debtor on the settlement that is attributable to a fluctuation in the value of the currency relative to the value of Canadian currency.

Related Provisions: 39(1.1), (2) — Gain or loss on fluctuation of foreign currency; 79(7) — Currency fluctuation where property surrendered to creditor; 80(2)(k) — Determination of forgiven amount where obligation denominated in foreign currency; 261(5)(c), (f)(i) — Functional currency reporting.

History [s. 80.01]: S. 80.01 added by 1995, c. 21, s. 27, applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994, except that it does not, other than for the purposes of subsections 6(15) and (15.1) and 15(1.2) and (1.21) and section 79, apply to any obligation settled or extinguished

(i) before February 22, 1994,

(ii) after February 21, 1994

(A) under the terms of an agreement in writing entered into on or before that date, or

(B) under the terms of any amendment to such an agreement, where that amendment was entered into in writing before July 12, 1994 and the amount of the settlement or extinguishment was not substantially greater than the settlement or extinguishment provided under the terms of the agreement,

(iii) before 1996 pursuant to a restructuring of debt in connection with a proceeding commenced in a court in Canada before February 22, 1994,

(iv) before 1996 in connection with a proposal (or notice of intention to make a proposal) that was filed under the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act, or similar legislation of a country other than Canada, before February 22, 1994, or

(v) before 1996 in connection with a written offer that was made by, or communicated to, the holder of the obligation before February 22, 1994.

80.02 (1) Definitions — In this section, "commercial debt obligation", "commercial obligation", "distress preferred share" and "person" have the meanings assigned by subsection 80(1).

(2) General rules for distress preferred shares — For the purpose of applying the provisions of this Act to an issuer of a distress preferred share,

(a) the principal amount, at any time, of the share shall be deemed to be the amount (determined at that time) for which the share was issued;

(b) the amount for which the share was issued shall, at any time, be deemed to be the amount, if any, by which the total of

(i) the amount for which the share was issued, determined without reference to this paragraph, and

(ii) all amounts by which the paid-up capital in respect of the share increased after the share was issued and before that time

exceeds

(iii) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount paid before that time on a reduction of the paid-up capital in respect of the share, except to the extent that the amount is deemed by section 84 to have been paid as a dividend;

(c) the share shall be deemed to be settled at such time as it is redeemed, acquired or cancelled by the issuer; and

(d) a payment in satisfaction of the principal amount of the share is any payment made on a reduction of the paid-up capital in respect of the share to the extent that the payment would be proceeds of disposition of the share within the meaning that would be assigned by the definition "proceeds of disposition" in section 54 if that definition were read without reference to paragraph (j).

Related Provisions: 80.02(3)(b), 80.02(5)(b) — Deemed amounts for purposes of subpara. 80.02(2)(b)(i).

(3) Substitution of distress preferred share for debt — Where any part of the consideration given by a corporation to another person for the settlement or extinguishment at any time of a commercial debt obligation that was issued by the corporation and owned immediately before that time by the other person consists of a distress preferred share issued by the corporation to the other person,

(a) for the purposes of section 80, the amount paid at that time in satisfaction of the principal amount of the obligation because of the issue of that share shall be deemed to be equal to the lesser of

(i) the principal amount of the obligation, and

(ii) the amount by which the paid-up capital in respect of the class of shares that include that share increases because of the issue of that share; and

(b) for the purpose of subparagraph (2)(b)(i), the amount for which the share was issued shall be deemed to be equal to the amount deemed by paragraph (a) to have been paid at that time.

Related Provisions: 80.02(2) — General rules.

(4) Substitution of commercial debt obligation for distress preferred share — Where any part of the consideration given by a corporation to another person for the settlement at any time of a distress preferred share that was issued by the corporation and owned immediately before that time by the other person consists of a commercial debt obligation issued by the corporation to the other person, for the purposes of section 80

(a) the amount paid at that time in satisfaction of the principal amount of the share because of the issue of that obligation shall be deemed to be equal to the principal amount of the obligation; and

(b) the amount for which the obligation was issued shall be deemed to be equal to its principal amount.

(5) Substitution of distress preferred share for other distress preferred share — Where any part of the consideration given by a corporation to another person for the settlement at any time of a particular distress preferred share that was issued by the corporation and owned immediately before that time by the other person consists of another distress preferred share issued by the corporation to the other person, for the purposes of section 80

(a) the amount paid at that time in satisfaction of the principal amount of the particular share because of the issue of the other share shall be deemed to be equal to the amount by which the paid-up capital in respect of the class of shares that includes the other share increases because of the issue of the other share; and

(b) for the purpose of subparagraph (2)(b)(i), the amount for which the other share was issued shall be deemed to be equal to the amount deemed by paragraph (a) to have been paid at that time.

(6) Substitution of non-commercial obligation for distress preferred share — Where any part of the consideration given by a corporation to another person for the settlement at any time of a distress preferred share that was issued by the corporation and owned immediately before that time by the other person consists of another share (other than a distress preferred share) or an obligation (other than a commercial obligation) issued by the corporation to the other person, for the purposes of section 80, the amount paid at that time in satisfaction of the principal amount of the distress preferred share because of the issue of the other share or obligation shall be deemed to be equal to the fair market value of the other share or obligation, as the case may be, at that time.

Related Provisions: 80.02(2) — General rules.

(7) Deemed settlement on expiry of term — Where at any time a distress preferred share becomes a share that is not a distress preferred share, for the purposes of section 80

(a) the share shall be deemed to have been settled immediately before that time; and

(b) a payment equal to the fair market value of the share at that time shall be deemed to have been made immediately before that time in satisfaction of the principal amount of the share.

Related Provisions: 80(1)"distress preferred share", 248(1)"term preferred share"(e) — Maximum term of distress preferred share is 5 years.

History [s. 80.02]: S. 80.02 added by 1995, c. 21, s. 27, applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994, except that it does not, other than for the purposes of subsections 6(15) and (15.1) and 15(1.2) and (1.21) and section 79, apply to any obligation settled or extinguished

(i) before February 22, 1994,

(ii) after February 21, 1994

(A) under the terms of an agreement in writing entered into on or before that date, or

(B) under the terms of any amendment to such an agreement, where that amendment was entered into in writing before July 12, 1994 and the amount of the settlement or extinguishment was not substantially greater than the settlement or extinguishment provided under the terms of the agreement,

(iii) before 1996 pursuant to a restructuring of debt in connection with a proceeding commenced in a court in Canada before February 22, 1994,

(iv) before 1996 in connection with a proposal (or notice of intention to make a proposal) that was filed under the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act, or similar legislation of a country other than Canada, before February 22, 1994, or

(v) before 1996 in connection with a written offer that was made by, or communicated to, the holder of the obligation before February 22, 1994;

80.03 (1) [Definitions] — In this section, "commercial debt obligation", "commercial obligation", "distress preferred share", "forgiven amount" and "person" have the meanings assigned by subsection 80(1).][11]

History: Subsec. 80.03(1) inadvertently deleted, instead of amended to repeal "taxable dividend", by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 112(1), with the version in square brackets above to have been applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994. The subsec. formerly read:

(1) In this section,

(a) "commercial debt obligation", "commercial obligation", "distress preferred share", "forgiven amount" and "person" have the meanings assigned by subsection 80(1); and

(b) "taxable dividend" does not include any capital gains dividends (within the meaning assigned by subsection 131(1)).

(2) Deferred recognition of debtor's gain on settlement of debt — Where at any time in a taxation year a person (in this subsection referred to as the "transferor") surrenders a particular capital property (other than a distress preferred share) that is a share, a capital interest in a trust or an interest in a partnership, the person shall be deemed to have a capital gain from the disposition at that time of another capital property (or, where the particular property is a taxable Canadian property, another taxable Canadian property) equal to the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of all amounts deducted under paragraph 53(2)(g.1) in computing the adjusted cost base to the transferor of the particular property immediately before that time

exceeds the total of

(b) the amount that would be the transferor's capital gain for the year from the disposition of the particular property if this Act were read without reference to subsection 100(2), and

(c) where, at the end of the year, the transferor is resident in Canada or is a non-resident person who carries on business in Canada through a fixed place of business, the amount designated under subsection (7) by the transferor in respect of the disposition, at that time or immediately after that time, of the particular property.

Related Provisions: 80.03(3) — Meaning of "surrender"; 253 — Extended meaning of carrying on business in Canada.

(3) Surrender of capital property — For the purpose of subsection (2), a person shall be considered to have surrendered a property at any time only where

(a) in the case of a share of the capital stock of a particular corporation,

(i) the person is a corporation that disposed of the share at that time and the proceeds of disposition of the share are determined under paragraph 88(1)(b), or

(ii) the person is a corporation that owned the share at that time and, immediately after that time, amalgamates or merges with the particular corporation;

(b) in the case of a capital interest in a trust, the person disposed of the interest at that time and the proceeds of disposition are determined under paragraph 107(2)(c); and

(c) in the case of an interest in a partnership, the person disposed of the interest at that time and the proceeds of disposition are determined under paragraph 98(3)(a) or (5)(a).

History: Subsecs. 80.03(4) to (6) repealed by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 112(2), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994. The subsecs. formerly read:

(4) Dispositions by corporations — Where at any time in a taxation year a corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "vendor") disposes of a particular capital property that is a share, an interest in a partnership or a capital interest in a trust, otherwise than by way of a disposition to which subsection (2) or 53(6) applies, a disposition to another corporation in circumstances to which subsection 53(5) applies, or a disposition the proceeds from which are determined under subsection 47(1), section 86 or any of the provisions (other than subsection 97(2)) referred to in subsection 53(4), the vendor shall be deemed to have a capital gain from the disposition at that time of another capital property (or where the particular property is a taxable Canadian property, another taxable Canadian property) equal to the amount, if any, by which the lesser of

(a) all amounts deducted under paragraph 53(2)(g.1) in computing the adjusted cost base to the vendor of the particular property immediately before that time, and

(b) where the particular property

(i) is a share, the total of all amounts each of which is

(A) a taxable dividend on the share that was received in the specified period relating to the disposition of the share, to the extent that the dividend is deductible in computing taxable income of a holder of the share or a beneficiary under a trust that held the share, or

(B) a capital dividend on the share that was received in the specified period relating to the disposition of the share,

(ii) is an interest in a partnership, the total of all amounts each of which is

(A) the share of a taxable dividend relating to the interest that was received after July 12, 1994 and in a fiscal period of the partnership that ended in the specified period relating to the disposition of the interest, to the extent that such share is deductible in computing taxable income of a person holding the interest in the partnership or a beneficiary under a trust that held the interest in the partnership, or

(B) the share of a capital dividend relating to the interest that was received after July 12, 1994 and in a fiscal period of the partnership that ended in the specified period relating to the disposition of the interest, or

(iii) is a capital interest in a trust, the total of all amounts each of which is such portion of a taxable dividend that was received by the trust in the specified period relating to the disposition of the capital interest and that was deemed by subsection 104(19) to have been received in respect of the capital interest, to the extent that such portion was deductible in computing taxable income of a person holding the capital interest

(c) the amount that would be the vendor's capital gain for the year from the disposition of the particular property if this Act were read without reference to subparagraph 40(1)(a)(iii) and subsection 100(2), and

(d) where the vendor is resident in Canada at the end of the year or is a non-resident person who carries on business in Canada through a fixed place of business at the end of the year, the amount designated under subsection (7) by the vendor in respect of the disposition of the particular property.

[11] The English version of subsec. 80.03(1) was inadvertently deleted by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 112(1). The Dept. of Finance has confirmed that this will be corrected in an upcoming technical bill.

(5) Specified period — For the purpose of subsection (4), the specified period relating to a disposition at a particular time of a property by a person is the period

(a) that began at or on the later of July 12, 1994 and the last time before the particular time that the person acquired the property, and

(b) that ended at the particular time.

(6) When property acquired — For the purposes of this subsection and subsection (5), where, as a consequence of the disposition at a particular time of a property to a person, an amount is deducted under paragraph 53(2)(g.1) in computing the adjusted cost base of the property after the particular time, the person shall be deemed not to have acquired the property at the particular time and to have acquired the property at the time it was last acquired before the particular time.

(7) Alternative treatment — Where at any time in a taxation year a person disposes of a property, for the purposes of subsection (2) and section 80

(a) the person may designate an amount in a prescribed form filed with the person's return of income under this Part for the year; and

(b) where an amount is designated by the person under paragraph (a) in respect of the disposition,

(i) the person shall be deemed to have issued a commercial debt obligation at that time that is settled immediately after that time,

(ii) the lesser of the amount so designated and the amount that would, but for this subsection, be a capital gain determined in respect of the disposition because of subsection (2) shall be treated as if it were the forgiven amount at the time of the settlement in respect of the obligation referred to in subparagraph (i),

(iii) the source in connection with which the obligation referred to in subparagraph (i) was issued shall be deemed to be the business, if any, carried on by the person at the end of the year, and

(iv) where the person does not carry on a business at the end of the year, the person shall be deemed to carry on an active business at the end of the year and the source in connection with which the obligation referred to in subparagraph (i) was issued shall be deemed to be the business deemed by this subparagraph to be carried on.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(h.1) — Amalgamations — continuing corporation; 220(3.21)(a) — Late filing, amendment or revocation of designation.

History: The opening words of subsec. 80.03(7) and subpara. 80.03(7)(b)(ii) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsecs. 112(3) and (4), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994. The opening words and subpara. formerly read:

(7) Where at any time in a taxation year a person disposes of a property, for the purposes of subsections (2) and (4) and section 80

. . . . .

(ii) the lesser of the amount so designated and the amount that would, but for this subsection, be a capital gain determined in respect of the disposition because of subsection (2) or (4) shall be treated as if it were the forgiven amount at the time of the settlement in respect of the obligation referred to in subparagraph (i),

Forms: T2155: Alternative treatment of capital gains arising under s. 80.03 on settlement of debt.

(8) Lifetime capital gains exemption — Where, as a consequence of the disposition at any time by an individual of a property that is a qualified farm property of the individual or a qualified small business corporation share of the individual (within the meanings assigned by subsection 110.6(1)), the individual is deemed by subsection (2) to have a capital gain at that time from the disposition of another property, for the purposes of sections 3, 74.3 and 111, as they apply for the purpose of section 110.6, the other property shall be deemed to be a qualified farm property of the individual or a qualified small business corporation share of the individual, as the case may be.

History [s. 80.03]: S. 80.03 added by 1995, c. 21, s. 27, applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994, except that

(a) it does not, other than for the purposes of subsections 6(15) and (15.1) and 15(1.2) and (1.21) and section 79, apply to any obligation settled or extinguished

(i) before February 22, 1994,

(ii) after February 21, 1994

(A) under the terms of an agreement in writing entered into on or before that date, or

(B) under the terms of any amendment to such an agreement, where that amendment was entered into in writing before July 12, 1994 and the amount of the settlement or extinguishment was not substantially greater than the settlement or extinguishment provided under the terms of the agreement,

(iii) before 1996 pursuant to a restructuring of debt in connection with a proceeding commenced in a court in Canada before February 22, 1994,

(iv) before 1996 in connection with a proposal (or notice of intention to make a proposal) that was filed under the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act, or similar legislation of a country other than Canada, before February 22, 1994, or

(v) before 1996 in connection with a written offer that was made by, or communicated to, the holder of the obligation before February 22, 1994; and

(b) a form referred to in subsection 80.03(7) shall be deemed to have been filed on a timely basis if it is filed with the Minister of National Revenue before 1996.

80.04 [Transfer of forgiven amount to other taxpayer] — (1) Definitions — In this section, "commercial debt obligation", "commercial obligation", "debtor", "directed person", "eligible Canadian partnership", "forgiven amount" and "person" have the meanings assigned by subsection 80(1).

(2) Eligible transferee — For the purpose of this section, an "eligible transferee" of a debtor at any time is a directed person at that time in respect of the debtor or a taxable Canadian corporation or eligible Canadian partnership related (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) at that time to the debtor.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(h.1) — Amalgamations — continuing corporation.

(3) Application — Paragraphs 80(2)(a), (b), (j), (l) and (n) apply for the purpose of this section.

(4) Agreement respecting transfer of forgiven amount — Where

(a) a particular commercial obligation (other than an obligation deemed by paragraph (e) to have been issued) issued by a debtor is settled at a particular time,

(b) amounts have been designated by the debtor under subsections 80(5) to (10) to the maximum extent permitted in respect of the settlement of the particular obligation at the particular time,

(c) the debtor and an eligible transferee of the debtor at the particular time file under this section an agreement between them in respect of that settlement, and

(d) an amount is specified in that agreement

the following rules apply:

(e) except for the purposes of subsection 80(11), the transferee shall be deemed to have issued a commercial debt obligation that was settled at the particular time,

(f) the specified amount shall be deemed to be the forgiven amount at the particular time in respect of the obligation referred to in paragraph (e),

(g) subject to paragraph (h), the obligation referred to in paragraph (e) shall be deemed to have been issued at the same time (in paragraph (h) referred to as the "time of issue") at which, and in the same circumstances in which, the particular obligation was issued,

(h) where the transferee is a corporation the control of which was acquired by a person or group of persons after the time of issue and the transferee and the debtor were not related to each other immediately before that acquisition of control,

(i) the obligation referred to in paragraph (e) shall be deemed to have been issued after that acquisition of control, and

(ii) paragraph (e) of the definition "relevant loss balance" in subsection 80(1), paragraph (f) of the definition "successor pool" in that subsection and paragraph (b) of the definition "unrecognized loss" in that subsection do not apply in respect of that acquisition of control,

(i) the source in connection with which the obligation referred to in paragraph (e) was issued shall be deemed to be the source in connection with which the particular obligation was issued, and

(j) for the purposes of sections 61.3 and 61.4, the amount included under subsection 80(13) in computing the income of the eligible transferee in respect of the settlement of the obligation referred to in paragraph (e) or deducted under paragraph 80(15)(a) in respect of such income shall be deemed to be nil.

Related Provisions: 80(13)C — Amount specified in agreement reduces income inclusion; 80(14)(c) — Calculation of residual balance for income inclusion; 80(15)(c) — Where commercial debt obligation issued by partnership; 80.04(5) — Where consideration given for entering into agreement; 80.04(6) — How and when agreement to be filed with CRA; 87(2)(h.1) — Amalgamations — continuing corporation; 139.1(18) — Holding corporation deemed not to acquire control of insurer on demutualization; 256(6)–(9) — Whether control acquired; 256(8) — Deemed acquisition of shares.

(5) Consideration for agreement — For the purposes of this Part, where property is acquired at any time by an eligible transferee as consideration for entering into an agreement with a debtor that is filed under this section

(a) where the property was owned by the debtor immediately before that time,

(i) the debtor shall be deemed to have disposed of the property at that time for proceeds equal to the fair market value of the property at that time, and

(ii) no amount may be deducted in computing the debtor's income as a consequence of the transfer of the property, except any amount arising as a consequence of the application of subparagraph (i);

(b) the cost at which the property was acquired by the eligible transferee at that time shall be deemed to be equal to the fair market value of the property at that time; and

(c) the eligible transferee shall not be required to add an amount in computing income solely because of the acquisition at that time of the property.

(d) [Repealed]

Related Provisions: 80.04(5.1) — No benefit conferred on debtor as a consequence of the agreement; 191.3(1.1) — Similar rule for purposes of Part VI.1 tax.

History: Para. 80.04(5)(d) repealed by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 113(1), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994. The para. formerly read:

(d) no benefit shall be considered to have been conferred on the debtor as a consequence of the debtor entering into an agreement filed under this section.

(5.1) No benefit conferred — For the purposes of this Part, where a debtor and an eligible transferee enter into an agreement that is filed under this section, no benefit shall be considered to have been conferred on the debtor as a consequence of the agreement.

History: Subsec. 80.04(5.1) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 113(2), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994.

(6) Manner of filing agreement — Subject to subsection (7), a particular agreement between a debtor and an eligible transferee in respect of an obligation issued by the debtor that was settled at any time shall be deemed not to have been filed under this section

(a) where it is not filed with the Minister in a prescribed form

(i) on or before the later of

(A) the day on or before which the debtor's return of income under this Part is required to be filed for the taxation year or fiscal period, as the case may be, that includes that time (or would be required to be filed if tax under this Part were payable by the debtor for the year), and

(B) the day on or before which the transferee's return of income under this Part is required to be filed for the taxation year or fiscal period, as the case may be, that includes that time, or

(ii) within the period within which the debtor or the transferee may serve a notice of objection to an assessment of tax payable under this Part for a taxation year or fiscal period, as the case may be, described in clause (i)(A) or (B), as the case may be;

Proposed Amendment — 80.04(6)(a)(ii)

(ii) on or before the later of

(A) the expiry of the 90 day period commencing on the day of mailing of an assessment of tax payable under this Part or a notification that no tax is payable under this Part, as the case may be, for a taxation year or fiscal period described in clause (i)(A) or (B), as the case may be; and

(B) if the debtor is an individual (other than a trust) or a testamentary trust, the day that is one year after the taxpayer's filing-due date for the year;

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, s. 11, will amend subpara. 80.04(6)(a)(ii) to read as above, applicable for taxation years that end after February 21, 1994.

Technical Notes: Sections 80 to 80.04 set out the rules that apply when an obligation is settled or extinguished for less than its principal amount or the amount for which it was issued. When such a commercial debt obligation is settled or extinguished, it gives rise to a "forgiven amount" as defined in subsection 80(1). A forgiven amount in respect of a commercial debt obligation issued by a debtor is required to be applied against certain tax pools of the debtor, in a specified order, as provided in subsections 80(3) to (12). In general, subsection 80(13) requires that one half of any remaining unapplied portion of the forgiven amount be included in computing the debtor's income, unless it can be transferred to another taxpayer under section 80.04.

Section 80.04 allows a debtor to enter into an agreement with an eligible transferee (generally a person related to the debtor) to transfer a portion of any unapplied forgiven amount, as specified in the agreement, to the transferee. The transferred amount reduces the amount that the debtor is required to include in income under subsection 80(13), while the eligible transferee is required to reduce its tax pools as provided in subsection 80(3) to (12) by the transferred amount.

Subsection 80.04(6) sets out the conditions that must be satisfied in filing an agreement under section 80.04. If the requirements are not satisfied, the agreement is not considered valid.

Subparagraph 80.04(6)(a)(ii) provides that the agreement, which has to be in prescribed form, must be filed with the debtor's or the transferee's notice of objection to an assessment of tax payable for the taxation year in which the settlement arose.

Subparagraph 80.04(6)(a)(ii) is amended to take into account situations where no tax is payable for the taxation year in which the settlement arose by either the debtor or the transferee. In particular, subparagraph 80.04(6)(a)(ii) is amended to provide that an agreement may be filed on or before the later of:

- 90 days after the day an assessment of tax payable, or a notification that no tax is payable, is mailed; and
- if the debtor is an individual (other than a trust) or a testamentary trust, the day that is one year after the taxpayer's filing-due date for the year.

(b) where it is not accompanied by,

(i) where the debtor is a corporation and its directors are legally entitled to administer its affairs, a certified copy of their resolution authorizing the agreement to be made,

(ii) where the debtor is a corporation and its directors are not legally entitled to administer its affairs, a certified copy of the document by which the person legally entitled to administer its affairs authorized the agreement to be made,

(iii) where the transferee is a corporation and its directors are legally entitled to administer its affairs, a certified copy of their resolution authorizing the agreement to be made, and

(iv) where the transferee is a corporation and its directors are not legally entitled to administer its affairs, a certified copy of the document by which the person legally entitled to administer its affairs authorized the agreement to be made; or

(c) if an agreement amending the particular agreement has been filed in accordance with this section, except where subsection (8) applies to the particular agreement.

Related Provisions: 80.04(7) — Deemed due dates for partnership to file return and service notice of objection; 96(3) — Agreement of members of partnership; 150(1) — Due date for return; 165(1) — Deadline for serving notice of objection.

Forms: T2156: Agreement to transfer a forgiven amount under s. 80.04.

(7) Filing by partnership — For the purpose of subsection (6), where an obligation is settled at any time in a fiscal period of a partnership, it shall be assumed that

(a) the partnership is required to file a return of income under this Part for the fiscal period on or before the latest day on or before which any member of the partnership during the fiscal period is required to file a return of income under this Part for the taxation year in which that fiscal period ends (or would be required to file such a return of income if tax under this Part were payable by the member for that year); and

(b) the partnership may serve a notice of objection described in subparagraph (6)(a)(ii) within each period within which any member of the partnership during the fiscal period may serve a notice of objection to tax payable under this Part for a taxation year in which that fiscal period ends.

(8) Related corporations — Where at any time a corporation becomes related to another corporation and it can reasonably be considered that the main purpose of the corporation becoming related to the other corporation is to enable the corporations to file an agreement under this section, the amount specified in the agreement shall be deemed to be nil for the purpose of the description of C in subsection 80(13).

(9) Assessment of taxpayers in respect of agreement — The Minister shall, notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), assess or reassess the tax, interest and penalties payable under this Act by any taxpayer in order to take into account an agreement filed under this section.

(10) Liability of debtor — Without affecting the liability of any person under any other provision of this Act, where a debtor and an eligible transferee file an agreement between them under this section in respect of an obligation issued by the debtor that was settled at any time, the debtor is, to the extent of 30% of the amount specified in the agreement, liable to pay

(a) where the transferee is a corporation, all taxes payable under this Act by it for taxation years that end in the period that begins at that time and ends 4 calendar years after that time;

(b) where the transferee is a partnership, the total of all amounts each of which is the tax payable under this Act by a person for a taxation year

(i) that begins or ends in that period, and

(ii) that includes the end of a fiscal period of the partnership during which the person was a member of the partnership; and

(c) interest and penalties in respect of such taxes.

Related Provisions: 80.04(11) — Joint and several liability; 80.04(12) — Assessment; 80.04(14) — Where partnership is a member of a partnership; 87(2)(h.1) — Amalgamations — continuing corporation.

History: Para. 80.04(10)(a) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 113(3), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994. The para. formerly read:

(a) where the transferee is a corporation, all taxes payable under this Act by it for taxation years that end in the period that begins at that time and ends 10 calendar years after that time;

(11) Joint liability — Where taxes, interest and penalties are payable under this Act by a person for a taxation year and those taxes, interest and penalties are payable by a debtor because of subsection (10), the debtor and the person are jointly and severally liable to pay those amounts.

Proposed Amendment — 80.04(11)

(11) Joint and several, or solidary, liability — If taxes, interest and penalties are payable under this Act by a person for a taxation year and those taxes, interest and penalties are payable by a debtor because of subsection (10), the debtor and the person are jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable to pay those amounts.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — bijuralism), s. 205, will amend subsec. 80.04(11) to read as above, to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 12(4).

Related Provisions: 87(2)(h.1) — Amalgamations — continuing corporation.

(12) Assessments in respect of liability — Where a debtor and an eligible transferee file an agreement between them under this section in respect of an obligation issued by the debtor that was settled at a particular time,

(a) where the debtor is an individual or a corporation, the Minister may at any subsequent time assess the debtor in respect of taxes, interest and penalties for which the debtor is liable because of subsection (10); and

(b) where the debtor is a partnership, the Minister may at any subsequent time assess any person who has been a member of the partnership in respect of taxes, interest and penalties for which the partnership is liable because of subsection (10), to the extent that those amounts relate to taxation years of the transferee (or, where the transferee is another partnership, members of the other partnership) that end at or after

(i) where the person was not a member of the partnership at the particular time, the first subsequent time the person becomes a member of the partnership, and

(ii) in any other case, the particular time.

Related Provisions: 80.04(13) — Provisions applicable to assessment; 80.04(14) — Where partnership is a member of a partnership; 87(2)(h.1) — Amalgamations — continuing corporation.

(13) Application of Division I — The provisions of Division I apply to an assessment under subsection (12) as though it had been made under section 152.

(14) Partnership members — For the purposes of paragraphs (10)(b) and (12)(b) and this subsection, where at any time a member of a particular partnership is another partnership, each member of the other partnership shall be deemed to be a member of the particular partnership at that time.

History [s. 80.04]: S. 80.04 added by 1995, c. 21, s. 27, applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994, except that

(a) it does not, other than for the purposes of subsections 6(15) and (15.1) and 15(1.2) and (1.21) and section 79, apply to any obligation settled or extinguished

(i) before February 22, 1994,

(ii) after February 21, 1994

(A) under the terms of an agreement in writing entered into on or before that date, or

(B) under the terms of any amendment to such an agreement, where that amendment was entered into in writing before July 12, 1994 and the amount of the settlement or extinguishment was not substantially greater than the settlement or extinguishment provided under the terms of the agreement,

(iii) before 1996 pursuant to a restructuring of debt in connection with a proceeding commenced in a court in Canada before February 22, 1994,

(iv) before 1996 in connection with a proposal (or notice of intention to make a proposal) that was filed under the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act, or similar legislation of a country other than Canada, before February 22, 1994, or

(v) before 1996 in connection with a written offer that was made by, or communicated to, the holder of the obligation before February 22, 1994; and

(b) a form referred to in subsection 80.04(6) shall be deemed to have been filed on a timely basis if it is filed with the Minister of National Revenue before 1996.

80.1 (1) Expropriation assets acquired as compensation for, or as consideration for sale of, foreign property taken by or sold to foreign issuer — Where in a taxation year ending coincidentally with or after December 31, 1971 a taxpayer resident in Canada has acquired any bonds, debentures, mortgages, hypothecary claims, notes or similar obligations (in this section referred to as "expropriation assets") issued by the government of a country other than Canada or issued by a person resident in a country other than Canada and guaranteed by the government of that country,

(a) as compensation for

(i) shares owned by the taxpayer of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that carried on business in that country, or

(ii) all or substantially all of the property used by the taxpayer in carrying on business in that country,

(which shares or property, as the case may be, are referred to in this section as "foreign property"), taken, after June 18, 1971, from the taxpayer by the issuer under the authority of a law of that country, or

(b) as consideration for the sale of foreign property sold, after June 18, 1971, by the taxpayer to the issuer, if

(i) the sale was, by a law of that country, expressly required to be made, or

(ii) the sale was made after notice or other manifestation of an intention to take the foreign property, if the taxpayer has so elected, in prescribed form and within prescribed time, in respect of all of the expropriation assets so acquired by the taxpayer, the following rule applies, namely, an amount in respect of each such expropriation asset, equal to

(c) the principal amount of the asset, or

(d) where the taxpayer has designated in the taxpayer's election an amount in respect of the asset that is less than the principal amount thereof, the amount so designated,

shall be deemed to be

(e) the cost to the taxpayer of the asset, and

(f) for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the foreign property so taken or sold, the amount received by the taxpayer by virtue of the taxpayer's acquisition of the asset, except that in no case may the taxpayer designate an amount in respect of any expropriation asset so that the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the foreign property so taken or sold (computed having regard to the provisions of paragraph (f)) are less than the cost amount to the taxpayer of the foreign property immediately before it was so taken or sold.

Forms: T2079: Election re: expropriation assets acquired as compensation for or a consideration for sale of foreign property taken by or sold to foreign issuer.

(2) Election re interest received or to be received on expropriation assets acquired by taxpayer — Where a taxpayer has elected in prescribed form and within prescribed time in respect of all amounts (each of which is referred to in this subsection as an "interest amount") received or to be received by the taxpayer as or on account of interest on all expropriation assets acquired by the taxpayer as compensation for, or as consideration for the sale of, foreign property taken by or sold to any particular issuer as described in subsection (1), the following rules apply in respect of each such asset so acquired by the taxpayer:

(a) in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year from the asset, there may be deducted, in respect of each interest amount received by the taxpayer in the year on the asset, the lesser of the interest amount and the total of

(i) the amount required by paragraph (b) to be added, by virtue of the receipt by the taxpayer of the interest amount, in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the asset, and

(ii) the greater of

(A) the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the asset immediately before the interest amount was so received by the taxpayer, and

(B) the adjusted principal amount to the taxpayer of the asset immediately before the interest amount was so received by the taxpayer, and there shall be included, in respect of each amount (in this paragraph referred to as a "capital amount") received by the taxpayer in the year as, on account or in lieu of payment of, or in satisfaction of,

(iii) any proceeds of disposition of the asset, or

(iv) the principal amount of the asset,

the amount, if any, by which the capital amount exceeds the greater of the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the asset immediately before the capital amount was received by the taxpayer and its adjusted principal amount to the taxpayer at that time;

(b) in computing, at any particular time, the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the asset, there shall be added, in respect of each interest amount received by the taxpayer on the asset before the particular time, an amount equal to the lesser of

(i) any income or profits tax paid by the taxpayer to the government of a country other than Canada in respect of the interest amount, and

(ii) that proportion of the tax referred to in subparagraph (i) that the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the asset immediately before the interest amount was received by the taxpayer is of the amount, if any, by which the interest amount exceeds the tax referred to in that subparagraph, and there shall be deducted

(iii) each interest amount received by the taxpayer on the asset before the particular time, and

(iv) each amount received by the taxpayer before the particular time on account of the principal amount of the asset;

(c) the receipt by the taxpayer of an amount described in subparagraph (b)(iv) in respect of the asset shall be deemed not to be a partial disposition thereof; and

(d) for the purposes of section 126, notwithstanding the definition "non-business-income tax" in subsection 126(7), the "non-business-income tax" paid by a taxpayer does not include any tax, or any portion thereof, the amount of which is required by paragraph (b) to be added in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the asset.

Forms: T2079: Election re: expropriation assets acquired as compensation for or a consideration for sale of foreign property taken by or sold to foreign issuer.

(3) Where interest amount and capital amount received at same time — For the purposes of subsection (2), where an interest amount on an expropriation asset and a capital amount with respect to that asset are received by a taxpayer at the same time, the interest amount shall be deemed to have been received by the taxpayer immediately before the capital amount.

(4) Assets acquired from foreign affiliate of taxpayer as dividend in kind or as benefit to shareholder — Where a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada would, on the assumption that the foreign affiliate were resident in Canada and its only foreign affiliates were corporations that were foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, be entitled to make an election under subsection (1) in respect of assets acquired by it that would, on that assumption, be expropriation assets of the foreign affiliate, and all or any of those assets are subsequently acquired by the taxpayer from the foreign affiliate as a dividend payable in kind, or as a benefit received from the foreign affiliate that would otherwise be required by subsection 15(1) to be included in computing the income of the taxpayer, if the taxpayer has so elected, in prescribed form and within prescribed time, in respect of all of the assets so acquired by the taxpayer from the foreign affiliate, the following rules apply in respect of each such asset so acquired by the taxpayer:

(a) an amount equal to

(i) the principal amount of the asset, or

(ii) where the taxpayer has designated in the taxpayer's election an amount in respect of the asset that is less than the principal amount thereof, the amount so designated,

shall be deemed to be,

(iii) notwithstanding subsection 52(2), the cost to the taxpayer of the asset, and

(iv) the amount of the dividend or benefit, as the case may be, received by the taxpayer by virtue of the acquisition by the taxpayer of the asset;

(b) where the asset was so acquired as such a benefit and the taxpayer has designated in the election a class of shares as described in this paragraph in respect of the asset, the amount of the benefit shall be deemed

(i) to have been received by the taxpayer as a dividend from the foreign affiliate in respect of such class of shares of the capital stock thereof as the taxpayer has designated in the election, and

(ii) not to be an amount required by subsection 15(1) to be included in computing the taxpayer's income;

(c) in computing the taxable income of the taxpayer for the taxation year in which the taxpayer acquired the asset, there may be deducted from the taxpayer's income for the year the amount, if any, by which the amount received by the taxpayer as a dividend by virtue of the acquisition by the taxpayer of the asset exceeds the total of amounts deductible in respect of the dividend under sections 91 and 113 in computing the taxpayer's income or taxable income, as the case may be, for the year;

(d) there shall be deducted in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of each share of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate that is a share of a class in respect of which an amount was received by the taxpayer as a dividend by virtue of the acquisition by the taxpayer of the asset, the quotient obtained by dividing the amount, if any, deducted by the taxpayer under paragraph (c) in respect of the dividend by the number of shares of that class owned by the taxpayer immediately before that amount was received by the taxpayer as a dividend;

(e) any capital loss of the taxpayer from the disposition, after that time when the asset was so acquired by the taxpayer, of a share of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate shall be deemed to be nil; and

(f) where the taxpayer has so elected in prescribed form and within prescribed time, subsection (2) applies as if the asset were an expropriation asset acquired by the taxpayer as compensation for foreign property taken by a particular issuer as described in subsection (1).

(5) Assets acquired from foreign affiliate of taxpayer as consideration for settlement, etc., of debt — Where a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada would, on the assumption that the foreign affiliate were resident in Canada and its only foreign affiliates were corporations that were foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, be entitled to make an election under subsection (1) in respect of assets acquired by it that would, on that assumption, be expropriation assets of the foreign affiliate, and all or any of those assets are subsequently acquired by the taxpayer from the foreign affiliate as consideration for the settlement or extinguishment of a capital property of the taxpayer that was a debt payable by the foreign affiliate to the taxpayer or any other obligation of the foreign affiliate to pay an amount to the taxpayer (which debt or other obligation is referred to in this subsection as the "obligation"), if the taxpayer has so elected, in prescribed form and within prescribed time, in respect of all of the assets so acquired by the taxpayer from the foreign affiliate, the following rules apply in respect of each such asset so acquired by the taxpayer,

(a) paragraph (4)(a) applies in respect of the asset as if subparagraph (4)(a)(iv) were read as follows:

"(iv) the taxpayer's proceeds of the disposition of the obligation settled or extinguished by virtue of the acquisition by the taxpayer of the asset;";

(b) where the taxpayer has designated in the taxpayer's election a class of shares as described in this paragraph in respect of the asset,

(i) the amount, if any, by which the cost to the taxpayer of the asset (computed having regard to paragraph (a) and paragraph (4)(a)) exceeds the amount of the obligation settled or extinguished by virtue of the acquisition by the taxpayer of the asset shall be deemed to have been received by the taxpayer as a dividend from the foreign affiliate in respect of such class of shares of the capital stock thereof as the taxpayer has designated in the election, and

(ii) the taxpayer's gain, if any, from the disposition of the obligation shall be deemed to be nil;

(c) the taxpayer's loss, if any, from the disposition of the obligation shall be deemed to be nil; and

(d) paragraphs (4)(c) to (f) apply in respect of the asset.

Forms: T2079: Election re: expropriation assets acquired as compensation for or a consideration for sale of foreign property taken by or sold to foreign issuer.

(6) Assets acquired from foreign affiliate of taxpayer on winding-up, etc. — Where a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada would, on the assumption that the foreign affiliate were resident in Canada and its only foreign affiliates were corporations that were foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, be entitled to make an election under subsection (1) in respect of assets acquired by it that would, on that assumption, be expropriation assets of the foreign affiliate, and all or any of those assets are subsequently acquired by the taxpayer from the foreign affiliate,

(a) on the winding-up, discontinuance or reorganization of the business of the foreign affiliate, or

(b) as consideration for the redemption, cancellation or acquisition by the foreign affiliate of shares of its capital stock,

if the taxpayer has so elected, in prescribed form and within prescribed time,

(c) in respect of all of the assets so acquired by the taxpayer from the foreign affiliate, subsection (1) applies in respect of each such asset, or

(d) in respect of all amounts received or to be received by the taxpayer as or on account of interest on all of the assets so acquired by the taxpayer from the foreign affiliate, subsection (2) applies in respect of each such asset, as if the assets were expropriation assets acquired by the taxpayer as consideration for the sale of foreign property that consisted of shares of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate owned by the taxpayer immediately before the assets were so acquired and that was sold to a particular issuer as described in subsection (1).

Regulations: 4500 (prescribed time).

Forms: T2079: Election re: expropriation assets acquired as compensation for or a consideration for sale of foreign property taken by or sold to foreign issuer.

(7) Definition of "adjusted principal amount" — In this section, "adjusted principal amount" to a taxpayer of an expropriation asset at any particular time means the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of the principal amount of the asset and, in respect of each interest amount received by the taxpayer on the asset before the particular time, the lesser of the tax referred to in subparagraph (2)(b)(i) in respect of that interest amount and the proportion determined under subparagraph (2)(b)(ii) in respect thereof,

exceeds

(b) the total of each amount received by the taxpayer before the particular time as an interest amount on the asset and each amount received by the taxpayer before the particular time as, on account or in lieu of payment of, or in satisfaction of, the principal amount of the asset.

(8) Currency in which adjusted principal amount to be computed or expressed — For the purposes of this section, the adjusted principal amount, at any particular time, of an expropriation asset or of any asset assumed for the purposes of this section to be an expropriation asset shall be computed in the currency in which the principal amount of the asset is, under the terms thereof, payable, except that for greater certainty, for the purposes of paragraph (2)(a), the adjusted principal amount at any particular time of such an asset is its adjusted principal amount at that time computed as provided in this subsection but expressed in Canadian currency.

Related Provisions: 261(5)(c), (f)(i) — Functional currency reporting.

(9) Election in respect of two or more expropriation assets acquired by taxpayer — For the purposes of subdivision c and subsection (2), and in applying subsections (7) and (8) for those purposes, where two or more expropriation assets that were

(a) issued by the government of a country other than Canada, or at the same time, or as compensation for, or consideration for the sale of, the same foreign property, have been acquired by a taxpayer and the taxpayer has so elected, in prescribed form and within prescribed time, in respect of all of the expropriation assets that were so issued or guaranteed by the government of that country and acquired by the taxpayer before the making of the election, all of those expropriation assets shall be considered to be a single expropriation asset that was issued or guaranteed by the government of that country and acquired by the taxpayer.

Technical Notes (July 2010) [s. 80.2]: Section 80.2 is a special rule that applies where a taxpayer pays an amount to another person as a reimbursement, contribution or allowance (collectively referred to herein as a "reimbursement") in respect of a Crown charge described in paragraph 12(1)(o) or 18(1)(m). If applicable, section 80.2 deems the taxpayer to have paid an amount described in paragraph 18(1)(m) and deems the other person (the "recipient") neither to have received nor to have become entitled to receive the reimbursement. In effect, section 80.2 provides for the transfer of non-deductible Crown charges from the recipient to the taxpayer. Normally, the taxpayer is entitled to a share of the production or the income from production from the property that is subject to the Crown charge. Therefore, although section 80.2 treats the taxpayer as having incurred a non-deductible Crown charge, the taxpayer would be entitled to a deduction under paragraph 20(1)(v.1) of the Act (resource allowance) calculated by reference to the taxpayer's income from the property.

Section 80.2 operates to deem the taxpayer making the reimbursement to have paid an amount described in paragraph 18(1)(m) only to the extent that the reimbursed Crown charge was either included in the recipient's income or was denied as a deduction in computing the recipient's income. With the phasing out of the income inclusion in paragraph 12(1)(o) and the prohibition against the deduction of Crown charges in paragraph 18(1)(m), section 80.2 may no longer apply to the entire amount of a reimbursement. In addition, section 80.2 does not explicitly preclude the recipient from taking a deduction (or reducing an income inclusion) in respect of a reimbursed Crown charge. As well, since section 80.2 does not deem the taxpayer to have made the reimbursement at the time the obligation to pay the Crown charge arose, a taxpayer may seek to increase the percentage of the reimbursement that is not subject to paragraph 18(1)(m) by delaying the reimbursement. For these reasons, the total amount deductible in computing the income of the taxpayer and the recipient may, in certain circumstances, exceed the amount that was intended to be deductible.

Accordingly, section 80.2 is amended:

(a) to eliminate any excess deductions that may be available as a result of a reimbursement of a Crown charge;

(b) to preclude a taxpayer who makes a reimbursement of a Crown charge from increasing the amount deductible by delaying the time of the reimbursement; and

(c) to ensure that a taxpayer who makes a reimbursement of a Crown charge is deemed to have paid an amount described in paragraph 18(1)(m) only to the extent that the reimbursed Crown charge can reasonably be considered to relate to the taxpayer's share of the production, or the income from production, from the property to which the Crown charge relates.

New section 80.2 applies to reimbursements made after 2001, except that, the rule described in paragraph (c) above, applies only to reimbursements made on or after September 17, 2004.

The ability to claim excess deductions in respect of reimbursed Crown charges is eliminated by treating the eligible portion of the reimbursement (in most cases, the full amount of the reimbursement) as a payment described in paragraph 18(1)(m) (subsection 80.2(2)) and by reversing the benefit of any deduction in respect of a reimbursed Crown charge claimed by the recipient (subsection 80.2(6)). The eligible portion of the reimbursement is referred to in new section 80.2 as the "eligible portion of the specified amount" (see discussion below under subsections 80.2(11) and (12)). The amount of a reimbursement that exceeds the eligible portion of the specified amount is included in the income of the recipient (subsection 80.2(8)) and, subject to paragraphs 18(1)(a) and (b), is deductible in computing the income of the taxpayer (subsection 80.2(9)). In addition, new subsection 80.2(3) precludes a taxpayer from increasing the deductible portion of a reimbursement by delaying the time of the reimbursement. It does this by ensuring that the amount deductible is determined by reference to the time that the reimbursed Crown charge was imposed (i.e., became payable to, or receivable by, the Crown or an emanation of the Crown). It should be noted that new subsection 80.2(3) does not apply to a reimbursement paid to a partnership if the reimbursement meets the conditions described in new subsection 80.2(4) of the Act. These conditions, which are set out in paragraphs 80.2(4)(a) to (d), are discussed in the commentary to new subsection 80.2(4).

Dept. of Finance news release 2004-053, Sept. 17, 2004: Minister of Finance Proposes Amendments to Royalty Reimbursement Rule

Minister of Finance Ralph Goodale today announced his intention to propose amendments to the Income Tax Act that would prevent corporations and other taxpayers from obtaining inappropriate tax deductions in respect of reimbursed resource-related Crown charges such as royalties.

The 2003 budget announced improvements to the tax structure applying to Canada's resource sector. These improvements, which were enacted in November 2003, included a deduction for Crown charges that is to be phased in during the period 2003 to 2007. Previously, Crown charges such as royalties could not be deducted in computing income for tax purposes.

A special reimbursement rule applies in circumstances where one taxpayer reimburses another taxpayer for a Crown charge incurred by that other taxpayer. This reimbursement rule, which was designed to limit the deductibility of Crown charge reimbursements, may not operate as intended during the phase-in period.

Accordingly, amendments to the Income Tax Act are proposed to ensure that the reimbursement rule imposes the appropriate limits on the deductibility of reimbursement payments and provides for the appropriate tax treatment to the recipients of reimbursements. The attached backgrounder provides a detailed description of the proposed amendments.

For further information: Andrée Houde, Public Affairs and Operations Division, (613) 996-8080; Pat Breton, Press Secretary, Office of the Minister of Finance, (613) 996-7861.

Backgrounder

In November 2003, a new regime for taxing resource income received Royal Assent. This regime was outlined in the Department of Finance technical paper in March 2003 and was subject to extensive consultations with the resource sector. As described in that paper, this new regime includes the following three key features, which are being phased in over a five-year period (beginning in taxation years that end after 2002):

- a reduction of the federal corporate tax rate on income earned from resource activities from 28% to 21%;
- elimination of the resource allowance; and
- a deduction for Crown charges, such as royalties and mining taxes.

Consequential to the enactment of the new regime, a long-standing rule in section 80.2 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") dealing with reimbursements, contributions or allowances (collectively referred to herein as "reimbursements") in respect of Crown charges was repealed, effective for taxation years beginning after 2006. Prior to the introduction of the new regime, a taxpayer who reimbursed a Crown charge incurred by another person (the "recipient") was considered to have made a payment described in paragraph 18(1)(m) of the Act, which payment was not deductible in computing the taxpayer's income. Thus, neither the taxpayer nor the recipient was entitled to deduct an amount in respect of the Crown charge. The purpose of this reimbursement rule was to put the taxpayer making the reimbursement in the same position as the recipient in respect of the reimbursed Crown charge.

As a result of the phase-in of the deductibility of Crown charges, the reimbursement rule no longer operates as intended and may result in deductions during the phase-in period in excess of those that were intended.

Accordingly, it is proposed that section 80.2 be amended, applicable to reimbursements made after 2001, to provide as follows:

(a) that the full amount of a reimbursement be deemed to be a payment described in paragraph 18(1)(m) of the Act;

(b) that the income of the recipient be adjusted to offset any reduction in income that relates to the reimbursed Crown charge; and

(c) that the percentage of a reimbursement that is deductible in computing the income of the taxpayer making the reimbursement be determined by reference to the percentage that would have applied if the taxpayer had made the reimbursement at the time the Crown charge became payable or receivable.

These proposed amendments are intended to ensure that only the taxpayer making the reimbursement is entitled to a deduction in respect of the reimbursed Crown charge and that, subject to the exception described below, the deduction available to the taxpayer be limited to the amount that would have been available to the taxpayer at the time the Crown charge became payable or receivable.

It is proposed that the requirement to determine the deductibility of a reimbursement by reference to the time the Crown charge became payable or receivable generally not apply to a reimbursement by a taxpayer of actual Crown charges incurred by a partnership during a particular fiscal period if certain conditions are met. These conditions include a requirement that the taxpayer be a member of the partnership at the end of a particular fiscal period of the partnership and that the reimbursement be made in the taxation year of the taxpayer in which the fiscal period of the partnership ends.

In circumstances where the taxpayer or the recipient is required to amend a previously filed tax return, it is proposed that no penalties or interest apply to any additional tax payable as a result of the application of these rules if the tax is paid within two months of September 17, 2004.

For reimbursements made on or after September 17, 2004, it is proposed that:

- The amount of a reimbursement that exceeds the eligible portion of the reimbursement not be subject to the rules described in (a) to (c) above. The eligible portion of a reimbursement is the amount that can reasonably be considered to be the taxpayer's share of the Crown charges that apply to a particular property determined by reference to the taxpayer's share of the production or net income from production from the property. In applying this rule, the eligible portion of a reimbursement of a tax on freehold mineral rights would be deemed to be equal to the amount of the reimbursement. The eligible portion of a reimbursement may be deemed to be equal to the amount of the reimbursement in other appropriate circumstances.
- The amount of a reimbursement that exceeds the eligible portion of the reimbursement be included in computing the income of the recipient and, subject to paragraphs 18(1)(a) and (b) of the Act, generally be deductible in computing the income of the taxpayer.

These proposed amendments are intended to ensure that certain taxpayers or partnerships do not enter into reimbursement arrangements to artificially increase the amount that would otherwise be deductible in respect of a Crown charge.

80.2 [Resource royalty reimbursement] — (1) Application — Subsections (2) to (13) apply if

(a) in a taxation year, a taxpayer, under the terms of a contract, pays to a person (referred to in this section as the "recipient") an amount (referred to in this section as the "specified amount") that may reasonably be considered to be received by the recipient as a reimbursement of, or a contribution or an allowance in respect of, an amount (referred to in this section as the "original amount")

(i) that was described by paragraph 18(1)(m) and was paid or payable by the recipient, or

(ii) that was, in respect of the recipient, an amount described by paragraph 12(1)(o);

(b) the original amount is paid or became payable or receivable in a taxation year or fiscal period of the recipient that begins before 2007; and

(c) the taxpayer is resident in Canada or carries on business in Canada when the specified amount is paid.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 80.2(1) provides that subsections 80.2(2) to (13) apply if a taxpayer (either resident in Canada or carrying on business in Canada) pays an amount, under the terms of a contract, that may reasonably be considered to have been received by the recipient as a reimbursement in respect of a Crown charge described by paragraph 12(1)(o) or 18(1)(m). The Crown charge is referred to in new section 80.2 as the "original amount." By referring to an original amount "described" by paragraphs 12(1)(o) or 18(1)(m) (and not the amount either included in income or denied as a deduction under these provisions), subsection 80.2(1) ensures that section 80.2 applies to the full amount of the reimbursement. The full amount of the reimbursement is referred to in new section 80.2 as the "specified amount."

New paragraph 80.2(1)(b) provides that the reimbursed Crown charge must be paid or payable by the recipient or receivable by a person described in paragraph 12(1)(o) in a taxation year or fiscal period of the recipient that begins before 2007. As a result, section 80.2 will only apply to a reimbursement if the recipient is subject to restrictions on the deductibility of the reimbursed Crown charge (i.e., the Crown charge is described in paragraph 18(1)(m)) or is required to include some portion of the Crown charge in income (i.e., the Crown charge is described in paragraph 12(1)(o)).

Related Provisions: 53(1)(e)(iv.1) — Addition to ACB of partnership interest for specified amount paid by partner to partnership.

(2) Rules relating to time of payment — If the specified amount is paid in a taxation year of the taxpayer that begins before 2008, the eligible portion of the specified amount, referred to in subsection (11), is deemed to be a payment described by paragraph 18(1)(m). If, however, the specified amount is paid in a taxation year of the taxpayer that begins after 2007, the specified amount is deemed, for the purpose of applying this section to the taxpayer, to be nil.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 80.2(2) provides that if the specified amount is paid in a taxation year of the taxpayer that begins before 2008, the eligible portion of the specified amount is deemed to be an amount described by paragraph 18(1)(m). It also provides that, if the specified amount is paid in a taxation year of the taxpayer that begins after 2007, the specified amount is deemed, for the purpose of applying section 80.2 to the taxpayer, to be nil.

For payments made before September 17, 2004, the eligible portion of the specified amount is equal to the specified amount. For reimbursements made on or after September 17, 2004, the eligible portion of the specified amount may be less than the specified amount. The rules for determining the eligible portion of the specified amount are described in the commentary to subsections 80.2(11) and (12).

To accommodate the payment of a reimbursement in a taxation year of the taxpayer that begins after 2006 and before 2008 (the eligible portion of which is deemed to be described by paragraph 18(1)(m)), paragraph 18(1)(m), which was originally repealed effective for taxation years that begin after 2006, will be repealed for taxation years that begin after 2007. If, however, a reimbursement described in subsection 80.2(1) is delayed to a taxation year of the taxpayer that begins after 2007, the specified amount is deemed, for the purpose of applying section 80.2 to the taxpayer, to be nil and no deduction will be available to the taxpayer in respect of the reimbursement.

(3) Applying para. 18(1)(m) — For the purpose of applying paragraph 18(1)(m) for the taxpayer's taxation year in which the specified amount was paid, the amount to which that paragraph applies is to be determined for that taxation year

(a) if the taxpayer was in existence at the time the original amount became receivable by a person referred to in subparagraph 12(1)(o)(i) or became payable to a person referred to in subparagraph 18(1)(m)(i), as if the specified amount were paid by the taxpayer at that time; and

(b) in any other case, as if

(i) the taxpayer were in existence and had a calendar taxation year at the time the original amount became receivable by a person referred to in subparagraph 12(1)(o)(i) or became payable to a person referred to in subparagraph 18(1)(m)(i), and

(ii) the specified amount were paid by the taxpayer at that time.

Technical Notes (July 2010) To ensure that the taxpayer does not benefit (i.e., increase the percentage of the reimbursement that is deductible in computing income) by delaying the reimbursement of a Crown charge, new subsection 80.2(3) provides that paragraph 18(1)(m) applies as if the reimbursement were made at the time the Crown charge was imposed (i.e., became payable or receivable). If the taxpayer did not exist at the time the Crown charge was imposed (e.g., a new corporation created on an amalgamation), the percentage of the reimbursement that is subject to paragraph 18(1)(m) is computed as if the taxpayer were in existence at that time and had a calendar year-end. In either case, the percentage of the reimbursement that is subject to paragraph 18(1)(m) and, accordingly, the amount that is not deductible in the taxation year in which the reimbursement is paid, is determined by reference to the percentages described in the transitional rules to the repeal of paragraph 18(1)(m), as if the taxpayer paid the reimbursement at the time the reimbursed Crown charge was imposed.

Related Provisions — 80.2(4) — Exception for certain partnership reimbursements.

(4) Exception for certain partnership reimbursements — Subsection (3) does not apply to a specified amount paid by a taxpayer if

(a) the recipient is a partnership;

(b) the original amount became receivable by a person referred to in subparagraph 12(1)(o)(i) or became payable to a person referred to in subparagraph 18(1)(m)(i), in a particular fiscal period of the partnership;

(c) the taxpayer is a member of the partnership at the end of the particular fiscal period; and

(d) the taxpayer paid the specified amount before the end of the taxation year of the taxpayer in which that particular fiscal period ends.

Technical Notes (July 2010) New subsection 80.2(4) provides that subsection 80.2(3) does not apply to certain partnership reimbursements if the conditions, set out in new paragraphs 80.2(4)(a) to (d), are met. Those conditions require the taxpayer to be a member of the partnership at the end of the particular fiscal period in which the Crown charge became payable or receivable and require the reimbursement to be paid before the end of the taxation year of the taxpayer in which the particular fiscal period of the partnership ends. The purpose of new subsection 80.2(4) is to permit a member of a partnership to determine the amount deductible in respect of a reimbursed Crown charge by reference to the same taxation year as the profit from the partnership's production for which the reimbursed Crown charge was imposed) is allocated to the member.

(5) Specified amount deemed to be paid at end of taxation year — A specified amount paid by the taxpayer to a partnership is deemed to have been paid on the last day of a particular taxation year of the taxpayer, and not at the time it was paid, if

(a) the taxpayer paid an amount to the partnership in the particular taxation year (referred to in this subsection as the "initial payment");

(b) the initial payment was paid before September 17, 2004;

(c) the initial payment is an amount to which subsection (3) did not apply because of subsection (4);

(d) the taxpayer's share of the original amount in respect of the initial payment is greater than the initial payment;

(e) the specified amount is equal to or less than the difference between the taxpayer's share of the original amount in respect of the initial payment and the initial payment;

(f) the taxpayer elects in the taxpayer's return of income for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the time at which the specified amount would, if this Act were read without reference to this subsection, have been paid, to have this subsection apply to the specified amount; and

(g) the specified amount is paid before 2006.

Technical Notes (July 2010) New subsection 80.2(5) is a special rule that applies to a taxpayer that made a reimbursement payment to a partnership before September 17, 2004 ("initial reimbursement"). If the conditions set out in new subsection 80.2(5) are met, the taxpayer may make a supplemental reimbursement ("top-up reimbursement") that is deemed to have been paid at the end of the taxation year in which the initial reimbursement was made. New subsection 80.2(5) only applies if the taxpayer's share of the original amount in respect of the initial reimbursement is greater than the initial reimbursement (i.e., the taxpayer reimbursed the partnership for less than the taxpayer's share of the Crown charges). In addition, the top-up reimbursement must be paid before 2006 and cannot exceed the difference between the taxpayer's share of the original amount in respect of the initial reimbursement and the initial reimbursement. The rules for determining a taxpayer's share of the original amount in respect of the initial reimbursement are set out in new subsection 80.2(12).

The purpose of new subsection 80.2(5) is to permit a taxpayer to make a retroactive top-up reimbursement if the initial reimbursement was less than the taxpayer's share of the Crown charges. This provision recognizes that: 1) a taxpayer may have made a partial reimbursement prior to September 17, 2004 (the date of the press release announcing the amendments to section 80.2) in the expectation of obtaining a deduction in respect of reimbursed Crown charges that was proportionate to the reduction in the taxpayer's resource allowance; and 2) the deduction anticipated by the taxpayer may have been diminished by new section 80.2. Thus, new subsection 80.2(5) affords the taxpayer the opportunity to correct for unanticipated tax consequences relating to the application of new section 80.2 to the initial reimbursement.

(6) Inclusion in recipient's income — The recipient shall include in computing the recipient's income for the taxation year or fiscal period in which the original amount was paid or became payable or receivable, the amount, if any, by which the eligible portion of the specified amount exceeds the portion of the original amount that was included in computing the income of the recipient for the taxation year or fiscal period because of paragraph 12(1)(o) or that was not deductible in computing the income of the recipient for the taxation year or fiscal period because of paragraph 18(1)(m).

Technical Notes (July 2010) New subsection 80.2(6) requires the recipient to include in income, for the taxation year or fiscal period in which the original amount was paid or became payable or receivable, the amount by which the eligible portion of the specified amount exceeds the portion of the original amount that was included in the income of the recipient (if the reimbursement relates to a paragraph 12(1)(o) amount) or was not allowed as a deduction (if the reimbursement relates to a paragraph 18(1)(m) amount). The purpose of this provision is to offset any reduction in income available to the recipient in respect of a reimbursed Crown charge.

Related Provisions — 80.2(7) — Interpretation; 80.2(8) — Alternative inclusion; 80.2(11) — Eligible portion.

(7) Interpretation — portion of the original amount — For the purpose of subsection (6), the portion of the original amount that was included in computing the income of the recipient or that was not deductible in computing the income of the recipient is the amount that would be included in computing the income of the recipient under paragraph 12(1)(o) or that would not be deductible in computing the income of the recipient under paragraph 18(1)(m), if the original amount were equal to the eligible portion of the specified amount.

Technical Notes (July 2010) New subsection 80.2(7) provides that, in determining the amount included in the income of the recipient under subsection 80.2(6), the portion of the original amount that was included in computing the income of the recipient or that was not deductible in computing the income of the recipient is determined as if the original amount were equal to the eligible portion of the specified amount. For example, assume that, in its taxation year ending on December 31, 2003, a recipient was entitled to a deduction of $500 in respect of $5,000 of Crown charges described in paragraph 18(1)(m) (10% of $5,000), and that one half of the Crown charges ($2,500) were reimbursed in that year. In this case, the recipient would be required to include $250 in its income (10% of $2,500 — the amount deductible by the recipient if the original amount were equal to the eligible portion of the specified amount). As a further example, assume that the recipient receives a reimbursement of $3,000 after September 17, 2004 in respect of $5,000 of Crown charges incurred in its taxation year ending December 31, 2004. It is further determined that the eligible portion of the specified amount is $2,000. In this case, the recipient would be required to include $500 in its income under this provision (25% of $2,000 — the amount deductible by the recipient if the original amount were equal to the eligible portion of the specified amount). The portion of the reimbursement that exceeds the eligible portion of the specified amount ($1,000) would be included in the recipient's 2004 income under new subsection 80.2(8).

Related Provisions: 80.2(11) — Eligible portion.

(8) Inclusion in recipient's income — The recipient shall include, in computing the recipient's income for its taxation year or fiscal period in which the original amount was paid or became payable or receivable, the amount, if any, by which the specified amount exceeds the eligible portion of the specified amount.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 80.2(8) requires the recipient to include, in computing the recipient's income for its taxation year or fiscal period in which the original amount was paid or became payable or receivable, the amount, if any, by which the specified amount exceeds the eligible portion of the specified amount. The amount included in the income of the recipient under this subsection is equal to the amount that may be deductible by the taxpayer under subsection 80.2(9).

Related Provisions: 80.2(6) — Alternative inclusion; 80.2(11) — Eligible portion.

(9) Deduction by taxpayer — Subject to paragraphs 18(1)(a) and (b), the taxpayer may deduct in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxpayer's taxation year in which the specified amount was paid, the amount, if any, by which the specified amount exceeds the eligible portion of the specified amount.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 80.2(9) provides that the taxpayer may deduct, subject to paragraphs 18(1)(a) and (b), in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxpayer's taxation year in which the specified amount was paid, the amount, if any, by which the specified amount exceeds the eligible portion of the specified amount. The amount described in this subsection is that portion of a reimbursement that is not treated as a payment described by paragraph 18(1)(m).

Related Provisions: 80.2(11) — Eligible portion.

(10) Specified amount deemed not to be payable or receivable — Except for the purposes of this section and subparagraph 53(1)(e)(iv.1),

(a) the taxpayer is deemed not to have paid, and not to have been obligated to pay, the specified amount; and

(b) the recipient is deemed not to have received, and not to have been entitled to receive, the specified amount.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New paragraphs 80.2(10)(a) and (b), provide that, except for the purposes of section 80.2 and subparagraph 53(1)(e)(iv.1), the taxpayer is deemed not to have paid and not to have been obligated to pay, the specified amount and the recipient is deemed not to have received and not to have been entitled to receive, the specified amount. This subsection ensures that the tax implications of payments described in subsection 80.2(1) are dealt with entirely within section 80.2.

(11) Eligible portion of a specified amount — The eligible portion of a specified amount is

(a) an amount equal to the specified amount if

(i) the specified amount was paid before September 17, 2004,

(ii) the original amount is a tax imposed under a provincial law on the production of

(A) petroleum, natural gas or related hydrocarbons from a natural accumulation of petroleum or natural gas (other than a mineral resource) located in Canada, or from an oil or gas well located in Canada if the petroleum, natural gas or related hydrocarbons are not, before extraction, owned by the Crown in right of Canada or a province, or

(B) metals, minerals or coal from a mineral resource located in Canada if the metals, minerals or coal are not, before extraction, owned by the Crown in right of Canada or a province,

(iii) the specified amount does not exceed the taxpayer's share of the original amount, or

(iv) the original amount is a prescribed amount; and

(b) the taxpayer's share of the original amount, in any other case.

Technical Notes (July 2010): The amount of a reimbursement that is deemed by new subsection 80.2(2) of the Act to be a payment described by paragraph 18(1)(m) is the "eligible portion of the specified amount." The eligible portion of the specified amount is defined in paragraph 80.2(11)(b), subject to certain exceptions enumerated in paragraph 80.2(11)(a), as the taxpayer's share of the original amount. The taxpayer's share of the original amount is described in new subsection 80.2(12).

Paragraph 80.2(11)(a) provides that the eligible portion of the specified amount is equal to the specified amount if

(a) the specified amount was paid before September 17, 2004;

(b) the original amount is a tax imposed under a law of a province on freehold minerals; or

(c) the specified amount does not exceed the taxpayer's share the original amount.

The specified amount of a reimbursement, in future, may also be prescribed by regulation, to be equal to the eligible portion of the specified amount.

Related Provisions: 80.2(12) — Taxpayer's share.

(12) Taxpayer's share of original amount — A taxpayer's share of an original amount in respect of a specified amount paid by the taxpayer to a recipient in respect of a property is the amount that may reasonably be considered to be the taxpayer's share of the total of all amounts described in paragraph 12(1)(o) or 18(1)(m) in respect of the property, which share may not exceed the total of

(a) that proportion of the total of all amounts described in paragraph 12(1)(o) or 18(1)(m) in respect of the property that the taxpayer's share of production from the property payable to the taxpayer as a royalty, which royalty is computed without reference to the costs of exploration or production, is of the total production from the property, and

(b) that proportion of the total of all amounts described in paragraph 12(1)(o) or 18(1)(m) in respect of the property (other than those amounts which the recipient has received or is entitled to receive as a reimbursement, contribution or allowance in respect of a royalty described in paragraph (a)) that the taxpayer's share of the income from the property is of the total income from the property.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 80.2(12) provides that the taxpayer's share of the original amount is the amount that may reasonably be considered to be the taxpayer's share of the Crown charges in respect of a particular property. More specifically, this subsection provides that the taxpayer's share of the Crown charges may not exceed the total of the amounts described in paragraphs 80.2(12)(a) and (b).

New paragraph 80.2(12)(a) provides that the taxpayer's share of the Crown charges in respect of a property upon which the taxpayer has an overriding royalty (a royalty calculated without reference to the cost of exploration or production) is the proportion of those Crown charges that is equal to the taxpayer's proportionate share of the production from the property.

New paragraph 80.2(12)(b) provides that the taxpayer's share of the Crown charges in respect of a property (excluding any Crown charges that were reimbursed under the terms of an overriding royalty) is equal to the taxpayer's share of the income from the property.

The requirement that the taxpayer be entitled to a share of the production, or the income, from the property to which the reimbursed Crown charge relates is intended to ensure that a reimbursement paid by a taxpayer will be deemed to be an amount described by paragraph 18(1)(m) only to the extent that the taxpayer is entitled to an appropriate share of the production, or the income, from the property. This, in turn, is intended to ensure that section 80.2 is not used to separate the Crown charges (through a reimbursement) from the resource profits generated by a particular property for the purpose of increasing the deduction that may be available in respect of the Crown charges.

(13) Reduction in original amount for Part XII of the Regulations — For the purpose of applying Part XII of the Income Tax Regulations, an original amount in respect of which a specified amount is received is deemed, for the taxation year in which the original amount was paid or became payable or receivable, not to include an amount equal to the eligible portion of the specified amount.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 80.2(13) clarifies that, in computing the resource profits under Part XII of the Regulations, the Crown charges that were paid or became payable by the recipient, or that were receivable in respect of the recipient, are reduced by the eligible portion of the specified amount. For example, if a recipient had an amount described in paragraph 12(1)(o) equal to $1,000 and $700 of this amount was reimbursed (and the $700 did not exceed the eligible portion of the specified amount) in circumstances described in subsection 80.2(1), the recipient would be treated, for the purpose of computing the recipient's resource profits, as having a paragraph 12(1)(o) amount equal to $300.

Payment of Tax

In circumstances where a taxpayer or recipient is required to pay any income tax that the taxpayer or recipient would not be so liable but for the amendments to section 80.2, such taxes will be deemed to have been paid on the balance-due day for the relevant year if the balance-due day was before September 17, 2004 and the tax is paid to the Receiver General for Canada before March 2005.

Examples

Assume that each of the recipient and the taxpayer is a resident taxable Canadian corporation and that each has a calendar taxation year. The recipient acquires a lease on Crown lands, which gives it the right to explore for and produce oil and natural gas from a particular property. Under the terms of the lease, the recipient is subject to a provincial Crown royalty based on the production from the property. The recipient enters into a contract with the taxpayer under which it sells a royalty interest on the property to the taxpayer equal to 50% of the production from the property free of all costs of development and operation. During each of 2003, 2004 and 2005, the production from the property is $2.4 million, the royalty payable to the taxpayer is $1.2 million and the Crown royalty on the production from the property is $600,000.

Example 1

Assume that the Crown royalty is described in paragraph 18(1)(m) and that, under the terms of the contract, the taxpayer agreed to reimburse the recipient for the portion of the Crown royalty relating to its share of production ($300,000). During 2003, the taxpayer reimburses the recipient on a monthly basis at the same time that the Crown royalty became payable to the provincial government. Although the recipient receives the reimbursement, it claims a deduction in respect of the reimbursed Crown royalty equal to $30,000. In this case, new section 80.2 would apply as follows:

	Recipient (2003)	Taxpayer (2003)
80.2(2)		*($30,000)
80.2(6)	$30,000
Penalty/Interest	*Nil	*Nil

Notes:

* Note that if the taxpayer had claimed a deduction that exceeded $30,000, the "excess" deduction would be disallowed.

 Assuming that any tax resulting from the application of proposed section 80.2 is paid before March 2005.

The taxpayer is deemed by subsection 80.2(2) to have paid an amount under paragraph 18(1)(m) equal to the specified amount (the amount of the reimbursement), 90% of which is denied as a deduction in computing the taxpayer's income by paragraph 18(1)(m). In addition, the deduction taken by the recipient in respect of the reimbursed Crown royalty is reversed by subsection 80.2(6). Pursuant to subsection 80.2(13), the recipient would not include in computing its resource profits under Part XII of the Regulations any portion of the Crown royalty that was reimbursed by the taxpayer. Accordingly, for the purpose of computing its resource profits, the recipient would be treated as having a Crown royalty equal to $300,000.

Assume that the Crown royalty is described by paragraph 12(1)(o) and that, under the terms of the contract, the taxpayer reimburses the recipient on January 1, 2004 for its share of the Crown royalty that became receivable in 2003. Although the recipient is entitled to the reimbursement, it includes, under paragraph 12(1)(o), only $270,000 in its income in respect of the reimbursed Crown royalties (90% of $300,000). In this case, new section 80.2 would apply as follows:

	Recipient (2003)	Taxpayer (2004)
80.2(2)/(3)		*($30,000)
80.2(6)	$30,000
Penalty/Interest	*Nil

Notes:

* (10% of $300,000). Note that if the taxpayer had claimed a total deduction that exceeded $30,000, the "excess" deduction would be disallowed.

 Assuming that any tax resulting from the application of proposed section 80.2 is paid before March 2005.

As in Example 1, the recipient has a $30,000 income inclusion under new subsection 80.2(6). The result is that the total amount included in the income of the recipient in 2003 under paragraph 12(1)(o) and subsection 80.2(6) in respect of the reimbursed Crown royalty is equal to $300,000. In addition, new subsections 80.2(2) and (3) ensure that the entire amount of the reimbursement is an amount described in paragraph 18(1)(m) and that the percentage of the reimbursement that is not deductible by the taxpayer is determined as if the reimbursement were paid at the time the Crown royalty became receivable (i.e., 2003 percentages apply). Pursuant to subsection 80.2(13), the recipient would not include in computing its resource profits under Part XII of the Regulations any portion of the Crown royalty that was reimbursed by the taxpayer. Accordingly, for the purpose of computing its resource profits, the recipient would be treated as having a Crown royalty equal to $300,000.

Example 3

Assume that, under the terms of the contract, the taxpayer reimburses the recipient $400,000 on January 31, 2005 in respect of Crown royalties described in paragraph 12(1)(o), all of which became receivable by the province during 2004. In this situation, the reimbursement exceeds the eligible portion of the specified amount by $100,000. In computing its income for 2004, the recipient includes $300,000 (75% of $400,000) in respect of the reimbursed Crown royalty. Assuming that a deduction by the taxpayer for any portion of the reimbursement would not be denied by either paragraph 18(1)(a) or (b), new section 80.2 would apply as follows:

	Recipient (2004)	Taxpayer (2005)
80.2(2)/(3)		*($75,000)
80.2(6)	*$75,000
80.2(8)	$100,000
80.2(9)		($100,000)

Notes:

* The deduction for the eligible portion of the specified amount is based on the percentage that applies in the taxpayer's 2004 taxation year (25% of $300,000).

 Subsection 80.2(6) requires the recipient to include in its income, the amount by which the eligible portion of the specified amount ($300,000) exceeds the portion of the original amount that was included in the recipient's income ($225,000 or 75% of $300,000).

 Subsection 80.2(8) requires the recipient to include in income, in the taxation year in which the Crown royalty became receivable, an amount equal to the difference between the specified amount ($400,000) and the eligible portion of the specified amount ($300,000).

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 39, will add s. 80.2, applicable in respect of specified amounts paid after 2001. Where a person is liable to an amount of tax under Part I of the Act for a taxation year that exceeds the amount to which the person would be liable if s. 80.2 applied as it read on December 31, 2001, the person is deemed, for the purpose of determining any interest or penalty payable by that person, to have paid the excess on that person's balance-due date [sic — should be "balance-due day" — ed.], if

(a) the person's balance-due date [sic — should be "balance-due day" — ed.] for the taxation year was before September 17, 2004; and

(b) the excess was paid to the Receiver General before March 2005.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, all assessments, determinations, and redeterminations may be made as necessary to give effect to this amendment.

History: S. 80.2 repealed by 2003, c. 28, s. 9, applicable to taxation years that begin after 2006. S. 80.2 formerly read:

80.2 Reimbursement by taxpayer [resource royalties] — Where

(a) a taxpayer, under the terms of a contract, pays to another person an amount (in this subsection[12] referred to as the "specified payment") that may reasonably be considered to have been received by the other person as a reimbursement, contribution or allowance in respect of an amount (referred to in paragraph (b) as the "particular amount") paid or payable by the other person,

[12] Sic. Should read "section" — ed.

(b) the particular amount is included in the income of the other person or is denied as a deduction in computing the income of the other person by reason of paragraph 12(1)(o) or 18(1)(m), as the case may be, and

(c) the taxpayer was resident in Canada or carrying on business in Canada at the time the specified payment was made by the taxpayer, the following rules apply for the purposes of this Act, other than this section:

(d) the taxpayer shall be deemed neither to have made nor to have become obligated to make the specified payment to the other person but to have paid an amount described in paragraph 18(1)(m) equal to the amount of the specified payment, and

(e) the other person shall be deemed neither to have received nor to have become entitled to receive the specified payment from the taxpayer.

80.3 [Income deferrals — livestock] — (1) Definitions — In this section,

"breeding animals" means

(a) horses that are over 12 months of age and are kept for breeding in the commercial production of pregnant mares' urine, and

(b) deer, elk and other similar grazing ungulates, bovine cattle, bison, goats and sheep that are over 12 months of age and are kept for breeding;

History: Para. (b) of the definition "breeding animals" in subsec. 80.3(1) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), s. 31, to add "deer, elk and other similar grazing ungulates", applicable to fiscal periods and taxation years ending after 1990.

"breeding herd" of a taxpayer at any time means the number determined by the formula

$$A - (B - C)$$

where

A is the total number of the taxpayer's breeding animals held in the course of carrying on a farming business at that time,

B is the total number of the taxpayer's breeding animals held in the business at that time that are female bovine cattle that have not given birth to calves, and

C is the lesser of the number determined as the value of B and one-half the total number of the taxpayer's breeding animals held in the business at that time that are female bovine cattle that have given birth to calves.

(2) Income deferral from the destruction of livestock — Where a particular amount in respect of the forced destruction of livestock under statutory authority in a taxation year of a taxpayer is included in computing the income of the taxpayer for the year from a farming business, there may be deducted in computing that income such amount as the taxpayer claims not exceeding the particular amount.

Related Provisions: 28(1)(g) — Deduction for farming business using cash method; 80.3(3) — Inclusion of deferred amount; 80.3(6) — Where subsecs. (2) and (4) not to apply.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-425: Miscellaneous farm income.

(3) Inclusion of deferred amount — The amount deducted under subsection (2) in computing the income of a taxpayer from a farming business for a taxation year shall be deemed to be income of the taxpayer from the business for the taxpayer's immediately following taxation year.

Related Provisions: 28(1)(d) — Inclusion in farming income when using cash method; 87(2)(tt) — Amalgamations — deferral of amounts received; 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up — rules applicable.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-425: Miscellaneous farm income.

(4) Income deferral for regions of drought, flood or excessive moisture — If in a taxation year a taxpayer carries on a farming business in a region that is at any time in the year a prescribed drought region or a prescribed region of flood or excessive moisture and the taxpayer's breeding herd at the end of the year in respect of the business does not exceed 85% of the taxpayer's breeding herd at the beginning of the year in respect of the business, there may be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income from the business for the year the amount that the taxpayer claims, not exceeding the amount, if any, determined by the formula

where

A is the amount by which

(a) the total of all amounts included in computing the taxpayer's income for the year from the business in respect of the sale of breeding animals in the year

exceeds

(b) the total of all amounts deducted under paragraph 20(1)(n) in computing the taxpayer's income from the business for the year in respect of an amount referred to in paragraph (a) of this description;

B is the total of all amounts deducted in computing the taxpayer's income from the business for the year in respect of the acquisition of breeding animals; and

C is

(a) 30% where the taxpayer's breeding herd at the end of the year in respect of the business exceeds 70% of the taxpayer's breeding herd at the beginning of the year in respect of the business, and

(b) 90% where the taxpayer's breeding herd at the end of the year in respect of the business does not exceed 70% of the taxpayer's breeding herd at the beginning of the year in respect of the business.

Related Provisions: 28(1)(g) — Deduction for farming business using cash method; 80.3(5) — Inclusion of deferred amount; 80.3(6) — Where subsecs. (2) and (4) not to apply; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: Opening words of subsec. 80.3(4) amended by 2009, c. 31, subsec. 2(1), applicable to 2008 et seq. They formerly read:

(4) Income deferral for sales in prescribed drought region — Where in a taxation year a taxpayer carries on a farming business in a region that is a prescribed drought region at any time in the year and the taxpayer's breeding herd at the end of the year in respect of the business does not exceed 85% of the taxpayer's breeding herd at the beginning of the year in respect of the business, there may be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income from the business for the year such amount as the taxpayer claims, not exceeding the amount, if any, determined by the formula

(5) Inclusion of deferred amount — The amount deducted under subsection (4) in computing the income of a taxpayer for a particular taxation year from a farming business carried on in a region prescribed under that subsection may, to the extent that the taxpayer so elects, be included in computing the taxpayer's income from the business for a taxation year ending after the particular taxation year, and is, except to the extent that the amount has been included under this subsection in computing the taxpayer's income from the business for a preceding taxation year after the particular year, deemed to be income of the taxpayer from the business for the taxation year of the taxpayer that is the earliest of

(a) the first taxation year beginning after the end of the period or series of continuous periods, as the case may be, for which the region is prescribed under that subsection,

(b) the first taxation year, following the particular taxation year, at the end of which the taxpayer is

(i) non-resident, and

(ii) not carrying on business through a fixed place of business in Canada, and

(c) the taxation year in which the taxpayer dies.

Related Provisions: 28(1)(d) — Amount under 80.3(5) to be added to income of farming business using cash method.

History: Opening words and para. (a) of subsec. 80.3(5) amended by 2009, c. 31, subsec. 2(2), applicable to 2008 et seq. The portion formerly read:

(5) The amount deducted under subsection (4) in computing the income of a taxpayer for a particular taxation year from a farming business carried on in a prescribed drought region may, to the extent that the taxpayer so elects, be included in computing the taxpayer's income from the business for a taxation year ending after the particular taxation year, and shall, except to the extent that the amount has been included under this subsection in computing the taxpayer's income from the business for a preceding taxation year after the particular year, be deemed to be income of the taxpayer from the business for the taxation year of the taxpayer that is the earliest of

(a) the first taxation year beginning after the end of the period or series of continuous periods, as the case may be, for which the region is a prescribed drought region,

Subsec. 80.3(5) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 59(1), applicable to fiscal periods and taxation years ending after 1987. Subsec. 80.3(5) formerly read:

(5) Inclusion of deferred amount — The amount deducted under subsection (4) in computing the income of a taxpayer for a taxation year from a farming business carried on in a prescribed drought region shall be deemed to be income of the taxpayer from the business for the taxpayer's first taxation year commencing after the end of the period or series of continuous periods, as the case may be, for which the region was a prescribed drought region or, where the taxpayer has died before the beginning of that first taxation year, for the taxation year in which the taxpayer died, except to the extent that the amount has been included in computing the taxpayer's income from the business for a preceding taxation year.

Regulations: 7305, 7305.01 (prescribed drought regions for each year).

(6) Where subsecs. (2) and (4) do not apply — Subsections (2) and (4) do not apply to a taxpayer in respect of a farming business for a taxation year

(a) in which the taxpayer died; or

(b) where at the end of the year the taxpayer is non-resident and not carrying on the business through a fixed place of business in Canada.

History: Para. 80.3(6)(b) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 59(2), applicable to fiscal periods and taxation years ending after 1987. Para. 80.3(6)(b) formerly read:

(b) where the taxpayer is not resident in Canada at the end of the year and at any time in the year did not carry on the business in Canada.

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, s. 12, will amend the opening words of subsec. 80.4(8) to read as above, applicable in respect of loans made and indebtedness arising after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Subsection 80.4(2) generally deems a debtor to have received a benefit in respect of certain low-interest or non-interest bearing shareholder indebtedness. This subsection is intended to prevent a person, that is directly or indirectly a shareholder of a particular corporation or that is connected with a shareholder of the particular corporation, from avoiding tax by receiving the benefit of a non-taxable low interest or interest-free loan from the corporation, rather than as a dividend or other taxable amount. The benefit is generally calculated with reference to a prescribed interest rate prevailing during the term of the loan. Paragraphs 80.4(2)(a) to (c) describe the debtors to which subsection 80.4(2) will apply in terms of their relationships with the particular corporation. In this regard, paragraph 80.4(2)(b) provides that subsection 80.4(2) may apply to a debtor if the debtor is connected with a shareholder of the particular corporation.

Section 80.4(8) generally provides, for the purposes of subsection 80.4(2), that a person is connected with a shareholder of a corporation if the person does not deal at arm's length with the shareholder. Subsection 80.4(8) is amended to clarify that a partnership can be connected with a shareholder of a particular corporation if that partnership does not deal at arm's length with, or is affiliated with, the shareholder,

(a) a foreign affiliate of the corporation; or

(b) a foreign affiliate of a person resident in Canada with which the corporation does not deal at arm's length.

Subdivision g — Amounts Not Included in Computing Income

81. (1) Amounts not included in income — There shall not be included in computing the income of a taxpayer for a taxation year,

(a) statutory exemptions [including Indians] — an amount that is declared to be exempt from income tax by any other enactment of Parliament, other than an amount received or receivable by an individual that is exempt by virtue of a provision contained in a tax convention or agreement with another country that has the force of law in Canada;

Proposed Amendment — Aboriginal income taxation

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 29, 2012: Aboriginal Tax Policy

Taxation is an integral part of good governance as it promotes greater accountability and self-sufficiency and provides revenues for important public services and investments. Therefore, the Government of Canada supports initiatives that encourage the exercise of direct taxation powers by Aboriginal governments.

To date, the Government of Canada has entered into 33 sales tax arrangements under which Indian Act bands and self-governing Aboriginal groups levy a sales tax within their reserves or their settlement lands. In addition, 12 arrangements respecting personal income taxes are in effect with self-governing Aboriginal groups under which they impose a personal income tax on all residents within their settlement lands. The Government reiterates its willingness to discuss and put into effect direct taxation arrangements with interested Aboriginal governments. [See the First Nations Goods and Services Tax Act, reproduced in the Practitioner's Goods and Services Tax Annotated and on GST Partner and Taxnet Pro — ed.]

The Government of Canada also supports direct taxation arrangements between interested provinces or territories and Aboriginal governments and has enacted legislation to facilitate such arrangements.

Para. 81(1)(d) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 61(1), to add "an amount received under the Gallantry Awards Order", applicable to 1986 et seq.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-397R: Amounts excluded from income — statutory exemptions and certain service or RCMP pensions, allowances and compensation.

(d.1) Canadian Forces members and veterans amounts — the total of all amounts received by the taxpayer in the year on account of a Canadian Forces income support benefit payable to the taxpayer under Part 2 of the Canadian Forces Members and Veterans Re-establishment and Compensation Act or on account of a disability award, death benefit, clothing allowance or detention benefit payable to the taxpayer under Part 3 of that Act;

Related Provisions: 6(1)(f.1) — Income inclusion for certain payments under CFMVRCA; 81(1)(d) — Exemption for other service pensions.

History: Para. 81(1)(d.1) added by 2005, c. 21, s. 102, proclaimed in force April 1, 2006.

(e) war pensions — a pension payment received on account of disability or death arising out of a war from a country that was an ally of Canada at the time of the war, if that country grants substantially similar relief for the year to a person receiving a pension referred to in paragraph (d);

Related Provisions: 212(1)(h)(iii) — Exemption from non-resident withholding tax.

History: Para. 81(1)(e) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 61(2), applicable to 1988 et seq. Para. (e) formerly read:

(e) service pension from another country — a pension payment received on account of disability or death arising out of war service from a country that was an ally of Her majesty or His Majesty at the time of the war service, if that country grants substantially similar relief for the year to a person receiving a pension referred to in paragraph (d);

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-397R: Amounts excluded from income — statutory exemptions and certain service or RCMP pensions, allowances and compensation.

(f) Halifax disaster pensions, grants or allowances — a pension payment, a grant or an allowance in respect of death or injury sustained in the explosion at Halifax in 1917 and received from the Halifax Relief Commission the incorporation of which was confirmed by An Act respecting the Halifax Relief Commission, chapter 24 of the Statutes of Canada, 1918, or received pursuant to the Halifax Relief Commission Pension Continuation Act, chapter 88 of the Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76;

Related Provisions: 212(1)(h)(iii) — Exemption from non-resident withholding tax.

History: Para. 81(1)(f) amended by 1995, c. 18, s. 88, in force September 15, 1995. Para. (f) formerly read:

(f) a pension payment, a grant or an allowance in respect of death or injury sustained in the explosion at Halifax in 1917 received from the Halifax Relief Commission the incorporation of which was confirmed by An Act respecting the Halifax Relief Commission, chapter 24 of the Statutes of Canada, 1918, or from the Canadian Pension Commission pursuant to the Halifax Relief Commission Pension Continuation Act, chapter 88 of the Statutes of Canada, 1974-75-76;

(g) compensation by Federal Republic of Germany — a payment made by the Federal Republic of Germany or by a public body performing a function of government within that country as compensation to a victim of National Socialist persecution, where no tax is payable in respect of that payment under a law of the Federal Republic of Germany that imposes an income tax;

(g.1) income from personal injury award property — the income for the year from any property acquired by or on behalf of a person as an award of, or pursuant to an action for, damages in respect of physical or mental injury to that person, or from any property substituted therefor and any taxable capital gain for the year from the disposition of any such property,

(i) where the income was income from the property, if the income was earned in respect of a period before the end of the taxation year in which the person attained the age of 21 years, and

(ii) in any other case, if the person was less than 21 years of age during any part of the year;

Related Provisions: 81(1)(g.2) — Income from income exempt under paragraph (g.1); 81(5) — Election to increase ACB of capital property at age 21; 212(1)(h)(iii) — Exemption from non-resident holding tax; 248(5) — Substituted property.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-365R2: Damages, settlements and similar receipts.

(g.2) income from income exempt under para. (g.1) — any income for the year from any income that is by virtue of this paragraph or paragraph (g.1) not required to be included in computing the taxpayer's income (other than any income attributable to any period after the end of the taxation year in which the person on whose behalf the income was earned attained the age of 21 years);

Related Provisions: 212(1)(h)(iii) — Exemption from non-resident withholding tax.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-365R2: Damages, settlements and similar receipts.

(g.3) hepatitis C trust — the amount that, but for this paragraph, would be the income of the taxpayer for the year where

(i) the taxpayer is the trust established under the 1986-1990 Hepatitis C Settlement Agreement entered into by Her Majesty in right of Canada and Her Majesty in right of each of the provinces, and

(ii) the only contributions made to the trust before the end of the year are those provided for under the Agreement;

Proposed Amendment — 81(1)(g.3)

(g.3) certain government funded trusts — the amount that, but for this paragraph, would be the income of the taxpayer for the year if

(i) the taxpayer is the trust established under

(A) the 1986–1990 Hepatitis C Settlement Agreement entered into by Her Majesty in right of Canada and Her Majesty in right of each of the provinces,

(B) the Pre-1986/Post-1990 Hepatitis C Settlement Agreement entered into by Her Majesty in right of Canada, or

(C) the Indian Residential Schools Settlement Agreement entered into by Her Majesty in right of Canada on May 8, 2006, and

(ii) the only contributions made to the taxpayer before the end of the year are those provided for under the relevant Agreement described in subparagraph (i);

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, s. 13, will amend para. 81(1)(g.3) to read as above, applicable to 2006 et seq., except that for the 2006 taxation year, the subpara. is to be read as follows:

(i) the taxpayer is the trust established under

(B) the Pre-1986/Post-1990 Hepatitis C Settlement Agreement entered into by Her Majesty in right of Canada, and Technical Notes: Section 81 lists various amounts that are not included in computing a taxpayer's income. Paragraph 81(1)(g.3) applies to the trust established under the 1986–1990 Hepatitis C Settlement Agreement, an agreement executed by the federal, provincial and territorial governments in order to provide compensation for certain individuals infected with the Hepatitis C virus. As long as no contribution to the trust, other than contributions provided for under the Agreement, is made before the end of a taxation year of the trust, the effect of paragraph 81(1)(g.3) is to completely exempt the trust's income from income taxation for that taxation year.

Paragraph 81(1)(g.3) is amended to add references to two additional trusts. The first is the trust created under the Pre-1986/Post-1990 Hepatitis C Settlement Agreement, and the second is the trust created under the Indian Residential Schools Settlement Agreement. These trusts are funded with contributions from the federal government. As a result of these amendments, as long as no contribution, other than contributions provided for under each of those Agreements, is made to the relevant trust, before the end of a taxation year of the trust, the trust's income will effectively be exempt from income taxation for that taxation year.

This amendment applies to the 2006 and subsequent taxation years for the pre-1986/post-1990 Hepatitis C Settlement Agreement trust, and to the 2007 and subsequent taxation years for the Indian Residential Schools Settlement Agreement trust.

History: Para. 81(1)(g.3) added by 2000, c. 19, s. 12, applicable to 1999 et seq.

(g.4) relief for increased heating expenses — an amount received pursuant to the Order Authorizing Ex Gratia Payments for Increased Heating Expenses;

History: Para. 81(1)(g.4) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 60(1), applicable to amounts received after 2000.

(g.5) energy cost relief — an amount received pursuant to Part 1 of the Energy Costs Assistance Measures Act;

Related Provisions: 241(4)(d)(vii.2) — Disclosure of taxpayer information to permit payment of benefit.

History: Para. 81(1)(g.5) added by 2005, c. 49, s. 5, in force on November 25, 2005.

(h) social assistance [and foster care] — where the taxpayer is an individual (other than a trust), a social assistance payment (other than a prescribed payment) ordinarily made on the basis of a means, needs or income test under a program provided for by an Act of Parliament or a law of a province, to the extent that it is received directly or indirectly by the taxpayer for the benefit of another individual (other than the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner or a person who is related to the taxpayer or to the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner), if

(i) no family allowance under the Family Allowances Act or any similar allowance under a law of a province that provides for payment of an allowance similar to the family allowance provided under that Act is payable in respect of the other individual for the period in respect of which the social assistance payment is made, and

(ii) the other individual resides in the taxpayer's principal place of residence, or the taxpayer's principal place of residence is maintained for use as the residence of that other individual, throughout the period referred to in subparagraph (i);

Possible Future Amendment — 81(1)(h)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Jan. 31, 2002:

Dear Colleague:

I am writing in response to the April 11, 2001 letter that you forwarded to me from [xxx].

I have already responded directly to [xxx] in writing, with copies to the Honourable Martin Cauchon, and Mr. Greg Thompson, M.P. A copy of this response is attached, as well as a response from the Canada Customs and Revenue Agency.

More recently, foster families in New Brunswick have asked for a legislative change to exempt relief and respite care payments from taxation. I have asked my officials to examine this issue.

Thank you for keeping me apprised of this matter.

Sincerely,

The Honourable Paul Martin, P.C., M.P.
Minister of Finance

Related Provisions: 18(1)(c) — Foster parents cannot deduct expenses laid out to earn exempt income; 56(1)(u), 110(1)(f) — Income inclusion and deduction — social assistance payments; 212(1)(h)(iii) — Exemption from non-resident holding tax.

(m) interest on certain obligations — interest that accrued to, became receivable or was received by, a corporation resident in Canada (in this paragraph referred to as the "parent corporation") on a bond, debenture, bill, note, mortgage or similar obligation received by it as consideration for the disposition by it, before June 18, 1971, of

(i) a business carried on by it in a country other than Canada, or

(ii) all of the shares of a corporation that carried on a business in a country other than Canada, and such of the debts and other obligations of that corporation as were, immediately before the disposition, owing to the parent corporation, if

(iii) the business was of a public utility or public service nature,

(iv) the business or the property described in subparagraph (ii), as the case may be, was disposed of to a person or persons resident in that country, and

(v) the obligation received by the parent corporation was issued by or guaranteed by the government of that country or any agent thereof;

History: Paras. 81(1)(o) and (p) repealed by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 14(1), applicable to 1998 et seq. The paras. formerly read:

(o) RESP refunds — a refund of payments (within the meaning assigned by subsection 146.1(1));

(p) educational assistance payments — an educational assistance payment (within the meaning assigned by subsection 146.1(1)) received by a beneficiary under an education savings plan (within the meaning assigned by subsection 146.1(1)) that is not registered or the registration of which has been revoked pursuant to section 146.1;

(q) provincial indemnities — an amount paid to an individual as an indemnity under a prescribed provision of the law of a province; or

Regulations: 6501 (prescribed provisions — criminal injuries compensation and motor vehicle accident claims).

(r) foreign retirement arrangements — an amount that is credited or added to a deposit or account governed by a foreign retirement arrangement as interest or other income in respect of the deposit or account, where the amount would, but for this paragraph, be included in the taxpayer's income solely because of that crediting or adding.

Related Provisions: 56(1)(a)(i)(C.1), 56(12) — Inclusion in income of payment from foreign retirement arrangement; 146(20) — Where amount credited or added deemed not received.

(s) [Repealed under former Act]

Proposed Addition — 81(1)(s)

(s) salary deferral leave plans — an amount paid to the taxpayer in the year under an arrangement described in paragraph 6801(a) of the Income Tax Regulations to the extent that the amount may reasonably be considered to be attributable to amounts that were

(i) included in the taxpayer's income for a preceding taxation year and were income, interest or other additional amounts, described in subparagraph 6801(a)(iv) of the Income Tax Regulations, and

(ii) re-contributed by the taxpayer under the arrangement in a preceding taxation year.

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), s. 14, will add para. 81(1)(s), applicable to 2000 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 81(1) lists various amounts that are not included in computing income.

New paragraph 81(1)(s) provides a tax exemption in respect of already-taxed amounts received from a leave of absence plan if that plan is excepted from the salary deferral arrangement rules by reason of paragraph 6801(a) of the Income Tax Regulations.

Paragraph 6801(a) of the Regulations requires, in subparagraph (iv), that income accruing to the benefit of an employee in the year under the plan be paid to the employee in that year. Some plans are structured so that the employee recognizes the income in the year for tax purposes, but then immediately re-contributes that income to the plan. New paragraph 81(1)(s) provides that a subsequent distribution of a re-contributed amount that was taxed in an earlier year is not included in income.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 30, 2000:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter of January 5, 2000 concerning the taxation of amounts paid to a participant under a leave of absence plan. I wish also to acknowledge your subsequent telephone conversations with Mr. Simon Thompson of this Division. I apologize for the delay in writing to you.

In your letter you describe a plan to fund "salary" of a plan participant on leave from employment. We understand that the Canada Customs and Revenue Agency has provided an advance ruling to the effect the plan will be a prescribed plan under paragraph 6801(a) of the Income Tax Regulations (and not a salary deferral arrangement or employee benefit plan). Amounts withheld and contributed to the plan from a participant's salary in a particular year will not be taxable in that year, but rather when received upon payment from the plan. We also understand that under the plan the investment income earned in each year on a participant's contributions to the plan will be allocated and paid out to the participant (and included in the participant's income for that year). The participant is required under the plan, however, to contribute the allocated income amount back to the plan ("re-contributions").

You are seeking a technical amendment to the income tax provisions so that the amount of re-contributions by a participant is excluded from the participant's income when paid out of the plan during the leave period. We agree that it would be appropriate that the return of re-contributions not be included in computing income. We will recommend that an amendment to this effect apply to the 2000 and subsequent taxation years.

Thank you for your [sic] writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Emewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Selected Cases [subsec. 81(1)]: ACTRA Fraternal Benefit Society v. R., [1997] 3 C.T.C. 61 (FCA) (Allocation of assets to particular fund was rebuttable presumption only).

(1.1) [Repealed under former Act]

(2) M.L.A.'s expense allowance — Where an elected member of a provincial legislative assembly has, under an Act of the provincial legislature, been paid an allowance in a taxation year for expenses incident to the discharge of the member's duties in that capacity, the allowance shall not be included in computing the member's income for the year unless it exceeds ½ of the maximum fixed amount provided by law as payable to the member by way of salary, indemnity and other remuneration as a member in respect of attendance at a session of the legislature, in which event there shall be included in computing the member's income for the year only the amount by which the allowance exceeds ½ of that maximum fixed amount.

Related Provisions: 6(1)(b) — Allowances taxable, and exclusions.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-266: Taxation of members of provincial legislative assemblies (archived).

(3) Municipal officers' expense allowance — Where a person who is

(a) an elected officer of an incorporated municipality,

(b) an officer of a municipal utilities board, commission or corporation or any other similar body, the incumbent of whose office as such an officer is elected by popular vote, or

(c) a member of a public or separate school board or similar body governing a school district, has been paid by the municipal corporation or the body of which the person was such an officer or member (in this subsection referred to as the person's "employer") an amount as an allowance in a taxation year for expenses incident to the discharge of the person's duties as such an officer or member, the allowance shall not be included in computing the person's income for the year unless it exceeds ½ of the amount that was paid to the person in the year by the person's employer as salary or other remuneration as such an officer or member, in which event there shall be included in computing the person's income for the year only the amount by which the allowance exceeds ½ of the amount so paid to the person by way of salary or remuneration.

Related Provisions: 6(1)(b) — Allowances taxable, and exclusions.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-292: Taxation of elected officers of incorporated municipalities, school boards, etc.

(3.1) Travel expenses — There shall not be included in computing an individual's income for a taxation year an amount (not in excess of a reasonable amount) received by the individual from an employer with whom the individual was dealing at arm's length as an allowance for, or reimbursement of, travel expenses incurred by the individual in the year in respect of the individual's part-time employment in the year with the employer (other than expenses incurred in the performance of the duties of the individual's part-time employment) if

(a) throughout the period in which the expenses were incurred,

(i) the individual had other employment or was carrying on a business, or

(ii) where the employer is a designated educational institution (as within the meaning assigned by subsection 118.6(1)), the duties of the individual's part-time employment were the provision in Canada of a service to the employer in the individual's capacity as a professor or teacher; and

(b) the duties of the individual's part-time employment were performed at a location not less than 80 kilometres from,

(i) where subparagraph (a)(i) applies, both the individual's ordinary place of residence and the place of the other employment or business referred to in that subparagraph, and

(ii) where subparagraph (a)(ii) applies, the individual's ordinary place of residence.

History: Subsec. 81(3.1) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 60(2), applicable to 1995 et seq. and, notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5), any assessment of an individual's tax payable under the Act for any taxation year that ends before 2000 shall be made that is necessary to take into account the application of subsec. 81(3.1). Subsec. (3.1) formerly read:

(3.1) An amount received by an individual in respect of the individual's part-time employment by an employer with whom the individual was dealing at arm's length as an allowance for, or reimbursement of, travel expenses incurred during a period throughout which the individual had other employment or was carrying on a business shall not be included in computing the individual's income to the extent that it is paid by the employer and does not exceed a reasonable amount on account of travel expenses (other than expenses incurred in the performance of the duties of the individual's part-time employment) incurred by the individual in respect of that part-time employment, if the duties of the part-time employment are performed at a location not less than 80 kilometres from both the individual's ordinary place of residence and principal place of employment or business.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-522R: Vehicle, travel and sales expenses of employees.

(4) Payments for volunteer [emergency] services — Where

(a) an individual was employed or otherwise engaged in a taxation year by a government, municipality or public authority (in this subsection referred to as "the employer") and received in the year from the employer one or more amounts for the performance, as a volunteer, of the individual's duties as

(i) an ambulance technician,

(ii) a firefighter, or

(iii) a person who assists in the search or rescue of individuals or in other emergency situations, and

(b) if the Minister so demands, the employer has certified in writing that

(i) the individual was in the year a person described in paragraph (a), and

(ii) the individual was at no time in the year employed or otherwise engaged by the employer, otherwise than as a volunteer, in connection with the performance of any of the duties referred to in paragraph (a) or of similar duties, there shall not be included in computing the individual's income derived from the performance of those duties the lesser of $1,000 and the total of those amounts, other than, if the individual makes a claim under section 118.06 for the year, amounts received in respect of duties as a firefighter.

Related Provisions: 118.06 — Volunteer firefighter tax credit.

History: The closing words of subsec. 81(4) amended by 2011, c. 24, s. 18, applicable to 2011 et seq. They formerly read:

there shall not be included in computing the individual's income derived from the performance of those duties the lesser of $1,000 and the total of those amounts.

Subsec. 81(4) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 60(2), applicable to 1998 et seq.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-495R3: Child care expenses.

(5) Election — Where a taxpayer or a person described in paragraph (1)(g.1) has acquired capital property under the circumstances described in that paragraph, the taxpayer or the person may, in the return of income of the taxpayer for the taxation year in which the taxpayer attains the age of 21 years, elect to treat any such capital property held by the taxpayer or person as having been disposed of on the day immediately preceding the day on which the taxpayer attained the age of 21 years for proceeds of disposition equal to the fair market value of the property on that day and the person or taxpayer making the election shall be deemed to have reacquired that property immediately thereafter at a cost equal to those proceeds.

Subdivision h — Corporations Resident in Canada and Their Shareholders

82. (1) Taxable dividends received — In computing the income of a taxpayer for a taxation year, there shall be included the total of the following amounts:

(a) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts, other than eligible dividends and amounts described in paragraph (c), (d) or (e), received by the taxpayer in the taxation year from corporations resident in Canada as, on account of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, taxable dividends,

exceeds

(ii) if the taxpayer is an individual, the total of all amounts paid by the taxpayer in the taxation year that are deemed by subsection 260(5) to have been received by another person as taxable dividends (other than eligible dividends);

(a.1) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts, other than amounts included in computing the income of the taxpayer because of paragraph (c), (d) or (e), received by the taxpayer in the taxation year from corporations resident in Canada as, on account of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, eligible dividends,

exceeds

(ii) if the taxpayer is an individual, the total of all amounts paid by the taxpayer in the taxation year that are deemed by subsection 260(5) to have been received by another person as eligible dividends;

(b) if the taxpayer is an individual, other than a trust that is a registered charity, the total of

(i) 25% of the amount determined under paragraph (a) in respect of the taxpayer for the taxation year, and

(ii) the product of the amount determined under paragraph (a.1) in respect of the taxpayer for the taxation year multiplied by

(A) for the 2009 taxation year, 45%,

(B) for the 2010 taxation year, 44%,

(C) for the 2011 taxation year, 41%, and

(D) for taxation years after 2011, 38%;

(c) all taxable dividends received by the taxpayer in the taxation year, from corporations resident in Canada, under dividend rental arrangements of the taxpayer;

(d) all taxable dividends (other than taxable dividends described in paragraph (c)) received by the taxpayer in the taxation year from corporations resident in Canada that are not taxable Canadian corporations; and

(e) if the taxpayer is a trust, all amounts each of which is all or part of a taxable dividend (other than a taxable dividend described in paragraph (c) or (d)) that was received by the trust in the taxation year on a share of the capital stock of a taxable Canadian corporation and that can reasonably be considered to have been included in computing the income of a beneficiary under the trust who was non-resident at the end of the taxation year.

(1) Taxable dividends received — In computing the income of a taxpayer for a taxation year, there shall be included the total of the following amounts:

(a) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts, other than eligible dividends and amounts described in paragraph (c), (d) or (e), received by the taxpayer in the taxation year from corporations resident in Canada as, on account of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, taxable dividends,

exceeds

(ii) if the taxpayer is an individual, the total of all amounts each of which is, or is deemed by paragraph 260(12)(b) to have been, paid by the taxpayer in the taxation year and deemed by subsection 260(5.1) to have been received by another person as a taxable dividend (other than an eligible dividend);

(a.1) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts, other than amounts included in computing the income of the taxpayer because of paragraph (c), (d) or (e), received by the taxpayer in the taxation year from corporations resident in Canada as, on account of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, eligible dividends,

exceeds

(ii) if the taxpayer is an individual, the total of all amounts each of which is, or is deemed by paragraph 260(12)(b) to have been, paid by the taxpayer in the taxation year and deemed by subsection 260(5.1) to have been received by another person as an eligible dividend;

(b) if the taxpayer is an individual, other than a trust that is a registered charity, the total of

(i) 25% of the amount determined under paragraph (a) in respect of the taxpayer for the taxation year, and

(ii) the product of the amount determined under paragraph (a.1) in respect of the taxpayer for the taxation year multiplied by

(A) for taxation years after 2005 and before 2010, 45%,

(B) for the 2010 taxation year, 44%,

(C) for the 2011 taxation year, 41%, and

(D) for taxation years after 2011, 38%;

(c) all taxable dividends received by the taxpayer in the taxation year, from corporations resident in Canada, under dividend rental arrangements of the taxpayer;

(d) all taxable dividends (other than taxable dividends described in paragraph (c)) received by the taxpayer in the taxation year from corporations resident in Canada that are not taxable Canadian corporations; and

(e) if the taxpayer is a trust, all amounts each of which is all or part of a taxable dividend (other than a taxable dividend described in paragraph (c) or (d)) that was received by the trust in the taxation year on a share of the capital stock of a taxable Canadian corporation and that can reasonably be considered to have been included in computing the income of a beneficiary under the trust who was non-resident at the end of the taxation year.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 40(2), will amend subsec. 82(1) to read as above, applicable to amounts received or paid after 2005.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 82(1) applies for the purpose of computing the income of a taxpayer from dividends received from corporations resident in Canada. The subsection is amended to reflect changes to the securities lending arrangement rules. These amendments are made, firstly, to subsection 82(1) as it read prior to the Budget Implementation Act, 2006 No.2, S.C. 2007, c. 2, s. 44(1). They are also made to subsection 82(1) as it has read since it was amended by that Act.

In particular, former clause 82(1)(a)(ii)(B), as it read immediately before it was amended by the Budget Implementation Act, 2006 No. 2, allowed an individual who has entered into a securities lending arrangement to deduct, to the extent of the individual's dividend income, the dividend compensation payment paid by the individual.

Due to the amendments made to the securities lending arrangement rules in section 260, former clause 82(1)(a)(ii)(B) is amended in two ways. First, it is amended to apply in respect of an individual's specified proportion of a dividend compensation payment made by a partnership of which the individual is a member. Secondly, since new subsection 260(5.1) now sets out the treatment of dividend compensation payments, the clause is amended to replace the reference to "subsection 260(5)" with a reference to "subsection 260(5.1)".

Whether this amendment applies in respect of a particular securities lending arrangement depends on when the arrangement is made and, in the case of an arrangement made after November 2, 1998 and before December 21, 2002, whether the parties to the arrangement have elected to have the amended definition of "dividend rental arrangement" in subsection 248(1) apply. The following table shows these alternative results.

	Date Arrangement Was Made
	Before November 3, 1998	After November 2, 1998 and before 2002	After 2001 and before December 21, 2002	After December 20, 2002
Election made	Election not available. Amendment does not apply	Amendment applies, but read reference to 260(5.1) as a reference to 260(5)	Amendment applies	Election not available. Amendment applies
Election not made	Election not available. Amendment does not apply	Amendment does not apply	Amendment applies, but ignore reference to 260(12)(b)	Election not available. Amendment applies Secondly, existing subparagraphs 82(1)(a)(ii) and 82(1)(a.1)(ii) (as amended by the Budget Implementation Act, 2006 No.2) are amended to include references to new paragraph 260(12)(b) and new subsection 260(5.1) in order to account for compensation payments paid by a partnership to a taxpayer. New paragraph 260(12)(b) deems an individual taxpayer who is a partner in a partnership to have paid a specified proportion of a dividend compensation payment that is paid by the partnership. New subsection 260(5.1) provides for the deemed receipt and characterization of compensation payments paid to taxpayers. These amendments apply to amounts paid or received after the 2005 taxation year.

Clause 82(1)(b)(ii)(A) is amended to provide that the prescribed 45% gross-up rate for eligible dividends will apply for taxation years after 2005 and before 2010.

History: Subpara. 82(1)(b)(ii) amended by 2008, c. 28, s. 8, applicable to 2009 et seq. It formerly read:

(ii) 45% of the amount determined under paragraph (a.1) in respect of the taxpayer for the taxation year;

Subsec. 82(1) amended by 2007, c. 2, subsec. 44(1), applicable to amounts received or paid after 2005. It formerly read (subject to further retroactive amendments below):

(1) In computing the income of a taxpayer for a taxation year, there shall be included

(a) the total of

(i) all amounts each of which is a taxable dividend received by the taxpayer in the year as part of a dividend rental arrangement of the taxpayer from a corporation resident in Canada or a taxable dividend received by the taxpayer in the year from a corporation resident in Canada that is not a taxable Canadian corporation,

(i.1) where the taxpayer is a trust, all amounts each of which is all or part of a taxable dividend (other than a taxable dividend described in subparagraph (i)) that was received by the trust in the year on a share of the capital stock of a taxable Canadian corporation and that can reasonably be considered as having been included in computing the income of a beneficiary under the trust who was non-resident at the end of the year, and

(ii) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts received by the taxpayer in the year from corporations resident in Canada as, on account of, in lieu of payment of or in satisfaction of, taxable dividends, other than an amount included in computing the income of the taxpayer because of subparagraph (i) or (i.1)

exceeds

(B) where the taxpayer is an individual, the total of all amounts paid by the taxpayer in the year that are deemed by subsection 260(5) to have been received by another person as taxable dividends,

Proposed Amendment — former cl. 82(1)(a)(ii)(B)

(B) where the taxpayer is an individual, the total of all amounts each of which is, or is deemed by paragraph 260(12)(b) to have been, an amount paid by the taxpayer in the year and deemed by subsection 260(5.1) to have been received by another person as a taxable dividend,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 40(1), will amend former cl. 82(1)(a)(ii)(B) to read as above, applicable

(a) to amounts paid in respect of arrangements made after 2001 [and before 2005], except that, in its application to amounts paid in respect of an arrangement made before December 21, 2002, cl. (B) is to be read without reference to the expression "or is deemed by paragraph 260(12)(b) to have been" unless an election referred to in para. 148(27)(b) of the draft legislation [see Proposed Amendment to 248(1)"dividend rental arrangement" — ed.] has been made in respect of the arrangement; and

(b) to amounts paid in respect of arrangements made after November 2, 1998 and before 2002, if the parties to the arrangement have made the election referred to in para. para. 148(27)(b) of the draft legislation [see Proposed Amendment to 248(1)"dividend rental arrangement" — ed.], except that in its application to those arrangements made before 2002, the reference to "subsection 260(5.1)" in cl. (B) is to be read as a reference to "subsection 260(5)".

(2.2) Where subsec. (2.1) does not apply — Subsection (2.1) does not apply in respect of a particular dividend, in respect of which an election is made under subsection (2), paid on a share of the capital stock of a particular corporation to an individual where it is reasonable to consider that all or substantially all of the capital dividend account of the particular corporation immediately before the particular dividend became payable consisted of amounts other than any amount

(a) added to that capital dividend account under paragraph (b) of the definition "capital dividend account" in subsection 89(1) in respect of a dividend received on a share of the capital stock of another corporation, which share (or another share for which the share was substituted) was acquired by the particular corporation in a transaction or as part of a series of transactions one of the main purposes of which was that the particular corporation receive the dividend, but not in respect of a dividend where it is reasonable to consider that the purpose of paying the dividend was to distribute an amount that was received by the other corporation and included in computing the other corporation's capital dividend account by reason of paragraph (d) of that definition;

(b) added to that capital dividend account under paragraph 87(2)(z.1) as a result of an amalgamation or winding-up or a series of transactions including the amalgamation or winding-up that would not have been so added had the amalgamation or winding-up occurred or the series of transactions been commenced after 4:00 p.m. Eastern Daylight Saving Time, September 25, 1987;

(c) added to that capital dividend account at a time when the particular corporation was controlled, directly or indirectly, in any manner whatever, by one or more non-resident persons; or

(d) in respect of a capital gain from a disposition of a property by the particular corporation or another corporation that may reasonably be considered as having accrued while the property (or another property for which it was substituted) was a property of a corporation that was controlled, directly or indirectly, in any manner whatever, by one or more non-resident persons.

(3) Late filed elections — Where at any particular time after 1974 a dividend has become payable by a corporation to shareholders of any class of shares of its capital stock, and subsection (1) or (2) would have applied to the dividend except that the election referred to therein was not made on or before the day on or before which the election was required by that subsection to be made, the election shall be deemed to have been made at the particular time or on the first day on which any part of the dividend was paid, whichever is the earlier, if

(a) the election is made in prescribed manner and prescribed form;

(b) an estimate of the penalty in respect of that election is paid by the corporation when that election is made; and

(c) the directors or other person or persons legally entitled to administer the affairs of the corporation have, before the time the election is made, authorized the election to be made.

(3.1) Request for election — The Minister may at any time, by written request served personally or by registered mail, request that an election referred to in subsection (3) be made by a taxpayer, and where the taxpayer on whom such a request is served does not comply therewith within 90 days of service thereof on the taxpayer, subsection (3) does not apply to such an election made by the taxpayer.

Related Provisions: 244(5), (6) — Proof of service; 248(7) — Mail deemed received on day mailed.

CRA Audit Manual: 28.6.2: Late filed capital dividends election.

(4) Penalty for late filed election — For the purposes of this section, the penalty in respect of an election referred to in paragraph (3)(a) is an amount equal to the lesser of

(a) 1% per annum of the amount of the dividend referred to in the election for each month or part of a month during the period commencing with the time that the dividend became payable, or the first day on which any part of the dividend was paid if that day is earlier, and ending with the day on which that election was made, and

(b) the product obtained when $500 is multiplied by the proportion that the number of months or parts of months during the period referred to in paragraph (a) bears to 12.

Related Provisions: 83(5) — Unpaid balance of penalty.

CRA Audit Manual: 28.6.2: Late filed capital dividends election.

(5) Unpaid balance of penalty — The Minister shall, with all due dispatch, examine each election referred to in paragraph (3)(a), assess the penalty payable and send a notice of assessment to the corporation and the corporation shall pay, forthwith to the Receiver General, the amount, if any, by which the penalty so assessed exceeds the total of all amounts previously paid on account of that penalty.

(6) Definition of "qualifying dividend" — For the purposes of subsection (1), "qualifying dividend" means a dividend on shares of a series of a class of the capital stock of a public corporation that is prescribed to be a tax-deferred preferred series that became payable by the corporation after 1978 and not later than

(a) where the terms as at March 31, 1977 of the shares of that series entitled the holder of any such share to exchange it after a particular date for a share or shares of another series or class of preferred shares of the capital stock of the corporation, that particular date,

(b) where the terms as at March 31, 1977 of the shares of that series required the corporation to offer to purchase at a time not later than a particular date all of the shares of that series from all of the holders of those shares, that particular date, and

(c) in any other case, October 1, 1991,

whichever is applicable in respect of that series of shares, except that a dividend on shares of such a series that would otherwise be a qualifying dividend shall be deemed not to be a qualifying dividend if

(d) at the time that the dividend became payable, the terms of the shares of that series differ from the terms as at March 31, 1977 of the shares of that series, or

(e) after March 31, 1977 the corporation issued additional shares of that series.

(7) Amalgamation where there are tax-deferred preferred shares — For the purposes of this section, where, after March 31, 1977, there has been an amalgamation within the meaning of section 87 and one or more of the predecessor corporations had a series of shares outstanding on March 31, 1977 that was prescribed to be a tax-deferred preferred series, the following rules apply:

(a) the series of shares of the capital stock of the predecessor corporation that was prescribed to be a tax-deferred preferred series shall be deemed to have been continued in existence in the form of the new shares; and

(b) the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each such predecessor corporation.

84. (1) Deemed dividend — Where a corporation resident in Canada has at any time after 1971 increased the paid-up capital in respect of the shares of any particular class of its capital stock, otherwise than by

(a) payment of a stock dividend,

(b) a transaction by which

(i) the value of its assets less its liabilities has been increased, or

(ii) its liabilities less the value of its assets have been decreased, by an amount not less than the amount of the increase in the paid-up capital in respect of the shares of the particular class,

(c) a transaction by which the paid-up capital in respect of the shares of all other classes of its capital stock has been reduced by an amount not less than the amount of the increase in the paid-up capital in respect of the shares of the particular class,

(c.1) where the corporation is an insurance corporation, any action by which it converts contributed surplus related to its insurance business into paid-up capital in respect of the shares of its capital stock,

(c.2) where the corporation is a bank, any action by which it converts any of its contributed surplus that arose on the issuance of shares of its capital stock into paid-up capital in respect of shares of its capital stock, or

(iii) as a result of any action by which the paid-up capital in respect of that class of shares or in respect of shares of another class for which shares of that class were substituted was reduced by the corporation, to the extent of the reduction in paid-up capital that resulted from the action, the corporation shall be deemed to have paid at that time a dividend on the issued shares of the particular class equal to the amount, if any, by which the amount of the increase in the paid-up capital exceeds the total of

(d) the amount, if any, of the increase referred to in subparagraph (b)(i) or the decrease referred to in subparagraph (b)(ii), as the case may be,

(e) the amount, if any, of the reduction referred to in paragraph (c), and

(f) the amount, if any, of the increase in the paid-up capital that resulted from a conversion referred to in paragraph (c.1), (c.2) or (c.3), and a dividend shall be deemed to have been received at that time by each person who held any of the issued shares of the particular class immediately after that time equal to that proportion of the dividend so deemed to have been paid by the corporation that the number of the shares of the particular class held by the person immediately after that time is of the number of the issued shares of that class outstanding immediately after that time.

(4.1) Deemed dividend on reduction of paid-up capital — Where at any time after April 10, 1978, a public corporation has reduced the paid-up capital in respect of any class of shares of its capital stock otherwise than by way of a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of any shares of that class or a transaction described in subsection (2) or section 86, any amount paid by it on the reduction of the paid-up capital shall be deemed to have been paid by the corporation and received by the person to whom it was paid, as a dividend.

(4.1) Deemed dividend on reduction of paid-up capital — Any amount paid by a public corporation on the reduction of the paid-up capital in respect of any class of shares of its capital stock, otherwise than by way of a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of any shares of that class or by way of a transaction described in subsection (2) or section 86, is deemed to have been paid by the corporation and received by the person to whom it was paid, as a dividend, unless

(a) the amount may reasonably be considered to be derived from proceeds of disposition realized by the public corporation, or by a person or partnership in which the public corporation had a direct or indirect interest at the time that the proceeds were realized, from a transaction that occurred

(i) outside the ordinary course of the business of the corporation, or of the person or partnership that realized the proceeds, and

(ii) within the period that commenced 24 months before the payment; and

(b) no amount that may reasonably be considered to be derived from those proceeds was paid by the public corporation on a previous reduction of the paid-up capital in respect of any class of shares of its capital stock.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 41, will amend subsec. 84(4.1) to read as above, applicable to amounts paid after 1996, except that in respect of those amounts paid before February 27, 2004, the subsec. is to be read as follows:

(4.1) Any amount paid by a public corporation on the reduction of the paid-up capital in respect of any class of shares of its capital stock, otherwise than by way of a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of any shares of that class or by way of a transaction described in subsection (2) or in section 86, is deemed to have been paid by the corporation and received by the person to whom it was paid, as a dividend, unless the amount may reasonably be considered to be derived from proceeds of disposition realized by the public corporation, or by a person or partnership in which the public corporation had a direct or indirect interest at the time that the proceeds were realized, from a transaction that occurred outside the ordinary course of the business of the public corporation, or of the person or partnership that realized the proceeds.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 84(4.1) treats a payment on a reduction of paid-up capital by a public corporation as a dividend, except where the payment is made by way of a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a share or in the course of a transaction described in subsection 84(2) or section 86.

Subsection 84(4.1) is amended to introduce a new exception. Generally, this exception will apply where the amount paid on a reduction of paid-up capital may reasonably be considered to be a distribution of proceeds of disposition realized from a transaction that did not occur in the ordinary course of the corporation's business and those proceeds were derived from a transaction that occurred no more than 24 months before the return of the paid-up capital.

In the case of a transaction that funds the payment, generally relief from the deemed dividend rule in subsection 84(4.1) will apply if the paid-up capital distribution can be traced to proceeds of disposition realized in connection with a transaction that may reasonably be considered to be derived from a transaction that occurs outside of the ordinary course of the corporation's business. For example, a paid-up capital distribution paid out of proceeds realized on the sale of a business unit of a corporation, where the proceeds were not required for reinvestment, would generally not be considered to be a distribution from amounts realized in the ordinary course of the corporation's business. In general terms, this aspect of the amendment to subsection 84(4.1) is intended to ensure that only a return of corporate capital, as opposed to a distribution of earnings, is subject to the new exception to subsection 84(4.1).

In order to ensure that the proceeds from an extraordinary transaction are not used to fund a stream of regular or periodic distributions, only one return of paid-up capital will be permitted in respect of any particular extraordinary transaction and that return must occur within 24 months of the proceeds being realized. However, this one-time return rule and 24-month limitation will not apply to distributions of paid-up capital made after 1996 and before February 27, 2004.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, July 2, 1998:

Dear [xxx]:

This is in reply to your letter of June 30, 1998 to Davine Roach of the Department regarding the application of subsection 84(4.1) of the Income Tax Act to your client.

As you know, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that subsection 84(4.1) of the Income Tax Act be amended. The amendment would provide that subsection 84(4.1) apply only in respect of a reduction in the paid-up capital of a class of shares to the extent that a previous increase in the paid-up capital of that class resulted in a dividend in respect of which the taxpayer elected to treat the dividend as having been paid out of the taxpayer's 1971 CSOH.

It would be recommended that such an amendment be effective for paid-up capital reductions occurring after 1996. If the recommendation is acted upon, I would anticipate that such an amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber, Director General, Tax Legislation Division

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 12, 1999:

Dear [xxx]:

This is in reply to your letter of April 23, 1999 regarding subsection 84(4.1) of the Income Tax Act as it applies to your client, [xxx].

Based on our understanding of the facts described in your letter, [xxx] has been refocusing its business activity in an effort to improve profitability. To this end, [xxx] has been disposing of businesses that are inconsistent with its aviation services business. The last disposition was scheduled to close by the end of [xxx]. As a result of these dispositions, [xxx] has capital in excess of its future business requirements. Consequently, [xxx] may want to reduce the stated capital of its common shares with a payment of cash to its shareholders in an amount equal to the reduction. The amount of any such reduction has not been determined.

As you know, we believe that subsection 84(2) of the Income Tax Act may apply to this proposed reduction in stated capital. While the Department of National Revenue would determine the applicability of subsection 84(2) in the circumstances, it is our understanding that the Department has ruled in circumstances where they have been satisfied that the conditions set out in subsection 84(2) have been met. Given that subsection 84(2) of the Income Tax Act would appear to render the appropriate tax results on the proposed reduction of stated capital, your concerns about subsection 84(4.1) of the Income Tax Act may not be warranted.

However, as you are aware, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that subsection 84(4.1) of the Income Tax Act be amended so that it applies only in respect of certain reductions of the paid-up capital of a class of shares of a corporation. Based on our understanding of the facts associated with [xxx]'s proposed reduction of the stated capital of its common shares, we do not regard the distribution as a substitution for an ordinary-course dividend and therefore are prepared to recommend that such a reduction be excluded from the application of subsection 84(4.1). If the recommendation were acted upon, I would anticipate that such an amendment would be included in the next technical bill.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director General, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 21, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

This is in reply to your firm's letters of March 8 and 14, 2001 to, and telephone conversations with, Davine Roach and Kerry Harnish of this Division regarding the application of the deemed dividend rules in subsections 84(2) and 84(4.1) of the Income Tax Act to your client, [xxx].

Based on our understanding of the facts described in your letter and our conversations, [xxx] is a taxable Canadian corporation listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange (the "TSE") that had [xxx] as of [xxx] issued and outstanding [xxx] common shares, with an historic paid-up capital for tax purposes of [xxx] or about [xxx] per share (herein referred to as "historic paid-up capital").

In [xxx] reorganized its business and sold off subsidiaries, which generated in excess of [xxx] (of which [xxx] remains on hand), and it now has capital far in excess of its future business requirements.

[xxx] intends to announce a special distribution [xxx] per share to all of its existing shareholders (or approximately [xxx] in total).

You request a comfort letter to the effect that subsection 84(4.1) of the Act will not apply to the special distribution to [xxx] shareholders. Where, on the reorganization of the business of a corporation, subsection 84(2) of the Act applies to a distribution of funds or property to shareholders with respect to a class of common shares, a dividend is deemed to have been paid by the corporation to the extent that the value of the distribution exceeds any paid-up capital reduction with respect to the class of shares. While [xxx] did reorganize its business in [xxx], we understand that the Canada Customs and Revenue Agency has indicated to you that it is not of the view that subsection 84(2) of the Act would apply to the special distribution because, given the [xxx] delay, the distribution would not be made "on" the reorganization of [xxx] business.

However, as you are aware, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that subsection 84(4.1) of the Act be amended so that it applies only with respect to certain reductions of the paid-up capital of a class of shares of a corporation. Based on our understanding of the facts associated with [xxx] proposed special distribution, we do not regard that subsection 84(4.1) of the Act should apply to deem a dividend in the case of the historic paid-up capital portion of the special distribution with respect to the Class A common shares. Consequently, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that this paid-up capital reduction be excluded from the application of subsection 84(4.1) of the Act. If the recommendation is acted upon, I would anticipate that such an amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Related Provisions: 53(2)(a) — Reduction in ACB; 84(4) — Reduction of paid-up capital; 89(3) — Simultaneous dividends; 128.1(3) — Addition to PUC of corporation that previously became resident in Canada; 131(4) — S. 84 does not apply to mutual fund corporation.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-243R4: Dividend refund to private corporations; IT-450R: Share for share exchange.

(4.2) Deemed dividend on term preferred share — Where, at any time after November 16, 1978, the paid-up capital in respect of a term preferred share owned by a shareholder that is

(a) a specified financial institution, or

(b) a partnership or trust of which a specified financial institution or a person related to such an institution was a member or a beneficiary, was reduced otherwise than by way of a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of the share or of a transaction described in subsection (2) or (4.1), the amount received by the shareholder on the reduction of the paid-up capital in respect of the share shall be deemed to be a dividend received by the shareholder at that time unless the share was not acquired in the ordinary course of the business carried on by the shareholder.

Related Provisions: 89(3) — Simultaneous dividends; 131(4) — S. 84 does not apply to mutual fund corporation; 248(13) — Interests in trusts or partnerships.

(4.3) Deemed dividend on guaranteed share — Where at any time after 1987 the paid-up capital in respect of a share of the capital stock of a particular corporation owned

(a) by a shareholder that is another corporation to which subsection 112(2.2) or (2.4) would, if the particular corporation were a taxable Canadian corporation, apply to deny the deduction under subsection 112(1) or (2) or 138(6) of a dividend received on the share, or

(b) by a partnership or trust of which such other corporation is a member or beneficiary, as the case may be,

was reduced otherwise than by way of a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of the share or of a transaction described in subsection (2) or (4.1), the amount received by the shareholder on the reduction of the paid-up capital in respect of the share shall be deemed to be a dividend received by the shareholder at that time.

Related Provisions: 89(3) — Simultaneous dividends; 131(4) — S. 84 does not apply to mutual fund corporation; 248(13) — Interests in trusts or partnerships.

(5) Amount distributed or paid where a share — Where

(a) the amount of property distributed by a corporation or otherwise appropriated to or for the benefit of its shareholders as described in paragraph (2)(a), or

(b) the amount paid by a corporation as described in paragraph (3)(a) or (4)(a),

includes a share of the capital stock of the corporation, for the purposes of subsections (2) to (4) the following rules apply:

(c) in computing the amount referred to in paragraph (a) at any time, the share shall be valued at an amount equal to its paid-up capital at that time, and

(d) in computing the amount referred to in paragraph (b) at any time, the share shall be valued at an amount equal to the amount by which the paid-up capital in respect of the class of shares to which it belongs has increased by virtue of its issue.

Related Provisions: 51(3), 86(2.1) — Computation of paid-up capital after share exchange.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-291R3: Transfer of property to a corporation under subsection 85(1).

(6) Where subsec. (2) or (3) does not apply — Subsection (2) or (3), as the case may be, is not applicable

(a) in respect of any transaction or event, to the extent that subsection (1) is applicable in respect of that transaction or event; and

(b) in respect of any purchase by a corporation of any of its shares in the open market, if the corporation acquired those shares in the manner in which shares would normally be purchased by any member of the public in the open market.

(7) When dividend payable — A dividend that is deemed by this subsection or section 84.1, 128.1 or 212.1 to have been paid at a particular time is deemed, for the purposes of this subdivision and sections 131 and 133, to have become payable at that time.

Proposed Amendment — 84(7)

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), s. 15, will amend subsec. 84(7) to substitute "this section" for "this subsection", applicable to dividends deemed to have been paid after February 23, 1998.

Technical Notes: Subsection 84(7) provides that a dividend deemed under sections 84, 128.1 or 212.1 to have been paid at a particular time as a dividend is also regarded, for the purposes of Subdivision h of Division B in Part I and sections 131 and 133, to have become payable at that time. Subsection 84(7) is amended to replace the reference to subsection 84(7) with a reference to section 84.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, April 8, 2003:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter of January 27, 2003 to Kerry Harnish of this Division requesting that the phrase "deemed by this subsection" in subsection 84(7) of the Income Tax Act be replaced by the phrase "deemed by this section".

In particular, prior to an amendment in 1998, subsection 84(7) of the Act referred to certain dividends. The 1998 amendment added a reference to section 128.1 and replaced the words "deemed by this section" with the words "deemed by this subsection". You note that the change to refer to "this subsection" appears to have been inadvertent and ask that the matter be corrected by an amendment. Among other things, you note that the explanatory note accompanying the amendment refers to dividends deemed to have been paid under section 84 rather than under subsection 84(7), which does not deem any dividend to have been paid.

We agree that the reference to "this subsection" in subsection 84(7) of the Act should be a reference to "this section". Consequently, we are prepared to recommend that subsection 84(7) be amended to correct this deficiency and that the amendment apply after February 23, 1998, which is the application date of the 1998 amendment. We would anticipate including the recommended change in a future technical bill of amendments.

Thank you for bringing your concerns to my attention.

Yours sincerely,

[Gerard Lalonde for] Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Related Provisions: 15(1) — Appropriation of property to a shareholder.

History: Subsec. 84(7) amended by 1999, c. 22, s. 23, applicable after February 23, 1998. It formerly read:

(7) A dividend that is deemed by this section or section 84.1 or 212.1 to have been paid at a particular time shall be deemed, for the purposes of this subdivision and sections 131 and 133, to have become payable at that time.

Subsec. 84(7) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 62(3), applicable with respect to dividends paid after 1988. Subsec. (7) formerly read:

(7) A dividend that is deemed by this section or by section 212.1 to have been paid at a particular time shall be deemed, for the purposes of this subdivision, to have become payable at that time.

(8) Where subsec. (3) does not apply — Subsection (3) does not apply to deem a dividend to have been received by a shareholder of a public corporation where the shareholder is an individual resident in Canada who deals at arm's length with the corporation and the shares redeemed, acquired or cancelled are prescribed shares of the capital stock of the corporation.

Regulations: 6206 (prescribed shares — Class I shares of Reed Stenhouse).

(9) Shares disposed of on redemptions, etc. — For greater certainty it is declared that where a shareholder of a corporation has disposed of a share of the capital stock of the corporation as a result of the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of the share by the corporation, the shareholder shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to have disposed of the share to the corporation.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-243R4: Dividend refund to private corporations; IT-444R: Corporations — involuntary dissolutions; IT-484R2: Business investment losses.

(10) Reduction of contributed surplus — For the purpose of paragraph (1)(c.3), there shall be deducted in determining at any time a corporation's contributed surplus that arose after March 31, 1977 in any manner described in that paragraph the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which the amount of a dividend paid by the corporation at or before that time and after March 31, 1977 and when it was a public corporation exceeded its retained earnings immediately before the payment of the dividend, and

(b) the amount of its contributed surplus immediately before the payment of the dividend referred to in paragraph (a) that arose after March 31, 1977.

Related Provisions: 84(11) — Computation of contributed surplus; 87(2)(y) — Amalgamations — contributed surplus.

History: Subsec. 84(10) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 62(4), applicable to the determination after July 13, 1990 of the contributed surplus of a corporation.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-463R2: Paid-up capital.

(11) Computation of contributed surplus — For the purpose of subparagraph (1)(c.3)(ii), where the property acquired by the corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "acquiring corporation") consists of shares (in this subsection referred to as the "subject shares") of any class of the capital stock of another corporation resident in Canada (in this subsection referred to as the "subject corporation") and, immediately after the acquisition of the subject shares, the subject corporation would be connected (within the meaning that would be assigned by subsection 186(4) if the references in that subsection to "payer corporation" and "particular corporation" were read as "subject corporation" and "acquiring corporation", respectively) with the acquiring corporation, the contributed surplus of the acquiring corporation that arose on the acquisition of the subject shares shall be deemed to be the lesser of

(a) the amount added to the contributed surplus of the acquiring corporation on the acquisition of the subject shares, and

(b) the amount, if any, by which the paid-up capital in respect of the subject shares at the time of the acquisition exceeded the fair market value of any consideration given by the acquiring corporation for the subject shares.

Related Provisions: 84(10) — Reduction of contributed surplus; 186(7) — Interpretation of "connected".

History: Subsec. 84(11) added by 1994, c. 21, subsec. 35(2), applicable to actions occurring after December 20, 1992.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-463R2: Paid-up capital.

84.1 (1) Non-arm's length sale of shares — Where after May 22, 1985 a taxpayer resident in Canada (other than a corporation) disposes of shares that are capital property of the taxpayer (in this section referred to as the "subject shares") of any class of the capital stock of a corporation resident in Canada (in this section referred to as the "subject corporation") to another corporation (in this section referred to as the "purchaser corporation") with which the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length and, immediately after the disposition, the subject corporation would be connected (within the meaning assigned by subsection 186(4) if the references therein to "payer corporation" and to "particular corporation" were read as "subject corporation" and "purchaser corporation" respectively) with the purchaser corporation,

(a) where shares (in this section referred to as the "new shares") of the purchaser corporation have been issued as consideration for the subject shares, in computing the paid-up capital, at any particular time after the issue of the new shares, in respect of any particular class of shares of the capital stock of the purchaser corporation, there shall be deducted an amount determined by the formula

where

A is the increase, if any, determined without reference to this section as it applies to the acquisition of the subject shares, in the paid-up capital in respect of all shares of the capital stock of the purchaser corporation as a result of the issue of the new shares,

B is the amount, if any, by which the greater of

(i) the paid-up capital, immediately before the disposition, in respect of the subject shares, and

(ii) subject to paragraphs (2)(a) and (a.1), the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer, immediately before the disposition, of the subject shares, exceeds the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of any consideration (other than the new shares) received by the taxpayer from the purchaser corporation for the subject shares, and

C is the increase, if any, determined without reference to this section as it applies to the acquisition of the subject shares, in the paid-up capital in respect of the particular class of shares as a result of the issue of the new shares; and

(b) for the purposes of this Act, a dividend shall be deemed to be paid to the taxpayer by the purchaser corporation and received by the taxpayer from the purchaser corporation at the time of the disposition in an amount determined by the formula

where

A is the increase, if any, determined without reference to this section as it applies to the acquisition of the subject shares, in the paid-up capital in respect of all shares of the capital stock of the purchaser corporation as a result of the issue of the new shares,

D is the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of any consideration (other than the new shares) received by the taxpayer from the purchaser corporation for the subject shares,

E is the greater of

(i) the paid-up capital, immediately before the disposition, in respect of the subject shares, and

(ii) subject to paragraphs (2)(a) and (a.1), the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer, immediately before the disposition, of the subject shares, and

F is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount required to be deducted by the purchaser corporation under paragraph (a) in computing the paid-up capital in respect of any class of shares of its capital stock by virtue of the acquisition of the subject shares.

(2) Idem — For the purposes of this section,

(a) where a share disposed of by a taxpayer was acquired by a taxpayer before 1972, the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the share at any time shall be deemed to be the total of

(i) the amount that would be its adjusted cost base to the taxpayer if the Income Tax Application Rules were read without reference to subsections 26(3) and (7) of that Act, and

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount received by the taxpayer after 1971 and before that time as a dividend on the share and in respect of which the corporation that paid the dividend has made an election under subsection 83(1);

(a.1) where a share disposed of by a taxpayer was acquired by the taxpayer after 1971 from a person with whom the taxpayer was not dealing at arm's length, was a share substituted for such a share or was a share substituted for a share owned by the taxpayer at the end of 1971, the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the share at any time shall be deemed to be the amount, if any, by which its adjusted cost base to the taxpayer, otherwise determined, exceeds the total of

(i) where the share or a share for which the share was substituted was owned at the end of 1971 by the taxpayer or a person with whom the taxpayer did not deal at arm's length, the amount in respect of that share equal to the amount, if any, by which

(A) the fair market value of the share or the share for which it was substituted, as the case may be, on valuation day (within the meaning assigned by section 24 of the Income Tax Application Rules)

exceeds the total of

(B) the actual cost (within the meaning assigned by subsection 26(13) of that Act) of the share or the share for which it was substituted, as the case may be, on January 1, 1972, to the taxpayer or the person with whom the taxpayer did not deal at arm's length, and

(C) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount received by the taxpayer or the person with whom the taxpayer did not deal at arm's length after 1971 and before that time as a dividend on the share or the share for which it was substituted and in respect of which the corporation that paid the dividend has made an election under subsection 83(1), and

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount determined after 1984 under subparagraph 40(1)(a)(i) in respect of a previous disposition of the share or a share for which the share was substituted (or such lesser amount as is established by the taxpayer to be the amount in respect of which a deduction under section 110.6 was claimed) by the taxpayer or an individual with whom the taxpayer did not deal at arm's length;

(b) in respect of any disposition described in subsection (1) by a taxpayer of shares of the capital stock of a subject corporation to a purchaser corporation, the taxpayer shall, for greater certainty, be deemed not to deal at arm's length with the purchaser corporation if the taxpayer

(i) was, immediately before the disposition, one of a group of fewer than 6 persons that controlled the subject corporation, and

(ii) was, immediately after the disposition, one of a group of fewer than 6 persons that controlled the purchaser corporation, each member of which was a member of the group referred to in subparagraph (i); and

(c) [Repealed]

(d) a trust and a beneficiary of the trust or a person related to a beneficiary of the trust shall be deemed not to deal with each other at arm's length.

History: Paras. 84.1(2)(a.2), (c) and (e) repealed by 1998, c. 19, subsecs. 115(1) to (3), the repeal of para. (a.2) applicable to 1994 et seq. and the repeal of paras. (c) and (e) in force on June 18, 1998. The paras. formerly read:

(a.2) for the purposes of paragraph (a.1), where a corporation (in this paragraph referred to as the "issuing corporation") issues previously unissued shares of a class of its capital stock (in this paragraph referred to as the "new shares") to a taxpayer, the taxpayer and the issuing corporation shall be deemed not to have been dealing with each other at arm's length at the time the new shares were acquired by the taxpayer;

(c) for the purposes of determining whether or not a taxpayer referred to in paragraph (b) was a member of a group of fewer than 6 persons that controlled a corporation at any time, any shares of the capital stock of that corporation owned at that time by

(i) the taxpayer's child (within the meaning assigned by subsection 70(10)), who is under 18 years of age, or the taxpayer's spouse,

(ii) a trust of which the taxpayer, a person described in subparagraph (i) or a corporation described in subparagraph (iii), is a beneficiary, or

(iii) a corporation controlled by the taxpayer, by a person described in subparagraph (i), by a trust described in subparagraph (ii) or by any combination thereof shall be deemed to be owned at that time by the taxpayer and not by the person who actually owned the shares at that time;

(e) for the purpose of paragraph (b),

(i) a group of persons in respect of a corporation means any 2 or more persons each of whom owns shares of the capital stock of the corporation,

(ii) a corporation that is controlled by one or more members of a particular group of persons in respect of that corporation shall be considered to be controlled by that group of persons, and

(iii) a corporation may be controlled by a person or a particular group of persons notwithstanding that the corporation is also controlled or deemed to be controlled by another person or group of persons.

(2.01) Rules for para. 84.1(2)(a.1) — For the purpose of paragraph (2)(a.1),

(a) where at any time a corporation issues a share of its capital stock to a taxpayer, the taxpayer and the corporation are deemed not to be dealing with each other at arm's length at that time;

(b) where a taxpayer is deemed by paragraph 110.6(19)(a) to have reacquired a share, the taxpayer is deemed to have acquired the share at the beginning of February 23, 1994 from a person with whom the taxpayer was not dealing at arm's length; and

(c) where a share owned by a particular person, or a share substituted for that share, has by one or more transactions or events between persons not dealing at arm's length become vested in another person, the particular person and the other person are deemed at all times not to be dealing at arm's length with each other whether or not the particular person and the other person coexisted.

History: Subsec. 84.1(2.01) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 115(4), applicable to 1994 et seq., except that para. 84.1(2.01)(c) is applicable in respect of the determination of the adjusted cost base of a share after June 20, 1996.

(2.1) Idem — For the purposes of subparagraph (2)(a.1)(ii), where the taxpayer or an individual with whom the taxpayer did not deal at arm's length (in this subsection referred to as the "transferor") disposes of a share in a taxation year and claims an amount under subparagraph 40(1)(a)(iii) in computing the gain for the year from the disposition, the amount in respect of which a deduction under section 110.6 was claimed in respect of the transferor's gain from the disposition shall be deemed to be equal to the lesser of

(a) the total of

(i) the amount claimed under subparagraph 40(1)(a)(iii) by the transferor for the year in respect of the disposition, and

(ii) twice the amount deducted under section 110.6 in computing the taxable income of the transferor for the year in respect of the taxable capital gain from the disposition, and

(b) twice the maximum amount that could have been deducted under section 110.6 in computing the taxable income of the transferor for the year in respect of the taxable capital gain from the disposition if

(i) no amount had been claimed by the transferor under subparagraph 40(1)(a)(iii) in computing the gain for the year from the disposition, and

(ii) all amounts deducted under section 110.6 in computing the taxable income of the transferor for the year in respect of taxable capital gains from dispositions of property to which this subsection does not apply were deducted before determining the maximum amount that could have been deducted under section 110.6 in respect of the taxable capital gain from the disposition, and, for the purposes of subparagraph (ii), ½ of the total of all amounts determined under this subsection for the year in respect of other property disposed of before the disposition of the share shall be deemed to have been deducted under section 110.6 in computing the taxable income of the transferor for the year in respect of the taxable capital gain from the disposition of property to which this subsection does not apply, and, for the purposes of this subsection, where more than one share to which this subsection applies is disposed of in the year, each such share shall be deemed to have been separately disposed of in the order designated by the taxpayer in the taxpayer's return of income under this Part for the year.

History: Subsec. 84.1(2.1) amended by 2001, c. 17, s. 61, to replace references to the expression "⅔ of" with references to the word "twice" and to replace the reference to the fraction "¾" with a reference to the fraction "½", applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000 except that, for a taxation year of a taxpayer that includes February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000, or began after February 28, 2000 and ended before October 17, 2000, the references to the word "twice" shall be read as references to the expression "the fraction that is the reciprocal of the fraction in para. 38(a), as amended by 2001, c. 17, that applies to the taxpayer for the year multiplied by" and the reference to the fraction "½" shall be read as a reference to the fraction in para. 38(a), as amended by 2001, c. 17, that applies to the taxpayer for the year.

Subsec. 84.1(2.1) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 62(4), applicable to dispositions occurring after July 13, 1990.

(a) in determining whether or not a taxpayer referred to in that paragraph was a member of a group of fewer than 6 persons that controlled a corporation at any time, any shares of the capital stock of that corporation owned at that time by

(i) the taxpayer's child (as defined in subsection 70(10)), who is under 18 years of age, or the taxpayer's spouse or common-law partner,

(ii) a trust of which the taxpayer, a person described in subparagraph (i) or a corporation described in subparagraph (iii), is a beneficiary, or

(iii) a corporation controlled by the taxpayer, by a person described in subparagraph (i) or (ii) or by any combination of those persons or trusts are deemed to be owned at that time by the taxpayer and not by the person who actually owned the shares at that time;

(b) a group of persons in respect of a corporation means any 2 or more persons each of whom owns shares of the capital stock of the corporation;

(c) a corporation that is controlled by one or more members of a particular group of persons in respect of that corporation is considered to be controlled by that group of persons; and

(d) a corporation may be controlled by a person or a particular group of persons even though the corporation is also controlled or deemed to be controlled by another person or group of persons.

Related Provisions: 256(6), (6.1) — Extended meaning of "controlled".

History: Subsec. 84.1(2.2) amended by 2000, c. 12, Sch. 2, s. 1, to replace "spouse" with "spouse or common-law partner", applicable to 2001 et seq., in force July 31, 2000. See also the transitional rules reproduced in the History to 248(1)"common-law partner".

Subsec. 84.1(2.2) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 115(5), in force on June 18, 1998.

(3) Addition to paid-up capital — In computing the paid-up capital at any time after May 22, 1985 in respect of any class of shares of the capital stock of a corporation, there shall be added an amount equal to the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deemed by subsection 84(3), (4) or (4.1) to be a dividend on shares of the class paid after May 22, 1985 and before that time by the corporation

exceeds

(ii) the total of such dividends that would be determined under subparagraph (i) if this Act were read without reference to paragraph (1)(a), and

(b) the total of all amounts required by paragraph (1)(a) to be deducted in computing the paid-up capital in respect of that class of shares after May 22, 1985 and before that time.

84.2 (1) Computation of paid-up capital in respect of particular class of shares — In computing the paid-up capital in respect of any particular class of shares of the capital stock of a corporation at any particular time after March 31, 1977,

(a) there shall be deducted that proportion of the amount, if any, by which the paid-up capital in respect of all of the issued shares of the capital stock of the corporation on April 1, 1977, determined without reference to this section, exceeds the greater of

(i) the amount that the paid-up capital limit of the corporation would have been on March 31, 1977 if paragraph 89(1)(d) of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, as it read at that date, were read without reference to clause 89(1)(d)(iv.1)(F) of that Act and without reference to all subparagraphs of paragraph 89(1)(d) of that Act except subparagraphs 89(1)(d)(iv.1) and (vii) of that Act, and that the paid-up capital on April 1, 1977, determined without reference to this section, in respect of the particular class of shares is of the paid-up capital on April 1, 1977, determined without reference to this section, in respect of all of the issued and outstanding shares of the capital stock of the corporation; and

(b) there shall be added an amount equal to the lesser of

(i) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deemed by subsection 84(3) or (4) to be a dividend on shares of the particular class paid by the corporation after March 31, 1977 and before the particular time

exceeds

(B) the total that would be determined under clause (A) if this Act were read without reference to paragraph (a), and

(ii) the amount required by paragraph (a) to be deducted in computing the paid-up capital of shares of the particular class.

(2) Debt deficiency — In computing, after March 31, 1977, the adjusted cost base to an individual of a debt that was owing to the individual by a corporation on March 31, 1977, there shall be deducted the amount of any dividend that would have been deemed to have been received by the individual on that day if the corporation had paid the debt in full on that day.

Related Provisions: 53(2)(p) — Deduction from ACB; 84.2(3) — Where debt converted to shares.

(3) Idem — Where, after March 31, 1977 and before 1979, any debt referred to in subsection (2) owing by a corporation and held by an individual on March 31, 1977 and continuously after that date until conversion, is converted into shares of a particular class of the capital stock of the corporation,

(a) subsection (2) shall not apply in respect of the debt; and

(b) in computing the paid-up capital in respect of the shares of the particular class at any particular time after the conversion,

(i) there shall be deducted the amount by which the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the debt would, but for paragraph (a), have been reduced by virtue of subsection (2), and

(ii) there shall be added an amount equal to the lesser of

(A) the amount, if any, by which

(I) the total of all amounts deemed by subsection 84(3), (4) or (4.1) to be a dividend on shares of the particular class paid by the corporation after the conversion and before the particular time,

exceeds

(II) the total that would be determined under subclause (I) if this Act were read without reference to subparagraph (i), and

(B) the amount required by subparagraph (i) to be deducted in computing the paid-up capital of shares of the particular class.

85. (1) Transfer of property to corporation by shareholders [rollover] — Where a taxpayer has, in a taxation year, disposed of any of the taxpayer's property that was eligible property to a taxable Canadian corporation for consideration that includes shares of the capital stock of the corporation, if the taxpayer and the corporation have jointly elected in prescribed form and in accordance with subsection (6), the following rules apply:

(a) [elected amount deemed to be proceeds and cost] — the amount that the taxpayer and the corporation have agreed on in their election in respect of the property shall be deemed to be the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the property and the corporation's cost of the property;

(b) [elected amount not less than boot] — subject to paragraph (c), where the amount that the taxpayer and the corporation have agreed on in their election in respect of the property is less than the fair market value, at the time of the disposition, of the consideration therefor (other than any shares of the capital stock of the corporation or a right to receive any such shares) received by the taxpayer, the amount so agreed on shall, irrespective of the amount actually so agreed on by them, be deemed to be an amount equal to that fair market value;

(c) [elected amount not more than FMV of property transferred] — where the amount that the taxpayer and the corporation have agreed on in their election in respect of the property is greater than the fair market value, at the time of the disposition, of the property so disposed of, the amount so agreed on shall, irrespective of the amount actually so agreed on, be deemed to be an amount equal to that fair market value;

(c.1) [elected amount minimum — most property] — where the property was inventory, capital property (other than depreciable property of a prescribed class), a NISA Fund No. 2 or a property that is eligible property because of paragraph (1.1)(g) or (g.1), and the amount that the taxpayer and corporation have agreed on in their election in respect of the property is less than the lesser of

(i) the fair market value of the property at the time of the disposition, and

(ii) the cost amount to the taxpayer of the property at the time of the disposition, the amount so agreed on shall, irrespective of the amount actually so agreed on by them, be deemed to be an amount equal to the lesser of the amounts described in subparagraphs (i) and (ii);

(c.2) [elected amount — farm inventory] — subject to paragraphs (b) and (c) and notwithstanding paragraph (c.1), where the taxpayer carries on a farming business the income from which is computed in accordance with the cash method and the property was inventory owned in connection with that business immediately before the particular time the property was disposed of to the corporation,

(i) the amount that the taxpayer and the corporation agreed on in their election in respect of inventory purchased by the taxpayer shall be deemed to be equal to the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount that would be included because of paragraph 28(1)(c) in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxpayer's last taxation year beginning before the particular time if that year had ended immediately before the particular time,

B is the value (determined in accordance with subsection 28(1.2)) to the taxpayer immediately before the particular time of the purchased inventory in respect of which the election is made,

C is the value (determined in accordance with subsection 28(1.2)) of all of the inventory purchased by the taxpayer that was owned by the taxpayer in connection with that business immediately before the particular time, and

D is such additional amount as the taxpayer and the corporation designate in respect of the property,

(ii) for the purpose of subparagraph 28(1)(a)(i), the disposition of the property and the receipt of proceeds of disposition therefor shall be deemed to have occurred at the particular time and in the course of carrying on the business, and

(iii) where the property is owned by the corporation in connection with a farming business and the income from that business is computed in accordance with the cash method, for the purposes of section 28,

(A) an amount equal to the cost to the corporation of the property shall be deemed to have been paid by the corporation, and

(B) the corporation shall be deemed to have purchased the property for an amount equal to that cost, at the particular time and in the course of carrying on that business;

(d) [elected amount minimum — eligible capital property] —,where the property was eligible capital property in respect of a business of the taxpayer and the amount that, but for this paragraph, would be the proceeds of disposition of the property is less than the least of

(i) 4/3 of the taxpayer's cumulative eligible capital in respect of the business immediately before the disposition,

(ii) the cost to the taxpayer of the property, and

(iii) the fair market value of the property at the time of the disposition,

the amount agreed on by the taxpayer and the corporation in their election in respect of the property shall, irrespective of the amount actually so agreed on by them, be deemed to be the least of the amounts described in subparagraphs (i) to (iii);

(d.1) [eligible capital property] — for the purpose of determining after the time of the disposition the amount to be included under paragraph 14(1)(b) in computing the corporation's income, there shall be added to the amount otherwise determined for Q in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount, if any, determined for Q in that definition in respect of the taxpayer's business immediately before the time of the disposition,

B is the fair market value immediately before that time of the eligible capital property disposed of to the corporation by the taxpayer,

C is the fair market value immediately before that time of all eligible capital property of the taxpayer in respect of the business,

D is the amount, if any, that would be included under subsection 14(1) in computing the taxpayer's income as a result of the disposition if the values determined for C and D in paragraph 14(1)(b) were zero, and

E is the amount, if any, that would be included under subsection 14(1) in computing the taxpayer's income as a result of the disposition if the value determined for D in paragraph 14(1)(b) were zero;

Proposed Amendment — 85(1)(d.1)

(d.1) [eligible capital property] — for the purpose of determining after the disposition time the amount to be included under paragraph 14(1)(b) in computing the corporation's income, there shall be added to the amount otherwise determined for C in that paragraph the amount determined by the formula

$$1/2 \times [(A \times B/C) - 2(D - E)] + F + G$$

where

A is the amount, if any, determined for Q in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) in respect of the taxpayer's business immediately before the time of the disposition,

B is the fair market value immediately before the disposition time of the eligible capital property disposed of to the corporation by the taxpayer,

C is the total of the fair market value immediately before the disposition time of all eligible capital property of the taxpayer in respect of the business and each amount that was described in B in respect of an earlier disposition made after the taxpayer's adjustment time,

D is the amount, if any, that would be included under subsection 14(1) in computing the taxpayer's income as a result of the disposition if the values determined for C and D in paragraph 14(1)(b) were zero,

E is the amount, if any, that would be included under subsection 14(1) in computing the taxpayer's income as a result of the disposition if the value determined for D in paragraph 14(1)(b) were zero,

F is the total of all amounts, each of which is an amount determined under this paragraph as it applied to the taxpayer in respect of a disposition to the corporation on or before the disposition time, and

G is the total of all amounts, each of which is an amount determined under subparagraph 88(1)(c.1)(ii) as it applied to the taxpayer in respect of a winding-up before the disposition time;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 42(1), will amend para. 85(1)(d.1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years of a corporation that end after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 85(1)(d.11), (d.12) below.

Proposed Addition — 85(1)(d.11), (d.12)

(d.11) [eligible capital property] — for the purpose of determining after the time of the disposition (referred to in this paragraph and in paragraphs (d.1) and (d.12) as the "disposition time") the amount to be included under paragraph 14(1)(a) or (b) in computing the corporation's income, there shall be added to the amount otherwise determined for each of A and F in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) the amount, if any, determined by the formula

$$(A \times B/C) + D + E$$

where

A is the amount, if any, that would be determined for F in that definition in respect of the taxpayer's business at the beginning of the taxpayer's following taxation year if the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the disposition time had ended immediately after the disposition time and if, in respect of the disposition, this Act were read without reference to paragraph (d.12),

B is the fair market value immediately before the disposition time of the eligible capital property disposed of to the corporation by the taxpayer,

C is the fair market value immediately before the disposition time of all eligible capital property of the taxpayer in respect of the business and each amount that was described in B in respect of an earlier disposition made after the taxpayer's adjustment time (within the meaning in subsection 14(5)),

D is the total of all amounts, each of which is an amount determined under this paragraph as it applied to the taxpayer in respect of a disposition to the corporation on or before the disposition time, and

E is the total of all amounts, each of which is an amount determined under subparagraph 88(1)(c.1)(i) as it applied to the taxpayer in respect of a winding-up before the disposition time;

(d.12) [eligible capital property] — for the purpose of determining after the disposition time the amount to be included under paragraph 14(1)(a) or (b) in computing the taxpayer's income, the amount, if any, determined by the formula in paragraph (d.11) in respect of the disposition is to be deducted from each of the amounts otherwise determined

(i) by subparagraph 14(1)(a)(ii), and

(ii) for the description of B in paragraph 14(1)(b);

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 42(2), will add paras. 85(1)(d.11) and (d.12), applicable in respect of the disposition of an eligible capital property by a taxpayer to a corporation unless

(a) the disposition by the taxpayer occurred before December 21, 2002; and

(b) the corporation disposed of the eligible capital property, before June 7, 2007 and in a taxation year of the corporation ending after February 27, 2000, to a person with whom the corporation was dealing at arm's length at the time of that disposition by the corporation.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 85(1) provides a tax deferral for the transfer of various types of property by a taxpayer to a taxable Canadian corporation for consideration that includes shares of the corporation's capital stock. In general, tax deferral may be achieved if the taxpayer and the corporation jointly elect that the proceeds of disposition of the taxpayer and the eligible capital expenditure of, or cost to, the corporation are deemed to be less than the fair market value of the property transferred.

Paragraph 85(1)(d.1) generally reduces, for the corporation that has acquired an eligible capital property (ECP), the gain that would be included in income under paragraph 14(1)(b) on a subsequent disposition of the property. Paragraph 85(1)(d.1) adjusts the gain, in order to take into account the 1988 change of the rate of income inclusion and expenditure deductibility from ½ to ¾, by adjusting the calculation of variable Q in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5). Variable Q generally represents, for the period prior to the taxpayer's "adjustment time", the difference between ECP deductions claimed under paragraph 20(1)(b) and the total of recapture and gains from prior dispositions of eligible capital property by the taxpayer. Paragraph 85(1)(d.1) adjusts variable Q only for the purposes of calculating the amount to be included in a corporation's income under paragraph 14(1)(b), but not for the purpose of calculating the corporation's cumulative eligible capital balance for other purposes, such as the claiming of ECP deductions. Specifically, the adjustment of variable Q adjusts the value of variables A, B and C in the formula in paragraph 14(1)(b). Variables A and B are affected indirectly, since variable Q affects variable F in the calculation of the cumulative eligible capital balance.

Paragraph 85(1)(d.1) is amended concurrently with the addition of new paragraph 85(1)(d.11). New paragraph 85(1)(d.11) generally applies to ensure that an amount that would have been recaptured ECP deductions to the taxpayer under subsection 14(1), if the taxpayer had disposed of the eligible capital property for an amount greater than the taxpayer's cumulative eligible capital at the time of the disposition, is subject to recapture in the hands of the corporation upon a subsequent sale of the property. This result is achieved by adding an allocation of the potential recapture to the taxpayer (i.e., variable F of the taxpayer) simultaneously to the corporation's eligible capital expenditures and aggregate ECP deductions (i.e., variables A and F respectively in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" of the corporation). This adjustment applies only for the purpose of calculating the amount to be included in income of the corporation under subsection 14(1) upon the subsequent disposition of eligible capital property. In this regard, variable F of the taxpayer is determined at the beginning of the taxpayer's following taxation year if the taxpayer's taxation year that included the transfer had ended immediately after the disposition time, determined without reference to new paragraph (d.12). Variable F of the taxpayer is apportioned to the corporation, by means of the quotient B/C in paragraph 85(1)(d.11), in the same proportion as the fair market value of the property transferred is to the fair market values of all such property transferred before that transfer and the fair market value of the total eligible capital property of the taxpayer immediately before the transfer.

Because new paragraph 85(1)(d.11) now accommodates variable F of the corporation, paragraph 85(1)(d.1) is amended to add 1/2 of the taxpayer's variable Q amount directly to the corporation's variable C amount in paragraph 14(1)(b), rather than adjusting variable Q of the corporation (and thus variable F as well). The quotient B/C in paragraph 85(1)(d.1) provides that this adjustment to the corporation is in the same proportion as the fair market value of the property transferred at a particular time is to the total of the fair market values of all such property transferred before that transfer and the fair market value of the total eligible capital property of the taxpayer immediately before the transfer.

New variables F and G of paragraph 85(1)(d.1) provide that the adjustments under this paragraph, and similar earlier adjustments to the taxpayer under paragraph 88(1)(e.1), are not lost on a subsequent rollover.

New paragraph 85(1)(d.12) is added, concurrently with new paragraph 85(1)(d.11), to ensure that a subsequent disposition of other ECP by the taxpayer does not result in recapture of depreciation under paragraph 14(1)(a) when the resulting gain from that disposition should have been taxed at a lower rate under paragraph 14(1)(b). This could happen, for instance, if the taxpayer were to defer all of the recapture to the corporation, such that the taxpayer's cumulative eligible capital balance at the end of the taxation year that includes the rollover is nil. In this case, if in the next taxation year the taxpayer were to make another disposition of ECP, paragraph 85(1)(d.12) would reduce to nil the amounts that would be determined for the taxpayer by subparagraph 14(1)(a) and variable B of paragraph 14(1)(b).

These amendments generally apply in respect of dispositions by a corporation that occur after December 20, 2002.

Example of 85(1)(d.1) and (d.11)

Mr. X purchased an eligible capital property in 1984 (when the income inclusion rate for eligible capital property was one half) at a cost of $300,000. This was the first and only eligible capital property held in respect of his business. Mr. X claimed deductions of $40,650 under paragraph 20(1)(b) of the Act before his "adjustment time" (in the case of Mr. X, January 1, 1988), and of $11,482 subsequent to that time. Mr. X now transfers the property to a corporation in circumstances to which subsection 85(1) applies. Immediately before the time of the transfer, the fair market value of the property is $500,000. Mr. X and the corporation agree that the proceeds of disposition to Mr. X will be $203,391, which is 4/3 of the cumulative eligible capital balance of $152,543. The balance is calculated as follows:

Eligible capital expenditure	$300,000
Rate applicable in 1984	50%
	150,000
Depreciation before 1988	<40,650>
Cumulative eligible capital at adjustment time	109,350
"C" amount: 3/2 of 109,350	164,025

"Q" amount: depreciation before 1988	<40,650>
Cumulative eligible capital of Mr. X	$152,543

Upon the subsequent sale of the property by the corporation for actual proceeds of disposition of $500,000, the amount included in the corporation's income under subsection 14(1) is calculated as follows:

Agreed amount of eligible capital expenditure (4/3 of $152,543)			$203,391
Eligible capital expenditure rate			75%

(e) [elected amount minimum — depreciable property] — where the property was depreciable property of a prescribed class of the taxpayer and the amount that, but for this paragraph, would be the proceeds of disposition thereof is less than the least of

(i) the undepreciated capital cost to the taxpayer of all property of that class immediately before the disposition,

(ii) the cost to the taxpayer of the property, and

(iii) the fair market value of the property at the time of the disposition,

the amount agreed on by the taxpayer and the corporation in their election in respect of the property shall, irrespective of the amount actually so agreed on by them, be deemed to be the least of the amounts described in subparagraphs (i) to (iii);

(e.1) [order of dispositions] — where two or more properties, each of which is a property described in paragraph (d) or each of which is a property described in paragraph (e), are disposed of at the same time, paragraph (d) or (e), as the case may be, applies as if each property so disposed of had been separately disposed of in the order designated by the taxpayer before the time referred to in subsection (6) for the filing of an election in respect of those properties or, if the taxpayer does not so designate any such order, in the order designated by the Minister;

(e.2) [where excess is benefit to related person] — where the fair market value of the property immediately before the disposition exceeds the greater of

(i) the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of the consideration received by the taxpayer for the property disposed of by the taxpayer, and

(ii) the amount that the taxpayer and the corporation have agreed on in their election in respect of the property, determined without reference to this paragraph,

and it is reasonable to regard any part of the excess as a benefit that the taxpayer desired to have conferred on a person related to the taxpayer (other than a corporation that was a wholly owned corporation of the taxpayer immediately after the disposition), the amount that the taxpayer and the corporation agreed on in their election in respect of the property shall, regardless of the amount actually so agreed on by them, be deemed (except for the purposes of paragraphs (g) and (h)) to be an amount equal to the total of the amount referred to in subparagraph (ii) and that part of the excess;

(e.3) [conflict between deeming rules and para. (b)] — where, under any of paragraphs (c.1), (d) and (e), the amount that the taxpayer and the corporation have agreed on in their election in respect of the property (in this paragraph referred to as "the elected amount") would be deemed to be an amount that is greater or less than the amount that would be deemed, subject to paragraph (c), to be the elected amount under paragraph (b), the elected amount shall be deemed to be the greater of

(i) the amount deemed by paragraph (c.1), (d) or (e), as the case may be, to be the elected amount, and

(ii) the amount deemed by paragraph (b) to be the elected amount;

(e.4) [transfer of automobile costing over $30,000] — where

(i) the property is depreciable property of a prescribed class of the taxpayer and is a passenger vehicle the cost to the taxpayer of which was more than $20,000 or such other amount as may be prescribed, and

(ii) the taxpayer and the corporation do not deal at arm's length,

the amount that the taxpayer and the corporation have agreed on in their election in respect of the property shall be deemed to be an amount equal to the undepreciated capital cost to the taxpayer of the class immediately before the disposition, except that, for the purposes of subsection 6(2), the cost to the corporation of the vehicle shall be deemed to be an amount equal to its fair market value immediately before the disposition;

(f) [deemed cost of boot] — the cost to the taxpayer of any particular property (other than shares of the capital stock of the corporation or a right to receive any such shares) received by the taxpayer as consideration for the disposition shall be deemed to be an amount equal to the lesser of

(i) the fair market value of the particular property at the time of the disposition, and

(ii) that proportion of the fair market value, at the time of the disposition, of the property disposed of by the taxpayer to the corporation that

(A) the amount determined under subparagraph (i)

is of

(B) the fair market value, at the time of the disposition, of all properties (other than shares of the capital stock of the corporation or a right to receive any such shares) received by the taxpayer as consideration for the disposition;

(g) [deemed cost of preferred shares] — the cost to the taxpayer of any preferred shares of any class of the capital stock of the corporation receivable by the taxpayer as consideration for the disposition shall be deemed to be the lesser of the fair market value of those shares immediately after the disposition and that proportion of the amount, if any, by which the proceeds of the disposition exceed the fair market value of the consideration (other than shares of the capital stock of the corporation or a right to receive any such shares) received by the taxpayer for the disposition, that

(i) the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of those preferred shares of that class,

(ii) the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of all preferred shares of the capital stock of the corporation receivable by the taxpayer as consideration for the disposition;

(h) [deemed cost of common shares] — the cost to the taxpayer of any common shares of any class of the capital stock of the corporation receivable by the taxpayer as consideration for the disposition shall be deemed to be that proportion of the amount, if any, by which the proceeds of the disposition exceed the total of the fair market value, at the time of the disposition, of the consideration (other than shares of the capital stock of the corporation or a right to receive any such shares) received by the taxpayer for the disposition and the cost to the taxpayer of all preferred shares of the capital stock of the corporation receivable by the taxpayer as consideration for the disposition, that

(i) the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of those common shares of that class,

(ii) the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of all common shares of the capital stock of the corporation receivable by the taxpayer as consideration for the disposition; and

(i) [transfer of taxable Canadian property] — where the property so disposed of is taxable Canadian property of the taxpayer, all of the shares of the capital stock of the Canadian corporation received by the taxpayer as consideration for the property are deemed to be, at any time that is within 60 months after the disposition, taxable Canadian property of the taxpayer.

History: Para. 85(1)(i) amended by 2010, c. 12, s. 6, to substitute "are deemed to be, at any time that is within 60 months after the disposition, taxable" for "shall be deemed to be taxable", applicable in determining after March 4, 2010 whether a property is taxable Canadian property of a taxpayer.

The descriptions of D and E in para. 85(1)(d.1) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 62(1), applicable in respect of taxation years that end after February 27, 2000. The descriptions formerly read:

D is the amount, if any, that would be included under subsection 14(1) in computing the taxpayer's income as a result of the disposition if

(i) the amounts determined for C and D in subparagraph 14(1)(a)(v) were zero, and

(ii) paragraph 14(1)(b) were read as follows:

"(b) in any other case, the excess shall be included in computing the taxpayer's income from that business for that year.", and

E is the amount, if any, that would be included under subsection 14(1) in computing the taxpayer's income as a result of the disposition if the amount determined for D in subparagraph 14(1)(a)(v) were zero;

The opening words of para. 85(1)(c.1) amended by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 53(1), applicable to dispositions occurring after February 22, 1994. The opening words of para. (c.1) formerly read:

(c.1) where the property of the taxpayer was inventory, capital property (other than depreciable property of a prescribed class), a NISA Fund No. 2 or a property (other than capital property or an inventory) of the taxpayer that is a security or debt obligation used in the year in, or held in the year in the course of, carrying on the business of insurance or lending money, and the amount that the taxpayer and corporation have agreed on in their election in respect of the property is less than the lesser of Para. 85(1)(d.1) amended by 1995, c. 3, s. 22, applicable to dispositions of property in respect of a business that occur in a fiscal period of the business that ends after February 22, 1994 otherwise than because of an election under subsec. 25(1). Para. (d.1) formerly read:

(d.1) for the purpose of determining after the time of the disposition the amount to be included under paragraph 14(1)(b) in computing the corporation's income, there shall be added to the amount otherwise determined for Q in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount, if any, determined for Q in that definition in respect of the taxpayer's business immediately before the time of the disposition,

B is the fair market value immediately before that time of the eligible capital property disposed of to the corporation by the taxpayer,

C is the fair market value immediately before that time of all eligible capital property of the taxpayer in respect of the business,

D is the amount, if any, that would be included under subsection 14(1) in computing the taxpayer's income as a result of the disposition if paragraph 14(1)(b) were read as follows:

"(b) in any other case, the excess shall be included in computing the taxpayer's income from that business for that year.",

E is the amount, if any, that would be deemed under subsection 14(1) to be a taxable capital gain of the taxpayer as a result of the disposition if clause 14(1)(a)(v)(B) were read as follows:

"(B) zero"

F is the amount, if any, included under subsection 14(1) in computing the taxpayer's income as a result of the disposition, and

G is the amount, if any, deemed under subsection 14(1) to be a taxable capital gain of the taxpayer as a result of the disposition;

Para. 85(1)(d.1) substituted by 1994, c. 21, subsec. 36(1), applicable to the disposition of property to a corporation occurring after the beginning of its first taxation year that begins after June 1988. That para. formerly read:

(d.1) for the purpose of determining after the time of the disposition the amount to be included under paragraph 14(1)(b) in computing the corporation's income, there shall be added to the amount otherwise determined for Q in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount, if any, determined for Q in that definition in respect of the taxpayer's business immediately before the time of the disposition,

B is the fair market value immediately before that time of the eligible capital property disposed of to the corporation by the taxpayer, and

C is the fair market value immediately before that time of all eligible capital property of the taxpayer in respect of the business;

That portion of para. 85(1)(c.1) preceding subpara. (i) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 35(1), to substitute "where the property of the taxpayer" for "where the property" and to add reference to "a NISA Fund No. 2", applicable to dispositions occurring after 1990.

Para. 85(1)(d.1) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 35(2), applicable to the disposition of property to a corporation occurring after the beginning of its first taxation year beginning after June 1988.

Para. 85(1)(c.2) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 64(1), applicable to dispositions occurring after July 13, 1990.

That portion of para. 85(1)(e.2) following subpara. (ii) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 64(2), to add "(other than the corporation, where all of its issued shares, except directors' qualifying shares, are owned by the taxpayer immediately before the disposition)." applicable to dispositions occurring after June 1988.

(1.1) Definition of "eligible property" — For the purposes of subsection (1), "eligible property" means

(a) a capital property (other than real property, or an interest in or an option in respect of real property, owned by a non-resident person);

(b) a capital property that is real property, or an interest in or an option in respect of real property, owned by a non-resident insurer where that property and the property received as consideration for that property are designated insurance property for the year;

Proposed Amendment — 85(1.1)(a), (b)

(a) a capital property (other than real or immovable property, an option in respect of such property, or an interest in real property or a real right in an immovable, owned by a non-resident person);

(b) a capital property that is real or immovable property, an option in respect of such property, or an interest in real property or a real right in an immovable, owned by a non-resident insurer where that property and the property received as consideration for that property are designated insurance property for the year;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — bijuralism), subsec. 206(1), will amend paras. 85(1.1)(a) and (b) to read as above, to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 12(4).

(c) a Canadian resource property;

(d) a foreign resource property;

(e) an eligible capital property;

(f) an inventory (other than real property, an interest in real property or an option in respect of real property);

Proposed Amendment — 85(1.1)(f)

(f) an inventory (other than real or immovable property, an option in respect of such property, or an interest in real property or a real right in an immovable);

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — bijuralism), subsec. 206(2), will amend para. 85(1.1)(f) to read as above, to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 12(4).

(g) a property that is a security or debt obligation used by the taxpayer in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of, carrying on the business of insurance or lending money, other than

(i) a capital property,

(ii) inventory, or

(iii) where the taxpayer is a financial institution in the year, a mark-to-market property for the year;

(g.1) where the taxpayer is a financial institution in the year, a specified debt obligation (other than a mark-to-market property of the taxpayer for the year);

(h) a capital property that is real property, an interest in real property or an option in respect of real property, owned by a non-resident person (other than a non-resident insurer) and used in the year in a business carried on in Canada by that person; or

Proposed Amendment — 85(1.1)(h)

(h) a capital property that is real or immovable property, an option in respect of such property, or an interest in real property or a real right in an immovable, owned by a non-resident person (other than a non-resident insurer) and used in the year in a business carried on in Canada by that person; or

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — bijuralism), subsec. 206(3), will amend para. 85(1.1)(h) to read as above, to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 12(4).

(i) a NISA Fund No. 2, if that property is owned by an individual.

Related Provisions: 85(1.11) — Exception — foreign resource property or interest in FIE; 85(1.2) — Limitation on 85(1.1)(h); 248(4) — Interest in real property includes a leasehold interest but not a security interest; 248(4.1) — Meaning of "real right in an immovable".

History: Para. 85(1.1)(i) amended to add ", if that property is owned by an individual" by 2007, c. 35, s. 22, applicable to the balance in a NISA Fund No. 2 to the extent that that blance consists of contributions made to the fund, and amounts earned on those contributions, in 2008 et seq.

Para. 85(1.1)(b) amended by 1997, c. 25, s. 17, applicable to dispositions that occur in an insurer's 1997 or subsequent taxation year. Para. (b) formerly read:

(b) a capital property that is real property or an interest in or an option in respect of real property, owned by a non-resident insurer where that property and the property received as consideration for that property are property used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of (within the meaning assigned by subsection 138(12)), carrying on an insurance business in Canada;

Para. 85(1.1)(g) amended, and para. (g.1) added, by 1995, c. 21, subsecs. 53(2), (3); para. (g) applicable to dispositions occurring in taxation years that begin after October 1994, and para. (g.1) applicable to dispositions occurring after February 22, 1994. Para. (g) formerly read:

(g) a property (other than a capital property or an inventory) that is a security or debt obligation used by the taxpayer in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of, carrying on the business of insurance or lending money;

Para. 85(1.1)(i) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 35(4), applicable to dispositions occurring after 1990.

Para. 85(1.1)(h) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 64(3), applicable to

(a) dispositions occurring after 1989, and

(b) dispositions occurring after 1984 where the taxpayer is a resident of a country with which Canada has a tax treaty and a provision of that treaty that was prescribed for the purposes of section 115.1 of the Act was effective at the time the disposition occurred.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-291R3: Transfer of property to a corporation under subsection 85(1).

(1.11) Exception — Notwithstanding subsection (1.1), a foreign resource property, or an interest in a partnership that derives all or part of its value from one or more foreign resource properties, is not an eligible property of a taxpayer in respect of a disposition by the taxpayer to a corporation where

(a) the taxpayer and the corporation do not deal with each other at arm's length; and

(b) it is reasonable to conclude that one of the purposes of the disposition, or a series of transactions or events of which the disposition is a part, is to increase the extent to which any person may claim a deduction under section 126.

Related Provisions: 251(1) — Arm's length.

History: Subsec. 85(1.11) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 62(2), applicable to dispositions that occur after December 21, 2000 other than a disposition by a taxpayer that occurs pursuant to an agreement in writing made by the taxpayer on or before that date.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-291R3: Transfer of property to a corporation under subsection 85(1).

(1.2) Application of subsec. (1) [to non-resident vendor] — Subsection (1) does not apply to a disposition by a taxpayer to a corporation of a property referred to in paragraph (1.1)(h) unless

(a) immediately after the disposition, the corporation is controlled by the taxpayer, a person or persons related (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) to the taxpayer or the taxpayer and a person or persons so related to the taxpayer;

(b) the disposition is part of a transaction or series of transactions in which all or substantially all of the property used in the business referred to in paragraph (1.1)(h) is disposed of by the taxpayer to the corporation; and

(c) the disposition is not part of a series of transactions that result in control of the corporation being acquired by a person or group of persons after the time that is immediately after the disposition.

Related Provisions: 139.1(18) — Holding corporation deemed not to acquire control of insurer on demutualization; 256(6)–(9) — Whether control acquired.

History: Subsec. 85(1.2) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 64(4), applicable to

(a) dispositions occurring after 1989, and

(b) dispositions occurring after 1984 where the taxpayer is a resident of a country with which Canada has a tax treaty and a provision of that treaty that was prescribed for the purposes of section 115.1 of the said Act was effective at the time the disposition occurred,

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-291R3: Transfer of property to a corporation under subsection 85(1).

(1.3) Meaning of "wholly owned corporation" — For the purposes of this subsection and paragraph (1)(e.2), "wholly owned corporation" of a taxpayer means a corporation all the issued and outstanding shares of the capital stock of which (except directors' qualifying shares) belong to

(a) the taxpayer;

(b) a corporation that is a wholly owned corporation of the taxpayer; or

(c) any combination of persons described in paragraph (a) or (b).

History: Subsec. 85(1.3) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 64(4), applicable to dispositions occurring after June 1988.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-291R3: Transfer of property to a corporation under subsection 85(1).

(1.4) Definitions — For the purpose of subsection (1.1), "financial institution", "mark-to-market property" and "specified debt obligation" have the meanings assigned by subsection 142.2(1).

History: Subsec. 85(1.4) added by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 53(4), applicable to dispositions occurring after February 22, 1994.

(2) Transfer of property to corporation from partnership — Where

(a) a partnership has disposed, to a taxable Canadian corporation for consideration that includes shares of the corporation's capital stock, of any partnership property that was

(i) a capital property (other than real property, or an interest in or an option in respect of real property, where the partnership was not a Canadian partnership at the time of the disposition),

Proposed Amendment — 85(2)(a)(i)

(i) a capital property (other than real or immovable property, an option in respect of such property, or an interest in real property or a real right in an immovable, where the partnership was not a Canadian partnership at the time of the disposition),

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — bijuralism), subsec. 206(4), will amend subpara. 85(2)(a)(i) to read as above, to come into force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 12(4).

(ii) a property described in any of paragraphs (1.1)(c) to (f), or

(iii) a property that would be described in paragraph (1.1)(g) or (g.1) if the references in those paragraphs to "taxpayer" were read as "partnership", and

(b) the corporation and all the members of the partnership have jointly so elected, in prescribed form and within the time referred to in subsection (6), paragraphs (1)(a) to (i) are applicable, with such modifications as the circumstances require, in respect of the disposition as if the partnership were a taxpayer resident in Canada who had disposed of the property to the corporation.

(2.1) Computing paid-up capital — Where subsection (1) or (2) applies to a disposition of property (other than a disposition of property to which section 84.1 or 212.1 applies) to a corporation by a person or partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "taxpayer"),

(a) in computing the paid-up capital in respect of any particular class of shares of the capital stock of the corporation at the time of, and at any time after, the issue of shares of the capital stock of the corporation in consideration for the disposition of the property, there shall be deducted an amount determined by the formula

where

A is the increase, if any, determined without reference to this section as it applies to the disposition of the property, in the paid-up capital in respect of all the shares of the capital stock of the corporation as a result of the acquisition by the corporation of the property,

B is the amount, if any, by which the corporation's cost of the property, immediately after the acquisition, determined under subsection (1) or (2), as the case may be, exceeds the fair market value, immediately after the acquisition, of any consideration (other than shares of the capital stock of the corporation) received by the taxpayer from the corporation for the property, and

C is the increase, if any, determined without reference to this section as it applies to the disposition of the property, in the paid-up capital in respect of the particular class of shares as a result of the acquisition by the corporation of the property; and

(b) in computing the paid-up capital, at any time after November 21, 1985, in respect of any class of shares of the capital stock of a corporation, there shall be added an amount equal to the lesser of

(i) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deemed by subsection 84(3), (4) or (4.1) to be a dividend on shares of that class paid after November 21, 1985 and before that time by the corporation

exceeds

(B) the total of such dividends that would be determined under clause (A) if the Act were read without reference to paragraph (a), and

(ii) the total of all amounts required by paragraph (a) to be deducted in computing the paid-up capital in respect of that class of shares after November 21, 1985 and before that time.

Related Provisions: 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: All that portion of subsec. 85(2.1) preceding the formula in para. (a) substituted by 1994, c. 21, subsec. 36(2), applicable to dispositions occurring after November 21, 1985 and, notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), such assessments and determinations in respect of any taxation year may be made as are consequential on the application of the provision, as amended, to dispositions occurring before 1993. That portion of the subsec. formerly read:

(2.1) Computation of paid-up capital — Where subsection (1) or (2) has been applicable in respect of a disposition to a corporation, after November 21, 1985, of property (other than a disposition of property in respect of which section 84.1 or 212.1 applies) by a person or partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "taxpayer"), the following rules apply:

(a) in computing the paid-up capital, at any time after the disposition of the property, in respect of any particular class of shares of the capital stock of the corporation, there shall be deducted an amount determined by the formula

(3) Where partnership wound up — Where,

(a) in respect of any disposition of partnership property of a partnership to a corporation, subsection (2) applies,

(b) the affairs of the partnership were wound up within 60 days after the disposition, and

(c) immediately before the winding-up there was no partnership property other than money or property received from the corporation as consideration for the disposition,

the following rules apply:

(d) the cost to any member of the partnership of any property (other than shares of the capital stock of the corporation or a right to receive any such shares) received by the member as consideration for the disposition of the member's partnership interest on the winding-up shall be deemed to be the fair market value of the property at the time of the winding-up,

(e) the cost to any member of the partnership of any preferred shares of any class of the capital stock of the corporation receivable by the member as consideration for the disposition of the member's partnership interest on the winding-up shall be deemed to be

(i) where any common shares of the capital stock of the corporation were also receivable by the member as consideration for the disposition of the interest, the lesser of

(A) the fair market value, immediately after the winding-up, of the preferred shares of that class so receivable by the member, and

(B) that proportion of the amount, if any, by which the adjusted cost base to the member of the member's partnership interest immediately before the winding-up exceeds the total of the fair market value, at the time of the winding-up, of the consideration (other than shares of the capital stock of the corporation or a right to receive any such shares) received by the member for the disposition of the interest, that

(I) the fair market value, immediately after the winding-up, of the preferred shares of that class so receivable by the member,

is of

(II) the fair market value, immediately after the winding-up, of all preferred shares of the capital stock of the corporation receivable by the member as consideration for the disposition, and

(ii) in any other case, the amount determined under clause (i)(B),

(f) the cost to any member of the partnership of any common shares of any class of the capital stock of the corporation receivable by the member as consideration for the disposition of the member's partnership interest on the winding-up shall be deemed to be that proportion of the amount, if any, by which the adjusted cost base to the member of the member's partnership interest immediately before the winding-up exceeds the total of the fair market value, at the time of the winding-up, of the consideration (other than shares of the capital stock of the corporation or a right to receive any such shares) received by the member for the disposition of the interest and the cost to the member of all preferred shares of the capital stock of the corporation receivable by the member as consideration for the disposition of the interest, that

(i) the fair market value, immediately after the winding-up, of the common shares of that class so receivable by the member,

(ii) the fair market value, immediately after the winding-up, of all common shares of the capital stock of the corporation so receivable by the member as consideration for the disposition,

(g) the proceeds of disposition of the partnership interest of any member of the partnership shall be deemed to be the cost to the member of all shares and property receivable or received by the member as consideration for the disposition of the interest plus the amount of any money received by the member as consideration for the disposition, and

(h) where the partnership has distributed partnership property referred to in paragraph (c) to a member of the partnership, the partnership shall be deemed to have disposed of that property for proceeds equal to the cost amount to the partnership of the property immediately before its distribution.

(4) [Repealed]

History: Subsec. 85(4) repealed by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 116(3), applicable, subject to s. 247 of 1998, c. 19 (grandfathering rule reproduced at the end of the Act), to dispositions of property that occur after April 26, 1995. The subsec. formerly read:

(4) Loss from disposition to controlled corporation — Where a taxpayer or a partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "taxpayer") disposes of any capital property (other than depreciable property of a prescribed class) of the taxpayer or eligible capital property in respect of a business of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer would, but for this subsection, be permitted a deduction under paragraph 24(1)(a), to a corporation that immediately after the disposition is controlled, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, by the taxpayer, by the spouse of the taxpayer or by a person or group of persons by whom the taxpayer is controlled, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever,

(a) notwithstanding any other provision of this Act,

(i) the capital loss therefrom, and

(ii) any deduction under paragraph 24(1)(a) in respect of the business in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year in which the taxpayer ceased to carry on the business shall be deemed to be nil; and

(b) except where the property so disposed of was, immediately after the disposition, an obligation that was payable to the corporation by another corporation that is related to the corporation or by a corporation or a partnership that would be related to the corporation if paragraph 80(2)(j) applied for the purpose of this paragraph, in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of all shares of any particular class of the capital stock of the corporation owned by the taxpayer immediately after the disposition, there shall be added that proportion of the amount, if any, by which

(i) the cost amount to the taxpayer immediately before the disposition of the property so disposed of,

exceeds the total of

(ii) the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the property or, where the property is an eligible capital property, 4/3 of the taxpayer's eligible capital amount resulting from the disposition of the property, and

(ii.1) where the property disposed of by the taxpayer is a share of the capital stock of a corporation, the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that, but for paragraphs (a) and 40(2)(e), would be deducted

(A) under subsection 93(2) or 112(3) or (3.2) in computing a loss of the taxpayer from the disposition, or

(B) where the taxpayer is a partnership, by a corporation that is a member of the partnership under subsection 112(3.1) in computing its share of the loss of the partnership from the disposition, that

(iii) the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of all shares of that class so owned by the taxpayer,

is of

(iv) the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of all shares of the capital stock of the corporation so owned by the taxpayer.

Subpara. 85(4)(b)(ii) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 116(2), applicable

(a) in the case of a corporation, to dispositions by it of property that occur after the beginning of its first taxation year that begins after June 1988; and

(b) in any other case, to dispositions of property in respect of a business that occur after the beginning of the first fiscal period, that begins after 1987, of the business.

(5.1) Idem — Where a person or a partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "taxpayer") has disposed of any depreciable property of a prescribed class of the taxpayer to a transferee that was

(a) a corporation that, immediately after the disposition, was controlled, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, by the taxpayer, by the spouse of the taxpayer or by a person, group of persons or partnership by whom or which the taxpayer was controlled, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever,

(b) a person, spouse of a person, member of a group of persons or partnership who or that immediately after the disposition controlled the taxpayer, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, or

(c) a partnership and, immediately after the disposition, the taxpayer's interest in the partnership as a member thereof is as described in paragraph 97(3.1)(a) or (b), and the fair market value of the property at the time of the disposition is less than both the cost to the taxpayer of the property and the amount (in this subsection referred to as the "proportionate amount") that is the proportion of the undepreciated capital cost to the taxpayer of all property of that class immediately before the disposition that the fair market value of the property at the time of the disposition is of the fair market value of all property of that class at the time of disposition, the following rules apply:

(d) subsections (1) and (2) and section 97 are not applicable with respect to the disposition,

(e) the lesser of the cost to the taxpayer of the property and the proportionate amount in respect of the property shall be deemed to be the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition and the transferee's cost of the property,

(f) where two or more depreciable properties of a prescribed class of the taxpayer are disposed of at the same time, paragraph (e) applies as if each property so disposed of had been separately disposed of in the order designated by the taxpayer or, if the taxpayer does not so designate any such order, in the order designated by the Minister, and

(g) the cost to the taxpayer of any particular property received by the taxpayer as consideration for the disposition shall be deemed to be an amount equal to the lesser of

(i) the fair market value of the particular property at the time of the disposition, and

(ii) that proportion of the fair market value, at the time of the disposition, of the property disposed of by the taxpayer that

(A) the amount determined under subparagraph (i)

(9) Unpaid balance of penalty — The Minister shall, with all due dispatch, examine each election and amended election referred to in paragraph (7)(a) or (7.1)(c), assess the penalty payable and send a notice of assessment to the taxpayer or partnership, as the case may be, and the taxpayer or partnership, as the case may be, shall pay forthwith to the Receiver General the amount, if any, by which the penalty so assessed exceeds the total of all amounts previously paid on account of that penalty.

85.1 (1) Share for share exchange — Where shares of any particular class of the capital stock of a Canadian corporation (in this section referred to as the "purchaser") are issued to a taxpayer (in this section referred to as the "vendor") by the purchaser in exchange for a capital property of the vendor that is shares of any particular class of the capital stock (in this section referred to as the "exchanged shares") of another corporation that is a taxable Canadian corporation (in this section referred to as the "acquired corporation"), subject to subsection (2),

(a) except where the vendor has, in the vendor's return of income for the taxation year in which the exchange occurred, included in computing the vendor's income for that year any portion of the gain or loss, otherwise determined, from the disposition of the exchanged shares, the vendor shall be deemed

(i) to have disposed of the exchanged shares for proceeds of disposition equal to the adjusted cost base to the vendor of those shares immediately before the exchange, and

(ii) to have acquired the shares of the purchaser at a cost to the vendor equal to the adjusted cost base to the vendor of the exchanged shares immediately before the exchange, and where the exchanged shares were taxable Canadian property of the vendor, the shares of the purchaser so acquired by the vendor are deemed to be, at any time that is within 60 months after the exchange, taxable Canadian property of the vendor; and

(b) the cost to the purchaser of each exchanged share, at any time up to and including the time the purchaser disposed of the share, shall be deemed to be the lesser of

(i) its fair market value immediately before the exchange, and

(ii) its paid-up capital immediately before the exchange.

History: The closing words of para. 85.1(1)(a) amended by 2010, c. 12, subsec. 7(1), to substitute "are deemed to be, at any time that is within 60 months after the exchange, taxable" for "shall be deemed to be taxable", applicable in determining after March 4, 2010 whether a property is taxable Canadian property of a taxpayer.

That portion of subsec. 85.1(1) preceding para. (a) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), s. 36, applicable to exchanges of shares occurring after December 20, 1991. That portion formerly read:

85.1 (1) Where shares of any particular class of the capital stock of a Canadian corporation (in this section referred to as the "purchaser") have, after May 6, 1974, been issued to a taxpayer (in this section referred to as the "vendor") by the purchaser in exchange for capital property of the vendor that is shares of any particular class of the capital stock (in this section referred to as the "exchanged shares") of another corporation (in this section referred to as the "acquired corporation"), subject to subsection (2), the following rules apply:

(2) Where subsec. (1) does not apply — Subsection (1) does not apply where

(a) the vendor and purchaser were, immediately before the exchange, not dealing with each other at arm's length (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b) that is a right of the purchaser to acquire the exchanged shares);

(b) the vendor or persons with whom the vendor did not deal at arm's length, or the vendor together with persons with whom the vendor did not deal at arm's length,

(i) controlled the purchaser, or

(ii) beneficially owned shares of the capital stock of the purchaser having a fair market value of more than 50% of the fair market value of all of the outstanding shares of the capital stock of the purchaser, immediately after the exchange;

(c) the vendor and the purchaser have filed an election under subsection 85(1) or (2) with respect to the exchanged shares;

(d) consideration other than shares of the particular class of the capital stock of the purchaser was received by the vendor for the exchanged shares, notwithstanding that the vendor may have disposed of shares of the capital stock of the acquired corporation (other than the exchanged shares) to the purchaser for consideration other than shares of one class of the capital stock of the purchaser; or

(e) the vendor

(i) is a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada at the end of the taxation year of the vendor in which the exchange occurred, and

(ii) has included any portion of the gain or loss, otherwise determined, from the disposition of the exchanged shares in computing its foreign accrual property income for the taxation year of the vendor in which the exchange occurred.

Related Provisions: 256(6), (6.1) — Meaning of "controlled".

History: Para. 85.1(2)(e) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 63(1), applicable to exchanges that occur after 1995.

Para. 85.1(2)(a) substituted by 1994, c. 21, s. 37, applicable to exchanges occurring after December 21, 1992. That para. formerly read:

(a) the vendor and purchaser were, immediately before the exchange, not dealing with each other at arm's length;

(2.1) Computation of paid-up capital — Where, at any time, a purchaser has issued shares of its capital stock as a result of an exchange to which subsection (1) applied, in computing the paid-up capital in respect of any particular class of shares of its capital stock at any particular time after that time

(a) there shall be deducted that proportion of the amount, if any, by which

(i) the increase, if any, as a result of the issue, in the paid-up capital in respect of all the shares of the capital stock of the purchaser, computed without reference to this subsection as it applies to the issue,

exceeds

(ii) the paid-up capital in respect of all of the exchanged shares received as a result of the exchange

that

(iii) the increase, if any, as a result of the issue, in the paid-up capital in respect of the particular class of shares, computed without reference to this subsection as it applies to the issue,

is of

(iv) the amount, if any, determined in subparagraph (i) in respect of the issue; and

(b) there shall be added an amount equal to the lesser of

(i) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deemed by subsection 84(3), (4) or (4.1) to be a dividend on shares of that class paid by the purchaser before the particular time

exceeds

(B) the total that would be determined under clause (A) if this Act were read without reference to paragraph (a), and

(ii) the total of all amounts required by paragraph (a) to be deducted in respect of that particular class of shares before the particular time.

Proposed Addition — 85.1(2.2)

(2.2) Issuance deemed made to vendor — For the purposes of subsection (1), if a purchaser issues shares of a class of its capital stock (in this subsection referred to as "purchaser shares") to a trust under a court-approved plan or scheme of arrangement in consideration for which a vendor disposes of exchanged shares that trade on a designated stock exchange to the purchaser solely for purchaser shares that are widely traded on a designated stock exchange immediately after and as part of completion of the plan or scheme of arrangement, the issuance to the trust is deemed to be an issuance to the vendor.

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 16(1), will add subsec. 85.1(2.2), applicable to share exchanges made after June 2005 except that it does not apply to a particular share exchange of a taxpayer that occurs before November 5, 2010 if, within six months of being advised by the Minister of National Revenue that the amendment applies to the exchange, the taxpayer elects not to have it apply to the exchange.

Technical Notes: New subsection 85.1(2.2) provides a deeming rule for the purpose of subsection 85.1(1) under which certain share issues made by a taxable Canadian corporation (the purchaser corporation) to a trust under a court-approved plan of arrangement are deemed to be issued to a person (the vendor) who exchanges the vendor's shares of a taxable Canadian corporation for the shares issued by the purchaser corporation. For this deeming rule to apply, the vendor must dispose of the vendor's shares to the purchaser corporation solely for the shares issued by the purchaser corporation. As well, the vendor's shares must trade on a designated stock exchange and be disposed of for shares of the purchaser corporation that are widely traded on a designated stock exchange immediately after and as part of completion of the plan of arrangement.

(3) Disposition of shares of foreign affiliate — Where a taxpayer has disposed of capital property that was shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer to any corporation that was, immediately following the disposition, a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer (in this subsection referred to as the "acquiring affiliate") for consideration including shares of the capital stock of the acquiring affiliate,

(a) the cost to the taxpayer of any property (other than shares of the capital stock of the acquiring affiliate) receivable by the taxpayer as consideration for the disposition shall be deemed to be the fair market value of the property at the time of the disposition;

(b) the cost to the taxpayer of any shares of any class of the capital stock of the acquiring affiliate receivable by the taxpayer as consideration for the disposition shall be deemed to be that proportion of the amount, if any, by which the total of the adjusted cost bases to the taxpayer, immediately before the disposition, of the shares disposed of exceeds the fair market value at that time of the consideration receivable for the disposition (other than shares of the capital stock of the acquiring affiliate) that

(i) the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of those shares of the acquiring affiliate of that class

is of

(ii) the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of all shares of the capital stock of the acquiring affiliate receivable by the taxpayer as consideration for the disposition;

(c) the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the shares shall be deemed to be an amount equal to the cost to the taxpayer of all shares and other property receivable by the taxpayer from the acquiring affiliate as consideration for the disposition; and

(d) the cost to the acquiring affiliate of the shares acquired from the taxpayer shall be deemed to be an amount equal to the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition referred to in paragraph (c).

(4) Exception — Subsection (3) is not applicable in respect of a disposition at any time by a taxpayer of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate, all or substantially all of the property of which at that time was excluded property (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(1)), to another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer where the disposition is part of a series of transactions or events for the purpose of disposing of the share to a person who, immediately after the series of transactions or events, was a person (other than a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer) with whom the taxpayer was dealing at arm's length.

Proposed Amendment — 85.1(4)

(4) Exception — Subsection (3) does not apply in respect of a disposition at any time by a taxpayer of a share of the capital stock of a particular foreign affiliate of the taxpayer to another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer if

(a) both

(i) all or substantially all of the property of the particular affiliate was, immediately before that time, excluded property (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(1)) of the particular affiliate, and

(ii) the disposition is part of a transaction or event or a series of transactions or events for the purpose of disposing of the share to a person or partnership that, immediately after the transaction, event or series, was a person or partnership (other than a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest (within the meaning assigned by paragraph 95(2)(m)) at the time of the transaction or event or throughout the series, as the case may be) with whom the taxpayer was dealing at arm's length; or

(b) the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the share at that time is greater than the amount that would, in the absence of subsection (3), be the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the share in respect of the disposition.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), s. 9, will amend subsec. 85.1(4) to read as above, applicable in respect of dispositions that occur after August 19, 2011.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: Subsection 85.1(4) is an exception to the rule in subsection 85.1(3) which otherwise allows a taxpayer to transfer the shares of a foreign affiliate to another foreign affiliate on a "rollover" basis. Subsection 85.1(4) is an anti-avoidance provision that provides that the rollover in subsection 85.1(3) will not apply where a share of one foreign affiliate, which was transferred to a second foreign affiliate, is subsequently sold as part of the same series of transactions to an arm's length party (other than a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer) if all or substantially all of the first affiliate's property is excluded property (as defined in subsection 95(1)).

Subsection 85.1(4) is being amended in a number of ways, as follows.

A new exception is being added such that the rollover in subsection 85.1(3) will no longer apply where the shares transferred have an inherent loss. The intention is to have these transfers subject to the same rules as other transfers of capital property, as contemplated by subsections 40(3.3) and (3.4). In other words, the loss on such dispositions of foreign affiliate shares would be suspended and released only upon the sale of the shares outside of the affiliated group, or upon the other types of release events set out in paragraph 40(3.4)(b). A further implication of this new rule is that it would no longer be possible to shift the loss over to shares of a transferee affiliate nor to duplicate these losses by creating an inherent loss for the transferee affiliate.

The introduction of the new exception to subsection 85.1(3) has necessitated the restructuring of subsection 85.1(4) into paragraphs (a) and (b). The new exception is contained in paragraph (b); the existing exception is in paragraph (a).

The existing exception, now contained in paragraph (a), is also being amended. First, the rule will now capture dispositions that are part of a single transaction or event, as well as those that are part of a series. Second, the rule will now also apply to dispositions to arm's length partnerships. Third, the carve-out for foreign affiliate purchasers is being narrowed such that only arm's length foreign affiliates in which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest (as defined in paragraph 95(2)(m)) will be exempted from this anti-avoidance rule.

Related Provisions: 248(10) — Series of transactions.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-243R4: Dividend refund to private corporations; IT-291R3: Transfer of property to a corporation under subsection 85(1).

(5) Foreign share for foreign share exchange — Subject to subsections (3) and (6) and 95(2), where a corporation resident in a country other than Canada (in this section referred to as the "foreign purchaser") issues shares of its capital stock (in this section referred to as the "issued foreign shares") to a vendor in exchange for shares of the capital stock of another corporation resident in a country other than Canada (in this section referred to as the "exchanged foreign shares") that were immediately before the exchange capital property of the vendor, except where the vendor has, in the vendor's return of income for the taxation year in which the exchange occurred, included in computing the vendor's income for that year any portion of the gain or loss, otherwise determined, from the disposition of the exchanged foreign shares, the vendor is deemed

(a) to have disposed of the exchanged foreign shares for proceeds of disposition equal to the adjusted cost base to the vendor of those shares immediately before the exchange, and

(b) to have acquired the issued foreign shares at a cost to the vendor equal to the adjusted cost base to the vendor of the exchanged foreign shares immediately before the exchange, and where the exchanged foreign shares were taxable Canadian property of the vendor, the issued foreign shares so acquired by the vendor are deemed to be, at any time that is within 60 months after the exchange, taxable Canadian property of the vendor.

Related Provisions: 85.1(6) — Where rollover does not apply; 85.1(6.1) — Issuance to trust under court-approved plan; 86.1(1) — Foreign spinoff; 95(2)(f.6)(i) — No FAPI rollover where 85.1(5) applies; 107(2)(d.1)(iii), 107.4(3)(f) — Deemed taxable Canadian property retains status when rolled out of trust or into trust; 248(25.1) — Deemed taxable Canadian property retains status through trust-to-trust transfer.

History: The closing words of subsec. 85.1(5) amended by 2010, c. 12, subsec. 7(2), to substitute "to be, at any time that is within 60 months after the exchange, taxable" for "to be taxable", applicable in determining after March 4, 2010 whether a property is taxable Canadian property of a taxpayer.

Subsec. 85.1(5) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 63(2), applicable to exchanges that occur after 1995.

(6) Where subsection (5) does not apply — Subsection (5) does not apply where

(a) the vendor and foreign purchaser were, immediately before the exchange, not dealing with each other at arm's length (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b) that is a right of the foreign purchaser to acquire the exchanged foreign shares);

(b) immediately after the exchange the vendor, persons with whom the vendor did not deal at arm's length or the vendor together with persons with whom the vendor did not deal at arm's length

(i) controlled the foreign purchaser, or

(ii) beneficially owned shares of the capital stock of the foreign purchaser having a fair market value of more than 50% of the fair market value of all of the outstanding shares of the capital stock of the foreign purchaser;

(c) consideration other than issued foreign shares was received by the vendor for the exchanged foreign shares, notwithstanding that the vendor may have disposed of shares of the capital stock of the other corporation referred to in subsection (5) (other than the exchanged foreign shares) to the foreign purchaser for consideration other than shares of the capital stock of the foreign purchaser;

(d) the vendor

(i) is a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada at the end of the taxation year of the vendor in which the exchange occurred, and

(ii) has included any portion of the gain or loss, otherwise determined, from the disposition of the exchanged foreign shares in computing its foreign accrual property income for the taxation year of the vendor in which the exchange occurred; or

(e) the vendor is a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada at the end of the taxation year of the vendor in which the exchange occurred and the exchanged foreign shares are excluded property (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(1)) of the vendor.

History: Subsec. 85.1(6) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 63(2), applicable to exchanges that occur after 1995.

Proposed Addition — 85.1(6.1)

(6.1) Issuance deemed made to vendor — For the purposes of subsection (5), if a foreign purchaser issues shares of a class of its capital stock (in this subsection referred to as "foreign purchaser shares") to a trust under a court-approved plan or scheme of arrangement in consideration for which a vendor disposes of exchanged foreign shares that trade on a designated stock exchange to the purchaser solely for foreign purchaser shares that are widely traded on a designated stock exchange immediately after and as part of completion of the plan or scheme of arrangement, the issuance to the trust is deemed to be an issuance to the vendor.

Application: The November 5, 2010 draft legislation (misc. technical), subsec. 16(2), will add subsec. 85.1(6.1), applicable to share exchanges made after June 2005 except that it does not apply to a particular share exchange of a taxpayer that occurs before November 5, 2010 if, within six months of being advised by the Minister of National Revenue that the amendment applies to the exchange, the taxpayer elects not to have it apply to the exchange.

Technical Notes: New subsection 85.1(6.1) provides a deeming rule for the purpose of subsection 85.1(5) under which certain share issues made by a foreign corporation (the foreign purchaser corporation) to a trust under a court-approved plan of arrangement are deemed to be issued to a person (the vendor) who exchanges the vendor's shares of a foreign corporation for the shares issued by the foreign purchaser corporation. For this deeming rule to apply, the vendor must dispose of the vendor's shares to the foreign purchaser corporation solely for the shares issued by the foreign purchaser corporation. As well, the vendor's shares must trade on a designated stock exchange and be disposed of for shares of the foreign purchaser corporation that are widely traded on a designated stock exchange immediately after and as part of completion of the plan of arrangement.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 16, 2005:

Dear [xxx]:

I am replying to your letters of July 14, 2005 and November 9, 2005, as well as your conversations with Davine Roach and Kerry Harnish of the Tax Legislation Division, concerning a corporate reorganization on July 20, 2005 of a widely-held foreign corporation the shares of which are listed on a prescribed stock exchange. During the reorganization, Canadian shareholders exchanged their shares of one of the foreign corporations in the corporate group for shares of another foreign corporation in the same corporate group.

As a general matter, subsection 85.1(5) of the Income Tax Act is meant to provide a rollover in respect of foreign share-for-share exchanges described in that subsection.

Your enquiry relates to the requirement in subsection 85.1(5) that the foreign purchaser corporation "issue" its shares to the vendor shareholder in exchange for shares of the capital stock of another foreign corporation. Your concern, and that of the Canada Revenue Agency, is that the shares of the foreign purchaser corporation were not issued to the Canadian shareholders although those shareholders did acquire the shares in consideration for the disposed of shares. You therefore request that subsection 85.1(5) be clarified to accommodate the particular foreign share-for-share exchange.

Based on the information provided to us, we are prepared to recommend that subsection 85.1(5) be amended to replace the issuance requirement with a requirement that the vendor shareholder acquire the shares of the foreign purchaser corporation (which shares become listed on a prescribed stock exchange) solely in exchange for shares of another foreign corporation (that are listed on a prescribed stock exchange). We would also recommend that any such amendment apply to such share-for-share exchanges made on or after July 1, 2005. While we cannot, as you know, offer an assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our position is helpful to you.

Thank you for bringing your concerns to our attention.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber
General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(7) Application of subsec. (8) — Subsection (8) applies in respect of the disposition before 2013 by a taxpayer of SIFT wind-up entity equity (referred to [in] subsection (8) as the "particular unit") to a taxable Canadian corporation if

Proposed Amendment — 85.1(7) opening words

(7) Application of subsec. (8) — Subsection (8) applies in respect of the disposition before 2013 by a taxpayer of SIFT wind-up entity equity (referred to in subsection (8) as the "particular unit") to a taxable Canadian corporation if

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 14(1), will amend the opening words of subsec. 85.1(7) to read as above, in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: Subsections 85.1(7) and (8) are part of a set of rules that provide for the income tax effects on a reorganization into corporate form of a SIFT wind-up entity. Subsection 85.1(7) sets out the conditions that must be met in order for the rules in subsection 85.1(8) to apply to a taxpayer's disposition of equity in a SIFT wind-up entity to a corporation in exchange for a share of the corporation.

The opening words of subsection 85.1(7) are amended to correct a typographical error in the reference in subsection 85.1(8) to the term "particular unit".

(a) the disposition occurs during a period (referred to in this subsection and subsection (8) as the "exchange period") of no more than 60 days at the end of which all of the equity in the SIFT wind-up entity is owned by the corporation;

(b) the taxpayer receives no consideration for the disposition other than a share (referred to in this subsection and subsection (8) as the "exchange share") of the capital stock of the corporation that is issued during the exchange period to the taxpayer by the corporation;

(c) neither of subsections 85(1) and (2) applies to the disposition; and

(d) all of the exchange shares issued to holders of equity in the SIFT wind-up entity are shares of a single class of the capital stock of the corporation.

History: Subsec. 85.1(7) added by 2009, c. 2, s. 18, applicable to

(a) dispositions that occur after July 13, 2008; and

(b) a disposition, by a taxpayer to a corporation, that occurs on or after December 20, 2007 and before July 14, 2008, if the corporation (jointly with the taxpayer, if the taxpayer and the corporation have validly elected that subsec. 85(1) or (2) apply to the disposition) elects in writing, filed with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the corporation's filing-due date for its taxation year that includes March 12, 2009, that this amendment apply to the disposition.

(8) Rollover on SIFT unit for share exchange — If this subsection applies in respect of a disposition by a taxpayer of a particular unit of a SIFT wind-up entity to a corporation for consideration that is an exchange share, the following rules apply:

(a) the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the particular unit, and cost of the exchange share, are deemed to be equal to the cost amount to the taxpayer of the particular unit immediately before the disposition;

(b) if the particular unit was immediately before the disposition taxable Canadian property of the taxpayer, the exchange share is deemed to be, at any time that is within 60 months after the disposition, taxable Canadian property of the taxpayer;

(c) if the exchange share's fair market value immediately after the disposition exceeds the particular unit's fair market value at the time of the disposition, the excess is deemed to be an amount that section 15 requires to be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxpayer's taxation year in which the disposition occurs;

(d) if the particular unit's fair market value at the time of the disposition exceeds the exchange share's fair market value immediately after the disposition, and it is reasonable to regard any part of the excess as a benefit that the taxpayer desired to have conferred on a person, or partnership, with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length, the excess is deemed to be an amount that section 15 requires to be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxpayer's taxation year in which the disposition occurs;

(e) the cost to the corporation of the particular unit is deemed to be the lesser of

(i) the fair market value of the particular unit immediately before the disposition, and

(ii) the amount determined for B in the formula in paragraph (f) in respect of the particular unit; and

(f) in computing the paid[-]up capital in respect of each class of shares of the capital stock of the corporation at any time after the disposition there shall be deducted the amount determined by the formula

Proposed Amendment — 85.1(8)(f) opening words

(f) in computing the paid-up capital in respect of each class of shares of the capital stock of the corporation at any time after the disposition there shall be deducted the amount determined by the formula

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 14(2), will amend the opening words of para. 85.1(8)(f) to read as above, in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: Subsection 85.1(8) provides a number of the tax consequences to a taxpayer from a disposition described in subsection 85.1(7).

The opening words of paragraph 85.1(8)(f) are amended to correct a typographical error in the term "paid-up capital".

$$(A - B) \times C/A$$

where

A is the increase, if any, as a result of the disposition, in the paid-up capital in respect of all the shares of the capital stock of the corporation, computed without reference to this paragraph as it applies to the disposition,

B is the amount determined by the formula

$$D - E$$

where

D is

(i) unless subparagraph (ii) applies, the total of all amounts each of which is

(A) if the SIFT wind-up entity is a trust, the fair market value of property received by the SIFT wind-up entity on the issuance of the particular unit, or

(B) if the SIFT wind-up entity is a partnership,

(I) an amount that has at any time been added, in computing the adjusted cost base to any taxpayer of the particular unit on or before the disposition, because of subparagraph 53(1)(e)(iv) or (x), or

(II) an amount that would at any time have been added, in computing the adjusted cost base to any taxpayer of the particular unit on or before the disposition, because of subparagraph 53(1)(e)(i) if subsection 96(1) were read without reference to its paragraph (d) and the partnership deducted all amounts otherwise deductible because of that paragraph, and

(ii) if the SIFT wind-up entity has on or after the end of the exchange period issued a unit, nil, and

E is the total of all amounts each of which

(i) if the SIFT wind-up entity is a trust, has become payable by the SIFT wind-up entity, in respect of the particular unit, to any holder of the unit on or before the disposition, other than an amount that has become payable out of its income (determined without reference to subsection 104(6)) or capital gains, and

(ii) if the SIFT wind-up entity is a partnership,

(A) has at any time been deducted, in computing the adjusted cost base to any taxpayer of the particular unit on or before the disposition, because of subparagraph 53(2)(c)(iv) or (v), or

(B) would have at any time been deducted, in computing the adjusted cost base to any taxpayer of the particular unit on or before the disposition, because of subparagraph 53(2)(c)(i) if subsection 96(1) were read without reference to its paragraph (d) and the partnership deducted all amounts otherwise deductible because of that paragraph, and

C is the increase, if any, as a result of the disposition, in the paid-up capital in respect of the class of shares, computed without reference to this paragraph as it applies to the disposition.

Related Provisions: 40(3.5)(b.1) — SIFT wind-up corporation deemed identical property for 40(3.3)–(3.4); 85.1(7) — Conditions for 85.1(8) to apply; 88.1(2), 107(3.1) — Alternative mechanism of wind-up of SIFT trust; 107.4(3)(f) — Deemed taxable Canadian property retains status on rollover; 128.3 — Deferral applies to post-emigration disposition for certain purposes; 248(25.1) — Deemed TCP retains status through trust-to-trust transfer; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: Para. 85.1(8)(b) amended by 2010, c. 12, subsec. 7(3), to substitute "to be, at any time that is within 60 months after the disposition, taxable" for "to be taxable", applicable in determining after March 4, 2010 whether a property is taxable Canadian property of a taxpayer.

Subsec. 85.1(8) added by 2009, c. 2, s. 18, applicable to

(a) dispositions that occur after July 13, 2008; and

(b) a disposition, by a taxpayer to a corporation, that occurs on or after December 20, 2007 and before July 14, 2008, if the corporation (jointly with the taxpayer, if the taxpayer and the corporation have validly elected that subsec. 85(1) or (2) apply to the disposition) elects in writing, filed with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the corporation's filing-due date for its taxation year that includes March 12, 2009, that this amendment apply to the disposition.

Proposed Amendment — Canadian/foreign (cross-border) share-for-share exchange

86. (1) Exchange of shares by a shareholder in course of reorganization of capital — Where, at a particular time after May 6, 1974, in the course of a reorganization of the capital of a corporation, a taxpayer has disposed of capital property that was all the shares of any particular class of the capital stock of the corporation that were owned by the taxpayer at the particular time (in this section referred to as the "old shares"), and property is receivable from the corporation therefor that includes other shares of the capital stock of the corporation (in this section referred to as the "new shares"), the following rules apply:

(a) the cost to the taxpayer of any property (other than new shares) receivable by the taxpayer for the old shares shall be deemed to be its fair market value at the time of the disposition;

(b) the cost to the taxpayer of any new shares of any class of the capital stock of the corporation receivable by the taxpayer for the old shares shall be deemed to be that proportion of the amount, if any, by which the total of the adjusted cost bases to the taxpayer, immediately before the disposition, of the old shares exceeds the fair market value at that time of the consideration receivable for the old shares (other than new shares) that

(i) the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of those new shares of that class,

is of

(ii) the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of all new shares of the capital stock of the corporation receivable by the taxpayer for the old shares; and

(c) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have disposed of the old shares for proceeds of disposition equal to the cost to the taxpayer of all new shares and other property receivable by the taxpayer for the old shares.

(2) Idem — Notwithstanding paragraphs (1)(b) and (c), where a taxpayer has disposed of old shares in circumstances described in subsection (1) and the fair market value of the old shares immediately before the disposition exceeds the total of

(a) the cost to the taxpayer of the property (other than new shares) receivable by the taxpayer for the old shares as determined under paragraph (1)(a), and

(b) the fair market value of the new shares, immediately after the disposition, and it is reasonable to regard any portion of the excess (in this subsection referred to as the "gift portion") as a benefit that the taxpayer desired to have conferred on a person related to the taxpayer, the following rules apply:

(c) the taxpayer shall be deemed to have disposed of the old shares for proceeds of disposition equal to the lesser of

(i) the total of the cost to the taxpayer of the property as determined under paragraph (1)(a) and the gift portion and

(ii) the fair market value of the old shares immediately before the disposition,

(d) the taxpayer's capital loss from the disposition of the old shares shall be deemed to be nil, and

(e) the cost to the taxpayer of any new shares of any class of the capital stock of the corporation receivable by the taxpayer for the old shares shall be deemed to be that proportion of the amount, if any, by which the total of the adjusted cost bases to the taxpayer, immediately before the disposition, of the old shares exceeds the total determined under subparagraph (c)(i) that

(i) the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of the new shares of that class,

is of

(ii) the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of all new shares of the capital stock of the corporation receivable by the taxpayer for the old shares.

(2.1) Computation of paid-up capital — Where subsection (1) applies to a disposition of shares of the capital stock of a corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "exchange"), in computing the paid-up capital in respect of a particular class of shares of the capital stock of the corporation at any particular time that is the time of, or any time after, the exchange,

(a) there shall be deducted the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the increase, if any, as a result of the exchange, in the paid-up capital in respect of a class of shares of the capital stock of the corporation, computed without reference to this subsection as it applies to the exchange,

B is the amount, if any, by which the paid-up capital in respect of the old shares exceeds the fair market value of the consideration (other than shares of the capital stock of the corporation) given by the corporation for the old shares on the exchange, and

C is the increase, if any, as a result of the exchange, in the paid-up capital in respect of the particular class of shares, computed without reference to this subsection as it applies to the exchange; and

(b) there shall be added an amount equal to the lesser of

(i) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts deemed by subsection 84(3), (4) or (4.1) to be a dividend on shares of that class paid by the corporation before the particular time

exceeds

(B) the total that would be determined under clause (A) if this Act were read without reference to paragraph (a), and

(ii) the total of all amounts required by paragraph (a) to be deducted in respect of that particular class of shares before the particular time.

Related Provisions: 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

(3) Application — Subsections (1) and (2) do not apply in any case where subsection 85(1) or (2) applies.

Related Provisions: 51(4) — Application of section 51.

History: Subsec. 86(3) substituted by 1994, c. 21, subsec. 38(2), applicable to reorganizations that begin after December 21, 1992. That subsec. formerly read:

(3) Where subsecs. (1) and (2) do not apply — Subsections (1) and (2) are not applicable in any case where section 51 or any of subsections 85(1) to (3) is applicable.

(4) Computation of adjusted cost base — Where a taxpayer has disposed of old shares in circumstances described in subsection (1),

(a) there shall be deducted after the disposition in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of each new share the amount determined by the formula

$$A \times \frac{B}{C}$$

where

A is the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts deducted under paragraph 53(2)(g.1) in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the old shares immediately before the disposition

exceeds

(ii) the amount that would be the taxpayer's capital gain for the taxation year that includes the time of the disposition from the disposition of the old shares if paragraph 40(1)(a) were read without reference to subparagraph (iii) of that paragraph,

B is the fair market value of the new share at the time it was acquired by the taxpayer in consideration for the disposition of the old shares, and

C is the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a new share at the time it was acquired by the taxpayer in consideration for the disposition of the old shares; and

(b) the amount determined under paragraph (a) in respect of the acquisition shall be added in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the new share after the disposition.

Related Provisions: 53(1)(q) — Addition to ACB for amount under 86(4)(b); 53(2)(g.1) — Reduction in ACB under 86(4)(a); 80.03(2)(a) — Deemed gain on disposition following debt forgiveness.

86.1 Foreign spin-offs — (1) Eligible distribution not included in income — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Part,

(a) the amount of an eligible distribution received by a taxpayer shall not be included in computing the income of the taxpayer; and

(b) subsection 52(2) does not apply to the eligible distribution received by the taxpayer.

Related Provisions: 15(1)(a.1)(i) — No shareholder-benefit income inclusion if corporation not resident in Canada; 85.1(5) — Foreign share-for-share exchange; 86.1(2) — Eligible distribution.

(2) Eligible distribution — For the purpose of this section, a distribution by a particular corporation that is received by a taxpayer is an eligible distribution if

(a) the distribution is with respect to all of the taxpayer's common shares of the capital stock of the particular corporation (in this section referred to as the "original shares");

(b) the distribution consists solely of common shares of the capital stock of another corporation that were owned by the particular corporation immediately before their distribution to the taxpayer (in this section referred to as the "spin-off shares");

(c) in the case of a distribution that is not prescribed,

(i) at the time of the distribution, both corporations are resident in the United States and were never resident in Canada,

(ii) at the time of the distribution, the shares of the class that includes the original shares are widely held and actively traded on a designated stock exchange in the United States, and

(iii) under the United States Internal Revenue Code applicable to the distribution, the shareholders of the particular corporation who are resident in the United States are not taxable in respect of the distribution;

Proposed Amendment — 86.1(2)(c)(ii), (iii)

(ii) at the time of the distribution, the shares of the class that includes the original shares are widely held and

(A) are actively traded on a designated stock exchange in the United States, or

(B) are required, under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 of the United States, as amended from time to time, to be registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission of the United States and are so registered, and

(iii) under the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 of the United States, as amended from time to time, that apply to the distribution, the shareholders of the particular corporation who are resident in the United States are not taxable in respect of the distribution;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 43(1), will amend subparas. 86.1(2)(c)(ii) and (iii) to read as above, applicable to distributions made after 1999 except that,

(a) with respect to a distribution in respect of original shares described in cl. 86.1(2)(c)(ii)(B),

(i) information referred to in para. 86.1(2)(e) is deemed to be provided to the Minister of National Revenue on a timely basis if it is provided to that Minister before the 90th day after the day on which the amending legislation is assented to; and

(ii) an election referred to in para. 86.1(2)(f) is deemed to be filed on a timely basis if it is filed with the Minister of National Revenue before the 90th day after the day on which the amending legislation is assented to; and

(b) for the period before December 14, 2007, the reference to "designated stock exchange" in cl. 86.1(2)(c)(ii)(A) shall be read as a reference to "prescribed stock exchange".

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 86.1(2) defines an "eligible distribution" for the purposes of the tax-deferral that applies with respect to distributions to Canadian resident shareholders of spin-off shares by a foreign corporation. Subsection 86.1(2) is amended in three respects.

First, subparagraph 86.1(2)(c)(ii) requires that a taxpayer's original shares be included in a class that is widely held and actively traded on a prescribed stock exchange in the United States at the time of the distribution (section 3201 of the Regulations prescribes certain U.S. stock exchanges). The condition that the share be actively traded on a U.S. stock exchange is amended effective after 1999 to require that the taxpayer's original shares of the foreign corporation be, at the time of the distribution, widely held and

- actively traded on a prescribed stock exchange in the United States, or
- required, under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 of the United States, to be registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission (and are so registered).

In general, a class of shares of a U.S. corporation must be registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") if more than 500 shareholders own shares of the class, the corporation has more than $10 million in assets and shares of the class will be traded on a national securities exchange. Thus this SEC registration requirement applies if it is expected that the shares will trade on a national securities exchange, with the SEC filing and public disclosure requirements thereafter applying to the corporation regardless of whether any of its issued shares trade in the future on the exchange.

Second, the references in subparagraphs 86.1(2)(c)(iii) and 86.1(2)(e)(vi) to the United States Internal Revenue Code are replaced by "the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 of the United States, as amended from time to time".

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 11, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

This is in response to your letters of January 19, May 1 and May 22, 2001 concerning your request on behalf of your client, [xxx] regarding proposed section 86.1 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). In particular, you ask that consideration be given to extending proposed subparagraph 86.1(2)(c)(ii) to foreign spin-off distributions made by a corporation resident in the United States (the "U.S.") where shares of the corporation are not actively traded on a prescribed stock exchange but are registered by the corporation with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (the "SEC") under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 of the U.S. (the "Exchange Act").

Based on our understanding of the facts as set out in your letters, in September 2000 [xxx] undertook a spin-off transaction in the U.S. that was tax deferred to its U.S. shareholders but taxable to its Canadian shareholders. At the time of the spin-off, shares of [xxx] (i.e., the "original shares") did not actively trade on a prescribed stock exchange in the U.S. However, because [xxx] had more than [xxx] shareholders and more than [xxx] in assets, it was required by the Exchange Act to register its shares with the SEC and to comply with extensive public filing and disclosure requirements. The original shares were also widely held by more than [xxx] employees with more than [xxx] of those employees being resident in Canada.

We agree that the required registration with the SEC, as described in your letters, and all the requisite disclosures mandated by such registration is analogous to the registration and disclosure requirements for a public company actively traded on a U.S. prescribed stock exchange. However, we are of the view that retention of the widely held requirement in proposed subparagraph 86.1(2)(c)(ii) is appropriate in cases where shares of a class are required to be registered with the SEC. In the case at hand, this widely held requirement would extend to a company such as [xxx] that is widely held by the employees of the company.

Given our understanding of the facts, we will recommend to the Minister of Finance that proposed subparagraph 86.1(2)(c)(ii) of the Act be extended to original shares issued by a U.S. corporation where the shares are widely held, required to be registered and are so registered with the SEC under the Exchange Act. We will also recommend that such an amendment apply to distributions made after 1999. If the recommendation is acted upon, we anticipate that the amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber
General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch
c.c.: Mr. Bill McCloskey, Assistant Commissioner, Policy and Legislation Branch, CCRA

(d) in the case of a distribution that is prescribed,

(i) at the time of the distribution, both corporations are resident in the same country, other than the United States, with which Canada has a tax treaty (in this section referred to as the "foreign country") and were never resident in Canada,

(ii) at the time of the distribution, the shares of the class that includes the original shares are widely held and actively traded on a designated stock exchange,

(iii) under the law of the foreign country, those shareholders of the particular corporation who are resident in that country are not taxable in respect of the distribution, and

(iv) the distribution is prescribed subject to such terms and conditions as are considered appropriate in the circumstances;

(e) before the end of the sixth month following the day on which the particular corporation first distributes a spin-off share in respect of the distribution, the particular corporation provides to the Minister information satisfactory to the Minister establishing

(i) that, at the time of the distribution, the shares of the class that includes the original shares are widely held and actively traded on a prescribed stock exchange,

(i) that, at the time of the distribution, the shares of the class that includes the original shares are shares described in subparagraph (c)(ii) or (d)(ii),

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 43(2), will amend subpara. 86.1(2)(e)(i) to read as above, applicable on the same basis as 86.1(2)(c)(ii), (iii) above.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Third, subparagraph 86.1(2)(e)(i) is amended consequential to the amendment to subparagraph 86.1(2)(c)(ii) described above.

(ii) that the particular corporation and the other corporation referred to in paragraph (b) were never resident in Canada,

(iii) the date of the distribution,

(iv) the type and fair market value of each property distributed to residents of Canada,

(v) the name and address of each resident of Canada that received property with respect to the distribution,

(vi) in the case of a distribution that is not prescribed, that the distribution is not taxable under the United States Internal Revenue Code applicable to the distribution,

Proposed Amendment — 86.1(2)(e)(vi)

(vi) in the case of a distribution that is not prescribed, that the distribution is not taxable under the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 of the United States, as amended from time to time, that apply to the distribution,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 43(3), will amend subpara. 86.1(2)(e)(vi) to read as above, applicable on the same basis as 86.1(2)(c)(ii), (iii) above.

Technical Notes (July 2010): See under 86.1(2)(c)(ii), (iii) above.

(vii) in the case of a distribution that is prescribed, that the distribution is not taxable under the law of the foreign country, and

(viii) such other matters that are required, in prescribed form; and

(f) the taxpayer elects in writing filed with the taxpayer's return of income for the taxation year in which the distribution occurs that this section apply to the distribution and provides information satisfactory to the Minister

(i) of the number, cost amount (determined without reference to this section) and the fair market value of the taxpayer's original shares immediately before the distribution,

(ii) of the number, and fair market value, of the taxpayer's original shares and the spin-off shares immediately after the distribution of the spin-off shares to the taxpayer,

(iii) except where the election is filed with the taxpayer's return of income for the year in which the distribution occurs, concerning the amount of the distribution, the manner in which the distribution was reported by the taxpayer and the details of any subsequent disposition of original shares or spin-off shares for the purpose of determining any gains or losses from those dispositions, and

(iv) of such other matters that are required, in prescribed form.

I.T. Technical News: 28 (foreign spin-offs with "poison pill" shareholder rights plans).

(3) Cost adjustments — Where a spin-off share is distributed by a corporation to a taxpayer pursuant to an eligible distribution with respect to an original share of the taxpayer,

(a) there shall be deducted for the purpose of computing the cost amount to the taxpayer of the original share at any time the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the cost amount, determined without reference to this section, to the taxpayer of the original share at the time that is immediately before the distribution or, if the original share is disposed of by the taxpayer, before the distribution, at the time that is immediately before its disposition,

B is the fair market value of the spin-off share immediately after its distribution to the taxpayer, and

C is the total of

(i) the fair market value of the original share immediately after the distribution of the spin-off share to the taxpayer, and

(ii) the fair market value of the spin-off share immediately after its distribution to the taxpayer; and

(b) the cost to the taxpayer of the spin-off share is the amount by which the cost amount of the taxpayer's original share was reduced as a result of paragraph (a).

(4) Inventory — For the purpose of calculating the value of the property described in an inventory of a taxpayer's business,

(a) an eligible distribution to the taxpayer of a spin-off share that is included in the inventory is deemed not to be an acquisition of property in the fiscal period of the business in which the distribution occurs; and

(b) for greater certainty, the value of the spin-off share is to be included in computing the value of the inventory at the end of that fiscal period.

(5) Reassessments — Notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), the Minister may make at any time such assessments, reassessments, determinations and redeterminations that are necessary where information is obtained that the conditions in subparagraph (2)(c)(iii) or (d)(iii) are not, or are no longer, satisfied.

History: Subparas. 86.1(2)(c)(ii) and 86.1(2)(d)(ii) amended to substitute "designated stock exchange" for "prescribed stock exchange" by 2007, c. 35, para. 68(2)(d), applicable after December 13, 2007.

Opening words of subsec. 86.1(2) amended by 2005, c. 30, subsec. 3(1) to replace "this section and Part XI" with "this section", applicable to distributions received after 2004.

Opening words of para. 86.1(2)(f) amended by the said c. 30, subsec. 3(2), applicable to distributions received after 2004. The opening words formerly read:

(f) except where Part XI applies in respect of the taxpayer, the taxpayer elects in writing filed with the taxpayer's return of income for the taxation year in which the distribution occurs (or, in the case of a distribution received before October 18, 2000, filed with the Minister before July 2001) that this section apply to the distribution and provides information satisfactory to the Minister

S. 86.1 added by 2001, c. 17, s. 64, applicable to distributions received after 1997, except that

(a) information referred to in para. 86.1(2)(e) is deemed to be provided to the Minister of National Revenue on a timely basis if it is provided to that Minister before September 12, 2001 (90 days after Royal Assent); and

(b) the election referred to in para. 86.1(2)(f) is deemed to be filed on a timely basis if it is filed with the Minister of National Revenue before September 12, 2001 (90 days after Royal Assent).

Proposed Amendment — Cross-border share-for-share exchanges

Supplementary information, Economic Statement, Oct. 18, 2000: Canadian/Foreign Share-for-Share Exchanges

Under the Income Tax Act, certain share-for-share exchanges can be effected on a tax-deferred basis where the corporations involved are all resident in Canada or are all non-residents. These rules do not apply, however, to a Canadian resident shareholder who exchanges shares of a domestic corporation for shares of a foreign corporation (or vice versa).

It is intended that a share-for-share exchange rollover rule be developed in consultation with the private sector to apply to cross-border share-for-share exchanges where a Canadian resident shareholder receives only share consideration on the exchange. To ensure the preservation of the Canadian income tax base, rules must be developed to provide for, among other things, cost base adjustments, paid-up capital adjustments, the preservation of taxable Canadian property status, and adjustments for tax benefits that could potentially arise because of the conversion of capital gains into dividends (or vice versa). Any such rollover rule would not take effect before the release of draft legislation for public discussion.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, Feb. 18, 2003: Cross-Border Share-For-Share Exchanges

Under the Income Tax Act, certain share-for-share exchanges can be undertaken on a tax-deferred basis where the corporations involved are all resident in Canada or are all non-residents. These rules do not apply, however, to a Canadian resident shareholder who exchanges shares of a domestic corporation for shares of a foreign corporation. While there may be other indirect means of accomplishing such an exchange on a tax-deferred basis, the resulting transactions can be complex and costly.

In the October 2000 Economic Statement and Budget Update, the Government undertook to consult with interested parties on a tax deferral provision that specifically address tax-deferred cross-border share-for-share exchanges. At the same time, the Government noted that a basic requirement for such a mechanism is that it protect Canada's tax base.

A draft of legislative proposals, designed to balance these objectives, will be released in the near future for public review and comment.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, March 23, 2004: Cross-Border Share-For-Share Exchanges

Under the Income Tax Act, certain share-for-share exchanges can be undertaken on a tax-deferred basis where the corporations involved are all resident in Canada or are all non-residents. These rules do not apply, however, to a Canadian resident shareholder who exchanges shares of a domestic corporation for shares of a foreign corporation. While there may be other indirect means of accomplishing such an exchange on a tax-deferred basis, the resulting transactions can be complex and costly.

In the October 2000 Economic Statement and Budget Update, the Government undertook to consult with interested parties on the merits and technical design of a tax deferral provision that would, if implemented, apply in respect of cross-border share-for-share exchanges. Budget 2003 reiterated this plan.

It is intended that a detailed proposal be released for public comment in the coming months.

The 2000 Economic Statement and Budget Update and subsequent budgets indicated the Government's intention to develop rules that would provide an explicit rollover for cross-border share-for-share exchanges while ensuring that the Canadian tax base was protected. A discussion draft of proposed income tax amendments to implement this initiative will be released in the near future.

87. (1) Amalgamations — In this section, an amalgamation means a merger of two or more corporations each of which was, immediately before the merger, a taxable Canadian corporation (each of which corporations is referred to in this section as a "predecessor corporation") to form one corporate entity (in this section referred to as the "new corporation") in such a manner that

(a) all of the property (except amounts receivable from any predecessor corporation or shares of the capital stock of any predecessor corporation) of the predecessor corporations immediately before the merger becomes property of the new corporation by virtue of the merger,

(b) all of the liabilities (except amounts payable to any predecessor corporation) of the predecessor corporations immediately before the merger become liabilities of the new corporation by virtue of the merger, and

(c) all of the shareholders (except any predecessor corporation), who owned shares of the capital stock of any predecessor corporation immediately before the merger, receive shares of the capital stock of the new corporation because of the merger,

otherwise than as a result of the acquisition of property of one corporation by another corporation, pursuant to the purchase of that property by the other corporation or as a result of the distribution of that property to the other corporation on the winding-up of the corporation.

(1.1) Shares deemed to have been received by virtue of merger — For the purposes of paragraph (1)(c) and the Income Tax Application Rules, where there is a merger of

(a) a corporation and one or more of its subsidiary wholly-owned corporations, or

(b) two or more corporations each of which is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of the same corporation, any shares of the capital stock of a predecessor corporation owned by a shareholder (except any predecessor corporation) immediately before the merger that were not cancelled on the merger shall be deemed to be shares of the capital stock of the new corporation received by the shareholder by virtue of the merger as consideration for the disposition of the shares of the capital stock of the predecessor corporations.

Related Provisions: 87(1.4) — Subsidiary wholly-owned corporation. See also at end of s. 87.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(1.2) New corporation continuation of a predecessor — Where there has been an amalgamation of corporations described in paragraph (1.1)(a) or of two or more corporations each of which is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of the same person, the new corporation is, for the purposes of section 29 of the Income Tax Application Rules, subsection 59(3.3) and sections 66, 66.1, 66.2, 66.21, 66.4 and 66.7, deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation, except that this subsection does not affect the determination of any predecessor corporation's fiscal period, taxable income or tax payable.

Related Provisions: 87(1.4) — Subsidiary wholly-owned corporation. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Subsec. 87(1.2) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 65(1), applicable to amalgamations that occur after 2000. The subsec. formerly read:

(1.2) New corporation continuation of a predecessor — Where there has been an amalgamation of corporations described in paragraph (1.1)(a) or of 2 or more corporations each of which is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of the same person, the new corporation shall, for the purposes of section 29 of the Income Tax Application Rules, subsection 59(3.3) and sections 66, 66.1, 66.2, 66.4 and 66.7, be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation, except that this subsection shall not affect the determination of any predecessor corporation's fiscal period, taxable income or tax payable.

Subsec. 87(1.2) substituted by 1994, c. 21, subsec. 39(1), applicable to amalgamations occurring after December 21, 1992. That subsec. formerly read:

(1.2) New corporation continuation of predecessor — Where there has been an amalgamation of corporations described in paragraph (1.1)(a) or (b), the new corporation shall, for the purposes of section 29 of the Income Tax Application Rules, subsection 59(3.3) and sections 66, 66.1, 66.2, 66.4 and 66.7, be deemed to be the same corporation as and a continuation of each predecessor corporation, except that this subsection shall in no respect affect the determination of any predecessor corporation's fiscal period, taxable income or tax payable.

(1.3) [Repealed under former Act]

(1.4) Definition of "subsidiary wholly-owned corporation" — Notwithstanding subsection 248(1), for the purposes of this subsection and subsections (1.1), (1.2) and (2.11), "subsidiary wholly-owned corporation" of a person (in this subsection referred to as the "parent") means a corporation all the issued and outstanding shares of the capital stock of which belong to

(a) the parent;

(b) a corporation that is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of the parent; or

(c) any combination of persons each of which is a person described in paragraph (a) or (b).

Related Provisions: See Related Provisions at end of s. 87.

History: Subsec. 87(1.4) substituted by 1994, c. 21, subsec. 39(2), applicable to amalgamations occurring after December 21, 1992. That subsec. formerly read:

(1.4) Notwithstanding subsection 248(1), for the purposes of this subsection and subsections (1.1), (1.2) and (2.11), "subsidiary wholly-owned corporation" of a corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "parent corporation") means a corporation all the issued and outstanding shares of the capital stock of which belong to

(a) the parent corporation;

(b) a corporation that is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of the parent corporation; or

(c) any combination of corporations each of which is a corporation described in paragraph (a) or (b).

That portion of subsec. 87(1.4) preceding para. (a) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 37(2), to add reference to subsection (2.11), applicable to amalgamations occurring after 1989.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(1.5) Definitions — For the purpose of this section, "financial institution", "mark-to-market property" and "specified debt obligation" have the meanings assigned by subsection 142.2(1).

History: Subsec. 87(1.5) added by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 54(1), applicable to taxation years that end after February 22, 1994.

(2) Rules applicable — Where there has been an amalgamation of two or more corporations after 1971 the following rules apply:

(a) [deemed new corporation —] taxation year — for the purposes of this Act, the corporate entity formed as a result of the amalgamation shall be deemed to be a new corporation the first taxation year of which shall be deemed to have commenced at the time of the amalgamation, and a taxation year of a predecessor corporation that would otherwise have ended after the amalgamation shall be deemed to have ended immediately before the amalgamation;

Information Circulars: 88-2, para. 21: General anti-avoidance rule — section 245 of the Income Tax Act.

(b) inventory — for the purpose of computing the income of the new corporation, where the property described in the inventory, if any, of the new corporation at the beginning of its first taxation year includes property that was described in the inventory of a predecessor corporation at the end of the taxation year of the predecessor corporation that ended immediately before the amalgamation (which taxation year of a predecessor corporation is referred to in this section as its "last taxation year"), the property so included shall be deemed to have been acquired by the new corporation at the beginning of its first taxation year for an amount determined in accordance with section 10 as the value thereof for the purpose of computing the income of the predecessor corporation for its last taxation year, except that where the income of the predecessor corporation for its last taxation year from a farming business was computed in accordance with the cash method, the amount so determined in respect of inventory owned in connection with that business shall be deemed to be the total of all amounts each of which is an amount included because of paragraph 28(1)(b) or (c) in computing that income for that year and, where the income of the new corporation from a farming business is computed in accordance with the cash method, for the purpose of section 28,

(i) an amount equal to that total shall be deemed to have been paid by the new corporation, and

(ii) the new corporation shall be deemed to have purchased the property for an amount equal to that total, in its first taxation year and in the course of carrying on that business;

History: Para. 87(2)(b) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 65(1), applicable to amalgamations occurring after 1988, except that, in its application with respect to property acquired from a predecessor corporation the last taxation year of which commenced before 1989, the reference to "paragraph 28(1)(b) or (c)" in the para. shall be read as "paragraph 28(1)(b)". Para. 87(2)(b) formerly read:

(b) inventory — for the purpose of computing the income of the new corporation for its first taxation year, where the property described in the inventory, if any, of the new corporation at the commencement of that year includes

(i) property that was described in the inventory of a predecessor corporation at the end of the taxation year of the predecessor corporation that ended immediately before the amalgamation (which taxation year of a predecessor corporation is referred to in this section as its "last taxation year"), or

(ii) property that would have been described in the inventory of the predecessor corporation at the end of its last taxation year if its income for that year had not been computed in accordance with the method authorized by subsection 28(1), the property so included shall be deemed to have been acquired by the new corporation at the commencement of its first taxation year for an amount determined in accordance with section 10 as the value thereof for the purpose of computing the income of the predecessor corporation for its last taxation year, except that where the income of the predecessor corporation for its last taxation year was computed in accordance with the method authorized by subsection 28(1), the amount so determined shall be deemed to be the amount, if any, specified in respect of the predecessor corporation under paragraph 28(1)(b) for that year;

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-427R: Livestock of farmers. See also at end of s. 87.

(c) method adopted for computing income — in computing the income of the new corporation for a taxation year from a business or property

(i) there shall be included any amount received or receivable (depending on the method followed by the new corporation in computing its income for that year) by it in that year that would, if it had been received or receivable (depending on the method followed by the predecessor corporation in computing its income for its last taxation year) by the predecessor corporation in its last taxation year, have been included in computing the income of the predecessor corporation for that year, and

(ii) there may be deducted any amount paid or payable (depending on the method followed by the new corporation in computing its income for that year) by it in that year that would, if it had been paid or payable (depending on the method followed by the predecessor corporation in computing its income for its last taxation year) by the predecessor corporation in its last taxation year, have been deductible in computing the income of the predecessor corporation for that year;

Related Provisions: 87(2)(b) — Meaning of "last taxation year"; 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(d) depreciable property — for the purposes of sections 13 and 20 and any regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a),

(i) where depreciable property of a prescribed class has been acquired by the new corporation from a predecessor corporation, the capital cost of the property to the new corporation shall be deemed to be the amount that was the capital cost of the property to the predecessor corporation, and

(ii) in determining the undepreciated capital cost to the new corporation of depreciable property of a prescribed class at any time,

(A) there shall be added to the capital cost to the new corporation of depreciable property of the class acquired before that time the cost amount, immediately before the amalgamation, to a predecessor corporation of each property included in that class by the new corporation,

(B) there shall be subtracted from the capital cost to the new corporation of depreciable property of that class acquired before that time the capital cost to the new corporation of property of that class acquired by virtue of the amalgamation,

(C) a reference in subparagraph 13(5)(b)(ii) to amounts that would have been deducted in respect of property in computing a taxpayer's income shall be construed as including a reference to amounts that would have been deducted in respect of that property in computing a predecessor corporation's income, and

(D) where depreciable property that is deemed by subsection 37(6) to be a separate prescribed class has been acquired by the new corporation from a predecessor corporation, the property shall continue to be deemed to be of that same separate prescribed class;

History: Cl. 87(2)(d)(ii)(C) amended by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 18(1), applicable to taxation years that begin after 1996. Cl. (ii)(C) formerly read:

(C) a reference in subparagraph 13(5)(b)(ii) to amounts that would have been deducted by a taxpayer in respect of transferred property shall be construed as including a reference to amounts that would have been deducted by a predecessor corporation in respect of that property, and

Cl. 87(2)(d)(ii)(C) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 65(2), applicable to taxation years commencing after June 17, 1987 that end after 1987. Cl. (ii)(C) formerly read:

(C) a reference in subparagraph 13(5)(a)(ii) to amounts that would have been allowed to a taxpayer in respect of transferred property, at the rate that was allowed to the taxpayer in respect of property of a prescribed class, shall be construed as including a reference to amounts that would have been allowed to a predecessor corporation in respect of that property at the rate that was allowed to the predecessor corporation in respect of property of that prescribed class, and

I.T. Application Rules: 20(1.2) (transfer of depreciable property by person who owned it before 1972).

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(d.1) depreciable property acquired from predecessor corporation — for the purposes of this Act, where depreciable property (other than property of a prescribed class) has been acquired by the new corporation from a predecessor corporation, the new corporation shall be deemed to have acquired the property before 1972 at an actual cost equal to the actual cost of the property to the predecessor corporation, and the new corporation shall be deemed to have been allowed the total of all amounts allowed to the predecessor corporation in respect of the property, under regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a), in computing the income of the predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

I.T. Application Rules: 20(1.2) (transfer of depreciable property by person who owned it before 1972).

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(e) capital property — subject to paragraph (e.4) and subsection 142.6(5), where a capital property (other than depreciable property or an interest in a partnership) has been acquired by the new corporation from a predecessor corporation, the cost of the property to the new corporation shall be deemed to be the amount that was the adjusted cost base of the property to the predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation;

Related Provisions: 53(6) — Effect of amalgamation on ACB of share, partnership interest or trust interest; 69(13) — Amalgamation or merger. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(e) amended by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 54(2), applicable to taxation years that end after February 22, 1994. Para. (e) formerly read:

(e) where any capital property (other than depreciable property or an interest in a partnership) has been acquired by the new corporation from a predecessor corporation, the cost of the property to the new corporation shall be deemed to be the amount that was the adjusted cost base of the property to the predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation;

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(e.1) partnership interest — where a partnership interest that is capital property has been acquired from a predecessor corporation to which the new corporation was related, for the purposes of this Act, the cost of that partnership interest to the new corporation shall be deemed to be the amount that was the cost of that interest to the predecessor corporation and, in respect of that partnership interest, the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as and a continuation of the predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 53(1)(e), 53(2)(c) — ACB — partnership interest; 88(1)(e), 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up; 100(2.1) — Gain from disposition of partnership interest on amalgamation. See also at end of s. 87.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(e.2) security or debt obligation — subject to paragraphs (e.3) and (e.4) and subsection 142.6(5), where a property that is a security or debt obligation (other than a capital property or an inventory) of a predecessor corporation used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of, carrying on the business of insurance or lending money in the taxation year ending immediately before the amalgamation has been acquired by the new corporation from the predecessor corporation, the cost of the property to the new corporation shall be deemed to be the amount that was the cost amount of the property to the predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation;

History: Para. 87(2)(e.2) amended by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 54(3), applicable to taxation years that end after February 22, 1994. Para. (e.2) formerly read:

(e.2) where any property that is a security or debt obligation (other than a capital property or an inventory) of a predecessor corporation used by it in the year in, or held by it in the year in the course of, carrying on the business of insurance or lending money in the taxation year ending immediately before the amalgamation has been acquired by the new corporation from the predecessor corporation, the cost of the property to the new corporation shall be deemed to be the amount that was the cost amount of the property to the predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation;

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(e.3) financial institutions — specified debt obligation — where the new corporation is a financial institution in its first taxation year, it shall be deemed, in respect of a specified debt obligation (other than a mark-to-market property) acquired from a predecessor corporation that was a financial institution in its last taxation year, to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 87(1.5) — Interpretation; 87(2)(b) — Meaning of "last taxation year"; 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up; 142.6(5) — Parallel rule for rollover transactions generally. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(e.3) added by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 54(3), applicable to amalgamations occurring, and windings-up beginning, after February 22, 1994.

(e.4) financial institutions — mark-to-market property — where

(i) the new corporation is a financial institution in its first taxation year and a property acquired by the new corporation from a predecessor corporation is a mark-to-market property of the new corporation for the year, or

(ii) a predecessor corporation was a financial institution in its last taxation year and a property acquired by the new corporation from the predecessor corporation was a mark-to-market property of the predecessor corporation for the year, the cost of the property to the new corporation shall be deemed to be the amount that was the fair market value of the property immediately before the amalgamation;

Related Provisions: 87(1.5) — Interpretation; 87(2)(b) — Meaning of "last taxation year"; 87(2)(e), (e.2) — Rule overrides normal rules for capital property, securities and debt obligations; 87(2)(g.2), 142.6(1)(b) — Predecessor non-financial institution deemed to have disposed of property before amalgamation; 142.5(2) — Predecessor financial institution deemed to have disposed of property before amalgamation; 142.6(5), (6) — Acquisition of specified debt obligation by financial institution in rollover transaction. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(e.4) added by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 54(3), applicable to amalgamations occurring after October 1994.

(e.5) financial institutions — mark-to-market property — for the purposes of subsections 112(5) to (5.2) and (5.4) and the definition "mark-to-market property" in subsection 142.2(1), the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 87(1.5) — Interpretation; 88(1)(h) — Parallel rule on windup; 142.7(6)(a) — Parallel rule on conversion of foreign bank affiliate to branch. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(e.5) added by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 54(3), applicable to amalgamations occurring at any time (including, for greater certainty, amalgamations occurring before June 22, 1995).

(f) eligible capital property — for the purposes of determining under this Act any amount relating to cumulative eligible capital, an eligible capital amount, an eligible capital expenditure or eligible capital property, the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

History: Para. 87(2)(f) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 37(3), applicable to amalgamations occurring after June 1988. That para. formerly read:

(f) cumulative eligible capital — for the purposes of computing the cumulative eligible capital of the new corporation at any time in respect of a business, where a predecessor corporation carried on a business that is carried on by the new corporation, the amount of the cumulative eligible capital of the predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation in respect of that business shall be added to the amount determined for A in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) in respect of that business;

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(f.1) repealed by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 37(3), applicable to amalgamations occurring after June 1988. That para. formerly read:

(f.1) idem — notwithstanding paragraph (f), for the purposes of computing the cumulative eligible capital of the new corporation at any time in respect of a business, where the last taxation year of a predecessor corporation commenced before July, 1988 and the predecessor corporation carried on a business that is carried on by the new corporation, ½ of the amount of the cumulative eligible capital of the predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation in respect of that business shall be added to the amount determined for A in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) in respect of that business;

(g) reserves — for the purpose of computing the income of the new corporation for a taxation year,

(i) any amount that has been deducted as a reserve in computing the income of a predecessor corporation for its last taxation year shall be deemed to have been deducted as a reserve in computing the income of the new corporation for a taxation year immediately preceding its first taxation year, and

(ii) any amount deducted under paragraph 20(1)(p) in computing the income of a predecessor corporation for its last taxation year or a previous taxation year shall be deemed to have been deducted under that paragraph in computing the income of the new corporation for a taxation year immediately preceding its first taxation year;

Related Provisions: 87(2)(b) — Meaning of "last taxation year"; 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up.

(g.1) continuation — for the purposes of sections 12.3 and 12.4, subsection 20(26) and section 26, the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Proposed Amendment — 87(2)(g.1)

(g.1) continuation — for the purposes of sections 12.4 and 26, the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 15(1), will amend para. 87(2)(g.1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 87(2)(g.1) provides that, for the purposes of section 12.4, the rules relating to the special reserves for banks under section 26 and transitional unpaid claims reserves for insurers under section 12.3 and subsection 20(26), a new corporation formed as a result of an amalgamation is to be treated as a continuation of each predecessor corporation.

Paragraph 87(2)(g.2) provides that, for the purposes of a number of the rules for financial institutions in sections 142.4 to 142.6, the new corporation formed on an amalgamation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation.

Paragraphs 87(2)(g.1) and (g.2) are amended for taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011 to reflect the repeal of section 12.3 and subsections 20(26) and 142.5(5) and (7).

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(g.2) financial institution rules — for the purposes of paragraphs 142.4(4)(c) and (d) and subsections 142.5(5) and (7), 142.51(11) and 142.6(1), the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Proposed Amendment — 87(2)(g.2)

(g.2) financial institution rules — for the purposes of paragraphs 142.4(4)(c) and (d) and subsections 142.51(11) and 142.6(1), the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 15(1), will amend para. 87(2)(g.2) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: See under 87(2)(g.1).

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up; 142.6(1)(b) — Deemed disposition of specified debt obligations and mark-to-market properties on becoming a financial institution. See also list at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(g.2) amended by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 19(1), applicable to taxation years that begin after September 2006. The para. formerly read:

(g.2) for the purposes of paragraphs 142.4(4)(c) and (d) and subsections 142.5(5) and (7) and 142.6(1), the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Para. 87(2)(g.2) added by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 54(4), applicable to taxation years that end after February 22, 1994.

(g.3) superficial losses — for the purposes of applying subsections 13(21.2), 14(12), 18(15) and 40(3.4) to any property that was disposed of by a predecessor corporation before the amalgamation, the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(g.3) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 117(1), applicable to amalgamations that occur, and windings-up that begin, after April 26, 1995.

(g.4) superficial losses — capital property — for the purpose of applying paragraph 40(3.5)(c) in respect of any share that was acquired by a predecessor corporation, the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(g.4) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 117(1), applicable to amalgamations that occur, and windings-up that begin, after April 26, 1995.

Proposed Addition — 87(2)(g.5)

(g.5) patronage dividends — for the purpose of section 135, the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 44(1), will add para. 87(2)(g.5), applicable to amalgamations that occur, and windings-up that begin, after 1997.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New paragraph 87(2)(g.5) deems a new corporation formed on an amalgamation to be the same corporation as and a continuation of each of the predecessor corporations for the purpose of section 135. This paragraph, which applies to amalgamations that occur after 1997, ensures that the rules in section 135 concerning the deduction for and inclusion in income of patronage dividends continue to apply where a cooperative corporation or a customer of a cooperative corporation amalgamates with one or more other corporations between the time a cooperative corporation makes an allocation in proportion to patronage and the time that the patronage dividend is paid. This amendment ensures that payments made under subsection 135(1) by the new corporation in satisfaction of allocations made by a predecessor corporation will be deductible by the new corporation. In addition, new paragraph 87(2)(g.5) ensures that the deductibility of an amount paid to a new corporation formed on the amalgamation of the cooperative corporation's customer and another corporation will not be affected by the amalgamation.

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

(h) debts — for the purpose of computing a deduction from the income of the new corporation for a taxation year under paragraph 20(1)(l), (l.1) or (p)

(i) any debt owing to a predecessor corporation that was included in computing the income of the predecessor corporation for its last taxation year or a preceding taxation year,

(ii) where a predecessor corporation was an insurer or a corporation the ordinary business of which included the lending of money, any loan or lending asset made or acquired by the predecessor corporation in the ordinary course of its business of insurance or the lending of money, or

(iii) where a predecessor corporation was an insurer or a corporation the ordinary business of which included the lending of money, any instrument or commitment described in paragraph 20(1)(l.1) that was issued, made or assumed by the predecessor corporation in the ordinary course of its business of insurance or the lending of money, and that by reason of the amalgamation, has been acquired by the new corporation, shall be deemed to be a debt owing to the new corporation that was included in computing its income for a preceding taxation year, a loan or lending asset made or acquired or an instrument or commitment that was issued, made or assumed by the new corporation in a preceding taxation year in the ordinary course of its business of insurance or the lending of money, as the case may be;

(j.9) Part VI and Part I.3 tax [pre-1992] — for the purposes of determining the amount deductible by the new corporation for any taxation year under section 125.2 or 125.3, the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Proposed Amendment — 87(2)(j.9)

(j.9) Part I.3 tax — for the purposes of determining the amount deductible by the new corporation for any taxation year under section 125.3, the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 15(2), will amend para. 87(2)(j.9) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 87(2)(j.9) provides that a new corporation formed on an amalgamation is treated as a continuation of its predecessor corporations for the purposes of determining the new corporation's claim under section 125.2 or 125.3 in respect of the carry-forward of the predecessors' unused Part VI and Part I.3 tax credits.

Paragraph 87(2)(j.9) is amended to remove reference to section 125.2 consequential on the repeal of that section. For further information, see the commentary on section 125.2.

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

(j.91) Part I.3 and Part VI tax — for the purpose of determining the amount deductible under subsection 181.1(4) or 190.1(3) by the new corporation for any taxation year, the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation, except that this paragraph does not affect the determination of the fiscal period of any corporation or the tax payable by any predecessor corporation;

Proposed Amendment — 87(2)(j.91)

(j.91) Part I.3 and Part VI tax — for the purpose of determining the amount deductible under subsection 181.1(4) or 190.1(3) by the new corporation for any taxation year, the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation, except that this paragraph does not affect the determination of the fiscal period of any corporation or the tax payable by any corporation for any taxation year that ends before the amalgamation;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 44(2), will amend para. 87(2)(j.91) to read as above, applicable to amalgamations that occur, and to windings-up that begin, after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 88(1) sets out rules relating to the winding-up of a subsidiary into a parent corporation that owns at least 90% of each class of shares of the subsidiary. A number of the rules that apply to amalgamations under subsection 87(2) also apply to windings-up under subsection 88(1).

Paragraph 87(2)(j.91) allows a new corporation, or, in the case of a winding-up under subsection 88(1), a parent corporation, to be considered as a continuation of its predecessors or subsidiary, as the case may be, for the purposes of determining an amount deductible under subsection 181.1(4) or 190.1(3). Those provisions relate, respectively, to the deduction from a corporation's tax otherwise payable under Part I.3 of the Act of an amount in respect of its Canadian surtax, and the deduction from a financial institution's tax otherwise payable under Part VI of the Act of an amount in respect of its tax under Part I of the Act.

Paragraph 87(2)(j.91) is amended to clarify that it does not affect the fiscal period of, or tax payable by, any corporation for any taxation year that ends prior to an amalgamation, or, by virtue paragraph 88(1)(e.2), the commencement of a winding-up under subsection 88(1).

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(j.91) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 117(3), applicable to amalgamations that occur, and windings-up that begin, after April 26, 1995. The para. formerly read:

(j.91) for the purposes of determining the amount deductible under subsection 181.1(4) or 190.1(3) by the new corporation for any taxation year, the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Para. 87(2)(j.91) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 37(6), applicable to amalgamations occurring and windings-up beginning after 1990.

(j.92) subsections 125(5.1) and 157.1(1) [small business deduction and instalment deferral] — for the purposes of subsection 125(5.1) and the definition "eligible corporation" in subsection 157.1(1), the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(j.92) amended by 2002, c. 9, subsec. 30(1), applicable to taxation years that end after 2001. The para. formerly read:

(j.92) subsec. 125(5.1) [small business deduction] — for the purposes of subsection 125(5.1), the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Para. 87(2)(j.92) added by 1995, c. 3, subsec. 23(2) applicable to taxation years that end after June 1994.

(j.93) mining reclamation trusts [and qualifying environmental trusts] — for the purposes of paragraphs 12(1)(z.1) and (z.2) and 20(1)(ss) and (tt) and sections 107.3 and 127.41, the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(j.93) added by 1995, c. 3, subsec. 23(2), applicable to amalgamations that occur and windings-up that begin after February 22, 1994.

(j.94) film or video productions — for the purposes of sections 125.4 and 125.5, the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(j.94) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 117(4), applicable to amalgamations that occur and windings-up that begin after October 1997. The para. formerly read:

(j.94) Canadian film or video production tax credit — for the purpose of section 125.4, the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Para. 87(2)(j.94) added by 1996, c. 21, subsec. 15(2), applicable to amalgamations that occur and windings-up that begin after 1994.

Proposed Addition — 87(2)(j.95)

(j.95) non-resident entities — for the purposes of sections 94 to 94.2, the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), s. 5, will add para. 87(2)(j.95), applicable to taxation years that end after 2000.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Section 87 sets out rules that apply on the amalgamation (as defined in subsection 87(1)) of two or more taxable Canadian corporations. The amalgamated corporation is generally treated as a continuation of the predecessor corporations for the purposes of the Act.

New paragraph 87(2)(j.95) provides that, where there has been an amalgamation of two or more taxable Canadian corporations, the amalgamated corporation is deemed to be a continuation of its predecessor corporations for the purposes of sections 94, 94.1 and 94.2, which relate to foreign trusts and non-resident entities. Thus, for example, an amalgamated corporation will be considered to be a "contributor" and an "electing contributor" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) to a trust if any predecessor corporation was a contributor and electing contributor to the trust.

Because of the operation of paragraph 88(1)(e.2), new paragraph 87(2)(j.95) also applies to windings-up to which section 88 applies.

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

(k) certain payments to employees — for the purpose of subsection 6(3), any amount received by a person from the new corporation that would, if received by the person from a predecessor corporation, be deemed for the purpose of section 5 to be remuneration for that person's services rendered as an officer or during a period of employment, shall be deemed for the purposes of section 5 to be remuneration for services so rendered by the person;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

(l) scientific research and experimental development — for the purposes of section 37 and Part VIII, the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(l.1) idem [repealed R&D allowance] — for the purposes of this paragraph, paragraph (l.2) and section 37.1,

(i) the base period for a particular taxation year of a new corporation that has fewer than 3 preceding taxation years shall be deemed to be the period

(A) commencing on the day that

(I) is the earliest of all days each of which is a day immediately before the commencement of a taxation year of a predecessor corporation in respect of the new corporation that ended after 1976, and

(II) is in the 3 year period ending on the day immediately before the commencement of the particular year, and

(B) ending immediately before the first day of the particular taxation year,

(ii) where subparagraph (i) applies,

(A) in determining the qualified expenditures made by the new corporation in its base period, there shall be included the total of all amounts each of which is the qualified expenditure made by a predecessor corporation in a taxation year that commenced in the base period of the new corporation, and

(B) in determining the total of the amounts paid to the new corporation by persons referred to in subparagraphs (b)(i) to (iii) of the definition "expenditure base" in subsection 37.1(5) in its base period, there shall be included the total of all such amounts paid to a predecessor corporation by a person referred to in those subparagraphs in a taxation year that commenced in the base period of the new corporation,

(iii) the capital cost to the new corporation of any property that was a research property of a predecessor corporation acquired by it from the predecessor corporation shall be deemed to be the capital cost thereof to the predecessor corporation and the property shall be deemed to be a research property of the new corporation, and

(iv) each amount determined in respect of the new corporation under subparagraph 37.1(3)(b)(i) or (iii), as the case may be, shall be deemed to be the total of the amount otherwise determined and the total of amounts each of which is the amount determined under subparagraph 37.1(3)(b)(i) or (iii), as the case may be, in respect of a predecessor corporation;

(l.2) definition of "predecessor corporation" — for the purposes of this paragraph and paragraph (l.1), "predecessor corporation" includes any corporation in respect of which a predecessor corporation was a new corporation;

(l.21) [debt forgiveness rules] — for the purposes of section 61.3, the definition "unrecognized loss" in subsection 80(1) and subsection 80.01(10), the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

History: Para. 87(2)(l.21) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 117(5), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994. The para. formerly read:

(l.21) forgiven amount — for the purposes of section 61.3 and subsection 80.01(10), the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Para. 87(2)(l.21) added by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 30(2), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994.

(l.3) replacement property — where before the amalgamation property of a predecessor corporation was unlawfully taken, lost, destroyed or taken under statutory authority, or was a former business property of the predecessor corporation, for the purposes of applying sections 13 and 44 and the definition "former business property" in subsection 248(1) to the new corporation in respect of the property and any replacement property acquired therefor, the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-259R4: Exchanges of property. See also at end of s. 87.

Proposed Addition — 87(2)(l.4)

(l.4) subsec. 13(4.2) election — for the purposes of subsection 13(4.3) and paragraph 20(16.1)(b), the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 44(3), will add para. 87(2)(l.4), applicable to amalgamations that occur, and windings-up that begin, after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New paragraph 87(2)(l.4) is added to provide that, for the purposes of the rules in new subsection 13(4.3) and paragraph 20(16.1)(b) of the Act in respect of which an election is made under new subsection 13(4.2), the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation. This new provision also applies in respect of the winding up of a corporation to which section 88 applies, as a result of the application of paragraph 88(1)(e.2). New paragraph 87(2)(l.4) applies to amalgamations that occur, and windings up that begin, after December 20, 2002.

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

(m) reserves — for the purpose of computing the income of the new corporation for a taxation year, any amount claimed under subparagraph 40(1)(a)(iii) or 44(1)(e)(iii) in computing a predecessor corporation's gain for its last taxation year from the disposition of any property shall be deemed

(i) to have been claimed under subparagraph 40(1)(a)(iii) or 44(1)(e)(iii), as the case may be, in computing the new corporation's gain for a taxation year immediately preceding its first taxation year from the disposition of that property by it before its first taxation year, and

(ii) to be the amount determined under subparagraph 40(1)(a)(i) or 44(1)(e)(i), as the case may be, in respect of that property;

Related Provisions: 87(2)(b) — Meaning of "last taxation year"; 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(m) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 65(5), applicable to amalgamations occurring and windings-up beginning after 1989. Para. 87(2)(m) formerly read:

(m) proceeds not due until after end of year — for the purpose of computing the income of the new corporation for its first taxation year and any subsequent taxation year, any amount claimed under subparagraph 40(1)(a)(iii) in computing a predecessor corporation's gain for its last taxation year from the disposition of any property shall be deemed

(i) to have been claimed under that subparagraph in computing the new corporation's gain for a taxation year immediately preceding its first taxation year from the disposition of that property by it before its first taxation year, and

(ii) to be the amount determined under subparagraph 40(1)(a)(i) in respect of that property;

(m.1) [charitable] gift of non-qualifying security — for the purpose of computing the new corporation's gain under subsection 40(1.01) for any taxation year from the disposition of a property, the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(m.1) added by 1998, c. 19, s. 15, applicable to 1997 et seq.

Proposed Addition — 87(2)(m.2)

(m.2) [charitable] gift of predecessor's property — for the purpose of computing the fair market value of property under subsection 248(35), the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 44(4), will add para. 87(2)(m.2), applicable in respect of gifts of property made after 6:00 p.m. (EST) on December 4, 2003.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 248(35) contains rules regarding the value, for tax purposes, of a gift of property acquired within a certain period. New paragraph 87(2)(m.2) provides that the period that would have applied to a predecessor corporation, if the predecessor had made the gift, will continue to apply after it has been wound up into the parent corporation. New paragraph 87(2)(m.2) applies in respect of gifts made after December 3, 2003.

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

(n) outlays made pursuant to warranty — for the purpose of section 42, any outlay or expense made or incurred by the new corporation in a taxation year, pursuant to or by virtue of an obligation described in that section incurred by a predecessor corporation, that would, if the outlay or expense had been made or incurred by the predecessor corporation in that year, have been deemed to be a loss of the predecessor corporation for that year from the disposition of a capital property shall be deemed to be a loss of the new corporation for that year from the disposition of a capital property;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-330R: Disposition of capital property subject to warranty, covenant, etc. (archived). See also at end of s. 87.

(o) expiration of options previously granted — for the purpose of subsection 49(2), any option granted by a predecessor corporation that expires after the amalgamation shall be deemed to have been granted by the new corporation, and any proceeds received by the predecessor corporation for the granting of the option shall be deemed to have been received by the new corporation therefor;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

(p) consideration for resource property disposition — for the purpose of computing a deduction from the income of the new corporation for a taxation year under section 64 of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, any amount that has been included in computing the income of a predecessor corporation for its last taxation year or a previous taxation year by virtue of subsection 59(1) or paragraph 59(3.2)(c) of this Act, of subsection 59(3) of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, or of subsection 83A(5ba) or (5c) of that Act as it read in its application to a taxation year before the 1972 taxation year, shall be deemed to have been included in computing the income of the new corporation for a previous year by virtue thereof;

Related Provisions: 87(2)(b) — Meaning of "last taxation year"; 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

I.T. Application Rules: 69 (meaning of "chapter 148 of ...").

(q) registered [pension] plans [and DPSPs] — for the purposes of sections 147, 147.1 and 147.2 and any regulations made under subsection 147.1(18), the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(r) [Repealed under former Act]

Proposed Addition — 87(2)(r)

(r) employees profit sharing plan — an election made under subsection 144(10) by a predecessor corporation is deemed to be an election made by the new corporation;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 44(5), will add para. 87(2)(r), applicable to amalgamations that occur, and windings-up that begin, after 1994.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New paragraph 87(2)(r) preserves an election under subsection 144(10) in connection with an employees profit sharing plan that was made by a predecessor corporation before an amalgamation. Paragraph 88(1)(e.2) provides that this rule also applies, with appropriate modifications, for the purposes of the rules relating to the winding-up of a subsidiary corporation into its parent corporation.

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

(s) tax deferred cooperative shares — for the purpose of section 135.1, if the new corporation is, at the beginning of its first taxation year, an agricultural cooperative corporation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 135.1(1)),

(i) the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation that was an agricultural cooperative corporation at the end of the predecessor corporation's last taxation year, and

(ii) if, on the amalgamation, the new corporation issues a share (in this subparagraph referred to as the "new share") that is described in all of paragraphs (b) to (d) of the definition "tax deferred cooperative share" in subsection 135.1(1) to a taxpayer in exchange for a share of a predecessor corporation (in this subparagraph referred to as the "old share") that was, at the end of the predecessor corporation's last taxation year, a tax deferred cooperative share within the meaning assigned by that definition, and the amount of paid-up capital, and the amount, if any, that the taxpayer is entitled to receive on a redemption, acquisition or cancellation, of the new share are equal to those amounts, respectively, in respect of the old share,

(A) the new share is deemed to have been issued at the time the old share was issued, and

(B) in applying subsection 135.1(2), the taxpayer is deemed to have disposed of the old share for nil proceeds;

Proposed Amendment — 87(2)(s)(ii)

(ii) if, on the amalgamation, the new corporation issues a share (in this subparagraph and subsection 135.1(10) referred to as the "new share") that is described in all of paragraphs (b) to (d) of the definition "tax deferred cooperative share" in subsection 135.1(1) to a taxpayer in exchange for a share of a predecessor corporation (in this subparagraph and subsection 135.1(10) referred to as the "old share") that was, at the end of the predecessor corporation's last taxation year, a tax deferred cooperative share within the meaning assigned by that definition, and the amount of paid-up capital, and the amount, if any, that the taxpayer is entitled to receive on a redemption, acquisition or cancellation, of the new share are equal to those amounts, respectively, in respect of the old share, subsection 135.1(10) applies in respect of the exchange;

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 15(3), will amend subpara. 87(2)(s)(ii) to read as above, deemed to have come into force on September 29, 2009.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 87(2)(s) is amended as a consequence of the addition of new subsection 135.1(10) relating to tax deferred cooperative shares held by an eligible member of an agricultural cooperative corporation. In particular, the existing rules in clauses 87(2)(s)(ii)(A) and (B) are replaced with a rule that provides that new subsection 135.1(10) applies. The rules in new subsection 135.1(10) are substantially the same as the rules under those clauses.

As a result of paragraph 88(1)(e.2), the equivalent of revised paragraph 87(2)(s), applies to shares acquired on a winding-up to which subsection 88(2) applies.

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(s) added by 2006, c. 4, s. 8, s. 55, applicable after 2005.

(s.1) deemed SIFT wind-up corporation — if a predecessor corporation was a SIFT wind-up corporation immediately before the amalgamation, the new corporation is deemed to be a SIFT wind-up corporation;

History: Para. 87(2)(s.1) added by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 19(2), applicable after December 19, 2007.

(t) pre-1972 capital surplus on hand — for the purpose of subsection 88(2.1), any capital property owned by a predecessor corporation on December 31, 1971 that was acquired by the new corporation by virtue of the amalgamation shall be deemed to have been acquired by the new corporation before 1972 at an actual cost to it equal to the actual cost of the property to the predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(u) shares of foreign affiliate — where one or more shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of a predecessor corporation have, by virtue of the amalgamation, been acquired by the new corporation and as a result of the acquisition the affiliate has become a foreign affiliate of the new corporation,

(i) for the purposes of subsection 91(5) and paragraph 92(1)(b), any amount required by section 92 to be added or deducted, as the case may be, in computing the adjusted cost base of any such share to the predecessor corporation before the amalgamation shall be deemed to have been so required to be added or deducted, as the case may be, in computing the adjusted cost base of the share to the new corporation, and

(ii) for the purposes of subsections 93(2) to (2.3), any exempt dividend received by the predecessor corporation on any such share is deemed to be an exempt dividend received by the new corporation on the share;

Proposed Amendment — 87(2)(u)(ii)

(ii) for the purposes of subsections 93(2.01), (2.11), (2.21) and (2.31), any exempt dividend received by the predecessor corporation on any such share is deemed to be an exempt dividend received by the new corporation on the share;

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), s. 10, will amend subpara. 87(2)(u)(ii) to read as above, applicable when subsec. 93(2.01) as enacted, applies except that, when that subsec. 93(2.01) applies but subsec. 93(2.11), as enacted, does not apply, subpara. 87(2)(u)(ii) is to be read as follows:

(ii) for the purposes of subsection 93(2.01), any exempt dividend received by the predecessor corporation on any such share is deemed to be an exempt dividend received by the new corporation on the share;

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: Section 87 provides rules that apply where there has been an amalgamation of two or more taxable Canadian corporations to form a new corporation. The new corporation is generally treated as a continuation of its predecessor corporations for the purposes of the Act.

Paragraph 87(2)(u) is a rule that provides for continuity of the predecessor corporations in respect of certain attributes of their foreign affiliates. Subparagraph 87(2)(u)(ii) effects such continuity with respect to "exempt dividends", as defined in subsection 93(3), as they apply in the context of the foreign affiliate stop-loss rules in subsections 93(2) to (2.3).

Subparagraph 87(2)(u)(ii) is being amended as a consequence of the restructuring of the those stop-loss rules. For details about the restructuring of those stop-loss rules, refer to the commentary under subsections 93(2) to (2.32).

This amendment generally applies on the same basis as new subsection 93(2.01).

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up; Reg. 5905(5.1) — Effect on FAPI accounts. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Subpara. 87(2)(u)(ii) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 65(2), applicable after November 1999. The subpara. formerly read:

(ii) for the purpose of subsection 93(2), any exempt dividend received by the predecessor corporation on any such share shall be deemed to be an exempt dividend received by the new corporation on the share;

Interpretation Bulletins: See also list at end of s. 87.

(v) gifts [donations] — for the purposes of section 110.1, the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation with respect to gifts;

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(w) [Repealed under former Act]

(x) taxable dividends — for the purposes of subsections 112(3) to (4.22),

(i) any taxable dividend received on a share that was deductible from the predecessor corporation's income for a taxation year under section 112 or subsection 138(6) is deemed to be a taxable dividend received on the share by the new corporation that was deductible from the new corporation's income under section 112 or subsection 138(6), as the case may be,

(ii) any dividend (other than a taxable dividend) received on a share by the predecessor corporation is deemed to have been received on the share by the new corporation, and

(iii) a share acquired by the new corporation from a predecessor corporation is deemed to have been owned by the new corporation throughout any period of time throughout which it was owned by a predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(x) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 117(6), applicable to 1994 et seq. except that, in its application to dispositions of shares that occurred before April 27, 1995, para. 87(2)(x) shall be read as follows:

(x) for the purposes of subsections 112(3) to (4.3),

(i) any taxable dividend received on a share that was deductible from the predecessor corporation's income for a taxation year under section 112 or subsection 138(6) is deemed to be a taxable dividend received on the share by the new corporation that was deductible from the new corporation's income under section 112 or 138(6), as the case may be,

(ii) any capital dividend or life insurance capital dividend received on a share by the predecessor corporation is deemed to be a capital dividend or life insurance capital dividend, as the case may be, received on the share by the new corporation, and

(iii) a share acquired by the new corporation from a predecessor corporation is deemed to have been owned by the new corporation throughout any period of time throughout which it was owned by a predecessor corporation;

The para. formerly read:

(x) for the purposes of subsections 112(3) to (4.3),

(i) any taxable dividend received on a share that was deductible from the predecessor corporation's income for a taxation year under section 112 or subsection 138(6) shall be deemed to be a taxable dividend received on the share by the new corporation that was deductible from the new corporation's income for a taxation year under section 112 or subsection 138(6), as the case may be, and

(ii) any capital dividend or life insurance capital dividend received on a share by the predecessor corporation shall be deemed to be a capital dividend or life insurance capital dividend, as the case may be, received on the share by the new corporation;

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(y) contributed surplus — for the purposes of subsections 84(1) and (10), the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

History: Para. 87(2)(y) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 65(6), applicable after July 13, 1990.

History: Para. 87(2)(y.1) repealed by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 117(7), applicable to taxes payable for taxation years that begin after 1986. The para. formerly read:

(y.1) preferred-earnings amount — for the purpose of computing the preferred-earnings amount (within the meaning assigned by subsection 181(2)) of the new corporation, there shall be added to the new corporation's preferred-earnings amount at the end of its first taxation year the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which

(i) a predecessor corporation's preferred-earnings amount at the end of its last taxation year

exceeds

(ii) the amount that would be determined under paragraph 181(2)(e) in respect of the predecessor corporation for its last taxation year if the references in that paragraph to "the immediately preceding taxation year" and "that year" were read as "the year";

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(z) foreign tax carryover — for the purposes of determining the new corporation's unused foreign tax credit (within the meaning of subsection 126(7)) in respect of a country for any taxation year and determining the extent to which subsection 126(2.3) applies to reduce the amount that may be claimed by the new corporation under paragraph 126(2)(a) in respect of an unused foreign tax credit in respect of a country for a taxation year, the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation, except that this paragraph shall in no respect affect the determination of

(i) the fiscal period of the new corporation or any of its predecessor corporations, or

(ii) the tax payable under this Act by any predecessor corporation;

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-520: Unused foreign tax credits — carryforward and carryback. See also at end of s. 87.

(z.1) capital dividend account — for the purposes of computing the capital dividend account of the new corporation, it shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation, other than a predecessor corporation to which subsection 83(2.1) would, if a dividend were paid immediately before the amalgamation and an election were made under subsection 83(2) in respect of the full amount of that dividend, apply to deem any portion of the dividend to be paid by the predecessor corporation as a taxable dividend;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(z.1) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 65(7), applicable to amalgamations occurring and windings-up beginning after July 13, 1990. Para. 87(2)(z.1) formerly read:

(z.1) capital dividend account — for the purpose of computing at any particular time after the amalgamation the capital dividend account of a new corporation that has been a private corporation continuously from the time of the amalgamation to the particular time, there shall be added the amount of the capital dividend account of each predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation, except that the amount of the capital dividend account of any predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation shall be deemed to be nil where, had a dividend been paid by the predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation and an election been made under subsection 83(2) in respect of that dividend, subsection 83(2.1) would have applied to deem all or any portion of the dividend to be a taxable dividend;

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-66R6: Capital dividends. See also at end of s. 87.

(z.2) application of Parts III and III.1 — for the purposes of Parts III and III.1, the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(z.2) amended by 2007, c. 2, subsec. 45(1), applicable to amalgamations that occur, and to windings-up that begin, after 2005. It formerly read:

(z.2) application of Part III — for the purposes of Part III, the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(aa) refundable dividend tax on hand — where the new corporation was a private corporation immediately after the amalgamation, for the purpose of computing the refundable dividend tax on hand (within the meaning assigned by subsection 129(3)) of the new corporation at the end of its first taxation year there shall be added to the total determined under subsection 129(3) in respect of the new corporation for the year the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which the refundable dividend tax on hand of a predecessor corporation at the end of its last taxation year exceeds its dividend refund (within the meaning assigned by subsection 129(1)) for its last taxation year, except that no amount shall be added under this paragraph in respect of a predecessor corporation

(i) that was not a private corporation at the end of its last taxation year, or

(ii) where subsection 129(1.2) would have applied to deem a dividend paid by the predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation not to be a taxable dividend for the purpose of subsection 129(1);

Related Provisions: 87(2)(b) — Meaning of "last taxation year"; 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up; 131(5) — Dividend refund to mutual fund corporation; 186(5) — Deemed private corporation. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(aa) amended by 1996, c. 21, subsec. 15(3), applicable to amalgamations that occur and windings-up that begin after June 1995. The para. formerly read:

(aa) refundable dividend tax on hand — where the new corporation was a private corporation continuously from the time of the amalgamation until the time immediately after the beginning of any taxation year, for the purpose of computing the refundable dividend tax on hand (within the meaning assigned by subsection 129(3)) of the new corporation at the end of that year there shall be added to the total determined under subsection 129(3) for that year, from which the total of amounts determined under paragraphs 129(3)(c) to (e) is subtracted, the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which the refundable dividend tax on hand immediately before the amalgamation of a predecessor corporation that was a private corporation at that time exceeds its dividend refund (within the meaning assigned by subsection 129(1)) for its taxation year ending at that time, except that no amount shall be so added in respect of a predecessor corporation where subsection 129(1.2) would have applied to deem a dividend paid by the predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation not to be a taxable dividend for the purpose of subsection 129(1);

Para. 87(2)(aa) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 37(8), applicable to the computation of refundable dividend tax on hand (within the meaning assigned by subsec. 129(3) as amended) for 1993 et seq. Para. (aa) formerly read:

(aa) refundable dividend tax on hand — in the case of a new corporation that has been a private corporation continuously from the time of the amalgamation to the end of any taxation year, for the purposes of computing the refundable dividend tax on hand (within the meaning assigned by subsection 129(3)), of the new corporation at the end of the taxation year, where a predecessor corporation had refundable dividend tax on hand immediately before the amalgamation, the amount by which the refundable dividend tax on hand at that time exceeds any dividend refund (within the meaning assigned by subsection 129(1)) of the predecessor corporation for its taxation year ending immediately before the amalgamation shall be added to the total determined under subsection 129(3) from which the new corporation's dividend refunds are to be subtracted, except that the amount to be added to the total determined under subsection 129(3) shall be deemed to be nil where, had a dividend been paid by the predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation, subsection 129(1.2) would have applied to deem the dividend not to be a taxable dividend;

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(bb) mutual fund and investment corporations — where the new corporation is a mutual fund corporation or an investment corporation, there shall be added to

(i) the amount determined under each of paragraphs (a) and (b) of the definition "capital gains dividend account" in subsection 131(6), and

(ii) the values of A and B in the definition "refundable capital gains tax on hand" in that subsection in respect of the new corporation at any time the amounts so determined and the values of those factors immediately before the amalgamation in respect of each predecessor corporation that was, immediately before the amalgamation, a mutual fund corporation or an investment corporation;

History: Para. 87(2)(bb) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 117(8), applicable to amalgamations that occur after 1991 except that, for amalgamations that occurred after 1991 and before February 23, 1994, subpara. 87(2)(bb)(i) shall be read as follows:

(i) the amount determined under each of paragraphs (a) to (g) of the definition "capital gains dividend account" in subsection 131(6), and

The para. formerly read:

(bb) mutual fund and investment corporations — where the new corporation is a mutual fund corporation or an investment corporation, there shall be added to the amount determined for each of A, B, C and D in the definition "capital gains dividend account" and A and B in the definition "refundable capital gains tax on hand" in subsection 131(6) in respect of the new corporation at any time the amount so determined immediately before the amalgamation in respect of each predecessor corporation that was a mutual fund corporation or an investment corporation;

Para. 87(2)(bb) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 65(8), applicable to amalgamations occurring after July 13, 1990 and, where the corporation so elects by notifying the Minister of National Revenue in writing before 1993, to amalgamations occurring after 1986. Para. 87(2)(bb) formerly read:

(bb) mutual fund corporation — in the case of a new corporation that is a mutual fund corporation,

(i) for the purpose of computing its capital gains dividend account at any time, where a predecessor mutual fund corporation had a capital gains dividend account immediately before the amalgamation the amount thereof shall be added to the amount determined for A in the definition "capital gains dividend account" in subsection 131(6), and

(ii) for the purpose of computing its refundable capital gains tax on hand at the end of any taxation year, where a predecessor mutual fund corporation had refundable capital gains tax on hand immediately before the amalgamation the amount thereof shall be added to the amount determined for A in the definition "refundable capital gains [tax] on hand" in subsection 131(6);

(bb.1) flow-through entities — where a predecessor corporation was, immediately before the amalgamation, an investment corporation, a mortgage investment corporation or a mutual fund corporation and the new corporation is an investment corporation, a mortgage investment corporation or a mutual fund corporation, as the case may be, for the purpose of section 39.1, the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the predecessor corporation;

History: Para. 87(2)(bb.1) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 117(8), applicable to amalgamations that occur after 1993.

(cc) non-resident-owned investment corporation — in the case of a new corporation that is a non-resident-owned investment corporation,

(i) for the purpose of computing its allowable refundable tax on hand (within the meaning assigned by subsection 133(9)) at any time, where a predecessor corporation had allowable refundable tax on hand immediately before the amalgamation, the amount thereof shall be added to the total determined for A in the definition "allowable refundable tax on hand" in subsection 133(9),

(ii) for the purpose of computing its capital gains dividend account (within the meaning assigned by subsection 133(8)) at any time, where a predecessor corporation had an amount in its capital gains dividend account immediately before the amalgamation, that amount shall be added to the amount determined under paragraph (a) of the description of A in the definition "capital gains dividend account" in subsection 133(8), and

(iii) for the purpose of computing its cumulative taxable income (within the meaning assigned by subsection 133(9)) at any time, where a predecessor corporation had cumulative taxable income immediately before the amalgamation, the amount thereof shall be added to the total determined for A in the definition "cumulative taxable income" in subsection 133(9);

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(dd)–(hh) [Repealed under former Act]

(ii) public corporation — where a predecessor corporation was a public corporation immediately before the amalgamation, the new corporation shall be deemed to have been a public corporation at the commencement of its first taxation year;

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(jj) interest on certain obligations — for the purposes of paragraph 81(1)(m), the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(kk) disposition of shares of controlled corporation — for the purposes of paragraph 40(2)(h),

(i) where a corporation was controlled, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, by a predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation and has, by reason of the amalgamation, become controlled, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, by the new corporation, the new corporation shall be deemed to have acquired control of the corporation so controlled at the time control thereof was acquired by the predecessor corporation, and

(ii) where a predecessor corporation was immediately before the amalgamation controlled, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, by a corporation that, immediately after the amalgamation, controlled, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, the new corporation, the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 256(5.1), (6.2) — Controlled directly or indirectly. See also at end of s. 87.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(ll) para. 20(1)(n) and subpara. 40(1)(a)(iii) amounts — notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, where any property was disposed of by a predecessor corporation, the new corporation shall, in computing

(i) the amount of any deduction under paragraph 20(1)(n) as a reserve in respect of the property sold in the course of business, and

(ii) the amount of its claim under subparagraph 40(1)(a)(iii) or 44(1)(e)(iii) in respect of the disposition of the property, be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Subpara. 87(2)(ll)(ii) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 65(9), to add reference to subpara. 44(1)(e)(iii), applicable to amalgamations occurring and windings-up beginning after 1989.

(mm) idem — for the purposes of section 126.1, the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Proposed Repeal — 87(2)(mm)

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 44(6), will repeal para. 87(2)(mm), applicable to amalgamations that occur after March 20, 2003.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraph 87(2)(mm) ensures that an amalgamated corporation will be treated as a continuation of, and the same corporation as, each of its predecessor corporations for the purposes of the provisions relating to UI premium tax credit. That paragraph is repealed as a consequence of the repeal of the provisions relating to the UI premium tax credit. For additional information, see the commentary to section 126.1.

History: Para. 87(2)(mm) added by 1994, c. 8, subsec. 9(1), applicable to amalgamations occurring, and windings-up beginning, after 1991.

(nn) refundable Part VII tax on hand — for the purpose of computing the refundable Part VII tax on hand of the new corporation at the end of any taxation year, there shall be added to the total determined under paragraph 192(3)(a) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which

(i) a predecessor corporation's refundable Part VII tax on hand at the end of its last taxation year

exceeds

(ii) the predecessor corporation's Part VII refund for its last taxation year;

Related Provisions: 87(2)(b) — Meaning of "last taxation year"; 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also list at end of s. 87.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(oo) investment tax credit — for the purpose of applying subsection 127(10.2) to any corporation, the new corporation is deemed to have had

(i) a particular taxation year that

(A) where it was associated with another corporation in the new corporation's first taxation year, ended in the calendar year that precedes the calendar year in which that first year ends, and

(B) in any other case, immediately precedes that first year, and

(ii) taxable income for the particular year (determined before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for the particular year) equal to the total of all amounts each of which is a predecessor corporation's taxable income for its taxation year that ended immediately before the amalgamation (determined before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for that year);

History: Para. 87(2)(oo) amended by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 18(2), applicable to amalgamations that occur after 1995, except that, for amalgamations that occur in 1996, the expression "any corporation" shall be read as "the new corporation". For amalgamations that occur after May 23, 1985 and before 1996, para. (oo) shall be read without reference to the expression "paragraph 127.1(2)(a) and subparagraph 157(1)(b)(i)". Para. (oo) formerly read:

(oo) for the purposes of applying subsection 127(10.1), paragraph 127.1(2)(a)[13] and subparagraph 157(1)(b)(i) in respect of the first taxation year of the new corporation, the new corporation shall be deemed to have had a taxation year immediately preceding its first taxation year and to have had

(i) taxable income for that preceding taxation year equal to the total of amounts each of which is the taxable income of a predecessor corporation for its taxation year ending immediately before the amalgamation, and

(ii) a business limit for that preceding taxation year equal to the total of amounts each of which is the business limit of a predecessor corporation for its taxation year ending immediately before the amalgamation;

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(oo.1) refundable investment tax credit and balance-due day — for the purpose of applying the definition "qualifying corporation" in subsection 127.1(2), and subparagraph (d)(i) of the definition "balance-due day" in subsection 248(1), to any corporation, the new corporation is deemed to have had

(i) a particular taxation year that

(A) where it was associated with another corporation in the new corporation's first taxation year, ended in the calendar year that precedes the calendar year in which that first year ends, and

(B) where clause (A) does not apply, immediately precedes that first year,

(ii) taxable income for the particular year (determined before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for the particular year) equal to the total of all amounts each of which is a predecessor corporation's taxable income for its taxation year that ended immediately before the amalgamation (determined before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for that year), and

(iii) a business limit for the particular year equal to the total of all amounts each of which is a predecessor corporation's business limit for its taxation year that ended immediately before the amalgamation;

History: The opening words of para. 87(2)(oo.1) amended by 2002, c. 9, subsec. 30(2), applicable to taxation years that end after 2001. The opening words formerly read:

(oo.1) for the purpose of applying subparagraph 157(1)(b)(i) and the definition "qualifying corporation" in subsection 127.1(2) to any corporation, the new corporation is deemed to have had

Para. 87(2)(oo.1) added by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 18(3), applicable to amalgamations that occur after May 23, 1985, except that,

(a) for amalgamations that occur before 1997, the expression "any corporation" shall be read as "the new corporation";

(b) for the purpose of applying para. (oo.1) for the purpose of the definition "qualifying corporation" in subsec. 127.1(2), the business limits referred to in para. (oo.1), for taxation years that ended after June 1994 and began before 1996, shall be determined under s. 125 as that section read in its application to taxation years that ended before July 1994; and

(c) cl. (oo.1)(i)(A) does not apply

(i) for the purpose of applying the definition "qualifying corporation" in subsec. 127.1(2) to taxation years that ended before July 1994, and

(ii) for the purpose of applying subpara. 157(1)(b)(i) to taxation years that end before 1998.

(pp) cumulative offset account computation — for the purpose of computing the cumulative offset account (within the meaning assigned by subsection 66.5(2)) of the new corporation at any time, there shall be added to the total otherwise determined under paragraph 66.5(2)(a) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which

[13] Sic. This refers to an earlier version of subsec. 127.1(2), which is now the definition of "qualifying corporation" in that subsec.

(i) a predecessor corporation's cumulative offset account at the end of its last taxation year

exceeds

(ii) the amount deducted under subsection 66.5(1) in computing the predecessor corporation's income for its last taxation year;

Related Provisions: 87(2)(b) — Meaning of "last taxation year"; 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also list at end of s. 87.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(qq) continuation of corporation [investment tax credit] — for the purpose of computing the new corporation's investment tax credit at the end of any taxation year, the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation, except that this paragraph does not affect the determination of the fiscal period of any corporation or the tax payable by any predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: See Related Provisions at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(qq) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 117(9), applicable to amalgamations that occur after April 26, 1995. The para. formerly read:

(qq) for the purpose of computing the new corporation's investment tax credit and employment tax credit at the end of any taxation year, the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(rr) tax on taxable preferred shares — for the purposes of subsections 112(2.9), 191(4), and 191.1(2) and (4), the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

(ss) transferred liability for Part VI.1 tax — for the purposes of section 191.3, the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

(tt) livestock — inclusion of deferred amount — for the purposes of subsections 80.3(3) and (5), the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up. See also at end of s. 87.

(uu) fuel tax rebates — for the purposes of paragraph 12(1)(x.1), the description of D.1 in the definition "non-capital loss" in subsection 111(8), and subsections 111(10) and (11), the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2) — Winding-up; 93(2)–(2.3) — Loss limitation on disposition of share. See also list at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(uu) amended by 1997, c. 26, s. 83, applicable to 1997 et seq. Para. (uu) formerly read:

(uu) for the purposes of paragraph 12(1)(x.1), the description of D.1 in the definition "non-capital loss" in subsection 111(8), clause 111(10)(a)(i)(B) and subsection 111(11), the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation.

Para. 87(2)(uu) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VI (1992, c. 29), s. 3, applicable to amalgamations occurring after 1991.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(vv) general rate income pool — if the new corporation is a Canadian-controlled private corporation or a deposit insurance corporation in its first taxation year, in computing its general rate income pool at the end of that first taxation year there shall be added the total of all amounts determined under subsection 89(5) in respect of the corporation for that first taxation year; and

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2)(ix), 89(6) — Winding-up; 89(15) — Meaning of "deposit insurance corporation"; 125(7)"Canadian-controlled private corporation"(d) — Election not to be CCPC for purposes of 87(2)(vv). See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(vv) added by 2007, c. 2, subsec. 45(2), applicable to amalgamations that occur, and to windings-up that begin, after 2005.

(ww) low rate income pool — if the new corporation is neither a Canadian-controlled private corporation nor a deposit insurance corporation in its first taxation year, there shall be added in computing its low rate income pool at any time in that first taxation year the total of all amounts determined under subsection 89(9) in respect of the corporation for that first taxation year.

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.2)(ix), 89(10) — Winding-up; 89(15) — Meaning of "deposit insurance corporation"; 125(7)"Canadian-controlled private corporation"(d) — Election not to be CCPC for purposes of 87(2)(ww). See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2)(ww) added by 2007, c. 2, subsec. 45(2), applicable to amalgamations that occur, and to windings-up that begin, after 2005.

(2.01) Application of subsec. 37.1(5) — The definitions in subsection 37.1(5) apply to subsection (2).

Origin of subsec. 87(2.01): R.S.C. 1985, c. 1 (5th Supp.) (formerly contained in the opening words to subsec. 37.1(5)).

(2.1) Non-capital losses, etc., of predecessor corporations — Where there has been an amalgamation of two or more corporations, for the purposes only of

(a) determining the new corporation's non-capital loss, net capital loss, restricted farm loss, farm loss or limited partnership loss, as the case may be, for any taxation year, and

(b) determining the extent to which subsections 111(3) to (5.4) and paragraph 149(10)(c) apply to restrict the deductibility by the new corporation of any non-capital loss, net capital loss, restricted farm loss, farm loss or limited partnership loss, as the case may be, the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation, except that this subsection shall in no respect affect the determination of

(c) the fiscal period of the new corporation or any of its predecessors,

(d) the income of the new corporation or any of its predecessors, or

(e) the taxable income of, or the tax payable under this Act by, any predecessor corporation.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(a) — Taxation year-end; 87(2.11) — Losses, etc., on amalgamation with subsidiary wholly-owned corporation; 256(7) — Where control deemed not acquired. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Para. 87(2.1)(b) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 117(10), applicable to a corporation that becomes or ceases to be exempt from tax under Part I of the Act after April 26, 1995. The para. formerly read:

(b) determining the extent to which subsections 111(3) to (5.4) and paragraph 149(10)(d) apply to restrict the deductibility by the new corporation of any non-capital loss, net capital loss, restricted farm loss, farm loss or limited partnership loss, as the case may be,

MNR*, [1992] 2 C.T.C. 2700 (TCC) (Predecessor corporation's business not carried on by corporation resulting from amalgamation; non-capital losses not deductible).

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-302R3: Losses of a corporation — the effect that acquisitions of control, amalgamations, and windings-up have on their deductibility — after January 15, 1987. See also at end of s. 87.

(2.11) Vertical amalgamations — Where a new corporation is formed by the amalgamation of a particular corporation and one or more of its subsidiary wholly-owned corporations, the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the particular corporation for the purposes of applying sections 111 and 126, subsections 127(5) to (26) and 181.1(4) to (7), Part IV and subsections 190.1(3) to (6) in respect of the particular corporation.

Related Provisions: 87(1.4) — Definition of "subsidiary wholly-owned corporation"; 87(2.1) — Non-capital losses, etc., of predecessor corporations; 87(11) — Vertical amalgamation — effects; 256(7) — Where control deemed not acquired.

History: Subsec. 87(2.11) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 117(11), applicable to amalgamations that occur after April 26, 1995. The subsec. formerly read:

(2.11) Losses, etc., on amalgamation with subsidiary wholly-owned corporation — Where a new corporation is formed by the amalgamation of a particular corporation and one or more of its subsidiary wholly-owned corporations, the new corporation shall, for the purposes of applying section 111 and Part IV in respect of the particular corporation, be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the particular corporation.

Subsec. 87(2.11) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 37(9), applicable to amalgamations occurring after 1989.

I.T. Technical News: 3 (subsection 87(2.11)).

(2.2) Amalgamation of insurers — Where there has been an amalgamation and one or more of the predecessor corporations was an insurer, the new corporation is, notwithstanding subsection (2), deemed, for the purposes of paragraphs 12(1)(d), (e), (e.1), (i) and (s), subsection 12.5(8), paragraphs 20(1)(l), (l.1), (p) and (jj) and 20(7)(c), subsections 20(22) and 20.4(4), sections 138, 138.1, 140, 142 and 148 and Part XII.3, to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each of those predecessor corporations.

Related Provisions: 139.1(3)(g) — Where merger causes demutualization of insurer. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Subsec. 87(2.2) amended by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 19(3), applicable to taxation years that begin after September 2006. The subsec. formerly read:

(2.2) Where there has been an amalgamation and one or more of the predecessor corporations was an insurer, the new corporation is, notwithstanding subsection (2), deemed, for the purposes of paragraphs 12(1)(d), (e), (e.1), (i) and (s) and 20(1)(l), (l.1), (p) and (jj) and 20(7)(c), subsection 20(22), sections 138, 138.1, 140, 142 and 148 and Part XII.3, to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each of those predecessor corporations.

Subsec. 87(2.2) amended by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 18(4), applicable to amalgamations that occur after 1995. Subsec. (2.2) formerly read:

(2.2) Amalgamation of insurance corporations — Where there has been an amalgamation of two or more corporations and one or more of the predecessor corporations was an insurance corporation, the new corporation shall, notwithstanding subsection (2), be deemed, for the purposes of paragraphs 12(1)(d), (e), (i) and (s) and 20(1)(l), (l.1), (p) and (jj) and 20(7)(c), sections 138, 138.1, 140, 142 and 148 and Part XII.3 of this Act and section 33 of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each such predecessor corporation.

I.T. Application Rules: 69 (meaning of "chapter 148 of ...").

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

Proposed Addition — 87(2.3)

(2.3) Quebec credit unions — For the purpose of applying this section to an amalgamation governed by section 689 of An Act respecting financial services cooperatives, R.S.Q., c. C-67.3, an investment deposit of a credit union is deemed to be a share of a separate class of the capital stock of a predecessor corporation in respect of the amalgamation the adjusted cost base and paid up capital of which to the credit union is equal to the adjusted cost base to the credit union of the investment deposit immediately before the amalgamation if

(a) immediately before the amalgamation, the investment deposit is an investment deposit to which section 425 of the Savings and Credit Unions Act, R.S.Q., c. C-4.1, applies to the investment fund of that predecessor corporation; and

(b) on the amalgamation the credit union disposes of the investment deposit for consideration that consists solely of shares of a class of the capital stock of the new corporation.

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 44(7), will add subsec. 87(2.3), applicable to amalgamations that occur after June 2001.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New subsection 87(2.3) provides a special rule that applies to an "investment deposit" of a Quebec credit union in another Quebec credit union (the "predecessor corporation"). This rule applies where the credit union's investment deposit in the predecessor corporation is disposed of because of an amalgamation of credit unions that includes the predecessor corporation with that amalgamation being governed by section 689 of the Act Respecting Financial Services Cooperatives, R.S.Q., 2001, c. C-67.3. The credit union's investment deposit will, if certain conditions are met, be deemed to be a share of the capital stock of the predecessor corporation having an adjusted cost base and paid up capital equal to the adjusted cost base of the investment deposit to the credit union. The conditions that must be met are that

- immediately before the amalgamation the investment deposit must be an investment deposit (to which section 425 of the Savings and Credit Unions Act, R.S.Q., 2001, c. C-4.1 applies) in an investment fund of the predecessor corporation; and
- on the amalgamation the credit union disposes of the investment deposit for consideration that consists solely of shares of the capital stock of the new corporation.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 5, 2000:

La présente fait suite à votre lettre du 27 octobre 2000 et à la réponse que nous vous avions donnée en novembre 1999 (copie jointe) concernant la réorganisation proposée du [xxx]. Je crois savoir que vous avez discuté de la question avec Davine Roach et Kerry Harnish de cette division, le 16 novembre 2000.

Lors de votre rencontre du 10 octobre 2000 avec des représentants de la Direction de la politique de l'impôt, vous indiquiez que l'Agence des douanes et du revenu du Canada (« l'ADRC ») avait déterminé que les dépôts à participation ne constituent pas des actions aux fins de la Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu (la « Loi ») et qu'ils ne peuvent donc être transférés en franchise d'impôt au moment de la fusion (selon la définition au paragraphe 87(1) de la Loi) [xxx]. Dans votre lettre du 27 octobre 2000, vous demandez donc que la Loi soit modifiée:

- pour traiter chaque « dépôt à participation » d'un contribuable comme une « action » aux fins de la fusion,
- pour considérer que l'action réputée représentant le dépôt à participation a un prix de base rajusté et un capital versé équivalant au prix de base rajusté du dépôt par ailleurs déterminé pour le contribuable,
- pour mettre en place une règle spéciale relativement à l'attribution du coût d'une telle action à la nouvelle ou aux nouvelles actions en fonction du coût plutôt que de la juste valeur marchande. Selon la règle actuelle d'attribution des coûts prévue au paragraphe 87(4), un transfert de coûts pourrait donner lieu à des gains en capital non réalisés artificiels relativement à certaines des nouvelles actions acquises lors de la fusion.

Comme nous l'indiquions dans notre lettre de novembre 1999, nous sommes disposés à recommander au ministre des Finances que la Loi soit modifiée pour assurer le transfert libre d'impôt d'un dépôt à participation échangé pour une action lors de la fusion [xxx]. Plus précisément, nous sommes disposés à traiter un dépôt à participation comme s'il s'agissait d'une action aux fins de l'application des règles relatives aux fusions à l'article 87 de la Loi. Nous sommes aussi disposés à considérer que l'action réputée représentant le dépôt à participation a un prix de base rajusté et un capital versé équivalent au prix de base rajusté de la participation du contribuable dans un dépôt à participation en particulier.

Toutefois, nous ne sommes pas disposés à nous écarter de la formule d'attribution selon la juste valeur marchande prévue au paragraphe 87(4) de la Loi dans le cas des transactions réalisées dans le cadre de la fusion de [xxx]. La formule actuelle tient compte des cas où les nouvelles actions ne sont pas de la même categorie que les anciennes actions. Nous croyons toutefois savoir que l'ADRC a adopté une mesure administrative qui pourrait être utile dans votre cas.

Enfin, nous sommes aussi disposés à recommander que les changements susmentionnés (que nous acceptons de recommander au ministre) s'appliquent aux fusions réalisées après 1999. Si nos recommandations sont acceptées, on prévoit que les modifications seraient incluses plus tard dans un projet de loi technique.

Veuillez agréer, Monsieur, l'expression de mes sentiments les meilleurs.

Le directeur, Division de la législation de l'impôt, Direction de la politique de l'impôt
Brian Ernewein

(3) Computation of paid-up capital — Subject to subsection (3.1), where there is an amalgamation or a merger of 2 or more Canadian corporations, in computing at any particular time the paid-up capital in respect of any particular class of shares of the capital stock of the new corporation,

(a) there shall be deducted that proportion of the amount, if any, by which the paid-up capital, determined without reference to this subsection, in respect of all the shares of the capital stock of the new corporation immediately after the amalgamation or merger exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is the paid-up capital in respect of a share (except a share held by any other predecessor corporation) of the capital stock of a predecessor corporation immediately before the amalgamation or merger, that

(i) the paid-up capital, determined without reference to this subsection, of the particular class of shares of the capital stock of the new corporation immediately after the amalgamation or merger

is of

(ii) the paid-up capital, determined without reference to this subsection, in respect of all of the issued and outstanding shares of the capital stock of the new corporation immediately after the amalgamation or merger; and

(b) there shall be added an amount equal to the lesser of

(i) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deemed by subsection 84(3), (4) or (4.1) to be a dividend on shares of the particular class paid by the new corporation before the particular time

exceeds

(B) the total that would be determined under clause (A) if this Act were read without reference to paragraph (a), and

(ii) the amount required by paragraph (a) to be deducted in computing the paid-up capital of shares of the particular class.

Related Provisions: 87(3.1) — Election for 87(3) not to apply. See also at end of s. 87.

History: That portion of subsec. 87(3) preceding para. (a) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 37(10), applicable to amalgamations occurring after 1990. That portion formerly read:

(3) Computation of paid-up capital — Where there has been an amalgamation or a merger after March 31, 1977 of two or more Canadian corporations, in computing, at any particular time the paid-up capital in respect of any particular class of shares of the capital stock of the new corporation

(3.1) Election for non-application of subsec. (3) — Where,

(a) there is an amalgamation of 2 or more corporations,

(b) all of the issued shares, immediately before the amalgamation, of each class of shares (other than a class of shares all of the issued shares of which were cancelled on the amalgamation) of the capital stock of each predecessor corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "exchanged class") are converted into all of the issued shares, immediately after the amalgamation, of a separate class of shares of the capital stock of the new corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "substituted class"),

(c) immediately after the amalgamation, the number of shareholders of each substituted class, the number of shares of each substituted class owned by each shareholder, the number of issued shares of each substituted class, the terms and conditions of each share of a substituted class, and the paid-up capital of each substituted class determined without reference to the provisions of this Act are identical to the number of shareholders of the exchanged class from which the substituted class was converted, the number of shares of each such exchanged class owned by each shareholder, the number of issued shares of each such exchanged class, the terms and conditions of each share of such exchanged class, and the paid-up capital of each such exchanged class determined without reference to the provisions of this Act, respectively, immediately before the amalgamation, and

(d) the new corporation elects in its return of income filed in accordance with section 150 for its first taxation year to have the provisions of this subsection apply, for the purpose of computing at any particular time the paid-up capital in respect of any particular class of shares of the capital stock of the new corporation,

(e) subsection (3) does not apply in respect of the amalgamation, and

(f) each substituted class shall be deemed to be the same as, and a continuation of, the exchanged class from which it was converted.

History: Subsec. 87(3.1) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 37(11), applicable to amalgamations occurring after 1990.

(4) Shares of predecessor corporation — Where there has been an amalgamation of two or more corporations after May 6, 1974, each shareholder (except any predecessor corporation) who, immediately before the amalgamation, owned shares of the capital stock of a predecessor corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "old shares") that were capital property to the shareholder and who received no consideration for the disposition of those shares on the amalgamation, other than shares of the capital stock of the new corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "new shares"), shall be deemed

(a) to have disposed of the old shares for proceeds equal to the total of the adjusted cost bases to the shareholder of those shares immediately before the amalgamation, and

(b) to have acquired the new shares of any particular class of the capital stock of the new corporation at a cost to the shareholder equal to that proportion of the proceeds described in paragraph (a) that

(i) the fair market value, immediately after the amalgamation, of all new shares of that particular class so acquired by the shareholder,

is of

(ii) the fair market value, immediately after the amalgamation, of all new shares so acquired by the shareholder, except that, where the fair market value of the old shares immediately before the amalgamation exceeds the fair market value of the new shares immediately after the amalgamation and it is reasonable to regard any portion of the excess (in this subsection referred to as the "gift portion") as a benefit that the shareholder desired to have conferred on a person related to the shareholder, the following rules apply:

(c) the shareholder shall be deemed to have disposed of the old shares for proceeds of disposition equal to the lesser of

(i) the total of the adjusted cost bases to the shareholder, immediately before the amalgamation, of the old shares and the gift portion, and

(ii) the fair market value of the old shares immediately before the amalgamation,

(d) the shareholder's capital loss from the disposition of the old shares shall be deemed to be nil,

(e) the cost to the shareholder of any new shares of any class of the capital stock of the new corporation acquired by the shareholder on the amalgamation shall be deemed to be that proportion of the lesser of

(i) the total of the adjusted cost bases to the shareholder, immediately before the amalgamation, of the old shares, and

(ii) the total of the fair market value, immediately after the amalgamation, of all new shares so acquired by the shareholder and the amount that, but for paragraph (d), would have been the shareholder's capital loss from the disposition of the old shares

that

(iii) the fair market value, immediately after the amalgamation, of the new shares of that class so acquired by the shareholder

is of

(iv) the fair market value, immediately after the amalgamation, of all new shares so acquired by the shareholder, and where the old shares were taxable Canadian property of the shareholder, the new shares are deemed to be, at any time that is within 60 months after the amalgamation, taxable Canadian property of the shareholder.

(4.1) Exchanged shares — For the purposes of the definition "term preferred share" in subsection 248(1), where there has been an amalgamation of two or more corporations after November 16, 1978 and a share of any class of the capital stock of the new corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "new share") was issued in consideration for the disposition of a share of any class of the capital stock of a predecessor corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "exchanged share") and the terms and conditions of the new share were the same as, or substantially the same as, the terms and conditions of the exchanged share,

(a) the new share shall be deemed to have been issued at the time the exchanged share was issued;

(b) if the exchanged share was issued under an agreement in writing, the new share shall be deemed to have been issued under that agreement; and

(c) the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each such predecessor corporation.

Related Provisions: 87(9)(a.1) — Effect of triangular amalgamation. See also at end of s. 87.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(4.2) Idem — Where there has been an amalgamation or merger of two or more corporations after November 27, 1986 and a share of any class of the capital stock of the new corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "new share") was issued to a shareholder in consideration for the disposition of a share by that shareholder of any class of the capital stock of a predecessor corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "exchanged share") and the terms and conditions of the new share were the same as, or substantially the same as, the terms and conditions of the exchanged share, for the purposes of applying the provisions of this subsection, subsections 112(2.2) and (2.4), Parts IV.1 and VI.1, section 258 and the definitions "grandfathered share", "short-term preferred share", "taxable preferred share" and "taxable RFI share" in subsection 248(1) to the new share, the following rules apply:

(a) the new share shall be deemed to have been issued at the time the exchanged share was issued;

(b) where the exchanged share was a share described in paragraph (a), (b), (c) or (d) of the definition "grandfathered share" in subsection 248(1), the new share shall be deemed to be the same share as the exchanged share for the purposes of that definition;

(c) the new share shall be deemed to have been acquired by the shareholder at the time the exchanged share was acquired by the shareholder;

(d) the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

(e) an election made under subsection 191.2(1) by a predecessor corporation with respect to the class of shares of its capital stock to which the exchanged share belonged shall be deemed to be an election made by the new corporation with respect to the class of shares of its capital stock to which the new share belongs; and

(f) where the terms or conditions of the exchanged share or an agreement in respect of the exchanged share specify an amount in respect of the exchanged share for the purposes of subsection 191(4) and an amount equal to the amount so specified in respect of the exchanged share is specified in respect of the new share for the purposes of subsection 191(4),

(i) for the purposes of subparagraphs 191(4)(d)(i) and (e)(i), the new share shall be deemed to have been issued for the same consideration as that for which the exchanged share was issued and to have been issued for the purpose for which the exchanged share was issued,

(ii) for the purposes of subparagraphs 191(4)(d)(ii) and (e)(ii), the new share shall be deemed to be the same share as the exchanged share and to have been issued for the purpose for which the exchanged share was issued, and

(iii) where the shareholder received no consideration for the disposition of the exchanged share other than the new share, for the purposes of subsection 191(4),

(A) in the case of an exchanged share to which subsection 191(4) applies because of paragraph 191(4)(a), the new share shall be deemed to have been issued for consideration having a fair market value equal to the consideration for which the exchanged share was issued, and

(B) in the case of an exchanged share to which subsection 191(4) applies because of an event described in paragraph 191(4)(b) or (c), the consideration for which the new share was issued shall be deemed to have a fair market value equal to the fair market value of the exchanged share immediately before the time that event occurred.

History: Para. 87(4.2)(f) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 65(10), applicable to 1988 et seq.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(4.3) Exchanged rights — Where there has been an amalgamation or merger of two or more corporations after June 18, 1987 and a right listed on a designated stock exchange to acquire a share of any class of the capital stock of the new corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "new right") was acquired by a shareholder in consideration for the disposition of a right described in paragraph (d) of the definition "grandfathered share" in subsection 248(1) to acquire a share of any class of the capital stock of a predecessor corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "exchanged right"), the new right shall be deemed to be the same right as the exchanged right for the purposes of paragraph (d) of the definition "grandfathered share" in subsection 248(1) where the terms and conditions of the new right were the same as, or substantially the same as, the terms and conditions of the exchanged right and the terms and conditions of the share receivable on an exercise of the new right were the same as, or substantially the same as, the terms and conditions of the share that would have been received on an exercise of the exchanged right.

Related Provisions: 87(9)(a.2) — Effect of triangular amalgamation. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Subsec. 87(4.3) amended to substitute "designated stock exchange" for "prescribed stock exchange" by 2007, c. 35, para. 68(2)(e), applicable after December 13, 2007.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(4.4) Flow-through shares — Where

(a) there is an amalgamation of two or more corporations each of which is a principal-business corporation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 66(15)) or a corporation that at no time carried on business,

(b) a predecessor corporation entered into an agreement with a person at a particular time for consideration given by the person to the predecessor corporation,

(c) a share of the predecessor corporation

(i) that was a flow-through share (in this subsection having the meaning that would be assigned by subsection 66(15) if the definition "flow-through share" in that subsection were read without reference to the portion after paragraph (b) of that definition) was issued to the person before the amalgamation, or

(ii) that would (if it were issued) be a flow-through share, was to be issued to the person for the consideration under the agreement, and

(d) the new corporation

(i) issues a share (in this subsection referred to as a "new share") of any class of its capital stock on the amalgamation to the person in consideration for the disposition of the flow-through share of the predecessor corporation and the terms and conditions of the new share are the same as, or substantially the same as, the terms and conditions of the flow-through share, or

(ii) is obliged after the amalgamation to issue a new share of any class of its capital stock to the person under the obligation of the predecessor corporation to issue a flow-through share of the predecessor corporation to the person and the new share would not, if issued, be a prescribed share referred to in the definition "flow-through share" in subsection 66(15),

Proposed Amendment — 87(4.4)(c), (d)

(c) for the consideration under the agreement

(i) a share (in this subsection referred to as the "old share") of the predecessor corporation that was a flow-through share (other than a right to acquire a share) was issued to the person before the amalgamation, or

(ii) a right was issued to the person before the amalgamation to acquire a share that would, if it were issued, be a flow-through share, and

(d) the new corporation

(i) issues, on the amalgamation and in consideration for the disposition of the old share, a share (in this subsection referred to as a "new share") of any class of its capital stock to the person (or to any person or partnership that subsequently acquired the old share) and the terms and conditions of the new share are the same as, or substantially the same as, the terms and conditions of the old share, or

(ii) is, because of the right referred to in subparagraph (c)(ii), obliged after the amalgamation to issue to the person a share of any class of the new corporation's capital stock that would, if it were issued, be a flow-through share,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 44(8), will amend paras. 87(4.4)(c) and (d) to read as above, applicable to amalgamations that occur after 1997.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 87(4.4) applies where there is an amalgamation of two or more corporations and a predecessor corporation of the new corporation formed on the amalgamation had entered into a flow-through share agreement. The rules in subsection 87(4.4) generally enable the new corporation to renounce certain resource-related expenses incurred after the amalgamation to a flow-through shareholder.

Paragraph 87(4.4)(c) sets out certain conditions that must be satisfied for a new corporation to renounce expenses to a flow-through shareholder of a predecessor corporation. This paragraph is amended, effective for amalgamations that occur after 1997, to delete the unnecessary reference to the definition "flow-through share" in subsection 66(15) and to ensure that this paragraph is consistent with the amended definition "flow-through share" in subsection 66(15).

Paragraph 87(4.4)(d) sets out certain conditions that must be satisfied to qualify for the relief provided in subsection 87(4.4). Subparagraph 87(4.4)(d)(i) requires the new corporation to issue a new share to the flow-through share subscriber in consideration for the flow-through share. Current subparagraph 87(4.4)(d)(i) does not, however, contemplate the transfer of a flow-through share by the flow-through share subscriber ("original flow-through shareholder") prior to an amalgamation. Consequently, subsection 87(4.4) does not accommodate a renunciation by the new corporation to an original flow-through shareholder of expenses incurred by the new corporation if the original flow-through shareholder transferred those shares to another person. Subparagraph 87(4.4)(d)(i) is amended, effective for amalgamations that occur after 1997, to accommodate the issuance of a new share to a person other than the original flow-through shareholder. This amendment ensures that the new corporation may renounce resource expenses incurred after an amalgamation to an original flow-through shareholder on the same basis as if that person had owned the flow-through share at the time of the amalgamation.

for the purposes of subsection 66(12.66) and Part XII.6 and for the purposes of renouncing an amount under subsection 66(12.6), (12.601) or (12.62) in respect of Canadian exploration expenses or Canadian development expenses that would, but for the renunciation, be incurred by the new corporation after the amalgamation,

(e) the person shall be deemed to have given the consideration under the agreement to the new corporation for the issue of the new share,

(f) the agreement shall be deemed to have been entered into between the new corporation and the person at the particular time,

(g) the new share shall be deemed to be a flow-through share of the new corporation, and

(h) the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the predecessor corporation.

History: The portion of subsec. 87(4.4) between paras. (d) and (e) amended by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 18(5), applicable (as amended by 1998, c. 19, s. 308, deemed to have come into force on April 25, 1997) to amalgamations that occur after 1995, except that the expression "subsection 66(12.6), (12.601) or (12.62) in respect of Canadian exploration expenses or Canadian development expenses" in subsection 87(4.4) of the Act, as enacted by subsection (5), shall be read as "subsection 66(12.6), (12.601), (12.62) or (12.64) in respect of Canadian exploration expenses, Canadian development expenses or Canadian oil and gas property expenses" in respect of amalgamations that occur before 1999. This portion formerly read:

> for the purpose of subsection 66(12.66) and for the purposes of renouncing an amount under subsection 66(12.6), (12.601), (12.62) or (12.64) in respect of Canadian exploration expenses, Canadian development expenses or Canadian oil and gas property expenses that would, but for the renunciation, be incurred by the new corporation after the amalgamation,

That portion of subsec. 87(4.4) between paras. (d) and (e) amended by 1994, c. 8, subsec. 9(2), applicable to amalgamations occurring after December 2, 1992. That portion formerly read:

> for the purpose of subsection 66(12.66) and for the purpose of renouncing an amount under subsection 66(12.6), (12.62) or (12.64) in respect of Canadian exploration expenses, Canadian development expenses or Canadian oil and gas property expenses that would, but for the renunciation, be incurred by the new corporation after the amalgamation, Subsec. 87(4.4) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 65(11), applicable to amalgamations occurring after February 1986.

(5) Options to acquire shares of predecessor corporation — Where there has been an amalgamation of two or more corporations after May 6, 1974, each taxpayer (except any predecessor corporation) who immediately before the amalgamation owned a capital property that was an option to acquire shares of the capital stock of a predecessor corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "old option") and who received no consideration for the disposition of that option on the amalgamation, other than an option to acquire shares of the capital stock of the new corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "new option"), shall be deemed

(a) to have disposed of the old option for proceeds equal to the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of that option immediately before the amalgamation, and

(b) to have acquired the new option at a cost to the taxpayer equal to the proceeds described in paragraph (a), and where the old option was taxable Canadian property of the taxpayer, the new option is deemed to be, at any time that is within 60 months after the amalgamation, taxable Canadian property of the taxpayer.

History: The closing words of subsec. 87(5) amended by 2010, c. 12, subsec. 8(2), to substitute "is deemed to be, at any time that is within 60 months after the amalgamation, taxable" for "shall be deemed to be taxable", applicable in determining after March 4, 2010 whether a property is taxable Canadian property of a taxpayer.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(5.1) Adjusted cost base of option — Where the cost to a taxpayer of a new option is determined at any time under subsection (5),

(a) there shall be deducted after that time in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the new option the total of all amounts deducted under paragraph 53(2)(g.1) in computing, immediately before that time, the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the old option; and

(b) the amount determined under paragraph (a) shall be added after that time in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the new option.

History: Subsec. 87(5.1) added by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 30(3), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994.

(6) Obligations of predecessor corporation — Notwithstanding subsection (7), where there has been an amalgamation of two or more corporations after May 6, 1974, each taxpayer (except any predecessor corporation) who, immediately before the amalgamation, owned a capital property that was a bond, debenture, mortgage, hypothecary claim, note or other similar obligation of a predecessor corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "old property") and who received no consideration for the disposition of the old property on the amalgamation other than a bond, debenture, mortgage, hypothecary claim, note or other similar obligation respectively, of the new corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "new property") is, if the amount payable to the holder of the new property on its maturity is the same as the amount that would have been payable to the holder of the old property on its maturity, deemed

(a) to have disposed of the old property for proceeds equal to the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of that property immediately before the amalgamation; and

(b) to have acquired the new property at a cost to the taxpayer equal to the proceeds described in paragraph (a).

I.T. Application Rules: 26(23) (where taxpayer owned the old property since before 1972).

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(6.1) Adjusted cost base — Where the cost to a taxpayer of a particular property that is a bond, debenture or note is determined at any time under subsection (6) and the terms of the bond, debenture or note conferred upon the holder the right to exchange that bond, debenture or note for shares,

(a) there shall be deducted after that time in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the bond, debenture or note the total of all amounts deducted under paragraph 53(2)(g.1) in computing, immediately before that time, the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the property for which the particular property was exchanged at that time; and

(b) the amount determined under paragraph (a) in respect of the particular property shall be added after that time in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the particular property.

Related Provisions: 53(1)(q) — Addition to ACB for amount under 87(6.1)(b); 53(2)(g.1) — Reduction in ACB under 87(6.1)(a); 80.03(2)(a) — Deemed gain on disposition following debt forgiveness. See also at end of s. 87.

History: Subsec. 87(6.1) added by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 30(4), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994.

(7) [Obligations of predecessor corporation] — Where there has been an amalgamation of two or more corporations after May 6, 1974 and

(a) a debt or other obligation of a predecessor corporation that was outstanding immediately before the amalgamation became a debt or other obligation of the new corporation on the amalgamation, and

(b) the amount payable by the new corporation on the maturity of the debt or other obligation, as the case may be, is the same as the amount that would have been payable by the predecessor corporation on its maturity, the provisions of this Act

(c) shall not apply in respect of the transfer of the debt or other obligation to the new corporation, and

(d) shall apply as if the new corporation had incurred or issued the debt or other obligation at the time it was incurred or issued by the predecessor corporation under the agreement made on the day on which the predecessor corporation made an agreement under which the debt or other obligation was issued,

(8) Foreign merger — Subject to subsection 95(2), where there has been a foreign merger in which a taxpayer's shares or options to acquire shares of the capital stock of a corporation that was a predecessor foreign corporation immediately before the merger were exchanged for or became shares or options to acquire shares of the capital stock of the new foreign corporation or the foreign parent corporation, unless the taxpayer elects in the taxpayer's return of income for the taxation year in which the foreign merger took place not to have this subsection apply, subsections (4) and (5) apply to the taxpayer as if the references in those subsections to

(a) "amalgamation" were read as "foreign merger";

(b) "predecessor corporation" were read as "predecessor foreign corporation"; and

(c) "new corporation" were read as "new foreign corporation or the foreign parent corporation".

History: The opening words of subsec. 87(8) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 65(3), applicable to mergers and combinations that occur after 1995 and, where a taxpayer notifies the Minister of National Revenue in writing before the taxpayer's filing-due date for 2001 that the taxpayer makes the election referred to in subsec. 87(8), as amended, in respect of a merger or combination that occurred before 1999, the election is deemed to have been validly made in respect of the merger or combination. The opening words formerly read:

(8) Where there has been a foreign merger in which a taxpayer's shares or options to acquire shares of the capital stock of a corporation that was a predecessor foreign corporation immediately before the merger were exchanged for or became shares or options to acquire shares of the capital stock of the new foreign corporation or the foreign parent corporation, unless the taxpayer elects in the taxpayer's return of income under this Part for the taxation year in which the foreign merger took place not to have this subsection apply, subsections (4) and (5) apply to the taxpayer as if the references in those subsections to

Subsec. 87(8) amended by 1999, c. 22, subsec. 24(1), applicable to a taxpayer in respect of a merger or combination of foreign corporations

(a) that occurs after February 24, 1998, or

(b) that occurred

(i) before February 25, 1998 and in a taxation year of the taxpayer for which the taxpayer's normal reassessment period, as defined in subsec. 152(3.1), has not ended before 1999, or

(ii) after 1994 and before February 25, 1998 and in a taxation year of the taxpayer in which the taxpayer was exempt from tax under s. 149,

unless the taxpayer elects by notifying the Minister of National Revenue in writing, before January 1, 2000, that the amendment not apply to the taxpayer in respect of the merger or combination. Subsec. 87(8) formerly read:

(8) Merger of foreign affiliate — Where there has been a foreign merger in which the shares owned by a taxpayer of the capital stock of a corporation that was a predecessor foreign corporation immediately before the merger were exchanged for or became shares of the capital stock of the new foreign corporation, unless the taxpayer elects in the taxpayer's return of income under this Part for the taxation year in which the foreign merger took place not to have the provisions of this section apply, subsection (4) applies to the taxpayer as if the references therein to

(a) "amalgamation" were read as "foreign merger";

(b) "predecessor corporation" were read as "predecessor foreign corporation";

(c) "new corporation" were read as "new foreign corporation"; and

(d) "May 6, 1974" were read as "November 12, 1981".

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(8.1) Definition of "foreign merger" — For the purposes of this section, "foreign merger" means a merger or combination of two or more corporations each of which was, immediately before the merger or combination, resident in a country other than Canada (each of which is in this section referred to as a "predecessor foreign corporation") to form one corporate entity resident in a country other than Canada (in this section referred to as the "new foreign corporation") in such a manner that, and otherwise than as a result of the distribution of property to one corporation on the winding-up of another corporation,

(a) all or substantially all the property (except amounts receivable from any predecessor foreign corporation or shares of the capital stock of any predecessor foreign corporation) of the predecessor foreign corporations immediately before the merger or combination becomes property of the new foreign corporation as a consequence of the merger or combination;

(b) all or substantially all the liabilities (except amounts payable to any predecessor foreign corporation) of the predecessor foreign corporations immediately before the merger or combination become liabilities of the new foreign corporation as a consequence of the merger or combination; and

(c) all or substantially all of the shares of the capital stock of the predecessor foreign corporations (except any shares or options owned by any predecessor foreign corporation) are exchanged for or become, because of the merger or combination,

(i) shares of the capital stock of the new foreign corporation, or

(ii) if, immediately after the merger, the new foreign corporation was controlled by another corporation (in this section referred to as the "foreign parent corporation") that was resident in a country other than Canada, shares of the capital stock of the foreign parent corporation.

History: Subsec. 87(8.1) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 65(4), applicable to mergers and combinations that occur after 1995. The subsec. formerly read:

(8.1) Definition of "foreign merger" — For the purposes of this section, "foreign merger" means a merger or combination of two or more corporations each of which was, immediately before the merger or combination, resident in a country other than Canada (each of which is in this section referred to as a "predecessor foreign corporation") to form one corporate entity resident in the country in which all the predecessor foreign corporations were resident (in this section referred to as the "new foreign corporation") in such manner that

(a) all or substantially all the property (except amounts receivable from any predecessor foreign corporation or shares of the capital stock of any predecessor foreign corporation) of the predecessor foreign corporations immediately before the merger or combination becomes property of the new foreign corporation by virtue of the merger or combination,

(b) all or substantially all the liabilities (except amounts payable to any predecessor foreign corporation) of the predecessor foreign corporations immediately before the merger or combination become liabilities of the new foreign corporation by virtue of the merger or combination, and

(c) all or substantially all of the shares of the capital stock of the predecessor foreign corporations (except any shares or options owned by any predecessor foreign corporation) are exchanged for or become, because of the merger or combination,

(i) shares of the capital stock of the new foreign corporation, or

(ii) if, immediately after the merger, the new foreign corporation was controlled by another foreign corporation (in this section referred to as the "foreign parent corporation") that was resident in the same country as the new foreign corporation, shares of the capital stock of the foreign parent corporation, otherwise than as a result of the distribution of property to one corporation on the winding-up of another corporation.

Para. 87(8.1)(c) amended by 1999, c. 22, subsec. 24(2), applicable to a taxpayer in respect of a merger or combination of foreign corporations

(a) that occurs after February 24, 1998, or

(b) that occurred

(i) before February 25, 1998 and in a taxation year of the taxpayer for which the taxpayer's normal reassessment period, as defined in subsec. 152(3.1), has not ended before 1999, or

(ii) after 1994 and before February 25, 1998 and in a taxation year of the taxpayer in which the taxpayer was exempt from tax under s. 149,

unless the taxpayer elects by notifying the Minister of National Revenue in writing, before January 1, 2000, that the amendment not apply to the taxpayer in respect of the merger or combination. Para. 87(8.1)(c) formerly read:

(c) all or substantially all the shares of the capital stock of the predecessor foreign corporations (except any such shares owned by any predecessor foreign corporation) are exchanged for or become shares of the capital stock of the new foreign corporation by virtue of the merger or combination,

(9) Rules applicable in respect of certain mergers [triangular amalgamation] — Where there has been a merger of two or more taxable Canadian corporations to form a new corporation that was controlled, immediately after the merger, by a taxable Canadian corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "parent") and, on the merger, shares of the capital stock of the parent (in this subsection referred to as "parent shares") were issued by the parent to persons who were, immediately before the merger, shareholders of a predecessor corporation, the following rules apply:

(a) for the purposes of paragraph (1)(c), subsection (4) and the Income Tax Application Rules, any parent shares received by a shareholder of a predecessor corporation shall be deemed to be shares of the capital stock of the new corporation received by the shareholder by virtue of the merger;

(a.1) for the purposes of subsections (4.1) and (4.2), a parent share issued to a shareholder in consideration for the disposition of a share of a class of the capital stock of a predecessor corporation shall be deemed to be a share of a class of the capital stock of the new corporation that was issued in consideration for the disposition of a share of a class of the capital stock of a predecessor corporation by that shareholder;

(a.2) for the purposes of subsection (4.3), a right listed on a designated stock exchange to acquire a share of a class of the capital stock of the parent shall be deemed to be a right listed on a designated stock exchange to acquire a share of a class of the capital stock of the new corporation;

Proposed Addition — 87(9)(a.21)

(a.21) for the purpose of paragraph (4.4)(d)

(i) each parent share received by a shareholder of a predecessor corporation is deemed to be a share of the capital stock of the new corporation issued to the shareholder by the new corporation on the merger, and

(ii) any obligation of the parent to issue a share of any class of its capital stock to a person in circumstances described in subparagraph (4.4)(d)(ii) is deemed to be an obligation of the new corporation to issue a share to the person;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 44(9), will add para. 87(9)(a.21), applicable to amalgamations that occur after 1997.

Technical Notes (July 2010): New paragraph 87(9)(a.21), which is effective for amalgamations that occur after 1997, provides that a share of the parent issued to a shareholder on a triangular amalgamation is considered, for the purpose of paragraph 87(4.4)(d), to be a share issued by the new corporation and that a right to acquire a share of the parent issued to a person on a triangular amalgamation is deemed to be in consideration for a right to acquire a share of the new corporation. New paragraph 87(9)(a.21) therefore ensures that the requirements in subparagraphs 87(4.4)(d)(i) and (ii), that the new corporation issue a share or right to a person, are satisfied. As a result, a new corporation may renounce expenditures to a flow-through shareholder of a predecessor corporation in accordance with a flow-through share agreement concluded before the triangular amalgamation.

(a.3) for the purpose of applying subsection (5) in respect of the merger, the reference in that subsection to "the new corporation" shall be read as a reference to "the parent";

(a.4) for the purpose of paragraph (c), any shares of the new corporation acquired by the parent on the merger shall be deemed to be new shares;

(a.5) for the purpose of applying subsection (10) in respect of the merger,

(i) the reference in paragraph (10)(b) to "the new corporation" shall be read as a reference to "the new corporation or the parent, within the meaning assigned by subsection (9)", and

(ii) the references in paragraphs (10)(c) and (f) to "the new corporation" shall be read as references to "the public corporation described in paragraph (b)".

(b) in computing, at any particular time, the paid-up capital in respect of any particular class of shares of the capital stock of the parent that included parent shares immediately after the merger

(i) there shall be deducted that proportion of the amount, if any, by which the paid-up capital, determined without reference to this paragraph, in respect of all the shares of the capital stock of the parent immediately after the merger exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is the paid-up capital in respect of a share of the capital stock of the parent or a predecessor corporation (other than any share of a predecessor corporation owned by the parent or by another predecessor corporation and any share of a predecessor corporation owned by a shareholder other than the parent or another predecessor corporation that was not exchanged on the merger for parent shares) immediately before the merger that

(A) the paid-up capital, determined without reference to this paragraph, in respect of that particular class of shares of the capital stock of the parent immediately after the merger

is of

(B) the paid-up capital, determined without reference to this paragraph, in respect of all the issued and outstanding shares of the classes of the capital stock of the parent that included parent shares immediately after the merger, and

(ii) there shall be added an amount equal to the lesser of

(A) the amount, if any, by which

(I) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deemed by subsection 84(3), (4) or (4.1) to be a dividend on shares of the particular class paid by the parent before the particular time

exceeds

(II) the total that would be determined under subclause (I) if this Act were read without reference to subparagraph (i), and

(B) the amount required by subparagraph (i) to be deducted in computing the paid-up capital of shares of the particular class; and

(c) notwithstanding paragraph (4)(b), the parent shall be deemed to have acquired the new shares of any particular class of the capital stock of the new corporation at a cost equal to the total of

(i) the amount otherwise determined under paragraph (4)(b) to be the cost of those shares, and

(ii) in any case where the parent owned, immediately after the merger, all of the issued shares of the capital stock of the new corporation, such portion of

(A) the amount, if any, by which

(I) the amount by which the total of the money on hand of the new corporation and all amounts each of which is the cost amount to the new corporation of a property owned by it, immediately after the merger, exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of any debt owing by the new corporation, or of any other obligation of the new corporation to pay any amount, that was outstanding immediately after the merger,

exceeds

(II) the total of the adjusted cost bases to the parent of all shares of the capital stock of each predecessor corporation beneficially owned by it immediately before the merger

as is designated by the parent in respect of the shares of that particular class in its return of income under this Part for its taxation year in which the merger occurred, except that

(B) in no case shall the amount so designated in respect of the shares of a particular class exceed the amount, if any, by which the total fair market value, immediately after the merger, of the shares of that particular class issued by virtue of the merger exceeds the cost of those shares to the parent determined without reference to this paragraph, and

(C) in no case shall the total of the amounts so designated in respect of the shares of each class of the capital stock of the new corporation exceed the amount determined under clause (A).

Para. 87(9)(a.5) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 117(12), applicable to amalgamations that occur after April 26, 1995 except that, in its application to amalgamations that occurred before 1998, para. 87(9)(a.5) shall be read as follows:

(a.5) for the purpose of applying subsection (10) in respect of the merger,

(i) any share issued by the parent on the merger is deemed to have been issued by the new corporation, and

(ii) the reference in paragraph (10)(f) to "the new corporation" shall be read as a reference to "the corporation that issued the share";

Paras. 87(9)(a.3) and (a.4) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 37(13), applicable to amalgamations and mergers occurring after December 20, 1991.

Paras. 87(9)(a.1), (a.2) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 65(12), applicable to amalgamations and mergers occurring after 1986.

(10) Share deemed listed — Where

(a) a new corporation is formed as a result of an amalgamation,

(b) the new corporation is a public corporation,

(c) the new corporation issues a share (in this subsection referred to as the "new share") of its capital stock,

(d) the new share is issued in exchange for a share (in this subsection referred to as the "old share") of the capital stock of a predecessor corporation,

(e) immediately before the amalgamation, the old share was listed on a designated stock exchange, and

(f) the new share is redeemed, acquired or cancelled by the new corporation within 60 days after the amalgamation, the new share is deemed, for the purposes of subsection 116(6), the definitions "qualified investment" in subsections 146(1), 146.1(1) and 146.3(1), in section 204 and in subsections 205(1) and 207.01(1), and the definition "taxable Canadian property" in subsection 248(1), to be listed on the exchange until the earliest time at which it is so redeemed, acquired or cancelled.

Subsec. 87(10) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 117(13), applicable to amalgamations that occur after April 26, 1995 except that, in its application to amalgamations that occurred before July 1996, subsec. 87(10) shall be read without reference to para. (b).

(11) Vertical amalgamations — Where at any time there is an amalgamation of a corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "parent") and one or more other corporations (each of which in this subsection is referred to as the "subsidiary") each of which is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of the parent,

(a) the shares of the subsidiary are deemed to have been disposed of by the parent immediately before the amalgamation for proceeds equal to the proceeds that would be determined under paragraph 88(1)(b) if subsections 88(1) and (1.7) applied, with any modifications that the circumstances require, to the amalgamation; and

(b) the cost to the new corporation of each capital property of the subsidiary acquired on the amalgamation is deemed to be the amount that would have been the cost to the parent of the property if the property had been distributed at that time to the parent on a winding-up of the subsidiary and subsections 88(1) and (1.7) had applied to the winding-up.

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(c)(vi)(B)(III)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Aug. 13, 2007:

Mr. Firoz Ahmed, Osler Hoskin & Harcourt LLP, Toronto

Dear Mr. Ahmed:

Thank you for your correspondence dated June 22, 2007 regarding the application of subsection 88(1) of the Income Tax Act (Act). In your correspondence, you asked us to consider an amendment to subparagraph 88(1)(c)(vi) of the Act that would ensure that the increase in the cost of non-depreciable capital property on the winding-up of a subsidiary would not be denied in the circumstances described below.

1. Vco is a taxable Canadian corporation that controls Target, another taxable Canadian corporation. Target owns all the shares of Subco and Sellco 1. Subco owns all the shares of Sellco 2.
2. Aco is a taxable Canadian corporation that deals at arm's length with Vco and Target.
3. Pco is a taxable Canadian corporation that is controlled by another corporation (Pco Holdings). Pco and Pco Holdings deal at arm's length with Vco, Target and Aco.
4. Aco incorporates a wholly-owned subsidiary (Asub) which acquires all the Target shares for cash.
5. Target is wound up into (or amalgamated with) Asub with the view to increasing the tax cost of the shares of Subco and Sellco 1, as provided by paragraphs 88(1)(c) and (d) of the Act.
6. Subco is then wound up into (or amalgamated with) Asub (or its successor) with a view to increasing the tax cost of the shares of Sellco 2, as provided by paragraphs 88(l)(c) and (d) of the Act.
7. Pco purchases the shares of Sellco 1 and Sellco 2 from Asub (or its successor) for cash.

Your concern is that subparagraph 88(1)(c)(vi) would preclude the increase in the cost of the shares of Subco and Sellco 1 on the winding-up (or amalgamation) of Target, as described in paragraph 5 above, and the increase in the cost of the shares of Sellco 2 on the winding-up (or amalgamation) of Subco, as described in paragraph 6 above.

Subparagraph 88(1)(c)(vi) operates to deny the increase in the cost of non-depreciable capital property distributed on the winding-up of a subsidiary if the distributed property or property substituted for the distributed property is acquired by a person or persons described in subclauses 88(1)(c)(vi)(B)(I) to (III). The purpose of the subparagraph is to deny that increase where one or more persons who had a significant interest in the subsidiary before the parent last acquired control of the subsidiary acquire a significant interest in the property, either directly or indirectly, as part of the series of transactions or events that includes the winding-up.

Your particular concern involves the inclusion in subclause 88(1)(c)(vi)(B)(III) of a corporation (other than a specified person or the subsidiary) of which a specified shareholder of the subsidiary is a specified shareholder. In your view, Pco would be a corporation described in this subclause in respect of the winding-up of Target and Subco because each of Sellco 1 and Sellco 2 will be a specified shareholder of Target and Subco prior to the acquisition of control of Target by Aco and will be a specified shareholder of Pco after Pco acquires the shares of Sellco 1 and Sellco 2. The reason that Sellco 1 and 2 will be specified shareholders of Target, Subco and Pco is that each of Sellco 1 and Sellco 2 is deemed to own the shares of Target and Subco owned by Vco and, following the acquisition of the shares of Sellco 1 and Sellco 2 by Pco, each is deemed to own the shares of Pco owned by Pco Holdings (see, in this respect, paragraph (a) of the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1)).

You submit that the denial of the cost base increase in these circumstances is contrary to the policy underlying subparagraph 88(l)(c)(vi). This provision is not intended to deny the cost base increase where the purchaser (in this case, Pco) is not a person described in subclauses 88(1)(c)(vi)(B)(I) to (III) prior to the acquisition of control of the subsidiary. In this respect, you note that Pco only becomes a person described in subclause 88(1)(c)(vi)(B)(III) because of the acquisition of the shares of Sellco 1 and Sellco 2. In the absence of this acquisition, Pco would not be a person described in subclause 88(1)(c)(vi)(B)(III).

We agree that, in the specific circumstances described above, Pco should not be a corporation described in subclause 88(1)(c)(vi)(B)(III) in respect of Target or Subco. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended to ensure this result for windings-up that begin after August 2004, coincident with other amendments to paragraph 88(1)(c.2) that we have, in a letter dated August 13, 2004, agreed to recommend.

While I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, General Director–Legislation, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(c) — Ineligible property

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 1, 2006:

Mr. Donald Watkins, Osler Hoskin & Harcourt LLP, Calgary, AB

Dear Mr. Watkins:

I am writing in response to your correspondence dated August 24, 2006 in which you recommend a technical amendment to the rules in subsection 88(1) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") governing the cost of property distributed to the parent corporation on the winding-up of a subsidiary.

Where subsection 88(1) of the Act applies, the parent corporation may elect to increase the cost of capital property (other than ineligible property) distributed on the winding-up within the limits set out in that subsection. Capital property will be ineligible property if, among other things, a person described in any of subclauses 88(1)(c)(vi)(B)(I) to (III) (a "restricted person") acquires, as part of the series of transactions or events that includes the winding-up, property distributed to the parent on the winding-up or property substituted for such property.

Your concern relates to a series of proposed transactions in which a restricted person will acquire property to be distributed to the parent on the winding up; however, the restricted person will not own the property at any time after the acquisition of control of the subsidiary. You note that subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(iv) of the Act deems property not to be property substituted for the property distributed on the winding-up if it is not owned by a restricted person at any time after the acquisition of control of the subsidiary. However, there is no similar provision dealing with acquisition of property distributed to the parent on the winding-up. Accordingly, the acquired property will be ineligible property.

We agree that ineligible property should not include property distributed to the parent on the winding-up of the subsidiary if a restricted person does not own the property at any time after the acquisition of control of the subsidiary. Accordingly, we will recommend to the Minister of Finance that an amendment be made to subsection 88(1) of the Act to ensure that such property is not treated as ineligible property.

We are prepared to recommend that the amendment apply to windings-up that begin after 2005. While we cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, we hope that this statement of our position is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, General Director–Legislation, Tax Policy Branch

I.T. Technical News: 9 (the backdoor butterfly rule).

(c.1) [eligible capital property] — for the purpose of determining after the winding-up the amount to be included under paragraph 14(1)(b) in computing the parent's income in respect of the business carried on by the subsidiary immediately before the winding-up, there shall be added to the amount otherwise determined for Q in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) the amount, if any, determined for Q in that definition in respect of that business immediately before the disposition;

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(c.1)

(c.1) for the purpose of determining after the winding-up the amount to be included under subsection 14(1) in computing the parent's income in respect of the business carried on by the subsidiary immediately before the winding-up

(i) there shall be added to the amount otherwise determined for each of the descriptions of A and F in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5), the total of all amounts, each of which is the amount, if any,

(A) determined for the description of F in that definition in respect of that business immediately before the winding up,

(B) determined under this subparagraph as it applied to the subsidiary in respect of a winding-up before that time, or

(C) determined under paragraph 85(1)(d.11) as it applied to the subsidiary in respect of a disposition to the subsidiary before that time, and

(ii) there shall be added to the amount determined for the description of C in the formula in paragraph 14(1)(b), the total of all amounts, each of which is an amount that is

(A) one-half of the amount, if any, determined for the description of Q in that definition in respect of that business immediately before the winding up,

(B) determined under this subparagraph as it applied to the subsidiary in respect of a winding-up before that time, or

(C) determined under paragraph 85(1)(d.1) as it applied to the subsidiary in respect of a disposition to the subsidiary before that time;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 45(1), will amend para. 88(1)(c.1) to read as above, applicable in respect of the disposition of an eligible capital property by a subsidiary to a parent unless

(a) the disposition by the subsidiary occurred before December 21, 2002; and

(b) the parent disposed of the eligible capital property, before November 9, 2006 and in a taxation year of the parent ending after February 27, 2000, to a person with whom the parent did not deal at arm's length at the time of that disposition by the parent.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subparagraph 88(1)(a)(iii) generally provides that property of a subsidiary corporation is deemed to have been disposed of on its winding-up for proceeds of disposition equal to its cost amount to the subsidiary immediately before the winding-up. Under subparagraph 88(1)(c)(ii), the cost of such property to the parent corporation is equal to such proceeds of disposition. Paragraph 88(1)(c.1) applies similarly in the case of a winding-up as paragraph 85(1)(d.1) applies to a rollover of eligible capital property from a shareholder to a corporation. That is, it generally reduces, for the parent that has acquired an eligible capital property, the gain that would be included in income under paragraph 14(1)(b) on a subsequent disposition of the property. This adjustment takes into account the 1988 change of the rate of income inclusion and expenditure deductibility from ½ to ¾, by adjusting the calculation of variable Q in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5).

Paragraph 88(1)(c.1) is renumbered as subparagraph 88(1)(c.1)(ii), and is further amended to ensure that the adjustment, or an earlier adjustment to the subsidiary under paragraph 85(1)(d.1), is not lost on a subsequent disposition by way of winding-up.

Paragraph 88(1)(c.1) is further amended by the addition of new subparagraph (i), which applies similarly to the application of paragraph 85(1)(d.11) of the Act to a shareholder in respect of a disposition of an eligible capital property to a corporation. That is, new subparagraph 88(1)(c.1)(i) ensures that an amount that would have been recaptured depreciation to the subsidiary under subsection 14(1), if the subsidiary had instead disposed of the eligible capital property for fair market value proceeds, is subject to possible recapture in the hands of the parent upon a subsequent sale of the property. Amounts claimed under paragraph 20(1)(b) by the subsidiary after its "adjustment time" (as defined in subsection 14(5), i.e., generally the beginning of the first taxation year of the subsidiary that starts after June 30, 1988) are included in the amount subject to potential recapture, by means of an adjustment to variables A and F in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5), as it applies to the subsidiary for the purposes only of calculating any income or gain under subsection 14(1).

New subparagraph 88(1)(c.1)(i) also applies to ensure that the adjustment, or an earlier adjustment to the subsidiary under paragraph 85(1)(d.11), is not lost on a subsequent disposition by way of winding-up.

For additional information, refer to the commentary to paragraphs 85(1)(d.1) and (d.11).

Related Provisions: 85(1)(d.1)G, 85(1)(d.11)E — Application of (c.1)(i) on s. 85 election.

History: Para. 88(1)(c.1) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 38(3), applicable to distributions of property on the winding-up of a subsidiary in a taxation year of the subsidiary beginning after June 1988.

(c.2) ["specified person" and "specified shareholder"] — for the purposes of this paragraph and subparagraph (c)(vi),

(i) "specified person" at any time means the parent and each person that would, if this Act were read without reference to paragraph 251(5)(b), be related to the parent at that time and, for this purpose, a person shall be deemed not to be related to the parent where it can reasonably be considered that one of the main purposes of one or more transactions or events was to cause the person to be related to the parent so as to prevent a property that was distributed to the parent on the winding-up from being an ineligible property for the purpose of paragraph (c),

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(c.2)(i)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Feb. 23, 2007:

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing further to your correspondence dated January 22, 2007 and further to your discussions with the Tax Legislation Division regarding the meaning of "specified person" in subparagraph 88(1)(c.2)(i) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). In your correspondence, you asked us to consider an amendment to that subparagraph that would clarify the meaning of specified person in the circumstances described below.

Subparagraph 88(1)(c.2)(i) of the Act defines "specified person" as the parent and each person related (other than because of paragraph 251(5)(b)) to the parent. The definition "specified person" is relevant for the purpose of paragraph 88(1)(c) of the Act in that a specified person may acquire property distributed to the parent on the winding-up of the subsidiary or property substituted for such property without engaging the bump denial rule in subparagraph 88(1)(c)(vi).

You are concerned that a person cannot be a specified person before the incorporation of the parent corporation. In your view, this could lead to the inappropriate application of the bump denial rule. In this respect, you asked us to consider the following series of transactions or events:

> Prior to the incorporation of the parent corporation ("Parent"), a taxable Canadian corporation ("Grandparent") will acquire common shares of the subsidiary corporation ("Subco") from an arm's length person. Grandparent will acquire sufficient common shares of Subco to become a specified shareholder of Subco but not enough to acquire control of Subco. To fund the acquisition of those Subco common shares, Grandparent will issue shares and debt to a corporation that is related to it ("Related Corporation"). Grandparent will then cause the Parent to be incorporated and, following the incorporation, Parent will acquire the remaining common shares of Subco from arm's length persons, thereby acquiring control of Subco. Grandparent will transfer its Subco common shares to Parent such that, after the transfer, Subco is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Parent. As a final step, Parent would like to wind-up Subco and to increase (i.e., bump) the adjusted cost base of certain non-depreciable capital property of Subco to be acquired by it on the winding-up as provided in paragraphs 88(1)(c) and (d) of the Act.

In the circumstances described above, the Related Corporation is a specified shareholder of Subco that will acquire substituted property (shares and debt of Grandparent) as part of the series of transactions or events that includes the winding-up of Subco. Therefore, the bump denial rule in paragraph 88(1)(c)(vi) of the Act will apply unless the Related Corporation is considered to be a specified person. In this respect, you note that subparagraph 88(1)(c.2)(i) defines "specified person" at any time to mean the parent and each person related to the parent at that time. Accordingly, you are concerned that the Related Corporation may not be a specified person because, at the time it acquired the shares and debt of Grandparent, Parent had not yet been incorporated. You submit that the denial of the bump in these circumstances would not be appropriate since the Related Corporation will be related to Parent from the time Parent was incorporated until the winding-up of Subco.

We agree that, in the circumstances described above, the Related Corporation should not be excluded from being a specified person before the incorporation of Parent solely because the Related Corporation and Parent did not co-exist during that time. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister that the definition "specified person" in subparagraph 88(1)(c.2)(i) be amended, applicable to windings-up that begin after 2006, so that, in respect of property acquired before the beginning of the winding-up of the subsidiary, a specified person would include a person that is related to the parent (within the meaning of subparagraph 88(1)(c.2)(i)) from the time the parent was incorporated until the beginning of the winding-up of the subsidiary.

While I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, General Director — Legislation, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(c.2)(iii)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Aug. 13, 2004:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter of May 31, 2004 concerning the availability of the addition to the cost of non-depreciable capital property under paragraphs 88(1)(c) and (d) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") in the circumstances described below.

Your concern relates to a series of proposed transactions wherein a taxable Canadian corporation ("Bidco") will acquire control of another taxable Canadian corporation ("Subco") followed by a winding up of Subco into Bidco. Prior to the acquisition of control, Holdco will own all of the shares of Subco and Subco will own all the shares of another corporation ("Sellco"). As a condition of the sale of the Subco shares by Holdco to Bidco, Holdco and Subco/Bidco will enter into an agreement to sell ("purchase agreement") the shares of Sellco to an arm's length purchaser ("Pco"), which sale will occur shortly after the winding up of Subco. Prior to entering into the purchase agreement, Pco will not be a specified shareholder of Subco.

More specifically, you are concerned that the right to acquire the shares of Sellco under the purchase agreement would result in Pco being a specified shareholder of Subco, although Pco does not have, nor does it intend to acquire, any direct or indirect interest in the shares of Subco, Holdco or Bidco. Your concern relates to the application of the deeming rules in subsections 251(2), (3) and (5) combined with the definition of "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1) of the Act.

In the circumstances described above, paragraph 251(5)(b) of the Act would deem Pco, for the purpose of subsection 251(2), to be in the same position in relation to the control of Sellco as if it owned the shares of Sellco. As a result, Pco would be related to Sellco after entering into the purchase agreement. As Pco and Holdco would be related to the same corporation, they would be deemed by subsection 251(3) to be related to each other. Under the definition of "specified shareholder," Pco would be treated as owning all the shares of Subco owned by Holdco and, therefore, would be a specified shareholder of Subco before control of Subco is acquired by Bidco. Since Pco would be a specified shareholder of Subco and, since Pco will acquire the shares of Sellco as part of the series of transactions that includes the winding up of Subco, Bidco would be precluded from obtaining a bump in the adjusted cost base of the shares of Sellco acquired on the winding up of Subco.

We agree that where a person has a right to acquire a share of a corporation (the "downstream corporation") controlled by another corporation (the "upstream corporation") and the downstream corporation does not have a direct or indirect interest in any of the issued shares of the upstream corporation, the right should not, in and of itself, result in the person becoming a specified shareholder of the upstream corporation for the purpose of subparagraph 88(1)(c)(vi) of the Act. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister that paragraph 88(1)(c.2) of the Act be amended to exclude a right to acquire shares of a downstream corporation from being considered in determining if a person is a specified shareholder of the upstream corporation in circumstances where the downstream corporation does not have a direct or indirect interest in any of the issued shares of the upstream corporation.

We are prepared to recommend that the amendment apply to windings-up that begin after August 2004. While we cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendation, we hope that this statement of our position is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Related Provisions: 88(1)(c.8) — Meaning of "specified class" for 88(1)(c.2)(iii)(A); 88(4) — Amalgamation deemed not to be acquisition of control.

History: Cl. 88(1)(c.2)(iii)(A) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 66(2), applicable to windings-up that begin after November 1994. The clause formerly read:

(A) the reference in the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1) to "or of any other corporation that is related to the corporation" shall be read as "or of any other corporation that is related to the corporation and that has a significant direct or indirect interest in any issued shares of the capital stock of the corporation", and

Subpara. 88(1)(c.2)(iii) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 118(5), applicable to windings-up that begin after November 1994.

Para. 88(1)(c.2) added by 1995, c. 3, subsec. 24(2), applicable to winding-ups that begin after February 21, 1994.

(c.3) [substituted property] — for the purpose of clause (c)(vi)(B), property acquired by any person in substitution for particular property or properties distributed to the parent on the winding-up includes

(i) property (other than a specified property) owned by the person at any time after the acquisition of control referred to in clause (c)(vi)(A) the fair market value of which is, at that time, wholly or partly attributable to the particular property or properties, and

(ii) property owned by the person at any time after the acquisition of control referred to in clause (c)(vi)(A) the fair market value of which is, at that time, determinable primarily by reference to the fair market value of, or to any proceeds from a disposition of, the particular property or properties

but does not include

(iii) money,

(iv) property that was not owned by the person at any time after the acquisition of control referred to in clause (c)(vi)(A), or

(v) property described in subparagraph (i) if the only reason the property is described in that subparagraph is because a specified property described in any of subparagraphs (c.4)(i) to (iv) was received as consideration for the acquisition of a share of the capital stock of the subsidiary in the circumstances described in subparagraphs (c.4)(i) to (iv);

Proposed Addition — 88(1)(c.3)(vi), (vii)

(vi) a share of the capital stock of the subsidiary or a debt owing by it, if the share or debt, as the case may be, was owned by the parent immediately before the winding-up, or

(vii) a share of the capital stock of a corporation or a debt owing by a corporation, if the fair market value of the share or debt, as the case may be, was not, at any time after the beginning of the winding-up, wholly or partly attributable to property distributed to the parent on the winding-up;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 45(2), will add subparas. 88(1)(c.3)(vi) and (vii), applicable to windings-up that begin, and amalgamations that occur, after 1997.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraph 88(1)(c) generally provides that the cost to the parent of each property distributed to it on the winding-up of a subsidiary is equal to the subsidiary's proceeds of disposition plus, where the property is a capital property and is not an ineligible property, an amount determined under paragraph 88(1)(d) in respect of the property. "Ineligible property" is described in subparagraphs 88(1)(c)(iii) to (vi). Pursuant to subparagraph 88(1)(c)(vi), ineligible property includes any property distributed to the parent on the winding-up if, as part of the series of transactions or events that includes the winding-up, the parent acquired control of the subsidiary and the property or property acquired in substitution for such property was acquired by a person or persons described in clause 88(1)(c)(vi)(B).

Property acquired in substitution for property distributed on the winding-up ("substituted property") has its ordinary meaning and an extended meaning found in paragraph 88(1)(c.3).

Paragraph 88(1)(c.3) provides that substituted property includes property described in subparagraphs 88(1)(c.3)(i) and (ii) but excludes property described in subparagraphs 88(1)(c.3)(iii) to (v). Subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i) provides that, for the purpose of clause 88(1)(c)(vi)(B), substituted property includes property (other than a "specified property") owned by a person after the acquisition of control of the subsidiary where the fair market value of the property is wholly or partly attributable to property distributed to the parent on the winding-up. Subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(iv) ensures that property that would be substituted property under the ordinary meaning of the term will not be substituted property if it is not owned by the person after the acquisition of control.

Example 1 of the explanatory notes to the introduction of paragraph 88(1)(c.3) [see the explanatory notes to S.C. 1998, c.19 (formerly Bill C-28)] describes a scenario under the heading Safe Income Crystallization that illustrates the application of subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(iv) to a situation involving a safe income crystallization prior to a takeover. In that example, Sco, a taxable Canadian corporation, owns 15% of Tco, a publicly traded taxable Canadian corporation. Another corporation ("Pco") makes a takeover offer for all the shares of Tco. In anticipation of the sale of the Tco shares, Sco incorporates Newco and transfers, on a tax-deferred basis under section 85 of the Act, all of its Tco shares to Newco in exchange for Newco shares. The adjusted cost base and the paid-up capital of the Newco shares are then increased by the amount equal to the so-called "safe income" attributable to the Tco shares. Immediately thereafter, Sco sells the Newco shares to Pco for cash and Newco is wound up into Pco.

In the example, subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(iv) ensures that the Newco shares are not substituted property since Sco did not own the Newco shares after the acquisition of control of Newco by Pco. However, assuming that Tco is subsequently wound up into Pco, the non-depreciable capital property ("bump property") owned by Tco at the time of the acquisition of control of Tco would be ineligible property since, as part of the series of transactions or events that includes the winding up of Tco, property substituted for the bump property (i.e., the 15% of the Tco shares) would have been acquired by a specified shareholder of Tco (i.e., Newco) and would have been owned by Newco after the acquisition of control of Tco.

New subparagraphs 88(1)(c.3)(vi) and (vii), which apply to windings-up that begin after 1997, are enacted to ensure that certain shares or debt will not be substituted property even if they are owned by a specified shareholder after the acquisition of control of the subsidiary. Subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(vi) provides that shares or debt of the subsidiary will not be substituted property if such shares or debt are owned by the parent immediately before the winding-up of the subsidiary. Thus, in the example discussed above, the Tco shares, which are owned by Pco immediately before the winding-up of Tco, would not be substituted property.

Subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(vii) provides that a share or debt of a corporation will not be substituted property if the fair market value of the share or debt is not attributable, at any time after the winding-up process begins, to property acquired by the parent on the winding-up. This exemption would apply, for example, if an individual ("Mr. S"), who is a specified shareholder of Tco, incorporates Newco in contemplation of the takeover of Tco and transfers the Tco shares to Newco. Mr. S then transfers the Newco shares to Sco. Immediately after the increase in the adjusted cost base of the shares of Newco (i.e., following the safe income crystallization) Sco sells the Newco shares to Pco. In this scenario, the Sco shares owned by Mr. S after the sale would not be substituted property by reason of new subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(vii).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Dec. 19, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter of November 30, 2001 concerning the application of paragraph 88(1)(c.3) of the Income Tax Act in the context of a takeover of a taxable Canadian corporation ("Targetco") wherein a specified shareholder of Targetco ("SCo") proposes to transfer its shares in Targetco to a new corporation ("Newco") prior to the completion of the takeover, so as to access SCo's share of the safe income of Targetco. You believe that the application of this provision gives rise to unintended tax consequences, and ask that consideration be given to amending that paragraph to ensure the appropriate tax consequences in the circumstances.

In particular, you advised us that a Canadian corporation ("Buyco") owns 51% of the shares of Targetco, a public corporation. Another corporation ("SCo") owns 15% of the shares of Targetco and is a specified shareholder of Targetco for the purposes of subsection 88(1) of the Act. SCo was also a specified shareholder of Targetco before Buyco last acquired control of Targetco. Buyco decides to acquire all of the remaining shares of Targetco. To this end, Buyco incorporates a wholly-owned subsidiary ("PCo") and transfers its shares of Targetco to PCo, thus resulting in an acquisition of control of Targetco by PCo. PCo then makes a cash takeover bid for all of the remaining shares of Targetco.

In anticipation of the successful takeover bid, SCo incorporates Newco and transfers all of its Targetco shares to Newco in exchange for shares in Newco. The adjusted cost base and paid-up capital of the Newco shares are increased through a safe income crystallization transaction involving Newco and SCo. On the takeover bid, PCo directly or indirectly acquires all of the shares of Targetco for cash by acquiring all of the Targetco shares held by the public and by acquiring all of the Newco shares held by SCo. Newco is wound up into PCo and an election is made under paragraph 88(1)(d) of the Act to "bump" the cost base of the shares of Targetco distributed to PCo on the winding-up. Immediately thereafter, Targetco is wound up into PCo.

The technical concern arises out of the combined application of clause 88(1)(c)(vi)(B) of the Act and the definition of substituted property in paragraph 88(1)(c.3) of the Act. In particular, you are of the view that the Newco shares could be property that is substituted for property acquired by PCo on the winding-up of Targetco and that is acquired by a person (SCo) that was a specified shareholder of Targetco before the last acquisition of control of Targetco. Paragraph 88(1)(c.3)(iv) of the Act does not exclude the Newco shares owned by SCo from the definition of substituted property because the Newco shares are owned by SCo after PCo acquires control of Targetco. Therefore, if the safe income crystallization is viewed as part of the series of transactions or events that includes the winding-up of Targetco, then the "bump" may be denied with respect to eligible property of Targetco distributed to PCo on the winding-up of Targetco.

You submit that, from a tax policy perspective, there is no reason that the safe income crystallization should result in the denial of the bump on the winding-up of Targetco. You contend that the bump denial rules are intended to eliminate "backdoor" purchase butterflies, namely transactions whereby a significant shareholder of the target corporation uses the subsection 88(1) bump rules to achieve what is, in effect, a tax-deferred sale of certain corporate assets of the target while maintaining a continuing interest in other corporate assets of the target. In your view, a safe income crystallization, such as the one described above, does not constitute or facilitate a backdoor purchase butterfly.

We agree that the safe income crystallization described above should not, in and of itself, result in the denial of the bump on otherwise eligible property distributed by Targetco to PCo. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance an amendment to the Act the effect of which will be to ensure that the shares of Newco are not substituted property for the purposes of paragraph 88(1)(c) of the Act.

If the above recommendation were acted upon, I would anticipate that such amendments would be included in a future technical bill.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber
General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(c.3)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, April 22, 2002:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter of October 11, 2001 to Davine Roach of this Division concerning the application of the substituted property rules in paragraphs 88(1)(c.3) and (c.4) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

In particular, your concern relates to a series of proposed transactions wherein a taxable Canadian corporation ("Bidco") will acquire control of a public corporation ("Targetco"). Under the terms of the takeover, employees of Targetco will participate in the stock option plan of Bidco's parent corporation ("Parentco"). Parentco is a taxable Canadian corporation and owns all of the shares of Bidco. You indicate that a person ("Mr. X"), who is both an employee and specified shareholder of Targetco, holds options under Targetco's employee stock option plan. Concurrently with the closing of the takeover bid, Mr. X, along with other employees of Targetco, will exchange their Targetco options for Parentco options ("option exchange"). Mr. X is also a party to an arrangement with a trust that is governed by subsection 7(6) of the Act. Under that arrangement, Mr. X has an option to acquire Targetco shares ("trust option") from the trust. The trust will elect under the terms of the takeover bid to receive shares of Parentco and the trust option will be amended to reflect the substitution of the Targetco shares for Parentco shares. Following the takeover, Targetco will be wound-up into Bidco.

Your concern is that Mr. X may acquire property described in subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i) as a consequence of the option exchange and the amendment to the trust option. Accordingly, the addition to the adjusted cost base of certain non-depreciable capital property of Targetco provided in paragraphs 88(1)(c) and (d) (the "bump") may be unavailable on the winding-up of Targetco into Bidco.

You ask that we consider including, in the definition of specified property in paragraph 88(1)(c.4) of the Act, an option or right to acquire a share received in the circumstances described above. You argue that the option exchange and the amendment to the trust option is simply a proxy for an exchange of the underlying shares. Accordingly, you submit that there is no policy reason for treating the option exchange and the amendment to the trust option any differently from an exchange of Targetco shares for Parentco shares.

We agree that the option exchange and the amendment to the trust option described above, in and of themselves, should not result in the denial of the bump on the winding-up of Targetco into Bidco. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended to ensure that the rights to acquire shares of Parentco received by Mr. X will not be substituted property within the meaning of subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i). We are also prepared to recommend that the amendment apply to windings-up that begin after 2001. If the above recommendation were acted upon, we would anticipate that the amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(c.3)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 26, 2007: See under 88(1)(c.4).

Related Provisions: 88(1)(c.4) — Meaning of specified property; 88(1)(c.6) — Where control acquired by way of articles of arrangement; 88(1)(c.7) — Extended meaning of depreciable property; 88(4) — Amalgamation deemed not to be acquisition of control; 248(5) — Substituted property; 256(6)–(9) — Whether control acquired.

History: Para. 88(1)(c.3) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 118(6), applicable to windings-up that begin after February 21, 1994 except that, in its application to windings-up that began before June 21, 1996 and to windings-up that begin after June 20, 1996 that are part of an arrangement that was substantially advanced, as evidenced in writing, before June 21, 1996, the para. shall be read as follows:

(c.3) for the purpose of clause (c)(vi)(B), property acquired by any person in substitution for particular property or properties

(i) includes property owned by the person at any time after the acquisition of control referred to in clause (c)(vi)(A) the fair market value of which is, at that time, determinable primarily by reference to the fair market value of the particular property or properties or by reference to any proceeds from a disposition of the particular property or properties, but

(ii) does not include property that is money received as consideration for a disposition of the particular property or properties;

I.T. Technical News: 9 (the backdoor butterfly rule).

(c.4) ["specified property"] — for the purposes of subparagraphs (c.3)(i) and (v), a specified property is

(i) a share of the capital stock of the parent that was received as consideration for the acquisition of a share of the capital stock of the subsidiary by the parent or by a corporation that was a specified subsidiary corporation of the parent immediately before the acquisition,

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(c.4)(i)

(i) a share of the capital stock of the parent that was

(A) received as consideration for the acquisition of a share of the capital stock of the subsidiary by the parent or by a corporation that was a specified subsidiary corporation of the parent immediately before the acquisition, or

(B) issued for consideration that consists solely of money,

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 45(3), will amend subpara. 88(1)(c.4)(i) to read as above, applicable to windings-up that begin, and amalgamations that occur, after 1997.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraph 88(1)(c.4) defines "specified property" for the purposes of subparagraphs 88(1)(c.3)(i) and (v). Specified property is excluded from the extended meaning of a substituted property found in subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i). Subparagraph 88(1)(c.4)(i) is amended to include, within the definition "specified property", shares of the parent issued for consideration that consists solely of money. This amendment, which applies to windings-up that begin after 1997, ensures that a specified shareholder that participates in a takeover by acquiring shares of the parent for cash consideration will not be considered to have acquired substituted property within the meaning assigned by subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 28, 2000:

Dear [xxx]:

This is in response to your letters of September 15 and 20, 2000, and further to your conversations with Davine Roach, regarding the application of the "specified property" rule in paragraph 88(l)(c.4) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") to the proposed transactions described in your letter. You believe this application gives rise to unintended tax consequences and ask that consideration be given to amending the paragraph to ensure the appropriate tax results in the circumstances.

Based on our understanding of the facts of the proposed transactions as described in your letter, JB1 and JB2 will make a joint bid through Bidco to acquire all the shares of Target for cash. JB1 is a specified shareholder of the Target and JB2 is not a specified shareholder of Target. JB1 will, amongst other things, contribute cash to Bidco, which will issue shares to JB1 in consideration for that cash. JB1 will not control Bidco at the time Bidco acquires control of Target. Target will be wound-up into Bidco and Bidco will seek to bump the cost of certain non-depreciable capital property distributed to Bidco on the wind-up of Target pursuant to paragraph 88(1)(c) of the Act. Bidco shares acquired by JB1 as consideration for the cash contribution will not qualify as "specified property" for the purposes of 88(l)(c)(vi) and consequently the so called "bump denial rule" in 88(l)(c)(vi) will cause the property distributed to Bidco on the winding up of Target to be an "ineligible property" for the purposes of the 88(1)(c) bump.

As you know, paragraph 88(1)(c.4) of the Act excludes property that is "specified property" from the extended definition of substituted property in subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i), which applies for the purpose of the bump denial rule in subparagraph 88(1)(c)(vi) of the Act. The statutory exclusions from the bump denial rule do not, however, anticipate joint takeover bids by a specified shareholder of the subsidiary and a third party, where such bids result in the acquisition of a non-controlling interest in the parent by the specified shareholder who acquired shares of the parent for cash prior to the acquisition of control of the subsidiary by the parent.

In these circumstances, we agree that the bump denial rule in subparagraph 88(1)(c)(vi) of the Act should not apply. Consequently, we will recommend to the Minister of Finance that an amendment be introduced to the Act to ensure that, in the circumstances described in your letter, the bump denial rule does not apply solely because JB1 acquired shares of Bidco for consideration consisting only of cash prior to Bidco acquiring control of Target. We would also recommend that such an amendment be effective for windings-up that begin after 1999.

If the recommendation is acted upon, I would anticipate that such an amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber
General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, April 22, 2002: See under 88(1)(c.3).

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(c.4)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 2, 2002:

Dear Mr. [xxx]

Thank you for your letters dated March 1 and 5, 2002 concerning the application of the substituted property rules in paragraphs 88(1)(c.3) and (c.4) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

In particular, your concern relates to a series of proposed transactions wherein a taxable Canadian corporation ("Bidco") acquires more than 66⅔% but less than 90% of the shares of another corporation ("Targetco") under a takeover bid. To complete the takeover, Bidco implements what is commonly referred to as an amalgamation squeeze out. On the amalgamation, a new corporation ("Amalco") will issue common shares to Bidco and redeemable preferred shares to the minority shareholders of Targetco. Amalco will redeem the redeemable preferred shares immediately after the amalgamation for consideration that includes common shares of Bidco, as required under the applicable securities law. Following the redemption, Amalco will be a wholly-owned subsidiary of Bidco. Amalco will then be wound-up into Bidco.

Your concern is that the redeemable preferred shares and the common shares of Bidco would not qualify as specified property as defined in paragraph 88(1)(c.4) of the Act and, therefore, such shares will be substituted property as defined in subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i) of the Act. Accordingly, the addition to the adjusted cost base of certain non-depreciable capital property of Amalco (the "bump") provided in paragraphs 88(1)(c) and (d) of the Act would be unavailable on the winding-up of Amalco into Bidco.

In your view, the redemption of the redeemable preferred shares for common shares of Bidco does not violate any policy objectives underlying the bump rules. You state that, if the minority shareholders had tendered their shares of Targetco to Bidco under the takeover bid, the Bidco common shares received by them would have been specified property and, as a result, would not have been substituted property for the purpose of subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i). Accordingly, you request that we consider amending the definition of specified property in paragraph 88(1)(c.4) to accommodate the redemption of the redeemable preferred shares of Amalco for common shares of Bidco.

We agree that the redemption of the redeemable preferred shares in consideration for common shares of Bidco should not, in the circumstances described above, affect the availability of the bump on the winding-up of Amalco into Bidco. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended to ensure that the redeemable preferred shares of Amalco and the common shares of Bidco be considered specified property within the meaning of paragraph 88(1)(c.4). We are also prepared to recommend that the amendment apply to windings-up that begin after 2001. If the above recommendation were acted upon, we would anticipate that the amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(c.4)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 24, 2003:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter of May 5, 2003 concerning the application of the substituted property rules in paragraphs 88(1)(c.3) and (c.4) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

In particular, your concern relates to the treatment of employee stock options in a series of proposed transactions wherein a taxable Canadian corporation that is a public corporation ("Acquireco") will acquire control of another taxable Canadian corporation that is also a public corporation ("Targetco").

Certain employees (including directors) of Targetco and other corporations related to Targetco (the "Optionholders") hold options to acquire Targetco Common Shares ("Targetco Options"). Under the terms of the takeover, Targetco Options that are unexercised on the date of the acquisition of Targetco will become options to acquire Acquireco common shares ("Acquireco Options") at a ratio that is consistent with the purchase price of the shares under the takeover transaction (the "Option Exchange"). Following the takeover, Targetco may be wound-up or amalgamated into Acquireco or a corporation related to Acquireco in circumstances where subsections 87(11) or 88(1) of the Act would apply. The Optionholders who receive Acquireco Options may in the aggregate be considered a "specified shareholder" of Targetco (as that term is applied in subparagraph 88(1)(c)(vi)).

Your concern is that the Optionholders may acquire "substituted property" as described in subparagraph 88(1)(c.3) as a consequence of the Option Exchange. Accordingly, the addition to the adjusted cost base of certain non-depreciable capital property of Targetco provided in paragraphs 88(1)(c) and (d) (the "bump") may be unavailable on the winding-up or amalgamation of Targetco into Acquireco or a corporation related to Acquireco.

You ask that we consider including, in the definition of specified property in paragraph 88(1)(c.4) of the Act, an option or right to acquire a share received in the circumstances described above. You argue that the Option Exchange is simply a proxy for an exchange of the underlying shares. Accordingly, you submit that there is no policy reason for treating the Option Exchange any differently from an exchange of Targetco shares for Acquireco shares.

Based on our understanding of the facts, we agree that the Option Exchange should not, in and of itself, result in the denial of the bump on the winding up of Targetco into Acquireco or a corporation related to Acquireco. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended to ensure that the rights to acquire shares of Acquireco received by the Optionholders will not be substituted property within the meaning of subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i). We are also prepared to recommend that the amendment apply to windings-up that begin after 2001. If the above recommendation were acted upon, we would anticipate that the amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

Yours very truly,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(c.4)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 31, 2004

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your email of May 13, 2004 to Mr. Daryl Boychuk of this Division concerning the application of the substituted property rules in paragraphs 88(1)(c.3) and (c.4) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

In particular, your concern relates to a series of proposed transactions in which control of a taxable Canadian corporation ("[xxx]") will be acquired. The controlling shareholders of [xxx] (each of which is a "subsidiary wholly-owned corporation" of "[xxx]") will amalgamate with [xxx] to create "[xxx]". Pursuant to the terms of the amalgamation, a wholly owned subsidiary of [xxx] ("[xxx]") will receive common shares of [xxx] and the public shareholders of [xxx] will receive redeemable preferred shares that will be redeemed immediately after the amalgamation. [xxx] will then be wound-up into [xxx] in circumstances described in subsection 88(1) of the Act.

You advised us that one of the shareholders of [xxx] (the "Shareholder") owns less than 10% of the issued shares of any class of [xxx]. However, there is a group of key employees of [xxx] who are also shareholders and option holders of [xxx] that, together with the Shareholder, may be viewed as a group described in subclause 88(1)(c)(vi)(B)(II).

To finance the acquisition of [xxx], [xxx] will issue debt in the U.S. and Canadian markets. As part of its general investment strategy, the Shareholder would like to subscribe for a portion of the debt. The debt in question would be non participating, interest-bearing debt and would not differ from the debt issued to other lenders.

You are concerned that the subscription for any portion of the debt by the Shareholder could be viewed as an acquisition of property substituted for property acquired by [xxx] on the winding up of [xxx] within the meaning of subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i). You note that the debt would not be "specified property" as defined in paragraph 88(1)(c.4) since it would not be issued as consideration for the acquisition of a share of the capital stock of a corporation described in subparagraphs 88(1)(c.4)(ii) or (iv). Accordingly, the addition to the adjusted cost base of certain non depreciable capital property of [xxx] provided in paragraphs 88(1)(c) and (d) (the "bump") may not be available on the winding-up of [xxx] into [xxx].

In your view, the denial of the bump in these circumstances would not be consistent with the tax policy underlying subparagraph 88(1)(c)(vi) in that the transactions do not facilitate a tax-deferred transfer of some of the assets of [xxx]. Moreover, an amendment to paragraph 88(1)(c.4) to exclude a debt issued to a specified shareholder for consideration that consists solely of money would be consistent with the proposed amendment to subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i).

We understand your concerns regarding the denial of the bump in the circumstances described in your letter and we do not dispute that the result appears to be inconsistent with the policy underlying subparagraph 88(1)(c)(vi). As discussed, we are reviewing subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i) and the definition of "specified property" in paragraph 88(1)(c.4) with a view to identifying those amendments that are necessary to ensure that the bump is not denied in appropriate circumstances. I trust that this letter is informative of our general position regarding your submission.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber
General Director, Tax Legislative Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(c.4)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, April 15, 2005

Dear [xxx]

This is in reply to your letter dated March 16, 2005 and further to your discussions with Daryl Boychuk of this Division concerning the application of paragraphs 88(1)(c.3) and (c.4) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). In your letter, you asked us for clarification concerning the scope of certain proposed amendments referred to in correspondence released by the Tax Legislation Division. In particular, you have asked us to advise you whether these amendments, which relate to the meaning of specified property in paragraph 88(1)(c.4) of the Act and, by implication, to the meaning of substituted property in subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i) of the Act, will apply to shares and options of the parent corporation in the circumstances described below. In the alternative, you have asked us if we would be prepared to recommend amendments to the Act that would include such property within the meaning of specified property.

In addition, you asked us if we would be prepared to recommend an amendment to the Act that would ensure that certain publicly-traded warrants cancelled before the winding-up of the subsidiary corporation, as described below, would not be substituted property within the meaning of subparagraph 88(1)(c)(vi).

In the situation described in your letter, a taxable Canadian corporation ("Parent") and its subsidiary wholly-owned corporation ("Subco") acquired control of another taxable Canadian corporation ("Target") by acquiring, pursuant to a takeover offer, more than 80% of the issued and outstanding common shares of Target. The only consideration issued for the Target shares was Parent shares. Although Target has outstanding options and warrants to acquire Target shares, the takeover offer did not extend to these options or warrants. All of the warrants ("Target Warrants") are listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

Parent intends to acquire the remaining Target shares through a plan of arrangement. Prior to entering into the plan of arrangement, Subco will be wound up into Parent and, as a result, the Target shares acquired by Subco pursuant to the takeover offer will be transferred to Parent. In furtherance of the plan of arrangement, Parent has incorporated a new subsidiary wholly-owned corporation ("Newco") under the laws of Ontario.

The Target shareholders will be asked to approve a plan of arrangement pursuant to which Target will amalgamate with Newco to form Amalco. On the amalgamation, the Target shareholders, other than Parent (and any dissenting shareholders) will receive Parent shares on the same basis as they would have received had they tendered their Target shares under the takeover offer. As a consequence of the amalgamation, Parent will become the sole shareholder of Amalco. Each person that owns a Target Warrant or Target option will, on the amalgamation, exchange that option or warrant for an option or warrant, respectively, to acquire that number of shares of Parent that such holder would have acquired if the Target Warrant or Target option had been exercised and the Target shares so acquired exchanged for Parent shares under the takeover offer. The option exchange will be governed by subsection 7(1.4) of the Act and the warrant exchange will be governed by subsection 87(5) of the Act, as modified by paragraph 87(9)(a.3) of the Act. Subsequent to the amalgamation, Parent intends to cause Amalco to be wound up with the intention of making designations under paragraph 88(1)(d) of the Act in respect of capital property, owned by Target at the time Parent acquired control of Target, that is not ineligible property as defined in paragraph 88(1)(e) of the Act.

In your letter, you refer to correspondence from the Tax Legislation Division dated May 2, 2002 and June 24, 2003. The letter dated May 2, 2002 states that we are prepared to recommend to the Minister that an amendment to the Act be made to ensure that certain redeemable preferred shares acquired on an amalgamation (and the shares of the parent corporation acquired on the redemption of those shares) would be specified property within the meaning of paragraph 88(1)(c.4) of the Act. The letter dated June 24, 2003 states that we are prepared to recommend to the Minister that the Act be amended to ensure that the right to acquire shares of the parent corporation would not, in the circumstances described in the letter, be substituted property within the meaning of subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i) of the Act.

You have asked us if the recommended amendments referred to in our letters dated May 2, 2002 and June 24, 2003 would ensure that the Parent shares received by the shareholders of Target and the Parent options or warrants received by the holders of Target options and Target Warrants on the amalgamation of Newco and Target would be specified property within the meaning of paragraph 88(1)(c.4) of the Act. Alternatively, you have asked us if we would be prepared to recommend amendments to the Act that would include such property within the meaning of specified property.

In addition, you stated in your letter that if a specified shareholder of Target acquires Target Warrants prior to the effective date of the plan of arrangement, such acquisition would result in the denial of the paragraph 88(1)(c) bump on the winding up of Amalco into Parent since the Target Warrants will be property substituted for property owned by Target for the purpose of paragraph 88(1)(c)(vi). In your view, the Target Warrants should not be considered substituted property since they will be cancelled on the amalgamation and, therefore, will not, at any time after the beginning of the winding up of Amalco, derive any value from the Amalco assets.

We confirm that the recommended amendment referred to in our letter of May 2, 2002, if enacted, will ensure that the Parent shares acquired by the Target shareholders, on the amalgamation described above, will be specified property within the meaning of paragraph 88(1)(c.4) of the Act. In addition, we confirm that we are prepared to recommend to the Minister that paragraph 88(1)(c.4) of the Act be amended so that the Parent options and warrants acquired on the amalgamation described above, will be specified property within the meaning of paragraph 88(1)(c.4) of the Act. Lastly, we are of the view that the Target Warrants acquired prior to the effective date of the plan of arrangement should not, in the circumstances described above, be substituted property for the purpose of paragraph 88(1)(c)(vi) solely because of subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i). Accordingly, we will recommend to the Minister that the Act be amended to ensure that the Target Warrants will be specified property within the meaning of paragraph 88(1)(c.4) of the Act.

If the above recommendations are accepted, the amendments would be applicable to windings-up that begin after 2001. While we cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendations, we hope that this statement of our intention is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber
General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(c.4)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 22, 2005

Mr. Dale Meister, PriceWaterhouseCoopers LLP, Calgary, AB

Dear Mr. Meister:

We are writing in reply to your correspondence of August 19 and 26, 2005 and further to our telephone discussions concerning the application of the substituted property rules in paragraph 88(1)(c.3) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

In particular, your concern relates to a series of proposed transactions involving the acquisition of property substituted for property distributed on the winding-up of a subsidiary under subsection 88(1) of the Act.

You have advised us that a taxable Canadian corporation ("Buyco") proposes to acquire all the shares of another taxable Canadian corporation ("Subco1") for money. The owner of the Subco1 shares ("Canco") will also sell the shares of another corporation ("Subco2") to a corporation ("Parentco") that owns all the shares of Buyco. In consideration for the Subco2 shares, Canco will receive money and common shares of Parentco. As part of the same series of transactions or events that includes the acquisition of Subco1 and Subco2, Buyco will cause Subco1 to be wound up in circumstances described in subsection 88(1) of the Act.

You are concerned that the fair market value of the shares of Parentco acquired by Canco will be wholly or partly attributable to property distributed to Buyco on the winding-up of Subco1 and will not be "specified property" as defined in paragraph 88(1)(c.4). As such, the Parentco shares acquired by Canco would be property acquired in substitution for property distributed to Buyco on the winding-up of Subco1 within the meaning of subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i). Accordingly, the addition to the adjusted cost base of certain non-depreciable capital property of Subco1 (the "bump") provided in paragraphs 88(1)(c) and (d) would not be available on the winding-up of Subco1 into Buyco.

In your view, the denial of the bump in these circumstances is not appropriate for two reasons. First, the shares of Subco1 will be acquired for money (which is not property substituted for the property distributed on the winding-up of Subco1). Second, the shares of Parentco will be issued in consideration for property (shares of Subco2) that does not, and will not, as part of the series of transactions or events that includes the winding-up of Subco1, derive any value from the property distributed to Buyco on the winding-up of Subco1.

Based on our understanding of the facts and circumstances described above, we agree that the shares of Parentco acquired by Canco in consideration for the shares of Subco2 should not be considered to be property described in subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i) in respect of the winding-up of Subco1 into Buyco. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the definition "specified property" in paragraph 88(1)(c.4) be amended to ensure this result.

We will also recommend that this amendment be effective for the winding-up of Subco1 described above, which you anticipate will occur in September 2005. While we cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister or Parliament will agree with our recommendations, we hope that this statement of our position is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(c.4)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Jan. 20, 2006:

Mr. Stephen S. Ruby, Davies Ward Phillips & Vineberg LLP, Toronto, ON

Dear Mr. Ruby:

Thank you for your letter of January 12, 2006 regarding the definition "specified property" in paragraph 88(1)(c.4) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

In particular, your concern relates to circumstances where there is an acquisition of property by a person in the course of an amalgamation squeeze-out. The squeeze-out would follow a takeover bid in which a taxable Canadian corporation ("Parent") acquired more than 66⅔% but less than 90% of the shares of another taxable Canadian corporation ("Target"). The Parent would complete the squeeze-out by incorporating a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation, which would be amalgamated with Target in circumstances where the minority shareholders of Target would receive redeemable preferred shares of the amalgamated corporation. The preferred shares would then be redeemed and the redemption price would be satisfied by a combination of money and the delivery of shares of the Parent in the same proportions as the minority shareholders would have received if they had tendered their Target shares to the takeover bid.

In your letter, you note that subparagraph 88(1)(c.4)(v) of the Act includes, within the definition of specified property, preferred shares issued on an amalgamation squeeze-out if those shares are immediately redeemed, acquired or cancelled for money. In addition, you note that, in a letter issued on May 2, 2002, we stated that we would recommend that preferred shares issued on an amalgamation squeeze-out and shares of the Parent (delivered by the amalgamated corporation on the redemption of the preferred shares) be considered specified property within the meaning of paragraph 88(1)(c.4).

You note, however, that neither subparagraph 88(1)(c.4)(v) of the Act nor the proposed recommended amendment referred to in the May 2, 2002 letter specifically provide for the situation where the preferred shares of the amalgamated corporation are redeemed for consideration that consists of a combination of money and shares of the Parent. You point out that the same tax policy considerations that apply on the redemption of preferred shares of the amalgamated corporation for money or the redemption of preferred shares of the amalgamated corporation for shares of the Parent should also apply where the consideration received consists of a combination of money and shares of the Parent. Accordingly, you have asked us to consider an amendment to paragraph 88(1)(c.4) that would ensure that the preferred shares of the amalgamated corporation (that are redeemed for a combination of money and shares of the Parent) and the shares of the Parent that are acquired by the minority shareholders of the Target in partial consideration of the redemption of the preferred shares of the amalgamated corporation would, in the circumstances described above, be considered specified property within the meaning of paragraph 88(1)(c.4).

We agree that, in the circumstances outlined in your letter, both the preferred shares of the amalgamated corporation and the shares of the Parent should be specified property within the meaning of paragraph 88(1)(c.4). Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister that, for windings-up that begin after 2005, the Act be amended to ensure this result. If the above recommendation were acted upon, we would anticipate that the amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(c.4)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 26, 2007:

Mr. John Unger, Torys LLP, Toronto

Dear Mr. Unger:

Further to our recent telephone conversations and your correspondence dated June 21, 2007, we are writing to confirm our public position as previously set out in our May 31, 2004 letter (a copy of which is attached).

In this regard, we confirm that we are reviewing subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i) and the definition of "specified property" in paragraph 88(1)(c.4), of the Income Tax Act, with a view to identifying those amendments that are necessary to ensure that the addition to the cost base of non-depreciable capital property distributed on the winding-up of a subsidiary, as provided by paragraph 88(1)(c) of the Act, is not denied in inappropriate circumstances.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, General Director — Legislation, Tax Policy Branch

History: Para. 88(1)(c.8) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 66(3), applicable to windings-up that begin after November 1994.

(d) [increase in cost amounts (bump)] — the amount determined under this paragraph in respect of each property of the subsidiary distributed to the parent on the winding-up is such portion of the amount, if any, by which the total determined under subparagraph (b)(ii) exceeds the total of

(i) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of any property owned by the subsidiary immediately before the winding-up, equal to the cost amount to the subsidiary of the property immediately before the winding-up, plus the amount of any money of the subsidiary on hand immediately before the winding-up,

exceeds the total of

(B) all amounts each of which is the amount of any debt owing by the subsidiary, or of any other obligation of the subsidiary to pay any amount, that was outstanding immediately before the winding-up, and

(C) the amount of any reserve (other than a reserve referred to in paragraph 20(1)(n), subparagraph 40(1)(a)(iii) or 44(1)(e)(iii) of this Act or in subsection 64(1) or (1.1) of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, as those two provisions read immediately before November 3,[14] 1981) deducted in computing the subsidiary's income for its taxation year during which its assets were distributed to the parent on the winding-up, and

(i.1) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of any share of the capital stock of the subsidiary disposed of by the parent on the winding-up or in contemplation of the winding-up, equal to the total of all amounts received by the parent or by a corporation with which the parent was not dealing at arm's length (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b) in respect of the subsidiary) in respect of

(A) taxable dividends on the share or on any share (in this subparagraph referred to as a "replaced share") for which the share or a replaced share was substituted or exchanged to the extent that the amounts thereof were deductible from the recipient's income for any taxation year by virtue of section 112 or subsection 138(6) and were not amounts on which the recipient was required to pay tax under Part VII of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, as it read on March 31, 1977, or

(B) capital dividends and life insurance capital dividends on the share or on any share (in this subparagraph referred to as a "replaced share") for which a share or a replaced share was substituted or exchanged, as is designated by the parent in respect of that capital property in its return of income under this Part for its taxation year in which the subsidiary was so wound up, except that

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(d)(ii)

(ii) in no case shall the amount so designated in respect of any such capital property exceed the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the property at the time the parent last acquired control of the subsidiary exceeds the total of

(A) the cost amount to the subsidiary of the property immediately before the winding-up, and

(B) the prescribed amount, and

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — foreign affiliates), subsec. 30(1), will amend para. 88(1)(d)(ii) to read as above, applicable to windings-up that begin, and amalgamations that occur, after February 27, 2004.

S. 53 of the draft legislation provides that any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that ends before the day on which the draft legislation is assented to and would, in the absence of this section, be precluded because of subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act shall be made to the extent necessary to take into account this amendment, if the taxpayer

(i) elects in writing in respect of all of its foreign affiliates that this section apply in respect of that provision, and

(ii) files that election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before June 30, 2011.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Paragraph 88(1)(d) determines, for the purposes of paragraph 88(1)(c), the amount by which the parent may, by designation, increase or "bump" the cost of capital property acquired by it on the winding-up of the subsidiary.

Subparagraph 88(1)(d)(ii) provides for a limitation to the "bump" amount based on the amount by which the fair market value of the property at the time the parent last acquired control of the subsidiary exceeds the cost amount to the subsidiary of the property immediately before the winding-up.

Subparagraph 88(1)(d)(ii) is being amended to further restrict the "bump" amount by an amount prescribed by the Regulations, more particularly new subsections 5905(5.13) and (5.4) of the Regulations. This additional restriction applies only to property that is a share of a foreign affiliate or an interest in a partnership that holds shares of a foreign affiliate.

For more detail about this prescribed amount, see the commentary to new subsections 5905(5.13) and (5.4) of the Regulations.

Proposed Addition — 88(1)(d)(ii.1)

(ii.1) for the purpose of calculating the amount in subparagraph (ii) in respect of an interest of the subsidiary in a partnership, the fair market value of the interest at the time the parent last acquired control of the subsidiary is deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

$$A - B$$

where

A is the fair market value of the interest at that time, and

B is the portion of the amount by which the fair market value of the interest at that time exceeds its cost amount [14] Sic. The date should be November 13.

as may reasonably be regarded as being attributable at that time to the total of all amounts each of which is

(A) in the case of a depreciable property held directly by the partnership or held indirectly by the partnership through one or more other partnerships, the amount by which the fair market value (determined without reference to liabilities) of the property exceeds its cost amount,

(B) in the case of a Canadian or foreign resource property held directly by the partnership or held indirectly by the partnership through one or more other partnerships, the fair market value (determined without reference to liabilities) of the property, or

(C) in the case of a property that is neither a capital property or resource property and that is held directly by the partnership or held indirectly by the partnership through one or more other partnerships, the amount by which the fair market value (determined without reference to liabilities) of the property exceeds its cost amount, and

Application: The March 29, 2012 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (Federal Budget), cl. (22), will add subpara. 88(1)(d)(ii.1), applicable to amalgamations that occur and windings-up that begin after March 28, 2012, other than — where a taxable Canadian corporation (referred to in this paragraph as the "parent corporation") that has acquired control of another taxable Canadian corporation (referred to in this paragraph as the "subsidiary corporation") — an amalgamation of the parent corporation and the subsidiary corporation that occurs before 2013, or a winding-up of the subsidiary corporation into the parent corporation that begins before 2013, if

(a) the parent corporation acquired control of the subsidiary corporation before March 29, 2012, or was obligated as evidenced in writing before March 29, 2012 to acquire control of the subsidiary (except that the parent corporation shall not be considered to be obligated if, as a result of amendments to the Act, it may be excused from the obligation to acquire control), and

(b) the parent corporation had the intention as evidenced in writing before March 29, 2012 to amalgamate with, or wind up, the subsidiary corporation.

Federal Budget, Notice of Ways and Means Motion, March 29, 2012: (26) That such other amendments to the Act be made as are necessary to give effect to the proposals relating to the avoidance of tax through the use of partnerships that hold income assets described in the budget documents tabled by the Minister of Finance in the House of Commons on March 29, 2012.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 29, 2012: Tax Avoidance Through the Use of Partnerships

Section 88 of the Income Tax Act contains rules that enable a taxable Canadian corporation (the Parent) that has acquired control of another taxable Canadian corporation (the Subsidiary) to increase the cost of certain capital assets acquired by the Parent on a vertical amalgamation with, or winding-up of, the Subsidiary (the section 88 bump). The section 88 bump [88(1)(c)–(d) — ed.] recognizes that, in such cases, the amount paid by the Parent for the shares of the Subsidiary represents the cost of the assets of the Subsidiary and allows the Parent, within limits, to add the amount paid for the shares to the cost of certain capital assets acquired on the amalgamation or winding-up.

Capital assets, such as land, shares of a corporation or an interest in a partnership, may be eligible for the section 88 bump. Assets that if sold could produce income (as distinguished from producing only capital gains) are not eligible for the section 88 bump. These income assets include eligible capital property, depreciable property, inventory and resource property.

In recent years, corporate partnership structures have been used with increasing frequency to attempt to circumvent the denial of the section 88 bump in respect of a Subsidiary's income assets. Instead of the Subsidiary holding income assets directly, the income assets are held indirectly through a partnership. Upon the acquisition of control of the Subsidiary, the Parent amalgamates with, or winds up, the Subsidiary and then claims an increase (or "bump") to the cost of the partnership interest, even in circumstances where all of the fair market value of the partnership interest is derived from income assets.

A second concern arises in respect of section 100 of the Income Tax Act, which is meant to ensure that income assets held by a partnership are fully taxable on the sale of the partnership by a taxpayer to a tax-exempt person (since the tax-exempt person could wind up the partnership without paying any income tax). This rule does not currently apply to a sale of a partnership to a non-resident even though the income from a disposition of an income asset owned by the partnership may be exempt from Canadian income tax under either domestic law or one of Canada's tax treaties. As well, some taxpayers have sought to take advantage of the fact that section 100 does not expressly refer to indirect sales of partnership interests to a tax-exempt person.

The Canada Revenue Agency challenges these partnership structures where appropriate under the existing provisions of the Income Tax Act, including the general anti-avoidance rule. However, specific legislative action is warranted to explicitly prohibit the use of these and similar structures.

Budget 2012 proposes two measures to ensure that partnerships cannot be used to circumvent the intended application of sections 88 and 100. The first measure [88(1)(d)(ii.1) — ed.] will generally deny a section 88 bump in respect of a partnership interest to the extent that the accrued gain in respect of the partnership interest is reasonably attributable to the amount by which the fair market value of income assets exceed their cost amount. This measure will apply where the income assets are held directly by the partnership or indirectly through another partnership. For this purpose, assets directly owned by a taxable Canadian corporation, shares of which are held by the partnership, will not be considered to be indirectly held by the partnership.

This measure will apply to amalgamations that occur, and windings-up that begin, on or after March 29, 2012. An exception will be provided where a taxable Canadian corporation amalgamates with its subsidiary before 2013, or begins to wind up its subsidiary before 2013. This exception will apply only if, before March 29, 2012, the corporation had acquired control, or was obligated as evidenced in writing to acquire control, of the subsidiary and the corporation had the intention, as evidenced in writing, to amalgamate with, or wind up, the subsidiary. A corporation will not be considered to be obligated to acquire control where the corporation may be excused from the obligation if an amendment is made to the Income Tax Act.

Budget 2012 also proposes to extend the application of section 100 of the Income Tax Act to the sale of a partnership interest to a non-resident person, unless the partnership is carrying on business in Canada through a permanent establishment in which all of the assets of the partnership are used [proposed 100(1.1) — ed.]. In such cases, the income assets remain within the Canadian income tax base. This measure will also clarify that section 100 applies to dispositions made directly, or indirectly as part of a series of transactions, to a tax-exempt or non-resident person.

This measure will apply to dispositions, of interests in partnerships, that occur on or after March 29, 2012. An exception will be provided for an arm's length disposition made by a taxpayer before 2013 that the taxpayer is obligated to make pursuant to a written agreement entered into by the taxpayer before March 29, 2012. A taxpayer will not be considered to be obligated to make the disposition where the taxpayer may be excused from the obligation if an amendment is made to the Income Tax Act.

(iii) in no case shall the total of amounts so designated in respect of all such capital properties exceed the amount, if any, by which the total determined under subparagraph (b)(ii) exceeds the total of the amounts determined under subparagraphs (i) and (i.1).

(e.3) [investment tax credit] — for the purpose of computing the parent's investment tax credit at the end of any particular taxation year ending after the subsidiary was wound up,

(i) property acquired or expenditures made by the subsidiary or an amount included in the investment tax credit of the subsidiary by virtue of paragraph (b) of the definition "investment tax credit" in subsection 127(9) in a taxation year (in this paragraph referred to as the "expenditure year") shall be deemed to have been acquired, made or included, as the case may be, by the parent in its taxation year in which the expenditure year of the subsidiary ended, and

(ii) there shall be added to the amounts otherwise determined for the purposes of paragraphs (f) to (k) of the definition "investment tax credit" in subsection 127(9) in respect of the parent for the particular year

(A) the amounts that would have been determined in respect of the subsidiary for the purposes of paragraph (f) of the definition "investment tax credit" in subsection 127(9) for its taxation year in which it was wound up if the reference therein to "a preceding taxation year" were read as a reference to "the year or a preceding taxation year",

(B) the amounts determined in respect of the subsidiary for the purposes of paragraphs (g) to (i) and (k) of the definition "investment tax credit" in subsection 127(9) for its taxation year in which it was wound up, and

(C) the amount determined in respect of the subsidiary for the purposes of paragraph (j) of the definition "investment tax credit" in subsection 127(9) for its taxation year in which it was wound up except that, for the purpose of the calculation in this clause, where control of the subsidiary has been acquired by a person or group of persons (each of whom is referred to in this clause as the "purchaser") at any time (in this clause referred to as "that time") before the end of the taxation year in which the subsidiary was wound up, there may be added to the amount determined under subparagraph 127(9.1)(d)(i) in respect of the subsidiary the amount, if any, by which that proportion of the amount that, but for subsections 127(3) and (5) and sections 126, 127.2 and 127.3, would be the parent's tax payable under this Part for the particular year, that,

(I) where the subsidiary carried on a particular business in the course of which a property was acquired, or an expenditure was made, before that time in respect of which an amount was included in computing the subsidiary's investment tax credit for its taxation year in which it was wound up, and the parent carried on the particular business throughout the particular year, the amount, if any, by which the total of all amounts each of which is the parent's income for the particular year from the particular business, or the parent's income for the particular year from any other business substantially all the income of which was derived from the sale, leasing, rental or development of properties or the rendering of services similar to the properties sold, leased, rented or developed, or the services rendered, as the case may be, by the subsidiary in carrying on the particular business before that time, exceeds the total of the amounts, if any, deducted for the particular year under paragraph 111(1)(a) or (d) by the parent in respect of a non-capital loss or a farm loss, as the case may be, for a taxation year in respect of the particular business is of the greater of

(II) the amount determined under subclause (I), and

(III) the parent's taxable income for the particular year exceeds the amount, if any, calculated under subparagraph 127(9.1)(d)(i) in respect of the particular business or the other business, as the case may be, in respect of the parent at the end of the particular year to the extent that such amounts determined in respect of the subsidiary may reasonably be considered to have been included in computing the parent's investment tax credit at the end of the particular year by virtue of subparagraph (i), and, for the purposes of the definitions "first term shared-use-equipment" and "second term shared-use-equipment" in subsection 127(9), the parent shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the subsidiary;

History: Subcl. 88(1)(e.3)(ii)(C)(I) substituted by 1994, c. 21, subsec. 40(2), applicable to windings-up that begin after December 21, 1992. That subcl. formerly read:

(I) where the subsidiary carried on a particular business in the course of which a property was acquired, or an expenditure was made, before that time in respect of which an amount was included in computing the subsidiary's investment tax credit for its taxation year in which it was wound up, the amount, if any, by which the total of all amounts each of which is the parent's income for the particular year from the particular business, or the parent's income for the particular year from any other business substantially all the income of which was derived from the sale, leasing, rental or development of properties or the rendering of services similar to the properties sold, leased, rented or developed, or the services rendered, as the case may be, by the subsidiary in carrying on the particular business before that time, exceeds the total of the amounts, if any, deducted by the parent under paragraph 111(1)(a) or (d) for the particular year in respect of a non-capital loss or a farm loss, as the case may be, for a taxation year in respect of the particular business

The words following subpara. 88(1)(e.3)(ii) added by 1994, c. 8, s. 10, applicable to taxation years ending after December 2, 1992.

(e.4) [employment tax credit] — for the purpose of computing the parent's employment tax credit at the end of any particular taxation year ending after the subsidiary was wound up,

(i) the subsidiary's taxpayer employment credits for any taxation year (in this paragraph referred to as the "employment year") and any amounts required to be added by virtue of subsection 127(15) of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, in computing the subsidiary's employment tax credit at the end of the employment year shall be deemed to be taxpayer employment credits of the parent for, and amounts required to be added by virtue of that subsection in computing the parent's employment tax credit at the end of, its taxation year in which the employment year of the subsidiary ended, and

(ii) there shall be added to the amounts otherwise determined under paragraphs 127(16)(c) and (d) of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, in respect of the parent for the particular taxation year, the amounts that would have been determined under those paragraphs in respect of the subsidiary for its taxation year in which it was wound-up if the reference in paragraph 127(16)(c) of that Act to "the five immediately preceding taxation years" were read as a reference to "that taxation year or the five immediately preceding taxation years" to the extent that those amounts determined in respect of the subsidiary may reasonably be considered to be in respect of a taxpayer employment credit or an amount required to be added by virtue of subsection 127(15) of that Act that is included in computing the parent's employment tax credit at the end of the particular year by virtue of subparagraph (i);

I.T. Application Rules: 69 (meaning of "Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952").

(e.5) [refundable dividend tax on hand] — [Repealed]

History: Para. 88(1)(e.5) repealed by 1996, c. 21, subsec. 16(2), applicable to windings-up that begin after June 1995. The para. formerly read:

(e.5) for the purpose of computing the refundable dividend tax on hand (within the meaning assigned by subsection 129(3)) of the parent at the end of any particular taxation year ending after the subsidiary was wound up, the amount, if any, by which

(i) the subsidiary's refundable dividend tax on hand at the end of its taxation year during which it was wound up

exceeds

(ii) the subsidiary's dividend refund (within the meaning assigned by subsection 129(1)) for its taxation year referred to in subparagraph (i) shall, if

(iii) the subsidiary was a private corporation at the end of the year during which it was wound up, and

(iv) the parent was a private corporation

(A) where the subsidiary was wound up in the particular year, at the time immediately after the winding-up, and

(B) in any other case, continuously from the time of the winding-up until the time immediately after the beginning of the particular year, be added to the total determined for the particular year under subsection 129(3) from which the total of amounts determined under paragraphs 129(3)(c) to (e) is subtracted, except that no amount shall be so added in respect of the subsidiary where subsection 129(1.2) would have applied to deem a dividend paid by the subsidiary immediately before the winding-up not to be a taxable dividend for the purpose of subsection 129(1);

Para. 88(1)(e.5) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 38(5), applicable to the computation of refundable dividend tax on hand (within the meaning assigned by subsec. 129(3) as amended) for 1993 et seq. Para. (e.5) formerly read:

(e.5) for the purpose of computing the refundable dividend tax on hand (within the meaning assigned by subsection 129(3)) of the parent at the end of any taxation year ending after the subsidiary was wound up, the amount, if any, by which

(i) the subsidiary's refundable dividend tax on hand at the end of its taxation year during which it was wound up

exceeds

(ii) the subsidiary's dividend refund (within the meaning assigned by subsection 129(1)) for its taxation year referred to in subparagraph (i) shall, if the parent has been a private corporation continuously from the time of the winding-up to the end of the taxation year, be added to the total determined under subsection 129(3) from which the parent's dividend refunds are to be subtracted, except that the amount to be added to the total determined under subsection 129(3) shall be deemed to be nil where, had a dividend been paid by the subsidiary immediately before the winding-up, subsection 129(1.2) would have applied to deem the dividend not to be a taxable dividend;

(e.6) [charitable donations] — where a subsidiary has made a gift in a taxation year (in this section referred to as the "gift year"), for the purposes of computing the amount deductible under section 110.1 by the parent for its taxation years ending after the subsidiary was wound up, the parent shall be deemed to have made a gift in each of its taxation years in which a gift year of the subsidiary ended equal to the amount, if any, by which the total of all gifts made by the subsidiary in the gift year exceeds the total of all amounts deducted by the subsidiary under section 110.1 of this Act or paragraph 110(1)(a), (b) or (b.1) of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, in respect of those gifts;

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(e.6)

(e.6) [charitable donations] — if a subsidiary has made a gift in a taxation year (in this section referred to as the "gift year"), for the purposes of computing the amount deductible under section 110.1 by the parent for its taxation years that end after the subsidiary was wound up, the parent is deemed to have made a gift, in each of its taxation years in which a gift year of the subsidiary ended, equal to the amount, if any, by which the total of all amounts, each of which is the amount of a gift or, in the case of a gift made after December 20, 2002, the eligible amount of the gift, made by the subsidiary in the gift year exceeds the total of all amounts deducted under section 110.1 by the subsidiary in respect of those gifts;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 45(4), will amend para. 88(1)(e.6) to read as above, applicable to windings-up that begin, and amalgamations that occur, after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraph 88(1)(e.6) permits a parent corporation to deduct the amount of a subsidiary's charitable gifts, gifts to Her Majesty, gifts to certain cultural institutions and ecological gifts, to the extent that they were not deducted by the subsidiary prior to the time of its winding-up. Paragraph 88(1)(e.6) is amended, consequential to the addition of new subsection 248(31), to allow the parent to deduct the eligible amount of a gift made after December 20, 2002 that was not deducted by the subsidiary. For additional details, see the commentary to new subsection 248(31).

Related Provisions: 110.1(1.2) — No carryforward of donations after change in control; 248(30)–(33) — Determination of eligible amount of gift.

I.T. Application Rules: 69 (meaning of "chapter 148 of ...").

(e.61) [donation of non-qualifying securities] — the parent is deemed for the purpose of section 110.1 to have made any gift deemed by subsection 118.1(13) to have been made by the subsidiary after the subsidiary ceased to exist;

History: Para. 88(1)(e.61) added by 1998, c. 19, s. 16, applicable after July 1997.

(e.7) [foreign tax credit] — for the purposes of

(i) determining the amount deductible by the parent under subsection 126(2) for any taxation year commencing after the commencement of the winding-up, and

(ii) determining the extent to which subsection 126(2.3) applies to reduce the amount that may be claimed by the parent under paragraph 126(2)(a),

any unused foreign tax credit (within the meaning of subsection 126(7)) of the subsidiary in respect of a country for a particular taxation year (in this section referred to as the "foreign tax year"), to the extent that it exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is claimed in respect thereof under paragraph 126(2)(a) in computing the tax payable by the subsidiary under this Part for any taxation year, shall be deemed to be an unused foreign tax credit of the parent for its taxation year in which the subsidiary's foreign tax year ended;

Related Provisions: 88(1.3) — Rules relating to computation of income and tax of parent. See also at end of 88(1).

(e.8) [investment tax credit — expenditure limit] — for the purpose of applying subsection 127(10.2) to any corporation (other than the subsidiary)

(i) where the parent is associated with another corporation in a taxation year (in this paragraph referred to as the "current year") of the parent that begins after the parent received an asset of the subsidiary on the winding-up and that ends in a calendar year,

(A) the parent's taxable income for its last taxation year that ended in the preceding calendar year (determined before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for that last year) is deemed to be the total of

(I) its taxable income for that last year (determined before applying this paragraph to the winding-up and before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for that last year), and

(II) the total of the subsidiary's taxable incomes for its taxation years that ended in that preceding calendar year (determined without reference to clause (B) and before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for those years), and

(B) the subsidiary's taxable income for each of its taxation years that ends after the first time that the parent receives an asset of the subsidiary on the winding-up of the subsidiary is deemed to be nil, and

(ii) where the parent received an asset of the subsidiary on the winding-up before the current year and is not associated with any corporation in the current year, the parent's taxable income for its immediately preceding taxation year (determined before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for that preceding year) is deemed to be the total of

(A) its taxable income for that preceding taxation year (determined before applying this paragraph to the winding-up and before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for that preceding taxation year), and

(B) the total of the subsidiary's taxable incomes for its taxation years that ended in the calendar year in which that preceding taxation year ended (determined before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for those years);

History: Para. 88(1)(e.8) amended by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 19(1), applicable for the purpose of applying subsecs. 127(10.1) and (10.2) to taxation years that begin after 1995, except that, for taxation years that begin in 1996, the expression "any corporation (other than the subsidiary)" shall be read as "the parent". For windings-up that begin after May 23, 1985, para. (e.8) shall be read without reference to the expression "the definition "qualifying corporation" in subsection 127.1(2) and subparagraph 157(1)(b)(i)". Para. (e.8) formerly read:

(e.8) for the purposes of subsection 127(10.1), the definition "qualifying corporation" in subsection 127.1(2) and subparagraph 157(1)(b)(i),

(i) the taxable income of the parent for its taxation year during which it received the assets of the subsidiary on the winding-up shall be deemed to be the total of its taxable income for that year as otherwise determined and the taxable incomes of the subsidiary for its taxation years ending in the calendar year in which that year ended, and

(ii) the business limit of the parent for that year shall be deemed to be the total of its business limit for that year as otherwise determined and the business limits of the subsidiary for its taxation years ending in the calendar year in which that year ended;

That portion of para. 88(1)(e.8) preceding subpara. (i) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 66(9), to substitute "the definition "qualifying corporation" in subsection 127.1(2)" for "paragraph 127.1(2)(a)", applicable to windings-up beginning after May 23, 1985.

(e.9) [refundable ITC and balance-due day] — for the purpose of applying the definition "qualifying corporation" in subsection 127.1(2), and subparagraph (d)(i) of the definition "balance-due day" in subsection 248(1), to any corporation (other than the subsidiary)

(i) where the parent is associated with another corporation in a taxation year (in this paragraph referred to as the "current year") of the parent that begins after the parent received an asset of the subsidiary on the winding-up and ends in a calendar year,

(A) the parent's taxable income for its last taxation year that ended in the preceding calendar year (determined before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for that last year) is deemed to be the total of

(I) its taxable income for that last year (determined before applying this paragraph to the winding-up and before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for that last year), and

(II) the total of the subsidiary's taxable incomes for its taxation years that ended in that preceding calendar year (determined without reference to subparagraph (iii) and before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for those years), and

(B) the parent's business limit for that last year is deemed to be the total of

(I) its business limit (determined before applying this paragraph to the winding-up) for that last year, and

(II) the total of the subsidiary's business limits (determined without reference to subparagraph (iii)) for its taxation years that ended in that preceding calendar year,

(ii) where the parent received an asset of the subsidiary on the winding-up before the current year and subparagraph (i) does not apply,

(A) the parent's taxable income for its immediately preceding taxation year (determined before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for that preceding year) is deemed to be the total of

(I) its taxable income for that preceding taxation year (determined before applying this paragraph to the winding-up and before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for that preceding taxation year), and

(II) the total of the subsidiary's taxable incomes for the subsidiary's taxation years that end in the calendar year in which that preceding taxation year ended (determined before taking into consideration the specified future tax consequences for those years), and

(B) the parent's business limit for that preceding taxation year is deemed to be the total of

(I) its business limit (determined before applying this paragraph to the winding-up) for that preceding taxation year, and

(II) the total of the subsidiary's business limits (determined without reference to subparagraph (iii)) for the subsidiary's taxation years that end in the calendar year in which that preceding taxation year ended, and

(iii) where the parent and the subsidiary are associated with each other in the current year, the subsidiary's taxable income and the subsidiary's business limit for each taxation year that ends after the first time that the parent receives an asset of the subsidiary on the winding-up are deemed to be nil;

History: The opening words of para. 88(1)(e.9) amended by 2002, c. 9, s. 31, applicable to taxation years that end after 2001. The opening words formerly read:

(e.9) [instalments and refundable ITCs] — for the purpose of applying subparagraph 157(1)(b)(i) and the definition "qualifying corporation" in subsection 127.1(2) to any corporation (other than the subsidiary)

Para. 88(1)(e.9) added by 1997, c. 25, subsec. 19(2), applicable to windings-up that begin after May 23, 1985, except that

(a) the expression "any corporation (other than the subsidiary)" shall be read as "the parent" with respect to windings-up that begin before 1997;

(b) for the purpose of applying para. (e.9) for the purpose of the definition "qualifying corporation" in subsec. 127.1(2), the business limits referred to in para. (e.9), for taxation years that ended after June 1994 and began before 1996, shall be determined under s. 125 as that section read in its application to taxation years that ended before July 1994; and

(c) subpara. (e.9)(i) does not apply

(i) for the purpose of applying the definition "qualifying corporation" in subsec. 127.1(2) to taxation years that ended before July 1994, and

(ii) for the purpose of applying subpara. 157(1)(b)(i) to taxation years that end before 1998.

(f) [depreciable property] — where property that was depreciable property of a prescribed class of the subsidiary has been distributed to the parent on the winding-up and the capital cost to the subsidiary of the property exceeds the amount deemed by paragraph (a) to be the subsidiary's proceeds of disposition of the property, for the purposes of sections 13 and 20 and any regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a),

(i) notwithstanding paragraph (c), the capital cost to the parent of the property shall be deemed to be the amount that was the capital cost of the property to the subsidiary, and

(ii) the excess shall be deemed to have been allowed to the parent in respect of the property under regulations made under paragraph 20(1)(a) in computing income for taxation years before the acquisition by the parent of the property;

I.T. Application Rules: 20(1.2) (transfer of depreciable property by person who owned it before 1972).

(g) [insurance corporation] — where the subsidiary was an insurance corporation,

(i) for the purposes of paragraphs 12(1)(d), (e), (e.1), (i) and (s), subsection 12.5(8), paragraphs 20(1)(l), (l.1), (p) and (jj) and 20(7)(c), subsections 20(22) and 20.4(4), sections 138, 138.1, 140, 142 and 148 and Part XII.3, the parent is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the subsidiary, and

(ii) for the purpose of determining the amount of the gross investment revenue required to be included under subsection 138(9) in the income of the subsidiary and the parent and the amount of gains and losses of the subsidiary and the parent from property used by them in the year or held by them in the year in the course of carrying on an insurance business in Canada

(A) the subsidiary and the parent shall, in addition to their normal taxation years, be deemed to have had a taxation year ending immediately before the time when the property of the subsidiary was transferred to, and the obligations of the subsidiary were assumed by, the parent on the winding-up, and

(B) for the taxation years of the subsidiary and the parent following the time referred to in clause (A), the property transferred to, and the obligations assumed by, the parent on the winding-up shall be deemed to have been transferred or assumed, as the case may be, on the last day of the taxation year ending immediately before that time and the parent shall be deemed to be the same corporation as and a continuation of the subsidiary with respect to that property, those obligations and the insurance businesses carried on by the subsidiary;

History: Subpara. 88(1)(g)(i) amended by 2009, c. 2, s. 20, applicable to taxation years that begin after September 2006. The subpara. formerly read:

(1.1) Non-capital losses, etc., of subsidiary — Where a Canadian corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "subsidiary") has been wound up and not less than 90% of the issued shares of each class of the capital stock of the subsidiary were, immediately before the winding-up, owned by another Canadian corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "parent") and all the shares of the subsidiary that were not owned by the parent immediately before the winding-up were owned at that time by a person or persons with whom the parent was dealing at arm's length, for the purpose of computing the taxable income of the parent under this Part and the tax payable under Part IV by the parent for any taxation year commencing after the commencement of the winding-up, such portion of any non-capital loss, restricted farm loss, farm loss or limited partnership loss of the subsidiary as may reasonably be regarded as its loss from carrying on a particular business (in this subsection referred to as the "subsidiary's loss business") and any other portion of any non-capital loss or limited partnership loss of the subsidiary as may reasonably be regarded as being derived from any other source or being in respect of a claim made under section 110.5 for any particular taxation year of the subsidiary (in this subsection referred to as "the subsidiary's loss year"), to the extent that it

(a) was not deducted in computing the taxable income of the subsidiary for any taxation year of the subsidiary, and

(b) would have been deductible in computing the taxable income of the subsidiary for any taxation year beginning after the commencement of the winding-up, on the assumption that it had such a taxation year and that it had sufficient income for that year, shall, for the purposes of this subsection, paragraphs 111(1)(a), (c), (d) and (e), subsection 111(3) and Part IV,

(c) in the case of such portion of any non-capital loss, restricted farm loss, farm loss or limited partnership loss of the subsidiary as may reasonably be regarded as its loss from carrying on the subsidiary's loss business, be deemed, for the taxation year of the parent in which the subsidiary's loss year ended, to be a non-capital loss, restricted farm loss, farm loss or limited partnership loss, respectively, of the parent from carrying on the subsidiary's loss business, that was not deductible by the parent in computing its taxable income for any taxation year that commenced before the commencement of the winding-up,

(d) in the case of any other portion of any non-capital loss or limited partnership loss of the subsidiary as may reasonably be regarded as being derived from any other source, be deemed, for the taxation year of the parent in which the subsidiary's loss year ended, to be a non-capital loss or a limited partnership loss, respectively, of the parent that was derived from the source from which the subsidiary derived the loss and that was not deductible by the parent in computing its taxable income for any taxation year that commenced before the commencement of the winding-up, and

(d.1) in the case of any other portion of any non-capital loss of the subsidiary as may reasonably be regarded as being in respect of a claim made under section 110.5, be deemed, for the taxation year of the parent in which the subsidiary's loss year ended, to be a non-capital loss of the parent in respect of a claim made under section 110.5 that was not deductible by the parent in computing its taxable income for any taxation year that commenced before the commencement of the winding-up,

except that

(e) where at any time control of the parent or subsidiary has been acquired by a person or group of persons, no amount in respect of the subsidiary's non-capital loss or farm loss for a taxation year ending before that time is deductible in computing the taxable income of the parent for a particular taxation year ending after that time, except that such portion of the subsidiary's non-capital loss or farm loss as may reasonably be regarded as its loss from carrying on a business and, where a business was carried on by the subsidiary in that year, such portion of the non-capital loss as may reasonably be regarded as being in respect of an amount deductible under paragraph 110(1)(k) in computing its taxable income for the year is deductible only

Proposed Amendment — 88(1.1)(e) opening words

(e) if control of the parent has been acquired by a person or group of persons at any time after the commencement of the winding-up, or control of the subsidiary has been acquired by a person or group of persons at any time whatever, no amount in respect of the subsidiary's non-capital loss or farm loss for a taxation year ending before that time is deductible in computing the taxable income of the parent for a particular taxation year ending after that time, except that such portion of the subsidiary's non-capital loss or farm loss as may reasonably be regarded as its loss from carrying on a business and, where a business was carried on by the subsidiary in that year, such portion of the non-capital loss as may reasonably be regarded as being in respect of an amount deductible under paragraph 110(1)(k) in computing its taxable income for the year is deductible only

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 45(5), will amend the opening words of para. 88(1.1)(e) to read as above, applicable to windings-up that begin after May 1996.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 88(1.1) allows a parent corporation under certain circumstances to use losses of a subsidiary corporation that has been wound up. Paragraph 88(1.1)(e) limits the use that can be made of the former subsidiary's non-capital losses and farm losses where either the parent or the subsidiary has undergone an acquisition of control. In its current form, the paragraph applies these limits regardless of when the acquisition of control took place. This can produce results that are unnecessarily restrictive. If, for example, a newly-acquired corporation is made the parent of an existing subsidiary that has losses, but the subsidiary itself has not undergone an acquisition of control since it incurred those losses, there is no reason for paragraph 88(1.1)(e) to limit the use that the parent corporation can make of the subsidiary's losses after the winding-up.

To ensure that it applies more appropriately, paragraph 88(1.1)(e) is amended to distinguish between acquisitions of control of the parent corporation and acquisitions of control of the subsidiary. In respect of the parent, the limits imposed by the provision will apply only where a person or group of persons has acquired control after the commencement of the winding-up. In respect of the subsidiary, those limits will continue to apply if control has been acquired at any time.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Oct. 26, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

This is further to your discussions with officials of this Division and your letter of September 25, 2001 to Lawrence Purdy, in which you request our views on whether the tax consequences of the application of paragraph 88(1.1)(e) of the Income Tax Act (Act) to a series of transactions accord with the Department's income tax policies.

You describe a series of transactions that is comprised of three main steps and involves three corporations, Parentco, Lossco and Profitco. By way of background, Parentco controls Lossco, which has accumulated non-capital losses and has not been subject to a change of control since these losses arose. First, Parentco acquires control of Profitco, which is expected to continue to profit in future taxation years. Control of Lossco is then transferred to Profitco, after which the last step is to wind-up Lossco into Profitco.

It does seem that, as you suggest, the change in control of the parent, Profitco, would trigger the application of paragraph 88(1.1)(e). The effect would be to restrict the use of the losses of Lossco by Profitco following the winding-up. This would occur despite the fact that, as I have mentioned, the loss arose while Lossco was part of Parentco's corporate group. You express the view that this result is contrary to the policies that underlie the Act.

As you point out, an amalgamation, rather than a winding-up, of Profitco and Lossco would allow the newly formed company — which could in substance be Profitco — to use Lossco's losses without restrictions. This is so because subsection 87(2.1) of the Act stipulates that, for the purposes of subsections 111(3) to 111(5.4) of the Act, the new corporation is deemed to be a continuation of each predecessor corporation. Subsection 111(5) would apply only to restrict the losses, if any, of Profitco, since it, unlike Lossco, would have been subject to an acquisition of control.

In principle, we agree that the application of paragraph 88(1.1)(e) to transactions akin to that which you describe produces an anomalous result, since it restricts the use of losses where there has been no change in the ultimate control of the corporation that produced the losses. Further, the differential treatment in cases of this sort between windings-up and amalgamations is unintended.

Currently, paragraph 88(1.1)(e) may be triggered where at any time the parent has undergone a change of control. This aspect of the provision could be refined to apply to acquisitions of control of the parent subsequent to the winding-up. This would ensure that the paragraph would not apply to the type of situation discussed above. Further, its effect would be consistent with the present treatment of loss utilizations after a change in control: any winding-up of a subsidiary that had undergone even an indirect change in control prior to the winding-up would still trigger the application of paragraph 88(1.1)(e); and the parent's use of the losses of the subsidiary would be restricted if the parent were subject to an acquisition of control after the winding-up.

I am therefore prepared to recommend an amendment along the lines described above. I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendation that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, I hope that this statement of our position is helpful.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Oct. 29, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

I write further to my letter of October 26, 2001, which outlines our intention to recommend an amendment to paragraph 88(1.1)(e) of the Income Tax Act, and the request you subsequently made to Lawrence Purdy that we indicate as of what date we are prepared to recommend that the amendment come into force.

We intend to recommend that the amendment take effect for windings-up that commence after October 25, 2001. As you know, although we have no reason to believe that such an amendment would be controversial, I am not in a position to offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with this or any aspect of the recommendation.

I trust that the above will be of some assistance.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, July 2, 2003:

Dear [xxx]:

Further to our meeting in December 2002, concerning the coming into force of a proposed amendment to subsection 88(1.1) of the Income Tax Act, I am writing to inform you of the results of our consideration of this matter.

As you know, we recently issued a letter stating our intention to recommend amending the rules concerning the treatment of losses where a company that is part of a winding-up transaction has undergone an acquisition of control. More specifically, paragraph 88(1.1)(e) of the Act would be amended to apply, in respect of a parent corporation, only to acquisitions of control that take place after the winding up has begun. In this way, the parent's use of losses incurred by the former subsidiary while it was a member of the group would not be restricted by subsection 88(1.1).

Your submission recommends that the proposed change apply to windings-up begun as early as June 1996. This would accommodate a particular transaction that was undertaken at that time. As you have noted in support of your request, the current rules produce a result that is not appropriate in policy terms, which would also be true in respect of a transaction occurring in 1996. Further, there have been no other requests or issues that have come to the attention of CCRA respecting the coming into force of the proposed amendment.

As a consequence, we are prepared to recommend that the proposed amendments to paragraph 88(1.1)(e) apply to windings-up begun after May 1996.

Of course, we cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendations that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, we trust that this statement of our position is helpful.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(i) if that business is carried on by the subsidiary or the parent for profit or with a reasonable expectation of profit throughout the particular year, and

(ii) to the extent of the total of the parent's income for the particular year from that business and, where properties were sold, leased, rented or developed or services rendered in the course of carrying on that business before that time, from any other business substantially all of the income of which was derived from the sale, leasing, rental or development, as the case may be, of similar properties or the rendering of similar services, and, for the purpose of this paragraph, where this subsection applied to the winding-up of another corporation in respect of which the subsidiary was the parent and this paragraph applied in respect of losses of that other corporation, the subsidiary shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, that other corporation with respect to those losses, and

(f) any portion of a loss of the subsidiary that would otherwise be deemed by paragraph (c), (d) or (d.1) to be a loss of the parent for a particular taxation year beginning after the commencement of the winding-up shall be deemed, for the purpose of computing the parent's taxable income for taxation years beginning after the commencement of the winding-up, to be such a loss of the parent for its immediately preceding taxation year and not for the particular year, where the parent so elects in its return of income under this Part for the particular year.

(a) was not deducted in computing the taxable income of the subsidiary for any taxation year of the subsidiary, and

(b) would have been deductible in computing the taxable income of the subsidiary for any taxation year beginning after the commencement of the winding-up, on the assumption that it had such a taxation year and that it had sufficient income and taxable capital gains for that year,

shall, for the purposes of this subsection, paragraph 111(1)(b) and subsection 111(3), be deemed to be a net capital loss of the parent for its taxation year in which the particular taxation year of the subsidiary ended, except that

(c) where at any time control of the parent or subsidiary has been acquired by a person or group of persons, no amount in respect of the subsidiary's net capital loss for a taxation year ending before that time is deductible in computing the parent's taxable income for a taxation year ending after that time, and

(d) any portion of a net capital loss of the subsidiary that would otherwise be deemed by this subsection to be a loss of the parent for a particular taxation year beginning after the commencement of the winding-up shall be deemed, for the purposes of computing its taxable income for taxation years beginning after the commencement of the winding-up, to be a net capital loss of the parent for its immediately preceding taxation year and not for the particular year, where the parent so elects in its return of income under this Part for the particular year.

(1.3) Computation of income and tax of parent — For the purpose of paragraphs (1)(e.3), (e.6) and (e.7), subsections (1.1) and (1.2), section 110.1, subsections 111(1) and (3) and Part IV, where a parent corporation has been incorporated or otherwise formed after the end of an expenditure year, gift year, foreign tax year or loss year, as the case may be, of a subsidiary of the parent, for the purpose of computing the taxable income of, and the tax payable under this Part and Part IV by, the parent for any taxation year,

(a) it shall be deemed to have been in existence during the particular period beginning immediately before the end of the subsidiary's first expenditure year, gift year, foreign tax year or loss year, as the case may be, and ending immediately after it was incorporated or otherwise formed;

(b) it shall be deemed to have had, throughout the particular period, fiscal periods ending on the day of the year on which its first fiscal period ended; and

(c) it shall be deemed to have been controlled, throughout the particular period, by the person or persons who controlled it immediately after it was incorporated or otherwise formed.

Related Provisions: 88(1)(e.6) — Meaning of "gift year"; 256(6), (6.1) — Meaning of "controlled".

History: Para. 88(1.3)(a) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 38(6), applicable to windings-up commencing after 1988. Para. (a) formerly read:

> (a) it shall be deemed to have been in existence during the particular period commencing immediately before the end of the subsidiary's first foreign tax year, gift year or loss year, as the case may be, and ending immediately after it was incorporated or otherwise formed;

(1.4) Qualified expenditure of subsidiary — For the purposes of this subsection and section 37.1, where the rules in subsection (1) applied to the winding-up of a subsidiary, for the purpose of computing the income of its parent for any taxation year commencing after the subsidiary has been wound up, the following rules apply:

(a) where the parent's base period consists of fewer than three taxation years, its base period shall be determined on the assumption that it had taxation years in each of the calendar years preceding the year in which it was incorporated, each of which commenced on the same day of the year as the day of its incorporation;

(b) the qualified expenditure made by the parent in a particular taxation year in its base period shall be deemed to be the total of the amount thereof otherwise determined and the qualified expenditure made by the subsidiary in its taxation year ending in the same calendar year as the particular year;

(c) the total of the amounts paid to the parent by persons referred to in subparagraphs (b)(i) to (iii) of the definition "expenditure base" in subsection 37.1(5) in a particular taxation year in its base period shall be deemed to be the total otherwise determined and all those amounts paid to the subsidiary by a person referred to in those subparagraphs in the subsidiary's taxation year ending in the same calendar year as the particular year; and

(d) there shall be added to the total of the amounts otherwise determined in respect of the parent under subparagraphs 37.1(3)(b)(i) and (iii) respectively, the total of the amounts determined under those subparagraphs in respect of the subsidiary.

(1.41) Application of subsec. 37.1(5) — The definitions in subsection 37.1(5) apply to subsection (1.4).

Origin of subsec. 88(1.41): R.S.C. 1985, c. 1 (5th Supp.) (formerly contained in the opening words to subsec. 37.1(5)).

(1.5) Parent continuation of subsidiary — For the purposes of section 29 of the Income Tax Application Rules, subsection 59(3.3) and sections 66, 66.1, 66.2, 66.21, 66.4 and 66.7, where the rules in subsection (1) applied to the winding-up of a subsidiary, its parent is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the subsidiary.

History: Subsec. 88(1.5) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 66(4), applicable to windings-up that occur after 2000. The subsec. formerly read:

> (1.5) For the purposes of section 29 of the Income Tax Application Rules, subsection 59(3.3) and sections 66, 66.1, 66.2, 66.4 and 66.7, where the rules in subsection (1) applied to the winding-up of a subsidiary, its parent shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the subsidiary.

Subsec. 88(1.5) added by 1985, c. 45, subsec. 43(9), applicable with respect to windings-up commencing after 1982.

(1.6) Idem — Where a corporation that carries on a farming business and computes its income from that business in accordance with the cash method is wound up in circumstances to which subsection (1) applies and, at the time that is immediately before the winding-up of the corporation, owned inventory that was used in connection with that business,

(a) for the purposes of subparagraph (1)(a)(iii), the cost amount to the corporation at that time of property purchased by it that is included in that inventory shall be deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount, if any, that would be included under paragraph 28(1)(c) in computing the corporation's income for its last taxation year beginning before that time if that year had ended at that time,

B is the value (determined in accordance with subsection 28(1.2)) to the corporation at that time of the purchased inventory that is distributed to the parent on the winding-up,

C is the value (determined in accordance with subsection 28(1.2)) of all of the inventory purchased by the corporation that was owned by it in connection with that business at that time, and

D is the lesser of

(i) such additional amount as the corporation designates in respect of the property, and

(ii) the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the property at that time exceeds the amount determined for A in respect of the property;

(b) for the purpose of subparagraph 28(1)(a)(i), the disposition of the inventory and the receipt of the proceeds of disposition therefor shall be deemed to have occurred at that time and in the course of carrying on the business; and

(c) where the parent carries on a farming business and computes its income therefrom in accordance with the cash method, for the purposes of section 28,

(i) an amount equal to the cost to the parent of the inventory shall be deemed to have been paid by it, and

(ii) the parent shall be deemed to have purchased the inventory for an amount equal to that cost, in the course of carrying on that business and at the time it acquired the inventory.

History: Subsec. 88(1.6) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 66(14), applicable to windings-up beginning after July 13, 1990.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-427R: Livestock of farmers.

(1.7) Interpretation — For the purposes of paragraphs (1)(c) and (d), where a parent of a subsidiary did not deal at arm's length with another person (other than a corporation the control of which was acquired by the parent from a person with whom the parent dealt at arm's length) at any time before the winding-up of the subsidiary, the parent and the other person are deemed never to have dealt with each other at arm's length, whether or not the parent and the other person coexisted.

Related Provisions: 87(11) — Application to vertical amalgamation; 256(6)–(9) — Whether control acquired.

History: Subsec. 88(1.7) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 118(12), applicable to windings-up that begin after February 21, 1994.

Proposed Addition — 88(1.8), (1.9)

(1.8) Application of subsec. (1.9) — Subsection (1.9) applies if

(a) a corporation has made a designation (referred to in this subsection and subsection (1.9) as the "initial designation") under paragraph (1)(d) in respect of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation, or an interest in a partnership that, based on the assumptions contained in paragraph 96(1)(c), owns a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation, on or before the filing-due date for its return of income under this Part for the taxation year in which a disposition of the share or the partnership interest, as the case may be, occurred in the course of a winding-up referred to in subsection (1) or an amalgamation referred to in subsection 87(11);

(b) the corporation made reasonable efforts to determine the foreign affiliate's tax-free surplus balance (within the meaning of subsection 5905(5.5) of the Income Tax Regulations), in respect of the corporation, that was relevant in the computation of the maximum amount available under subparagraph (1)(d)(ii) to be designated in respect of that disposition; and

(c) the corporation amends the initial designation on or before the day that is 10 years after the filing-due date referred to in paragraph (a).

(1.9) Amended designation — If this subsection applies and, in the opinion of the Minister, the circumstances are such that it would be just and equitable to permit the initial designation to be amended, the amended designation under paragraph (1.8)(c) is deemed to have been made on the day on which the initial designation was made and the initial designation is deemed not to have been made.

Related Provisions: 88(1.8) — Conditions for 88(1.9) to apply.

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — foreign affiliates), subsec. 30(3), will add subsecs. 88(1.8) and (1.9), applicable after December 18, 2009.

S. 53 of the draft legislation provides that any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that ends before the day on which the draft legislation is assented to and would, in the absence of this section, be precluded because of subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act shall be made to the extent necessary to take into account this amendment, if the taxpayer

(i) elects in writing in respect of all of its foreign affiliates that this section apply in respect of that provision, and

(ii) files that election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before June 30, 2011.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): New subsections 88(1.8) and (1.9) allow a taxpayer to amend certain "bump" designations made under paragraph 88(1)(d) where certain conditions are met. The conditions are meant to capture situations in which the bump room has been limited by the application of subsection 5905(5.4) of the Regulations. Although the ability to amend such a designation is subject to the discretion of the Minister, it is generally expected that the "just and equitable" standard would be met where the taxpayer's computation of the relevant "tax-free surplus balance" requires adjustment because of a foreign tax assessment or an adjustment on audit by the Minister. However, it should be kept in mind that there is a requirement, in paragraph 88(1.8)(b), for "reasonable efforts" to have been made in the initial determination of the "tax-free surplus balance" of the relevant affiliate.

(2) Winding-up of [other] Canadian corporation — Where a Canadian corporation (other than a subsidiary to the winding-up of which the rules in subsection (1) applied) has been wound up after 1978 and, at a particular time in the course of the winding-up, all or substantially all of the property owned by the corporation immediately before that time was distributed to the shareholders of the corporation,

(a) for the purposes of computing the corporation's

(i) capital dividend account,

(i.1) capital gains dividend account (within the meaning assigned by subsection 131(6)), where the corporation is an investment corporation,

(ii) capital gains dividend account (within the meaning assigned by section 133), and

(iii) pre-1972 capital surplus on hand, at the time (in this paragraph referred to as the "time of computation") immediately before the particular time,

(iv) the taxation year of the corporation that otherwise would have included the particular time shall be deemed to have ended immediately before the time of computation, and a new taxation year shall be deemed to have commenced at that time, and

(v) each property of the corporation that was so distributed at the particular time shall be deemed to have been disposed of by the corporation immediately before the end of the taxation year so deemed to have ended for proceeds equal to the fair market value of the property immediately before the particular time;

(vi) [Repealed]

(b) where the corporation is, by virtue of subsection 84(2), deemed to have paid at the particular time a dividend (in this paragraph referred to as the "winding-up dividend") on shares of any class of its capital stock, the following rules apply:

(i) such portion of the winding-up dividend as does not exceed the corporation's capital dividend account immediately before that time or capital gains dividend account immediately before that time, as the case may be, shall be deemed, for the purposes of an election in respect thereof under subsection 83(2), 131(1) (as that subsection applies for the purposes of section 130) or 133(7.1), as the case may be, and where the corporation has so elected, for all other purposes, to be the full amount of a separate dividend,

(i.1) [Repealed under former Act]

(ii) the portion of the winding-up dividend equal to the lesser of the corporation's pre-1972 capital surplus on hand immediately before that time and the amount by which the winding-up dividend exceeds

(A) the portion thereof in respect of which the corporation has made an election under subsection 83(2), or

(B) the portion thereof in respect of which the corporation has made an election under subsection 133(7.1), as the case may be, shall be deemed not to be a dividend,

(iii) notwithstanding the definition "taxable dividend" in subsection 89(1), the winding-up dividend, to the extent that it exceeds the total of the portion thereof deemed by subparagraph (i) to be a separate dividend for all purposes and the portion deemed by subparagraph (ii) not to be a dividend, shall be deemed to be a separate dividend that is a taxable dividend, and

(iv) each person who held any of the issued shares of that class at the particular time shall be deemed to have received that proportion of any separate dividend determined under subparagraph (i) or (iii) that the number of shares of that class held by the person immediately before the particular time is of the number of issued shares of that class outstanding immediately before that time; and

(c) for the purpose of computing the income of the corporation for its taxation year that includes the particular time, paragraph 12(1)(t) shall be read as follows:

"(t) the amount deducted under subsection 127(5) or (6) in computing the taxpayer's tax payable for the year or a preceding taxation year to the extent that it was not included under this paragraph in computing the taxpayer's income for a preceding taxation year or is not included in an amount determined under paragraph 13(7.1)(e) or 37(1)(e) or subparagraph 53(2)(c)(vi) or (h)(ii) or the amount determined for I in the definition "undepreciated capital cost" in subsection 13(21) or L in the definition "cumulative Canadian exploration expense" in subsection 66.1(6);".

Related Provisions: 15(1)(a)(iv), 15(1)(a.1)(iv) — No shareholder-benefit income inclusion; 69(5) — Property appropriated by shareholder on winding-up of corporation; 84(2) — Distribution of property on winding-up of corporation; 88(2.1) — "Pre-1972 capital surplus on hand" defined; 89(3) — Ordering of simultaneous dividends; 134 — Status of non-resident-owned investment corporation for 88(2); 159(2) — Clearance certificate.

History: Subpara. 88(2)(a)(i.1) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 66(15), applicable to windings-up beginning after 1988.

Subpara. 88(2)(a)(vi) repealed by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 66(16), applicable to windings-up beginning after 1987. Subpara. 88(2)(a)(vi) formerly read:

(vi) in calculating the income of the corporation for the taxation year so deemed to have ended, paragraph 12(1)(t) shall be read as follows:

"(t) the amount deducted under subsection 127(5) or (6) in computing the taxpayer's tax payable for the year or a preceding taxation year to the extent that it was not included in computing the taxpayer's income for a preceding taxation year under this paragraph or is not included in an amount determined under paragraph 13(7.1)(e) or 37(1)(e), or subparagraph 53(2)(c)(vi) or (h)(ii) or for I in the definition "undepreciated capital cost" in subsection 13(21) or L in the definition "cumulative Canadian exploration expense" in subsection 66.1(6);" and

Subpara. 88(2)(b)(i) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 66(17), to add "131(1) (as that subsection applies for the purposes of section 130)", applicable to windings-up beginning after 1988.

Para. 88(2)(c) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 66(18), applicable to windings-up commencing after 1987.

(2.1) Definition of "pre-1972 capital surplus on hand" — For the purposes of subsection (2), "pre-1972 capital surplus on hand" of a particular corporation at a particular time means the amount, if any, by which the total of

(a) the corporation's 1971 capital surplus on hand on December 31, 1978 within the meaning of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, as it read on that date,

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of a capital property of the corporation owned by it on December 31, 1971 and disposed of by it after 1978 and before the particular time, equal to the amount, if any, by which the lesser of its fair market value on valuation day (within the meaning assigned by section 24 of the Income Tax Application Rules) and the corporation's proceeds of disposition of that capital property exceeds its actual cost to the corporation determined without reference to the Income Tax Application Rules other than subsections 26(15), (17) and (21) to (27) of that Act,

(c) where before the particular time a subsidiary (to the winding-up of which the rules in subsection (1) applied) of the particular corporation has been wound up after 1978, an amount equal to the pre-1972 capital surplus on hand of the subsidiary immediately before the commencement of the winding-up, and

(d) where the particular corporation is a new corporation formed as a result of an amalgamation (within the meaning of section 87) after 1978 and before the particular time, the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of a predecessor corporation, equal to the predecessor corporation's pre-1972 capital surplus on hand immediately before the amalgamation

(e) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of a capital property (other than depreciable property) of the corporation owned by it on December 31, 1971 and disposed of by it after 1978 and before the particular time equal to the amount, if any, by which its actual cost to the corporation determined without reference to the Income Tax Application Rules, other than subsections 26(15), (17) and (21) to (27) of that Act, exceeds the greater of the fair market value of the property on valuation day (within the meaning assigned by section 24 of that Act) and the corporation's proceeds of disposition of the property.

Related Provisions: 84(2) — Distribution on winding-up, etc.; 87(2)(t) — Deemed date of acquisition; 88(2.2) — Determination of pre-1972 CSOH; 88(2.3) — Actual cost of certain depreciable property.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-488R2: Winding-up of 90%-owned taxable Canadian corporations (archived). See also at end of s. 88.

(2.2) Determination of pre-1972 capital surplus on hand — For the purposes of determining the pre-1972 capital surplus on hand of any corporation at a particular time after 1978, the following rules apply:

(a) an amount referred to in paragraphs (2.1)(b) and (e) in respect of the corporation shall be deemed to be nil, where the property disposed of is

(i) a share of the capital stock of a subsidiary, within the meaning of subsection (1), that was disposed of on the winding-up of the subsidiary where that winding-up commenced after 1978,

(ii) a share of the capital stock of another Canadian corporation that was controlled, within the meaning assigned by subsection 186(2), by the corporation immediately before the disposition and that was disposed of by the corporation after 1978 to a person with whom the corporation was not dealing at arm's length immediately after the disposition, other than by a disposition referred to in paragraph (b), or

(iii) subject to subsection 26(21) of the Income Tax Application Rules, a share of the capital stock of a particular corporation that was disposed of by the corporation after 1978, on an amalgamation, within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1), where the corporation controlled, within the meaning assigned by subsection 186(2), both the particular corporation immediately before the amalgamation and the new corporation immediately after the amalgamation; and

(b) where another corporation that is a Canadian corporation owned a capital property on December 31, 1971 and subsequently disposed of it to the corporation in a transaction to which section 85 applied, the other corporation shall be deemed not to have disposed of that property in the transaction and the corporation shall be deemed to have owned that property on December 31, 1971 and to have acquired it at an actual cost equal to the actual cost of that property to the other corporation.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-488R2: Winding-up of 90%-owned taxable Canadian corporations (archived). See also at end of s. 88.

(2.3) Actual cost of certain depreciable property — For the purpose of subsection (2.1), the actual cost of the depreciable property that was acquired by a corporation before the commencement of its 1949 taxation year that is capital property referred to in that subsection shall be deemed to be the capital cost of that property to the corporation (within the meaning assigned by section 144 of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, as it read in its application to the 1971 taxation year).

I.T. Application Rules: 69 (meaning of "chapter 148 of ...").

(3) Dissolution of foreign affiliate — Where on the dissolution of a controlled foreign affiliate (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(1)) of a taxpayer (in this subsection referred to as the "disposing affiliate") one or more shares of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer have been disposed of to the taxpayer,

(a) the disposing affiliate's proceeds of disposition of each such share and the cost thereof to the taxpayer shall be deemed to be an amount equal to the adjusted cost base to the disposing affiliate of the share immediately before the dissolution, or such greater amount as the taxpayer claims not exceeding the fair market value of the share immediately before the dissolution; and

(b) the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the shares of the disposing affiliate shall be deemed to be the amount, if any, by which the total of

(i) the cost to the taxpayer of the shares of the other foreign affiliate, as determined in paragraph (a), and

(ii) the fair market value of any property (other than the shares referred to in subparagraph (i)) disposed of by the disposing affiliate to the taxpayer on the dissolution,

exceeds

(iii) the total of all debts owing by the disposing affiliate, and of all amounts of other obligations of the disposing affiliate to pay amounts, otherwise than as or on account of a dividend owing by the disposing affiliate to the taxpayer or to persons with whom the taxpayer was not dealing at arm's length, that were outstanding immediately before the dissolution and that were assumed or cancelled by the taxpayer on the dissolution.

Proposed Amendment — 88(3)

(3) Liquidation and dissolution of foreign affiliate — Notwithstanding subsection 69(5), if at any time a taxpayer receives a property (referred to in this subsection as the "distributed property") from a foreign affiliate (referred to in this subsection as the "disposing affiliate") of the taxpayer on a liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate and the distributed property is received in respect of shares of the capital stock of the disposing affiliate that are disposed of on the liquidation and dissolution,

(a) subject to subsections (3.3) and (3.5), the distributed property is deemed to have been disposed of at that time by the disposing affiliate to the taxpayer for proceeds of disposition equal to the relevant cost base (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(4)) to the disposing affiliate of the distributed property in respect of the taxpayer, immediately before that time, if

(i) the liquidation and dissolution is a qualifying liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate, or

(ii) the distributed property is a share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that was, immediately before that time, excluded property (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(1)) of the disposing affiliate;

(b) if paragraph (a) does not apply to the distributed property, the distributed property is deemed to have been disposed of at that time by the disposing affiliate to the taxpayer for proceeds of disposition equal to the distributed property's fair market value at that time;

(c) the distributed property is deemed to have been acquired, at that time, by the taxpayer at a cost equal to the amount determined under paragraph (a) or (b) to be the disposing affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the distributed property;

(d) each share (referred to in paragraph (e) and subsections (3.3) and (3.4) as a "disposed share") of a class of the capital stock of the disposing affiliate that is disposed of by the taxpayer on the liquidation and dissolution is deemed to be disposed of for proceeds of disposition equal to the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the net distribution amount in respect of a distribution of distributed property made, at any time, in respect of the class, and

B is the total number of issued and outstanding shares of the class that are owned by the taxpayer during the liquidation and dissolution; and

(e) if the liquidation and dissolution is a qualifying liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate, any loss of the taxpayer in respect of the disposition of a disposed share is deemed to be nil.

Related Provisions: 88(3.1) — Qualifying liquidation and dissolution; 88(3.2) — Net distribution amount; 88(3.3)–(3.4) — Suppression election; 88(3.5) — Where distributed property is taxable Canadian property; 95(1)"foreign accrual property income"B(b) — Inclusion in FAPI; 95(2)(e) — Rules where liquidation results in distribution to another foreign affiliate (lower tier liquidation).

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), s. 11, will amend subsec. 88(3) to read as above, applicable in respect of liquidations and dissolutions of foreign affiliates of a taxpayer that begin after February 27, 2004; however, if the taxpayer elects in writing under this subsection in respect of all of its foreign affiliates and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the day that is the later of the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day of Royal Assent to this legislation and the day that is one year after that day,

(a) subsec. 88(3) also applies to property received by the taxpayer after February 27, 2004 and before August 19, 2011 on a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of shares of the capital stock of, on a payment of a dividend by, or on a reduction of the paid-up capital of, a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer; and

(b) in respect of property described in paragraph (a) and property received by the taxpayer on a liquidation and dissolution of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that began after February 27, 2004 and before August 19, 2011,

(i) subsec. 88(3) is to be read as follows:

(3) Notwithstanding subsection 69(5), if at any time a taxpayer receives a property (referred to in this subsection as the "distributed property") from a foreign affiliate (referred to in this subsection as the "disposing affiliate") of the taxpayer, on a liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate, on a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of shares of the capital stock of the disposing affiliate, on a payment of a dividend by the disposing affiliate, or on a reduction of the paid-up capital of the disposing affiliate,

(a) subject to subsections (3.3) and (3.5), the distributed property is deemed to have been disposed of at that time by the disposing affiliate to the taxpayer for proceeds of disposition equal to the relevant cost base (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(4)) to the disposing affiliate of the distributed property in respect of the taxpayer, immediately before that time, if the distributed property

(i) was received on a liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate that is a qualifying liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate, or

(ii) was a share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that was, immediately before that time, excluded property (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(1)) of the disposing affiliate;

(b) if paragraph (a) does not apply to the distributed property, the distributed property is deemed to have been disposed of at that time by the disposing affiliate to the taxpayer for proceeds of disposition equal to the distributed property's fair market value at that time;

(c) the distributed property is deemed to have been acquired, at that time, by the taxpayer at a cost equal to the amount determined under paragraph (a) or (b) to be the disposing affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the distributed property;

(d) if the taxpayer disposed of shares of the capital stock of the disposing affiliate on a liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate (each such share being referred to in paragraph (f) and subsections (3.3) and (3.4) as a "disposed share") or on a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of shares of the capital stock of the disposing affiliate, the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the shares are deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the cost to the taxpayer of a distributed property, as determined under paragraph (c), and

B is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount owing (other than an unpaid dividend) by, or an obligation of, the disposing affiliate that was assumed or cancelled by the taxpayer because of the liquidation and dissolution or the redemption, acquisition or cancellation;

(e) if the taxpayer received the distributed property as a dividend or a reduction of paid-up capital, the amount of the dividend paid by the disposing affiliate or the amount of the reduction of the paid-up capital of the disposing affiliate, as the case may be, is deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

where

C is the total of all amounts each of which is the cost to the taxpayer of a distributed property, as determined under paragraph (c), and

D is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount owing (other than an unpaid dividend) by, or an obligation of, the disposing affiliate that was assumed or cancelled by the taxpayer because of the payment of the dividend or the reduction of paid-up capital; and

(f) if the distributed property was received on a liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate that is a qualifying liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate, any loss of the taxpayer in respect of the disposition of a disposed share is deemed to be nil.

(ii) s. 88 is to be read without reference to subsec. 88(3.2), as enacted.

Technical Notes: Subsection 88(3) provides certain rules that apply on the dissolution of a controlled foreign affiliate of a taxpayer where the affiliate distributes shares of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer to the taxpayer. Subsection 88(3) deals with the consequences to the dissolving affiliate and the taxpayer of the distribution and acquisition of the shares of the other affiliate and the consequences of the disposition of the shares of the dissolving affiliate by the taxpayer as a result of the dissolution.

Subsection 88(3) is being significantly amended, as follows:

- To broaden its application to all properties received by the taxpayer on a liquidation and dissolution of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer;
- To allow rollovers of all properties, rather than just shares of another foreign affiliate, in the case of a qualifying liquidation and dissolution ("QLAD");
- To limit the automatic, i.e. non-QLAD, rollover of shares of another foreign affiliate to shares that are excluded property;
- To deny a loss on the disposition of the shares of the dissolving affiliate in the case of a QLAD; and
- To provide three special elections that allow taxpayers to choose, in certain circumstances, the amount for which distributed property is deemed to be disposed of, and acquired for, as follows:
  - — Under a relevant cost base (as defined in subsection 95(4)) election,
  - — Under the suppression election in new subsection 88(3.3), and
  - — Under the taxable Canadian property election in new subsection 88(3.5).

It is also notable that the description of variable B in the definition of "foreign accrual property income" ("FAPI") in subsection 95(1) is being amended to ensure that any gains created under a relevant cost base election made for the purposes of subsection 88(3) are included in FAPI. For more details on this FAPI amendment, refer to the commentary under subsection 95(1).

Foreign Affiliate Amendments — Overview...

This legislative package represents the Department of Finance's final tranche of revisions to the 2004 Proposals. As such, it is notable that the following provisions that were introduced as part of the 2004 Proposals are being abandoned:

- The concept of a special foreign affiliate paid-up capital or "FPUC" (previously proposed in paragraph 88(3)(e) and refined in subsequent comfort letters);

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Aug. 19, 2004:

Dear [xxx]:

We are responding to your correspondence and related communications made on behalf of [xxx] in connection with proposed subsection 88(3) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"), as contained in the draft technical amendments released on February 27, 2004 by the Minister of Finance, the Honourable Ralph Goodale.

In your correspondence and communications, you mention the case where a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada makes a payment to the taxpayer of an amount in respect of shares held by the taxpayer of a particular class of shares of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate. For the purposes of your submission, you ask us to assume that

- the payment in question is not a dividend under the relevant foreign corporation law governing the foreign affiliate and is a reduction or a return to the taxpayer of the shares' portion of the paid-up capital in respect of the particular class of shares under that law; and
- the amount of the payment in question does not exceed the taxpayer's pro-rata portion (based on the proportion that the number of shares of the particular class of shares held by the taxpayer is of the total number of outstanding shares of the particular class) of the amount of money that had been received by the foreign affiliate on the issuance of shares of the particular class or received by another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer on the issuance of shares of the capital stock of that other foreign affiliate that were exchanged for shares of the particular class.

Under the Act as it currently reads, the payment in question would be treated as a return of the paid-up capital of the shares of the particular class held by the taxpayer and would be deducted, under paragraph 53(2)(b), in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the shares. No amount would, under the Act as it currently reads, be included in the income of the taxpayer in respect of the payment except amounts that may be required to be included in the taxpayer's income because of a gain that could arise, under subsection 40(3), in respect of the payment if the amount of the payment exceeded the taxpayer's adjusted cost base of those shares held by the taxpayer.

The proposed subsection 88(3) of the Act that was included in the February 27, 2004 draft technical amendments was not intended to change the tax outcome described above in respect of the payment made as a return of the paid-up capital of the shares of the foreign affiliate described above. Although our Branch is studying further revisions to that proposed subsection 88(3), it is not intended that any such revisions that we would recommend to the Minister of Finance would change that tax outcome in respect of such a payment. I can also confirm that the operation of that proposed subsection 88(3) is not intended to be dependent upon the source of the funds used by the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer to make such a payment to the taxpayer.

I trust that the foregoing provides the clarifications sought.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Jan. 19, 2005

Dear [xxx]

Subject: Subsection 88(3) of the Income Tax Act

Thank you for your letter dated July 30, 2004 in connection with proposed subsection 88(3) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"), as contained in the draft technical amendments released on February 27, 2004 by the Minister of Finance.

Your letter relates to the application of that proposed subsection 88(3) to a proposed distribution of money to a taxpayer resident in Canada by a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer made in respect of shares of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate held by the taxpayer. According to your letter, that distribution is in respect of amounts included in the shares' portion of the paid-up capital (determined under the relevant foreign corporation law) in respect of the class of shares of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate to which the shares belong.

Your concern is that the portion of a distribution that is not treated by proposed subsection 88(3) as a reduction to the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the shares would be treated by that proposed subsection as income from property (other than dividends) from the shares. You request that that proposed subsection 88(3) be revised so as to treat the amount of that distribution made to the taxpayer in respect of the shares, to the extent that the amount exceeds the total of the amounts of the reductions in respect of the distribution to the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the shares, as the payment of a dividend on the shares. You argue that such a revision to proposed subsection 88(3) would, where the taxpayer is a corporation, enable the taxpayer to benefit from the deductions permitted under section 113 of the Act in respect of dividends paid by the foreign affiliate that are prescribed by the Income Tax Regulations to be paid out of the foreign affiliate's exempt surplus in respect of the taxpayer.

From a tax policy perspective, we agree that, in the circumstances described in your letter, it would be appropriate to make the change you have requested. We are currently considering revisions to that proposed subsection 88(3) of the Act, and the requested revision to subsection 88(3) that is described in this letter is to be included in our recommendations to the Minister of Finance.

Thank you again for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Aug. 16, 2005

Ms. Penny Woolford, KPMG LLP, Toronto, ON

Dear Ms. Woolford:

I am writing in response to your letter dated July 11, 2005 with respect to proposed subsection 88(3) of the Income Tax Act as contained in the foreign affiliate proposals announced on February 27, 2004 by the Minister of Finance. You requested confirmation of certain possible modifications to that proposed subsection 88(3) and, presumably, certain other modifications to section 88 of the Act that would apply in the case of certain liquidations and dissolutions of foreign affiliates of a taxpayer resident in Canada.

As noted in your letter, existing subsection 88(3) of the Act provides that, where a property of a controlled foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada that is a share (the "disposed share") of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer is disposed of to the taxpayer on the dissolution of the controlled foreign affiliate (the "dissolved foreign affiliate"), the dissolved foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the disposed share are deemed to equal its adjusted cost base to the dissolved foreign affiliate immediately before the dissolution (or such greater amount as the taxpayer claims not exceeding the fair market value of the disposed share). The taxpayer's cost of the disposed share is deemed to equal the disposed foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition in respect of the disposed share. In accordance with the results determined under section 69 of the Act, each other type of property of the dissolved foreign affiliate that is disposed of by the dissolved foreign affiliate to the taxpayer on the dissolution is treated as having been disposed of by the dissolved foreign affiliate for proceeds, and to have been acquired by the taxpayer at a cost, equal to that property's fair market value. The taxpayer's proceeds from the disposition of the shares of the capital stock of the dissolved foreign affiliate are deemed to equal the amount (if any) by which the total cost to the taxpayer of all the property disposed of to the taxpayer by the dissolved foreign affiliate on the dissolution exceeds the total amount of debts and other obligations of the dissolved foreign affiliate (other than dividends payable to the taxpayer or non-arm's length persons) that are assumed or cancelled by the taxpayer on the dissolution.

As you know, proposed subsection 88(3), as contained in the February 2004 proposals, substantially changed the scope and operation of the rule. In particular, the scope of the rule was extended to cover all distributions of property by all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer to the taxpayer, whether or not the distribution was on the dissolution of the foreign affiliate or the foreign affiliate was a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer. For example, a distribution of a property by a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer (the "distributing foreign affiliate") to the taxpayer as a dividend in kind receives the same treatment as the distribution of that property to the taxpayer on a share redemption made by the distributing foreign affiliate or in the course of a liquidation and dissolution of the distributing foreign affiliate. As well, in contrast to existing subsection 88(3), shares of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that are distributed by the distributing foreign affiliate to the taxpayer would be treated differently under the February 2004 proposals, depending on whether or not the shares are excluded property of the foreign affiliate. Where such a distributed share is an excluded property of the foreign affiliate, under the February 2004 proposals, the taxpayer is permitted to elect to treat the distributing foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the share as being an amount that is equal to the adjusted cost base, immediately before the distribution, of the share or such greater amount that does not exceed the fair market value of the share immediately before the distribution. Where it is not, the share is treated, in accordance with the results that would be obtained under section 69, as having been disposed of by the distributing foreign affiliate for proceeds of disposition equal to the fair market value of the share immediately before the distribution.

In your letter, you refer to comments made by Department of Finance officials that the Tax Legislation Division is considering requested revisions to proposed subsection 88(3) that would provide an additional and distinct rule in circumstances where a distributing foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that is wholly-owned or substantially wholly-owned by the taxpayer, distributes, in the course of its liquidation and dissolution, property to the taxpayer in respect of shares of the capital stock of the distributing foreign affiliate held by the taxpayer. Under such revisions, the taxpayer would be able to elect the distributing foreign affiliate's proceeds of distribution and the taxpayer's cost for each property of the distributing foreign affiliate (not only excluded property) that is distributed by it to the taxpayer in such circumstances. The revisions would provide that the taxpayer could elect an amount that would result in no gain or loss of the distributing foreign affiliate in respect of the distributed property, or such greater amount (not exceeding the distributed property's fair market value) that would result in a gain of the distributing foreign affiliate in respect of the distributed property. You request confirmation that such revisions will be recommended to the Minister of Finance.

From a tax policy viewpoint, we would support such an additional and distinct rule in subsection 88(3) provided that the distributing foreign affiliate is wholly-owned or substantially wholly-owned by the taxpayer. In those circumstances, it could be considered that no substantial change in the ultimate economic interests in the distributed property of the distributing foreign affiliate could occur by reason of the liquidation and dissolution of the distributing foreign affiliate. We note that subsection 88(1) requires ownership of not less than 90 percent of shares of each class and, all things being equal, we would propose to apply the same threshold in the context of subsection 88(3). Based, however, on discussions with representatives of the tax community on this point, we are prepared to adopt a different test in connection with subsection 88(3) to determine whether the taxpayer meets the equity ownership threshold in the foreign affiliate to qualify for such an additional and distinct rule in that subsection. The test would require the taxpayer to hold shares of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate such that, in total, the taxpayer has at least 90 percent of the voting rights at a general meeting of the foreign affiliate in all circumstances (immediately before the commencement of the liquidation and dissolution of the foreign affiliate) and such that the fair market value of all properties distributed to the taxpayer, in respect of shares of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate, by the foreign affiliate in the course of the liquidation and dissolution is equal to at least 90 percent of the total fair market value of all properties distributed to all shareholders of the foreign affiliate, in respect of shares of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate, by the foreign affiliate in the course of the liquidation and dissolution.

Although the technical details of the possible modifications to that proposed subsection 88(3) and to section 88 of the Act are still being finalized, we can confirm, in general terms, our intention to recommend that modifications be made to that proposal and to section 88 and other relevant provisions of the Act. Those recommended modifications would treat a liquidation and dissolution of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada as a qualifying liquidation and dissolution of that foreign affiliate of the taxpayer if the taxpayer meets the required equity ownership threshold in the foreign affiliate. In general terms, the recommended modifications would also provide for the following tax rules in respect of a qualifying liquidation and dissolution of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada where the taxpayer so elects in writing to have those tax rules apply in respect of the qualifying liquidation and dissolution of the foreign affiliate:

- the foreign affiliate would be deemed to have disposed of each property (the "distributed property") that is distributed, in the course of the qualifying liquidation and dissolution, by the foreign affiliate to the taxpayer in respect of shares of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate held by the taxpayer for proceeds of disposition (assuming that the foreign affiliate has not received consideration from the taxpayer in respect of the distributed property that exceeds the amount described below as the "relevant cost amount" of the distributed property) that are equal to the greater of
  - the "relevant cost amount" of the distributed property to the foreign affiliate in respect of the taxpayer (being essentially the amount that would generally result in no gain or loss to the foreign affiliate in respect of the taxpayer in respect of the disposition of the distributed property), and
  - the amount elected by that taxpayer (not exceeding the fair market value of the particular distributed property);
- any income or taxable capital gain of the foreign affiliate derived from the disposition of the distributed property would be included in computing the foreign affiliate's foreign accrual property income in respect of the taxpayer;
- the taxpayer's cost of the distributed property would be deemed to be equal to the foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of that property;
- the amount of the distribution made by the foreign affiliate to the taxpayer in respect of the distributed property would be deemed to be equal to the amount, if any, by which the cost to the taxpayer of the distributed property exceeds the total of all of the following amounts:
  - the portion of an amount owing by or of an obligation of the foreign affiliate (other than dividends payable to the taxpayer or non-arm's length persons) that was assumed or cancelled by the taxpayer because of that distribution of the distributed property, and
  - the cost to the foreign affiliate of a property that was received by the foreign affiliate from the taxpayer as consideration for that distribution by the foreign affiliate of the distributed property; and
- the portion of the amount of the distribution made by the foreign affiliate to the taxpayer in respect of the distributed property that relates to a particular share of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate would be treated as
  - a return of the paid-up capital in respect of the particular share in respect of the taxpayer to the extent of the "foreign paid-up capital" in respect of the particular share in respect of the taxpayer (generally, the particular share's portion of the total amounts contributed by the foreign affiliate's shareholders to the foreign affiliate in respect of the shares of the class to which the particular share belongs, provided that those shareholder contributions were in respect of shares issued to or held by those shareholders), and
  - a dividend paid by the foreign affiliate to the taxpayer resident in Canada in respect of the particular share to the extent that that portion of the amount of the distribution is not treated as a return of the paid-up capital in respect of the particular share in respect of the taxpayer.

We would recommend that such revisions to proposed subsection 88(3) of the Act and to section 88 and other relevant provisions of the Act apply to a liquidation and a dissolution, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada, that begins after February 27, 2004.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

[An identical letter, also dated Aug. 16, 2005, is addressed to Sandra Jack of Felesky Flynn LLP — ed.]

Letter from Dept. of Finance, April 12, 2006:

Mr. R. Ian Crosbie, Davies Ward Phillips & Vineberg LLP, Toronto, ON

Dear Mr. Crosbie:

I am writing in response to your letters dated December 12, 2005 and January 30, 2006 with respect to proposed subsection 88(3) and paragraph 95(2)(e.1) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") as contained in the foreign affiliate proposals announced on February 27, 2004 by the Minister of Finance. You have requested confirmation of certain possible modifications to proposed subsection 88(3) and paragraph 95(2)(e.1) and certain other identified related provisions of the Act that would apply to a liquidation and dissolution, after February 27, 2004, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada.

Subsection 88(3) of the Act

As noted in your correspondence, existing subsection 88(3) of the Act provides that, where a property of a controlled foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada that is a share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer is disposed of to the taxpayer on the dissolution of the controlled foreign affiliate (the "disposing foreign affiliate"), the disposing foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the share are deemed to equal its adjusted cost base to the disposing foreign affiliate immediately before the dissolution (or such greater amount as the taxpayer claims not exceeding the fair market value of the share). The taxpayer's cost of the share is deemed to equal the disposing foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition in respect of the share. In accordance with the results determined under section 69 of the Act, each other type of property of the disposing foreign affiliate that is disposed of by the disposing foreign affiliate to the taxpayer on the dissolution is treated as having been disposed of by the disposing foreign affiliate for proceeds, and to have been acquired by the taxpayer at a cost, equal to that property's fair market value. Existing subsection 88(3) also provides that the taxpayer's proceeds from the disposition of shares held by the taxpayer in the capital stock of the disposing foreign affiliate are deemed to equal the amount (if any) by which the total cost to the taxpayer of all the property disposed of to the taxpayer by the disposing foreign affiliate on the dissolution exceeds the total amount of debts and other obligations of the disposing foreign affiliate (other than dividends payable to the taxpayer or non-arm's length persons) that are assumed or cancelled by the taxpayer on the dissolution.

In your correspondence, you asked for confirmation of our intention to recommend that proposed subsection 88(3) be revised to provide an additional and distinct rule in circumstances where a foreign affiliate (the "disposing foreign affiliate") of a taxpayer resident in Canada distributes, in the course of its liquidation and dissolution, property to the taxpayer in respect of shares of the capital stock of the disposing foreign affiliate held by the taxpayer. Under such a revision, the taxpayer would be able to elect to treat the amount of the disposing foreign affiliate's proceeds of distribution for each property of the disposing foreign affiliate (not only excluded property) that is distributed by it to the taxpayer in such circumstances as being such a particular amount that would result in no gain or loss of the disposing foreign affiliate in respect of the distributed property, or to be such an amount (not exceeding the distributed property's fair market value) that would result in a gain of the disposing foreign affiliate in respect of the distributed property. That particular amount would also be treated as the amount of the taxpayer's cost for that distributed property.

From a tax policy viewpoint, such an additional and distinct rule in subsection 88(3) would be supportable provided that the disposing foreign affiliate is wholly-owned or substantially wholly-owned by the taxpayer. It could, in those circumstances, be considered that no substantial change in the ultimate economic interests in the distributed property of the disposing foreign affiliate would occur by reason of the liquidation and dissolution of the disposing foreign affiliate. We note that subsection 88(1) requires ownership of not less than 90% of the shares of each class and, all things being equal, we would propose to apply the same threshold in the context of subsection 88(3). Based, however, on discussions with representatives of the tax community on this point, we are prepared to adopt a different test in connection with subsection 88(3) to determine whether the taxpayer meets the equity ownership threshold in the disposing foreign affiliate to qualify for such an additional and distinct rule in that subsection. The test would require the taxpayer to hold shares of the capital stock of the disposing foreign affiliate such that, in total, the taxpayer has at least 90% of the voting rights at a general meeting of the disposing foreign affiliate in all circumstances (immediately before the commencement of the liquidation and dissolution of the disposing foreign affiliate) and such that the fair market value of all properties distributed to the taxpayer, in respect of shares of the capital stock of the disposing foreign affiliate, by the disposing foreign affiliate in the course of the liquidation and dissolution is equal to at least 90% of the total fair market value of all properties distributed to all shareholders of the disposing foreign affiliate, in respect of shares of the capital stock of the disposing foreign affiliate, by the disposing foreign affiliate in the course of the liquidation and dissolution.

Although the technical details of the possible modifications to that proposed subsection 88(3) and to the related provisions of the Act are still being finalized, we can confirm, in general terms, our intention to recommend that modifications be made to that proposal and to the other relevant provisions of the Act. Those recommended modifications would treat a liquidation and dissolution of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada as a qualifying liquidation and dissolution of that foreign affiliate of the taxpayer if the taxpayer meets the required equity ownership threshold in the foreign affiliate. In general terms, the recommended modifications would also provide for the following tax rules in respect of a qualifying liquidation and dissolution of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada where the taxpayer so elects in writing to have those tax rules apply in respect of the qualifying liquidation and dissolution of the foreign affiliate:

1. the foreign affiliate would be deemed to have disposed of each property (the "distributed property") that is distributed, in the course of the qualifying liquidation and dissolution, by the foreign affiliate to the taxpayer in respect of shares of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate held by the taxpayer for proceeds of disposition (assuming that the foreign affiliate has not received consideration from the taxpayer in respect of the distributed property that exceeds the amount described below as the "relevant cost amount" of the distributed property) that are equal to the greater of
   - the "relevant cost amount" of the distributed property to the foreign affiliate in respect of the taxpayer (being essentially the amount that would generally result in no gain or loss to the foreign affiliate in respect of the taxpayer in respect of the disposition of the distributed property), and
   - where the foreign affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate of that taxpayer, the amount elected by that taxpayer (not exceeding the fair market value of the particular distributed property);
2. any income or taxable capital gain of the foreign affiliate derived from the disposition of the distributed property would be included in computing the foreign affiliate's foreign accrual property income in respect of the taxpayer;

3. the taxpayer's cost of the distributed property would be deemed to be equal to the foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of that property;

4. the amount of the distribution made by the foreign affiliate to the taxpayer in respect of the distributed property would be deemed to be equal to the amount, if any, by which the cost to the taxpayer of the distributed property exceeds the total of all of the following amounts

   - the portion of an amount owing by or of an obligation of the foreign affiliate (other than dividends payable to the taxpayer or non-arm's length persons) that was assumed or cancelled by the taxpayer because of that distribution of the distributed property, and
   - the cost to the foreign affiliate of a property that was received by the foreign affiliate from the taxpayer as consideration for that distribution by the foreign affiliate of the distributed property;

5. the portion of the amount of the distribution made by the foreign affiliate to the taxpayer in respect of the distributed property that relates to a particular share of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate would not be treated as proceeds of disposition of the foreign affiliate of the distributed property and would be treated as

   - a return of the paid-up capital in respect of the particular share in respect of the taxpayer to the extent of the "foreign paid-up capital" in respect of the particular share in respect of the taxpayer, and
   - a dividend paid by the foreign affiliate to the taxpayer resident in Canada in respect of the particular share to the extent that that portion of the amount of the distribution is not treated as a return of the paid-up capital in respect of the particular share in respect of the taxpayer;

6. any loss of the taxpayer resident in Canada from the disposition of a particular share of the foreign affiliate that was redeemed, acquired or cancelled by the foreign affiliate in the course of the liquidation and the dissolution would be deemed to be nil;

7. generally, the foreign paid-up capital of a particular share of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer resident in Canada in respect of the taxpayer would be the particular share's portion of the foreign paid-up capital of the class of shares of the foreign affiliate's capital stock to which the particular share belongs;

8. generally, the foreign paid-up capital of a particular class of shares of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer resident in Canada would be the total amounts contributed by the foreign affiliate's shareholders to the foreign affiliate in respect of the shares of the class to which the particular share belongs, provided that those shareholder contributions were in respect of shares issued to or held by those shareholders;

9. however, in computing the foreign paid-up capital of a particular class of shares of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer resident in Canada in respect of the taxpayer, where property other than money is contributed to the foreign affiliate in respect of shares of the particular class of shares of the foreign affiliate, the amount added in respect of that contribution of property to the foreign paid-up capital of the particular class of shares of the foreign affiliate in respect of the taxpayer would be determined by reference to the cost to the foreign affiliate of that contributed property, except that, where the contributed property is shares of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, the amount added would be limited to the foreign paid-up capital in respect of the shares of the other foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of the taxpayer; and

10. the amounts required to be determined under that proposed subsection 88(3) and the related provisions of the Act would be determined in Canadian dollars because those amounts are relevant for Canadian tax purposes.

We propose to recommend to the Minister of Finance that such revisions to proposed subsection 88(3) of the Act and to the other relevant provisions of the Act apply to a liquidation and dissolution, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada, that begins after February 27, 2004.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 9, 2006

Mr. R. Ian Crosbie, Davies Ward Phillips & Vineberg LLP, Toronto, ON

Dear Mr. Crosbie:

I am writing in response to your letter dated May 4, 2006 with respect to proposed subsection 88(3) and paragraph 95(2)(e.1) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") as contained in the foreign affiliate proposals announced on February 27, 2004.

You were told, in our letter to you dated April 12, 2006, that we are considering modifications to proposed subsection 88(3) and paragraph 95(2)(e.1) of the Act that would characterize the amount of the distribution (determined in respect of a distribution of property in respect of a share of the capital stock of the disposing foreign affiliate) as a dividend paid on the share to the extent that the amount of the distribution exceeds the amount treated by the foreign affiliate as a reduction of the foreign paid-up capital in respect of the share.

You have asked, and we can confirm, that the portion of the amount of a distribution made in respect of a share that is treated by the foreign affiliate of a taxpayer as a reduction of the foreign paid-up capital in respect of the share (not exceeding the amount, immediately before the distribution, of the foreign paid-up capital in respect of the share) will not be a dividend under the foreign affiliate proposals and will reduce the shareholder's adjusted cost base of the share. The foreign affiliate will, therefore, be permitted to distribute property to the shareholder as a return of foreign paid-up capital in respect of a share determined in respect of the taxpayer prior to making distributions of property in respect of any existing surplus of the foreign affiliate determined in respect of the taxpayer.

The amount by which the amount of the distribution in respect of a share exceeds the portion of the amount of the distribution that is treated by the foreign affiliate as a reduction of the foreign paid-up capital in respect of the share is to be characterized as a dividend received by the shareholder on the share. The normal surplus distribution rules will apply to determine the portion of the dividend that is paid out of the various surplus pots of the foreign affiliate determined in respect of the taxpayer. To the extent that a dividend received on a share is paid out of the foreign affiliate's pre-acquisition surplus determined in respect of the taxpayer, the dividend will reduce the shareholder's adjusted cost base of the share.

I trust that these comments have provided the clarification requested. Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 9, 2006

Mr. Nick Pantaleo, PriceWaterhouseCoopers LLP, Toronto, ON

Dear Mr. Pantaleo:

I am writing in response to your letter concerning proposed subsection 88(3) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") as contained in the foreign affiliate proposals announced on February 27, 2004. In your letter, you express your concern about the wording of draft subparagraphs 88(3)(e)(i) and (ii).

In your letter, you mention the situation where, prior to February 27, 2004, a corporation resident in Canada contributed cash, for no consideration, to a wholly owned controlled foreign affiliate ("CFA") of the corporation as a contribution of capital in respect of the ordinary shares (common shares) of CFA. Under the relevant foreign corporation law, that capital contribution resulted in contributed surplus of the CFA. Pursuant to paragraph 53(1)(c) of the Act, the taxpayer's adjusted cost base of the ordinary shares of CFA held by the taxpayer increased because of that capital contribution.

You have also indicated that CFA would like to return the contributed surplus to the holders of its ordinary shares. You maintain that, under that foreign corporate law, CFA must make a bonus issuance of ordinary shares in order to increase the legal share capital (in this case, the par value) of those shares and reduce the contributed surplus in respect of the ordinary shares by the amount of the contribution of capital referred to above. CFA must then pass a resolution to make a pro rata reduction of the par value of all its ordinary shares (including the bonus shares) the total of which would equal the amount of that contribution of capital.

You are concerned that the return of the par value in respect of a share would not meet the requirements under the February 2004 draft wording of proposed subparagraph 88(3)(e)(i) of the Act. This concern arises because the par value in respect of a share being returned to the holders of the ordinary shares was received by the CFA as a contribution of capital rather than on the issuance of ordinary shares.

We intend to recommend certain modifications to the proposed foreign affiliate amendments that, if acted upon, may address the concerns expressed. Under the modified rules, the taxpayer would be required to determine the foreign paid-up capital of each class of shares of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada. The foreign paid-up capital of a particular share would be determined by dividing the foreign paid-up capital of the class by the number of issued and outstanding shares of the class. The total foreign paid-up capital of the foreign affiliate would be equal to the total foreign paid-up capital for all classes of shares of the foreign affiliate.

As well, the modifications will provide rules for the purposes of determining the foreign paid-up capital of a class of shares of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer. The foreign paid-up capital of a class of shares of the foreign affiliate will, for example, be reduced by the amount of distributions made by the foreign affiliate as consideration for a return of the paid-up capital in respect of a share of the class. As well, rules are to be provided for the purpose of determining the amounts to be added in computing the foreign paid-up capital in respect of a class of shares of the foreign affiliate in respect of property received by the foreign affiliate for the issuance of shares of the class or as a contribution of capital in respect of shares of the class.

A foreign affiliate that notifies its shareholders that it is making a distribution of property to them as a return of all or a portion of the amounts included in the foreign paid-up capital in respect of shares of a particular class of the foreign affiliate can treat the distribution as a reduction of the foreign paid-up capital in respect of those shares rather than as payment of a dividend on those shares, to the extent that the foreign paid-up capital in respect of those shares exists immediately before the distribution. The distribution must have the same character for all shareholders of that class.

For example, in the situation you describe in your letter and assuming that all of the ordinary shares (other than the bonus shares) were issued for cash, the foreign paid-up capital, at any particular time, of the class of shares to which the ordinary shares belong would be determined as follows. There would be added the total of all amounts received, before the particular time, by CFA on the issuance of ordinary shares or as a contribution of capital in respect of the ordinary shares from holders of the ordinary shares. There would be deducted the total of all amounts paid, before the particular time, by CFA to the holders of ordinary shares as a return of the foreign paid-up capital in respect of those ordinary shares. The foreign paid-up capital, at any particular time, of a particular ordinary share would be determined by dividing the foreign paid-up capital, at that time, of the class to which the particular ordinary share belongs by the number, at that time, of issued and outstanding ordinary shares of that class.

It will be recommended that the above-mentioned modifications would apply to distributions made after February 27, 2004. However, if the taxpayer makes an election that applies in respect of all of its foreign affiliates, there would be a transitional version of new subsection 88(3) that would include a provision that would generally determine the paid-up capital of a class of shares of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer and of a share of that class by reference to the amounts added under the relevant foreign corporate law to the paid-up capital or the contributed surplus in respect of the class of shares.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, April 1, 2008:

Ms. Sandra Jack, Mr. John Burghardt, and Mr. Brett Anderson
Felesky Flynn LLP, Calgary, AB

Dear Ms. Jack, Mr. Burghardt and Mr. Anderson:

I am writing in response to your letter of December 13, 2007 concerning subsection 88(3) of the Income Tax Act (Act). In your letter you have asked for confirmation of the Department's intention to recommend to the Minister of Finance certain amendments as described in letters dated August 16, 2005 and April 12, 2006 from Mr. Brian Ernewein.

As you know, it was stated in the 2007 Budget documents, and confirmed in the 2008 Budget, that previously released proposals (the "2004 FA proposals") in respect of the taxation of income from foreign affiliates would be reviewed and evaluated in view of the international tax measures announced in the 2007 Budget. Certain of these 2004 FA proposals, as modified to take into account some of the 2007 Budget measures, were enacted by Bill C-28 that received Royal Assent on December 14, 2007.

The review and evaluation referred to in the 2007 Budget documents is still in progress in respect of the remaining 2004 FA proposals, including the modifications to subsection 88(3) of the Act. Accordingly, it is possible that further changes may be made in this area of the tax law. However, we would in that event recommend to the Minister of Finance that any further changes to the proposed modifications to subsection 88(3) of the Act (including any recommended modifications as described in the letters referred to above) incorporated appropriate transitional provisions to ensure that the changes did not impair any beneficial effect of those proposed modifications for the period before the conclusion of the review.

While I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with our recommendations, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 19, 2009:

[xxx], Vice-President Tax, [xxx], Oakville, ON

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing in response to your letter of February 13, 2009 concerning subsection 88(3) of the Income Tax Act (Act).

August 16, 2005 and April 12, 2006 letters

Firstly, in your letter you have asked for confirmation of the Department's intention to recommend to the Minister of Finance certain amendments to subsection 88(3) of the Act (the "88(3) Modifications") as described in letters dated August 16, 2005 and April 12, 2006 (the "Earlier Letters") from Mr. Brian Ernewein.

As you know, it was stated in the 2007 Budget documents, and confirmed in the 2008 Budget documents, that previously released proposals (the "2004 FA proposals") in respect of the taxation of income from foreign affiliates would be reviewed and evaluated in view of the international tax measures announced in the 2007 Budget. Certain of these 2004 FA proposals, as modified to take into account some of the 2007 Budget measures, were enacted by Bill C-28 that received Royal Assent on December 14, 2007. Certain other portions of these 2004 FA proposals were enacted by the Budget Implementation Act, 2009, which received Royal Assent on March 12, 2009. Furthermore, in the 2009 Budget documents, it was stated that the Government will consider the recommendations of the Advisory Panel on Canada's System of International Taxation that relate to foreign affiliates before proceeding with the remaining 2004 FA Proposals, as modified to take into account consultations and deliberations since their release.

The review, evaluation and consideration referred to in the 2007, 2008 and 2009 Budget documents is still in progress in respect of the remaining 2004 FA proposals. Accordingly, it is possible that further changes may be made in this area of the tax law. However, we would in that event recommend to the Minister of Finance that any further changes to the 88(3) Modifications incorporate appropriate transitional provisions to ensure that the changes do not impair any beneficial effect of those modifications for the period up to any announcement of revisions to those modifications.

"Relevant cost amount"

Secondly, in your letter you have asked for clarification of the intended meaning of the expression "relevant cost amount" as used in the Earlier Letters. As you have noted, the recommendations to the Minister of Finance set out in those letters include a recommendation to amend the Act such that a taxpayer resident in Canada (a "Canadian taxpayer") may elect in respect of a qualifying liquidation and dissolution of a foreign affiliate of the Canadian taxpayer (an "Elected QLAD") that the foreign affiliate be considered to have disposed of each of its properties for proceeds equal to the greater of the "relevant cost amount" to the foreign affiliate of each such property and such amount chosen by the Canadian taxpayer, in a further election, not exceeding the fair market value of the property. In those letters, the relevant cost amount is described as being "essentially the amount that would generally result in no gain or loss to the foreign affiliate in respect of the Canadian taxpayer in respect of the distribution of the distributed property".

In the example set out in your letter, at the time of an Elected QLAD, the foreign affiliate owns non-depreciable capital property that is non-treaty-protected taxable Canadian property ("TCP"), having an adjusted cost base of $10 and a fair market value of $100. In your example, you assume that the $90 of appreciation (pre-acquisition gain) occurred at a time when no person or partnership that held the property was a "specified person or partnership" in respect of the Canadian taxpayer (within the meaning of that term in subsection 95(1) of the Act). Thus, you argue that, for the purposes of the foreign accrual property income ("FAPI") rules in the Act, the foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the property could be $100, without triggering a capital gain under paragraph 95(2)(f) of the Act, because that paragraph, in conjunction with paragraph 95(2)(f.1), would exclude the pre-acquisition gain from the computation of the capital gain. You therefore suggest that, in this context, the relevant cost amount as described in the Earlier Letters would be $100.

On the other hand, for the purposes of determining the foreign affiliate's taxable income earned in Canada under subsection 115(1) of the Act, under your example, you conclude that the foreign affiliate will realize a capital gain to the extent that the foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the property exceed $10. You therefore suggest that, in this context, the relevant cost amount as described in the Earlier Letters would be $10.

In light of these conflicting results, you have asked us to provide clarification as to the determination of the relevant cost amount of non-depreciable capital property that is non-treaty-protected TCP.

Let us first offer some general clarifying comments as to our intentions with respect to the concept of "relevant cost amount". This concept is meant to be tied directly to the so-called "carve-out" rule in paragraph 95(2)(f.1) of the Act. Thus, where a Canadian taxpayer acquires shares of a foreign affiliate from an arm's length party and that affiliate holds appreciated property, the fair market value of the property at the time of acquisition should generally be the affiliate's relevant cost amount as that is the amount of proceeds of disposition that it could receive for the property without causing it to have a FAPI gain or loss, after taking into account the carve-out rule. Thus, generally the relevant cost amount of the appreciated property would be $100, using the figures in your example.

However, in the more specific context of an Elected QLAD where the property of the foreign affiliate is non-treaty-protected TCP and thus is relevant from both a FAPI and a section 115 perspective, it is important that the proceeds of disposition of property distributed to the Canadian taxpayer be the same for all Canadian tax purposes given that those proceeds will also be the cost to the Canadian taxpayer of that property going forward. It is also possible that certain Canadian taxpayers, in these circumstances, may wish their affiliates to realize gains for section 115 purposes, but rely on the carve-out rule to reduce or eliminate their FAPI inclusion.

On the basis of the foregoing, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that, in the context of an Elected QLAD under the 88(3) Modifications, the Canadian taxpayer and the foreign affiliate be entitled to jointly elect that the relevant cost amount of a property that is non-treaty-protected TCP be the amount that causes no gain or loss in the computation of the affiliate's taxable income earned in Canada under section 115. This would mean that if, in your example, that election were made, the foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition would be $10 such that the affiliate would have no gain for section 115 purposes. Furthermore, if that election were made, a similar result would obtain for FAPI purposes as paragraph 95(2)(f) would produce no gain, without the need to rely on the carve-out rule in paragraph 95(2)(f.1), and thus the Canadian taxpayer would have no FAPI inclusion. As a result, under the 88(3) Modifications, the Canadian taxpayer's cost of the property would be $10 for its future income tax determinations made under the Act.

While I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with our recommendations, I hope that this statement of our intentions is helpful to you. As stated above, it should also be kept in mind that if the 88(3) Modifications are further revised, it is possible that the recommendation herein may only apply for the period up to any announcement of any such revisions.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard Lalonde, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Related Provisions: 93(1.4) — No election allowed on disposing of share of foreign affiliate; 93(4) — capital loss denied; 95(1)"foreign accrual property income"B — Gains under 88(3)(a) due to 88(3.3) election included in FAPI; 95(2)(f) — Determination of certain components of FAPI; 95(2)(f.6)(i) — No FAPI rollover where 88(3) applies; 257 — Formula amounts cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: Subpara. 88(3)(b)(iii) amended by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 66(19), to add "otherwise than as or on account of a dividend owing by the disposing affiliate to the taxpayer or to a person with whom the taxpayer was not dealing at arm's length," applicable to dissolutions occurring after July 13, 1990.

Regulations: 5907(2.01) (FAPI — determining earnings derived from disposition).

Proposed Addition — 88(3.1)-(3.5)

(3.1) Qualifying liquidation and dissolution — For the purposes of subsections (3), (3.3) and (3.5), a "qualifying liquidation and dissolution" of a foreign affiliate (referred to in this subsection as the "disposing affiliate") of a taxpayer means a liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate in respect of which the taxpayer elects in accordance with prescribed rules and

(a) the taxpayer owns not less than 90% of the issued and outstanding shares of each class of the capital stock of the disposing affiliate throughout the liquidation and dissolution; or

(b) both

(i) the percentage determined by the following formula is greater than or equal to 90%:

A/B

where

A is the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the time at which it is distributed, of a property that is distributed by the disposing affiliate to the taxpayer in the course of the liquidation and dissolution in respect of shares of the capital stock of the disposing affiliate

exceeds

(B) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount owing (other than an unpaid dividend) by, or an obligation of, the disposing affiliate that was assumed or cancelled by the taxpayer in consideration for a property referred to in clause (A), and

B is the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the time at which it is distributed, of a property that is distributed by the disposing affiliate to a shareholder of the disposing affiliate in the course of the liquidation and dissolution in respect of shares of the capital stock of the disposing affiliate

(B) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount owing (other than an unpaid dividend) by, or an obligation of, the disposing affiliate that was assumed or cancelled by a shareholder of the disposing affiliate in consideration for a property referred to in clause (A), and

(ii) at the time of each distribution of property by the disposing affiliate in the course of the liquidation and dissolution in respect of shares of the capital stock of the disposing affiliate, the taxpayer holds shares of that capital stock that would, if an annual general meeting of the shareholders of the disposing affiliate were held at that time, entitle it to 90% or more of the votes that could be cast under all circumstances at the meeting.

Technical Notes: New subsection 88(3.1) defines the term "qualifying liquidation and dissolution" or "QLAD". This term is mainly relevant for amended subsection 88(3), but it is also used in new subsections 88(3.3) and (3.5), as discussed below. A QLAD is meant to identify the circumstances in which a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer is considered to be substantially wholly-owned, such that a rollover of all assets upon the liquidation and dissolution of such an affiliate is considered appropriate.

A QLAD will exist where the taxpayer elects (pursuant to rules prescribed in new section 5911 of the Regulations) to have that concept apply, and one of two tests is met, being either

- the taxpayer owns at least 90% of the shares of the affiliate throughout the liquidation and dissolution, or
- the taxpayer, during the course of the liquidation and distribution, receives at least 90% of the net assets of the affiliate and has at least 90% of the voting power in the affiliate's shares.

Related Provisions: 13(21.2)(e)(iii)(E)(I)1, 14(12)(g)(i)(A), 18(15)(b)(iv)(A)(I), 40(3.4)(b)(v)(A)(I), 40(3.5)(c)(iii) — QLAD excluded from pregnant-loss rules.

Regulations: 5911(1) (prescribed rules for election).

(3.2) Net distribution amount — For the purposes of the description of A in paragraph (3)(d),"net distribution amount" in respect of a distribution of distributed property means the amount determined by the formula

A – B

where

A is the cost to the taxpayer of the distributed property as determined under paragraph (3)(c), and

B is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount owing (other than an unpaid dividend) by, or an obligation of, the disposing affiliate that was assumed or cancelled by the taxpayer in consideration for the distribution of the distributed property.

Technical Notes: New subsection 88(3.2) defines the term "net distribution amount" in respect of a distributed property for the purposes of determining, under new paragraph 88(3)(d), the proceeds of disposition to a taxpayer of the shares of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that is liquidated and dissolved. The net distribution amount of a distributed property is the cost amount of that property to the taxpayer less any debts assumed by the taxpayer in consideration for that property.

Related Provisions: 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

(3.3) Suppression election — For the purposes of paragraph (3)(a), if the liquidation and dissolution is a qualifying liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate and the taxpayer would, in the absence of this subsection and, for greater certainty, after taking into account any election under subsection 93(1), realize a capital gain (the amount of which is referred to in subsection (3.4) as the "capital gain amount") from the disposition of a disposed share, the taxpayer may elect, in accordance with prescribed rules, that distributed property that was, immediately before the disposition, capital property of the disposing affiliate be deemed to have been disposed of by the disposing affiliate to the taxpayer for proceeds of disposition equal to the amount claimed (referred to in subsection (3.4) as the "claimed amount") by the taxpayer in the election.

Technical Notes: New subsections 88(3.3) and (3.4) allow a taxpayer to elect, in accordance with rules prescribed in section 5911 of the Regulations, to reduce (i.e. "suppress") the amount for which a distributed property is considered disposed of under paragraph 88(3)(a) where the distributed property is capital property of a foreign affiliate that is the subject of a QLAD. This reduced amount is then deemed under paragraph 88(3)(c) to be the taxpayer's cost of the property which in turn, by virtue of the interaction between the description of A in subsection 88(3.2) with paragraph 88(3)(d), affects the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the dissolving affiliate's shares. The purpose of this election is to allow taxpayers to reduce the capital gain that would otherwise arise on a disposition of the dissolving affiliate's shares. As such, the ability to suppress the disposition proceeds of distributed property is only available to the extent the taxpayer is able to avoid such a gain (as per paragraph 88(3.4)(b)).

In order to avoid circularity with the rules for determining surplus in the context of a subsection 88(3) liquidation and dissolution, this suppression rule is "turned off" by virtue of a special "reading rule" in clause 5907(9)(b)(i)(A) of the Regulations. This special reading is necessary because of the interaction of the suppression rule with the dividend election under subsection 93(1).

For example, if the taxpayer's gain otherwise determined (i.e. before any subsection 93(1) election or a suppression election) in respect of the disposition of a wholly-owned dissolving affiliate's shares is $1,000 and the exempt surplus of the affiliate as otherwise determined is $700, the taxpayer would, in the absence of the suppression election but after the subsection 93(1) election, realize a capital gain in respect of the dissolving affiliate's shares of $300. If the taxpayer then elects under subsection 88(3.3) to reduce the proceeds of disposition of Property A from $1,500 to $1,200, that $300 reduction would otherwise create a loss for surplus purposes and that loss could reduce the amount of exempt surplus available for the subsection 93(1) election to $400. Thus the gain, even after the $300 suppression, would still be $300. The special reading rule in clause 5907(9)(b)(i)(A) avoids this circularity by ignoring the suppression consequences and maintaining exempt surplus at $700. This allows the gain, in this example, to be totally eliminated.

This suppression rule is also "turned off" for the purposes of determining the allowable capital losses of a foreign affiliate in respect of non-excluded property, under paragraph (a) of the description of E in the "foreign accrual property income" ("FAPI") definition in subsection 95(1), in order to prevent taxpayers from using this election to create FAPI losses.

Related Provisions: 88(3.4) — Conditions for election; 95(1)"foreign accrual property income"E(a) – Property subject to election excluded from FAPI; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

Regulations: 5911(1) (prescribed rules for election).

(3.4) Conditions for subsec. (3.3) election — An election under subsection (3.3) in respect of distributed property disposed of in the course of the liquidation and dissolution is not valid unless

(a) the claimed amount in respect of each distributed property does not exceed the amount that would, in the absence of subsection (3.3), be determined under paragraph (3)(a) in respect of the distributed property; and

(b) the amount determined by the following formula does not exceed the total of all amounts each of which is the capital gain amount in respect of a disposed share:

where

A is the total of all amounts that would, in the absence of subsection (3.3), be determined under paragraph (3)(a) to be the proceeds of disposition of a distributed property in respect of which an election under subsection (3.3) is made by the taxpayer, and

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the claimed amount in respect of a distributed property referred to in the description of A.

Technical Notes: See under 88(3.3).

(3.5) Taxable Canadian property — For the purposes of paragraph (3)(a), the distributed property is deemed to have been disposed of by the disposing affiliate to the taxpayer for proceeds of disposition equal to the adjusted cost base of the distributed property to the disposing affiliate immediately before the time of its disposition, if

(a) the liquidation and dissolution is a qualifying liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate;

(b) the distributed property is, at the time of its disposition, taxable Canadian property (other than treaty-protected property) of the disposing affiliate that is a share of the capital stock of a corporation resident in Canada; and

(c) the taxpayer and the disposing affiliate have jointly elected in accordance with prescribed rules.

Technical Notes: New subsection 88(3.5) allows a taxpayer and a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer to jointly elect, in accordance with rules prescribed in section 5911 of the Regulations, to use adjusted cost base ("ACB"), rather than relevant cost base ("RCB"), as the amount for which distributed property is considered disposed of under paragraph 88(3)(a) in the context of a QLAD where the distributed property is non-treaty-protected taxable Canadian property of the affiliate that is shares of a Canadian-resident corporation. Such an election might be desirable where, for example, the RCB of the property is higher than its ACB and section 115 would otherwise cause the affiliate to incur Canadian income tax on the disposition.

The amendments to subsection 88(3), and new subsections 88(3.1) to (3.5), apply in respect of liquidations and dissolutions that begin after February 27, 2004. However, taxpayers may elect to have different rules apply up to August 19, 2011.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), s. 11, will add subsecs. 88(3.1) to (3.5), applicable in respect of liquidations and dissolutions of foreign affiliates of a taxpayer that begin after February 27, 2004; however, if the taxpayer elects in writing under this subsection in respect of all of its foreign affiliates and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the day that is the later of the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day of Royal Assent to this legislation and the day that is one year after that day,

(a) subsec. 88(3) also applies to property received by the taxpayer after February 27, 2004 and before August 19, 2011 on a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of shares of the capital stock of, on a payment of a dividend by, or on a reduction of the paid-up capital of, a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer; and

(b) in respect of property described in paragraph (a) and property received by the taxpayer on a liquidation and dissolution of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that began after February 27, 2004 and before August 19, 2011,

(i) subsec. 88(3) is to be read as follows:

(3) Notwithstanding subsection 69(5), if at any time a taxpayer receives a property (referred to in this subsection as the "distributed property") from a foreign affiliate (referred to in this subsection as the "disposing affiliate") of the taxpayer, on a liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate, on a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of shares of the capital stock of the disposing affiliate, on a payment of a dividend by the disposing affiliate, or on a reduction of the paid-up capital of the disposing affiliate,

(a) subject to subsections (3.4) and (3.5), the distributed property is deemed to have been disposed of at that time by the disposing affiliate to the taxpayer for proceeds of disposition equal to the relevant cost base (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(4)) to the disposing affiliate of the distributed property in respect of the taxpayer, immediately before that time, if the distributed property

(i) was received on a liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate that is a qualifying liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate, or

(ii) was a share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that was, immediately before that time, excluded property (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(1)) of the disposing affiliate;

(b) if paragraph (a) does not apply to the distributed property, the distributed property is deemed to have been disposed of at that time by the disposing affiliate to the taxpayer for proceeds of disposition equal to the distributed property's fair market value at that time;

(c) the distributed property is deemed to have been acquired, at that time, by the taxpayer at a cost equal to the amount determined under paragraph (a) or (b) to be the disposing affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the distributed property;

(d) if the taxpayer disposed of shares of the capital stock of the disposing affiliate on a liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate (each such share being referred to in paragraph (f) and subsections (3.3) and (3.4) as a "disposed share") or on a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of shares of the capital stock of the disposing affiliate, the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the shares are deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the cost to the taxpayer of a distributed property, as determined under paragraph (c), and

B is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount owing (other than an unpaid dividend) by, or an obligation of, the disposing affiliate that was assumed or cancelled by the taxpayer because of the liquidation and dissolution or the redemption, acquisition or cancellation;

(e) if the taxpayer received the distributed property as a dividend or a reduction of paid-up capital, the amount of the dividend paid by the disposing affiliate or the amount of the reduction of the paid-up capital of the disposing affiliate, as the case may be, is deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

where

C is the total of all amounts each of which is the cost to the taxpayer of a distributed property, as determined under paragraph (e), and

D is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount owing (other than an unpaid dividend) by, or an obligation of, the disposing affiliate that was assumed or cancelled by the taxpayer because of the payment of the dividend or the reduction of paid-up capital; and

(f) if the distributed property was received on a liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate that is a qualifying liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate, any loss of the taxpayer in respect of the disposition of a disposed share is deemed to be nil.

(ii) s. 88 is to be read without reference to subsec. 88(3.2), as enacted.

Regulations: 5911(1) (prescribed rules for 88(3.5)(c)).

(4) Amalgamation deemed not to be acquisition of control — For the purposes of paragraphs (1)(c), (c.2), (d) and (d.2) and, for greater certainty, paragraphs (c.3) to (c.8) and (d.3),

(a) subject to paragraph (c), control of any corporation shall be deemed not to have been acquired because of an amalgamation;

(b) any corporation formed as a result of an amalgamation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation; and

(c) in the case of an amalgamation described in subsection 87(9), control of a predecessor corporation that was not controlled by the parent before the amalgamation shall be deemed to have been acquired by the parent immediately before the amalgamation.

History: The opening words of subsec. 88(4) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 66(5), applicable to windings-up that begin after November 1994. The opening words formerly read:

(4) For the purposes of paragraphs (1)(c), (d) and (d.2),

Subsec. 88(4) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 66(20), applicable to windings-up beginning after March 1977. Subsec. 88(4) formerly read:

(4) In determining, for the purposes of paragraphs (1)(c) and (d), whether control of any corporation has been acquired, control shall be deemed not to have been acquired by virtue of any amalgamation and any corporation formed as a result of any amalgamation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation and, in the case of a merger described in subsection 87(9), control of a predecessor corporation that was not controlled by the parent prior to such a merger shall be deemed to have been acquired by the parent immediately prior to the merger.

88.1 (1) [SIFT wind-up —] Application — Subsection (2) applies to a trust's distribution of property to a taxpayer if

(a) the distribution is a SIFT trust wind-up event;

(b) the trust is

(i) a SIFT wind-up entity whose only beneficiary, at all times at which the trust makes a distribution that is a SIFT trust wind-up event, is a taxable Canadian corporation, or

(ii) a trust whose only beneficiary, at all times at which the trust makes a distribution that is a SIFT trust wind-up event, is another trust described by subparagraph (i);

(c) where the trust is a SIFT wind-up entity, the distribution occurs no more than 60 days after the earlier of

(i) the first SIFT trust wind-up event of the trust, and

(ii) the first distribution to the trust that is a SIFT trust wind-up event of another trust; and

(d) if the property is shares of the capital stock of a taxable Canadian corporation,

(i) the property was not acquired by the trust on a distribution to which subsection 107(3.1) applies, and

(ii) the trust elects in writing, filed with the Minister on or before the trust's filing-due date for its taxation year that includes the time of the distribution, that this section apply to the distribution.

(2) SIFT trust wind-up event — If this subsection applies to a trust's distribution of property to a taxpayer, subsections 88(1) to (1.7), and section 87 and paragraphs 256(7)(a) to (e) as they apply for the purposes of those subsections, apply, with any modifications that the circumstances require, as if

(a) the trust were a taxable Canadian corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "subsidiary") that is not a private corporation;

(b) where the taxpayer is a SIFT wind-up entity, the taxpayer were a taxable Canadian corporation that is not a private corporation;

(c) the distribution were a winding-up of the subsidiary;

(d) the taxpayer's interest as a beneficiary under the trust were shares of a single class of shares of the capital stock of the subsidiary owned by the taxpayer;

(e) paragraph 88(1)(b) deemed the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the shares described in paragraph (d) and owned by the taxpayer immediately before the distribution to be equal to the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the taxpayer's interest as a beneficiary under the trust immediately before the distribution;

(f) each trust, a majority-interest beneficiary (in this subsection, within the meaning assigned by section 251.1) of which is another trust that is by operation of this subsection treated as if it were a corporation, were a corporation; and

(g) except for the purposes of subsections 88(1.1) and (1.2), the taxpayer last acquired control of the subsidiary and of each corporation (including a trust that is by operation of this subsection treated as if it were a corporation) controlled by the subsidiary at the time, if any, at which the taxpayer last became a majority-interest beneficiary of the trust.

Former s. 88.1 repealed by 1994, c. 21, s. 41, applicable after 1992 except that

(a) where a corporation elects in accordance with para. 111(4)(a) of 1994, c. 21 (i.e., elects before December 16, 1994 for new subsec. 250(5.1) to apply in respect of a continuance before 1993), the repeal applies to the corporation from the corporation's "time of continuation" (within the meaning assigned by that para.); and

(b) where a corporation elects in accordance with para. 111(4)(b) of 1994, c. 21 (i.e., elects before December 16, 1994 for new subsec. 250(5.1) to not apply), the repeal applies to the corporation only after the corporation was granted the articles of continuance or similar constitutional documents in respect of which the election was made.

S. 88.1 formerly read:

88.1 Corporate emigration — Where at any particular time after August 28, 1980 a corporation that was incorporated in Canada, other than a corporation that was not at any time resident in Canada,

(a) has been granted articles of continuance, or similar corporate constitutional documents, in a jurisdiction outside Canada, or

(b) has become resident in a jurisdiction outside Canada and would, as a consequence thereof, be exempt from tax under this Part on income from any source outside Canada derived by it after the particular time by virtue of any Act of Parliament or anything approved, made or declared to have the force of law under any Act of Parliament,

the following rules apply:

(c) the corporation's taxation year that would otherwise have included the particular time shall be deemed to have ended immediately before the particular time and a new taxation year of the corporation shall be deemed to have commenced at the particular time,

(d) the corporation shall be deemed not to be a Canadian corporation at the particular time and all subsequent times,

(e) each property owned by the corporation immediately before the particular time shall be deemed to have been disposed of by it immediately before that time for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value at that time and those proceeds shall be deemed to have become receivable and to have been received by it immediately before that time,

(f) section 48 does not apply to the corporation for the taxation year in which it is deemed by paragraph (e) to have disposed of its property, and

(g) each property deemed by paragraph (e) to have been disposed of by the corporation shall be deemed to have been reacquired by it immediately after the particular time at a cost equal to the proceeds of disposition of the property as determined in that paragraph.

89. (1) Definitions — In this subdivision,

"adjusted taxable income" of a corporation for a taxation year is the amount determined by the formula

A – B – C

where

A is

(a) unless paragraph (b) applies, the corporation's taxable income for the taxation year, and

(b) if the corporation is a deposit insurance corporation in the taxation year, nil,

B is the amount determined by multiplying the amount, if any, deducted by the corporation under subsection 125(1) for the taxation year by the quotient obtained by dividing 100 by the rate of the deduction provided under that subsection for the taxation year, and

C is

(a) if the corporation is a Canadian-controlled private corporation in the taxation year, the lesser of the corporation's aggregate investment income for the taxation year and the corporation's taxable income for the taxation year, and

(b) in any other case, nil;

History: The definition "adjusted taxable income" in subsec. 89(1) added by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 22(3), applicable to 2006 et seq.

"Canadian corporation" at any time means a corporation that is resident in Canada at that time and was

(a) incorporated in Canada, or

(b) resident in Canada throughout the period that began on June 18, 1971 and that ends at that time, and, for greater certainty, a corporation formed at any particular time by the amalgamation or merger of, or by a plan of arrangement or other corporate reorganization in respect of, 2 or more corporations (otherwise than as a result of the acquisition of property of one corporation by another corporation, pursuant to the purchase of the property by the other corporation or as a result of the distribution of the property to the other corporation on the winding-up of the corporation) is a Canadian corporation because of paragraph (a) only if

(c) that reorganization took place under the laws of Canada or a province, and

(d) each of those corporations was, immediately before the particular time, a Canadian corporation;

History: The definition "Canadian corporation" in subsec. 89(1) substituted by 1994, c. 21, subsec. 42(1), applicable June 15, 1994. That definition formerly read:

"Canadian corporation" at any time means a corporation that was resident in Canada at that time and was

(a) incorporated in Canada, or

(b) resident in Canada throughout the period commencing June 18, 1971 and ending at that time;

"capital dividend account" of a corporation at any particular time means the amount, if any, by which the total of

(a) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount if any, by which

(A) the amount of the corporation's capital gain from the disposition (other than a disposition under subsection 40(12) or that is the making of a gift after December 8, 1997 that is not a gift described in subsection 110.1(1)) of a property in the period beginning at the beginning of its first taxation year (that began after the corporation last became a private corporation and that ended after 1971) and ending immediately before the particular time (in this definition referred to as "the period")

Proposed Amendment — 89(1)"capital dividend account"(a)(i)(A) [temporary]

(A) the amount of the corporation's capital gain — computed without reference to subparagraphs 52(3)(a)(ii) and 53(1)(b)(ii) — from the disposition (other than a disposition that is the making of a gift after December 8, 1997 that is not a gift described in subsection 110.1(1)) of a property in the period beginning at the beginning of its first taxation year that began after the corporation last became a private corporation and that ended after 1971 and ending immediately before the particular time (in this definition referred to as "the period")

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 46(1), will amend cl. (a)(i)(A) of the definition "capital dividend account" in subsec. 89(1) to read as above, applicable in respect of a disposition that occurs after November 8, 2006.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Clauses (a)(i)(A) and (a)(ii)(A) of the definition "capital dividend account" are amended to provide that a corporation's capital gain or loss from the disposition of a property is computed for capital dividend account purposes without reference to subparagraph 52(3)(a)(ii) and 53(1)(b)(ii). In general, this amendment means that no capital dividend election may be made in respect of a corporation's capital gain from disposing of shares to the extent that gain arises because the cost of the shares does not include amounts described in those amended subparagraphs, which are more fully discussed in the commentary accompanying those amendments. Essentially, this amendment ensures that those subparagraphs cannot be used in conjunction with a capital dividend election to convert corporate surplus into capital gains upon which a capital dividend election could be made.

Proposed Amendment — 89(1)"capital dividend account"(a)(i)(A)

(A) the amount of the corporation's capital gain — computed without reference to subparagraphs 52(3)(a)(ii) and 53(1)(b)(ii) — from the disposition (other than a disposition under paragraph 40(3.1)(a) or subsection 40(12) or a disposition that is the making of a gift after December 8, 1997 that is not a gift described in subsection 110.1(1)) of a property in the period beginning at the beginning of its first taxation year that began after the corporation last became a private corporation and that ended after 1971 and ending immediately before the particular time (in this definition referred to as "the period")

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 16(1), will amend cl. (a)(i)(A) of the definition "capital dividend account" in subsec. 89(1) to read as above, applicable to dispositions that occur after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Where the appropriate elections have been made by a private corporation, dividends paid out of the capital dividend account of the corporation are received tax-free by the corporation's shareholders who are resident in Canada. A corporation's capital dividend account generally includes the untaxed portion of gains in respect of dispositions of capital property.

Clauses (a)(i)(A) and (a)(ii)(A) of the definition "capital dividend account" in subsection 89(1) are amended so that it is computed without reference to dispositions that are deemed to occur under paragraph 40(3.1)(a) and subsection 40(3.12).

Subsection 40(3.1) is an anti-avoidance rule that deems a capital gain to arise if the adjusted cost base to a taxpayer of an interest as a limited partner in a partnership is negative. This can arise, for example, when partner drawings on equity are financed by partnership debt, rather than by net partnership income or gains or previous equity contributions. Subsection 40(3.12) allows a deemed capital loss in a subsequent year if the adjusted cost base of the partner's interest later becomes positive.

exceeds the total of

(B) the portion of the capital gain referred to in clause (A) that is the corporation's taxable capital gain,

(B.1) the corporation's taxable capital gain from a disposition in the period under subsection 40(12), and

(C) the portion of the amount, if any, by which the amount determined under clause (A) exceeds the amount determined under clause (B) from the disposition by it of a property that can reasonably be regarded as having accrued while the property, or a property for which it was substituted,

(I) except in the case of a disposition of a designated property, was a property of a corporation (other than a private corporation, an investment corporation, a mortgage investment corporation or a mutual fund corporation),

(II) where, after November 26, 1987, the property became a property of a Canadian-controlled private corporation (otherwise than by reason of a change in the residence of one or more shareholders of the corporation), was a property of a corporation controlled directly or indirectly in any manner whatever by one or more non-resident persons, or

(III) where, after November 26, 1987, the property became a property of a private corporation that was not exempt from tax under this Part on its taxable income, was a property of a corporation exempt from tax under this Part on its taxable income,

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which

(A) the amount of the corporation's capital loss from a disposition (other than a disposition that is the making of a gift after December 8, 1997 that is not a gift described in subsection 110.1(1)) of a property in that period

Proposed Amendment — 89(1)"capital dividend account"(a)(ii)(A) [temporary]

(A) the amount of the corporation's capital loss — computed without reference to subparagraphs 52(3)(a)(ii) and 53(1)(b)(ii) — from the disposition (other than a disposition that is the making of a gift after December 8, 1997 that is not a gift described in subsection 110.1(1)) of a property in the period

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 46(2), will amend cl. (a)(ii)(A) of the definition "capital dividend account" in subsec. 89(1) to read as above, applicable in respect of a disposition that occurs after November 8, 2006.

(b) all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of a dividend received by the corporation on a share of the capital stock of another corporation in the period, which amount was, by virtue of subsection 83(2), not included in computing the income of the corporation,

(c) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount required to have been included under this paragraph as it read in its application to a taxation year that ended before February 28, 2000,

(c.1) the amount, if any, by which

(i) ½ of the total of all amounts each of which is an amount required by paragraph 14(1)(b) to be included in computing the corporation's income in respect of a business carried on by the corporation for a taxation year that is included in the period and that ended after February 27, 2000 and before October 18, 2000,

exceeds

(ii) where the corporation has deducted an amount under subsection 20(4.2) in respect of a debt established by it to have become a bad debt in a taxation year that is included in the period and that ended after February 27, 2000 and before October 18, 2000, or has an allowable capital loss for such a year because of the application of subsection 20(4.3), the amount determined by the formula

$$V + W$$

where

V is ½ of the value determined for A under subsection 20(4.2) in respect of the corporation for the last such taxation year that ended in the period, and

W is ⅓ of the value determined for B under subsection 20(4.2) in respect of the corporation for the last such taxation year that ended in the period, and

(iii) in any other case, nil,

(c.2) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount required by paragraph 14(1)(b) to be included in computing the corporation's income in respect of a business carried on by the corporation for a taxation year that is included in the period and that ends after October 17, 2000,

exceeds

(ii) where the corporation has deducted an amount under subsection 20(4.2) in respect of a debt established by it to have become a bad debt in a taxation year that is included in the period and that ends after October 17, 2000, or has an allowable capital loss for such a year because of the application of subsection 20(4.3), the amount determined by the formula

$$X + Y$$

where

X is the value determined for A under subsection 20(4.2) in respect of the corporation for the last such taxation year that ended in the period, and

Y is ⅓ of the value determined for B under subsection 20(4.2) in respect of the corporation for the last such taxation year that ended in the period, and

(iii) in any other case, nil,

(d) the amount, if any, by which the total of

(i) all amounts each of which is the proceeds of a life insurance policy of which the corporation was a beneficiary on or before June 28, 1982 received by the corporation in the period and after 1971 in consequence of the death of any person, and

(ii) all amounts each of which is the proceeds of a life insurance policy of which the corporation was not a beneficiary on or before June 28, 1982 received by the corporation in the period and after May 23, 1985 in consequence of the death of any person exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is the adjusted cost basis (within the meaning assigned by subsection 148(9)) of a policy referred to in subparagraph (i) or (ii) to the corporation immediately before that person's death,

(e) the amount of the corporation's life insurance capital dividend account immediately before May 24, 1985,

(f) all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of a distribution made in the period by a trust to the corporation in respect of capital gains of the trust equal to the lesser of

(i) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the amount of the distribution,

exceeds

(B) the amount designated under subsection 104(21) by the trust (other than a designation to which subsection 104(21.4) applies) in respect of the net taxable capital gains of the trust attributable to those capital gains, and

Proposed Amendment — 89(1)"capital dividend account"(f)(i)(B)

(B) the amount designated under subsection 104(21) by the trust (other than a designation to which subsection 104(21.4), as it read in its application to the corporation's last taxation year that began on or before October 31, 2011, applied) in respect of the net taxable capital gains of the trust attributable to those capital gains, and

Application: The October 31, 2011 draft legislation, subsec. 16(3), will amend cl. (f)(i)(B) of the definition "capital dividend account" in subsec. 89(1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after October 31, 2011.

Technical Notes: Paragraph (f) of the definition "capital dividend account" provides for the inclusion in a corporation's capital dividend account of an amount in respect of the non-taxable portion of capital gains distributed by a trust to the corporation. The amount permitted to be included is equal to the lesser of two amounts.

The first of the two amounts is the amount by which the distribution exceeds the amount designated under subsection 104(21) by the trust (other than a designation to which subsection 104(21.4) applies) in respect of the corporation in respect of those capital gains. The exclusion from the first amount of a designated amount to which subsection 104(21.4) applies prevents a double addition to the corporation's capital dividend account. This is because subsection 104(21.4) already deems certain capital gains of a trust to be those of the beneficiary.

Subsection 104(21.4) provides a special rule that applies where a trust designates, for its taxation year that includes either February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000, an amount in respect of a beneficiary. Consequential on the proposed repeal of subsection 104(21.4) as described below, clause (f)(i)(B) of the definition is amended to refer to a designation to which subsection 104(21.4) applied as it read in its application to the corporation's last taxation year that began on or before October 31, 2011.

(ii) the amount determined by the formula

$$A \times B$$

where

A is the fraction or whole number determined when 1 is subtracted from the reciprocal of the fraction under paragraph 38(a) applicable to the trust for the year, and

B is the amount referred to in clause (i)(B), and

(g) all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of a distribution made by a trust to the corporation in the period in respect of a dividend (other than a taxable dividend) paid on a share of the capital stock of another corporation resident in Canada to the trust during a taxation year of the trust throughout which the trust was resident in Canada equal to the lesser of

(i) the amount of the distribution, and

(ii) the amount designated under subsection 104(20) by the trust in respect of the corporation in respect of that dividend, exceeds the total of all capital dividends that became payable by the corporation after the commencement of the period and before the particular time;

(A) the amount of the corporation's capital gain from a disposition (other than a disposition that is the making of a gift after December 8, 1997 that is not a gift described in subsection 110.1(1)) of a property in the period beginning at the beginning of its first taxation year (that began after the corporation last became a private corporation and that ended after 1971) and ending immediately before the particular time (in this definition referred to as "the period")

Cl. (a)(i)(A) of the definition "capital dividend account" in subsec. 89(1) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 67(1) to add a missing parenthesis and the words "(in this definition referred to as "the period")", applicable to dispositions made after December 8, 1997, other than a disposition made under a written agreement made before December 9, 1997.

Para. (c) of the definition amended and paras. (c.1) and (c.2) added by the said c. 17, subsec. 67(2), applicable in respect of taxation years that end after February 27, 2000. Para. (c) formerly read:

(c) all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of a business carried on by the corporation at any time in the period, equal to the amount, if any, by which the total of

(i) where the period commenced before the corporation's adjustment time, the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of the amounts in respect of the business required to be included in the calculation of the corporation's cumulative eligible capital by reason of the description of E in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) with respect to that portion of the period preceding its adjustment time

exceeds the total of

(B) the cumulative eligible capital of the corporation in respect of the business at the commencement of the period, and

(C) ½ of the total of the eligible capital expenditures in respect of the business that were made or incurred by the corporation during that portion of the period preceding its adjustment time,

(ii) ⅓ of the total of the amounts in respect of the business required to be included in the calculation of the corporation's cumulative eligible capital by reason of the description of E in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) with respect to that portion of the period following its adjustment time, and

(iii) ⅓ of all amounts received in the period that were required to be included in the corporation's income by reason of paragraph 12(1)(i.1)

exceeds the total of

(iv) where the period commenced after the corporation's adjustment time, ⅓ of its cumulative eligible capital in respect of the business at the commencement of the period,

(v) ¼ of the total of the eligible capital expenditures in respect of the business made or incurred by the corporation with respect to that portion of the period after its adjustment time,

"designated property" means

(a) any property of a private corporation that last became a private corporation before November 13, 1981 and that was acquired by it

(i) before November 13, 1981, or

(ii) after November 12, 1981 pursuant to an agreement in writing entered into on or before that date,

(b) any property of a private corporation that was acquired by it from another private corporation with whom the private corporation was not dealing at arm's length (otherwise than by virtue of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) at the time the property was acquired, where the property was a designated property of the other private corporation,

(c) a share acquired by a private corporation in a transaction to which section 51, subsection 85(1) or section 85.1, 86 or 87 applied in exchange for another share that was a designated property of the corporation, or

"excessive eligible dividend designation", made by a corporation in respect of an eligible dividend paid by the corporation at any time in a taxation year, means

(a) unless paragraph (c) applies to the dividend, if the corporation is in the taxation year a Canadian-controlled private corporation or a deposit insurance corporation, the amount, if any, determined by the formula

$$(A - B) \times \frac{C}{A}$$

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of an eligible dividend paid by the corporation in the taxation year,

B is the greater of nil and the corporation's general rate income pool at the end of the taxation year, and

C is the amount of the eligible dividend,

(b) unless paragraph (c) applies to the dividend, if the corporation is not a corporation described in paragraph (a), the amount, if any, determined by the formula

$$A \times \frac{B}{C}$$

where

A is the lesser of

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is an eligible dividend paid by the corporation at that time, and

(ii) the corporation's low rate income pool at that time,

B is the amount of the eligible dividend, and

C is the amount determined under subparagraph (i) of the description of A, and,

(c) an amount equal to the amount of the eligible dividend, if it is reasonable to consider that the eligible dividend was paid in a transaction, or as part of a series of transactions, one of the main purposes of which was to artificially maintain or increase the corporation's general rate income pool, or to artificially maintain or decrease the corporation's low rate income pool;

"low rate income pool", at any particular time in a particular taxation year, of a corporation (in this definition referred to as the "non-CCPC") that is resident in Canada and is in the particular taxation year neither a Canadian-controlled private corporation nor a deposit insurance corporation, is the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the non-CCPC's low rate income pool at the end of its preceding taxation year,

B is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deductible under section 112 in computing the non-CCPC's taxable income for the year in respect of a taxable dividend (other than an eligible dividend) that became payable, in the particular taxation year but before the particular time, to the non-CCPC by a corporation resident in Canada,

C is the total of all amounts determined under subsections (8) to (10) in respect of the non-CCPC for the particular taxation year,

D is

(a) if the non-CCPC would, but for paragraph (d) of the definition "Canadian-controlled private corporation" in subsection 125(7), be a Canadian-controlled private corporation in its preceding taxation year, 80% of its aggregate investment income for its preceding taxation year, and

(b) in any other case, nil,

E is

(a) if the non-CCPC was not a Canadian-controlled private corporation in its preceding taxation year, 80% of the amount determined by multiplying the amount, if any, deducted by the corporation under subsection 125(1) for that preceding taxation year by the quotient obtained by dividing 100 by the rate of the deduction provided under that subsection for that preceding taxation year, and

(b) in any other case, nil,

F is

(a) if the non-CCPC was an investment corporation in its preceding taxation year, four times the amount, if any, deducted by it under subsection 130(1) for its preceding taxation year, and

(b) in any other case, nil,

G is the total of all amounts each of which is a taxable dividend (other than an eligible dividend, a capital gains dividend within the meaning assigned by subsection 130.1(4) or 131(1) or a taxable dividend deductible by the non-CCPC under subsection 130.1(1) in computing its income for the particular taxation year or for its preceding taxation year) that became payable, in the particular taxation year but before the particular time, by the non-CCPC, and

"tax equity [para. 89(1)(h)]" — [Repealed under former Act]

"taxable Canadian corporation" means a corporation that, at the time the expression is relevant,

(a) was a Canadian corporation, and

(b) was not, by virtue of a statutory provision, exempt from tax under this Part;

Proposed Amendment — 89(1)"taxable Canadian corporation"(b)

(b) was not, by reason of a statutory provision other than paragraph 149(1)(t), exempt from tax under this Part;

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), subsec. 46(5), will amend para. (b) of the definition "taxable Canadian corporation" in subsec. 89(1) to read as above, applicable in respect of taxation years that end after 1999.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Paragraph (b) of the definition "taxable Canadian corporation" in subsection 89(1) is amended to clarify that a farming or fishing insurer to which paragraph 149(1)(t) applies is a taxable Canadian corporation.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Feb. 21, 2000:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter of November 8, 1999 regarding section 87 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") and the treatment accorded thereunder to insurance corporations earning premium income in respect of the insurance of property used in farming or fishing.

In your letter you express concern that an amalgamation of insurers of farmers and fishermen partially, or totally, exempt from tax under paragraph 149(1)(t) of the Act could trigger significant tax consequences. You ask that I consider amending the Act so that insurers of farmers and fishermen can, on amalgamation, benefit from the tax rollover provisions contained in section 87.

There does not appear to be a policy reason for not allowing subsection 87(1) of the Act to apply to an amalgamation of two or more farmers' and fishermen's insurers described in paragraph 149(1)(t) of the Act. Consequently, I am prepared to support an amendment to the Act to provide that subsection 87(1) of the Act apply to amalgamations of insurers exempt, or partially exempt, from tax under paragraph 149(1)(t) occurring after 1999.

Thank you for your helpful advice on this matter.

Sincerely,

The Honourable Paul Martin, P.C., M.P.
Minister of Finance

(1.01) Application of subsec. 138(12) — The definitions in subsection 138(12) apply to this section.

Origin of subsec. 89(1.01): R.S.C. 1985, c. 1 (5th Supp.) (formerly contained in the opening words to subsec. 138(12)).

(1.1) Capital dividend account where control acquired — Where at any particular time after March 31, 1977 a corporation that was, at a previous time, a private corporation controlled directly or indirectly in any manner whatever by one or more non-resident persons becomes a Canadian-controlled private corporation (otherwise than by reason of a change in the residence of one or more of its shareholders), in computing the corporation's capital dividend account at and after the particular time there shall be deducted the amount of the corporation's capital dividend account immediately before the particular time.

Related Provisions: 256(5.1), (6.2) — Controlled directly or indirectly; 256(7) — Where control deemed not acquired.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-66R6: Capital dividends.

(1.2) Capital dividend account of tax-exempt corporation — Where at any particular time after November 26, 1987 a corporation ceases to be exempt from tax under this Part on its taxable income, in computing the corporation's capital dividend account at and after the particular time there shall be deducted the amount of the corporation's capital dividend account (computed without reference to this subsection) immediately after the particular time.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-66R6: Capital dividends.

(2) Where corporation is beneficiary — For the purposes of this section,

(a) where a corporation was a beneficiary under a life insurance policy on June 28, 1982, it shall be deemed not to have been a beneficiary under such a policy on or before June 28, 1982 where at any time after December 1, 1982 a prescribed premium has been paid under the policy or there has been a prescribed increase in any benefit on death under the policy; and

(b) where a corporation becomes a beneficiary under a life insurance policy by virtue of an amalgamation or a winding-up to which subsection 87(1) or 88(1) applies, it shall be deemed to have been a beneficiary under the policy throughout the period during which its predecessor or subsidiary, as the case may be, was a beneficiary under the policy.

Regulations: 309 (prescribed increase, prescribed premium).

(3) Simultaneous dividends — Where a dividend becomes payable at the same time on more than one class of shares of the capital stock of a corporation, for the purposes of sections 83, 84 and 88, the dividend on any such class of shares shall be deemed to become payable at a different time than the dividend on the other class or classes of shares and to become payable in the order designated

(a) by the corporation on or before the day on or before which its return of income for its taxation year in which such dividends become payable is required to be filed; or

(b) in any other case, by the Minister.

(4) GRIP addition — becoming CCPC — If, in a particular taxation year, a corporation is a Canadian-controlled private corporation or a deposit insurance corporation but was, in its preceding taxation year, a corporation resident in Canada other than a Canadian-controlled private corporation or a deposit insurance corporation, there may be included in computing the corporation's general rate income pool at the end of the particular taxation year, the amount determined by the formula

$$A + B + C - D - E - F - G - H$$

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the cost amount to the corporation of a property immediately before the end of its preceding taxation year;

B is the amount of any money of the corporation on hand immediately before the end of its preceding taxation year;

C is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of all amounts that, if the corporation had had unlimited income for its preceding taxation year from each business carried on, and from each property held, by it in that preceding taxation year and had realized an unlimited amount of capital gains for that preceding taxation year, would have been deductible under subsection 111(1) in computing its taxable income for that preceding taxation year

(b) the total of all amounts deducted under subsection 111(1) in computing the corporation's taxable income for that preceding taxation year;

D is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of any debt owing by the corporation, or of any other obligation of the corporation to pay any amount, that was outstanding immediately before the end of its preceding taxation year;

E is the paid up capital, immediately before the end of its preceding taxation year, of all of the issued and outstanding shares of the capital stock of the corporation;

F is the total of all amounts each of which is a reserve deducted in computing the corporation's income for its preceding taxation year;

G is the corporation's capital dividend account, if any, immediately before the end of its preceding taxation year; and

H is the corporation's low rate income pool immediately before the end of its preceding taxation year.

Related Provisions: 125(7)"Canadian-controlled private corporation"(d) — Election not to be CCPC for purposes of 89(4); 249(3.1) — Deemed year-end on becoming CCPC; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: Subsec. 89(4) added by 2007, c. 2, subsec. 47(2), applicable to taxation years that end after 2005.

(5) GRIP addition — post-amalgamation — If a Canadian-controlled private corporation or a deposit insurance corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "new corporation") is formed as a result of an amalgamation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1)), there shall be included in computing the new corporation's general rate income pool at the end of its first taxation year the total of all amounts each of which is

(a) in respect of a predecessor corporation that was, in its taxation year that ended immediately before the amalgamation (in this paragraph referred to as its "last taxation year"), a Canadian-controlled private corporation or a deposit insurance corporation, the positive or negative amount determined in respect of the predecessor corporation by the formula

A – B

where

A is the predecessor corporation's general rate income pool at the end of its last taxation year, and

B is the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is an eligible dividend paid by the predecessor corporation in its last taxation year

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is an excessive eligible dividend designation made by the predecessor corporation in its last taxation year; or

(b) in respect of a predecessor corporation (in this paragraph referred to as the "non-CCPC predecessor") that was, in its taxation year that ended immediately before the amalgamation (in this paragraph referred to as its "last taxation year"), not a Canadian-controlled private corporation or a deposit insurance corporation, the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the cost amount to the non-CCPC predecessor of a property immediately before the end of its last taxation year,

B is the amount of any money of the non-CCPC predecessor on hand immediately before the end of its last taxation year,

C is the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts that, if the non-CCPC predecessor had had unlimited income for its last taxation year from each business carried on, and from each property held, by it in that last taxation year and had realized an unlimited amount of capital gains for that last taxation year, would have been deductible under subsection 111(1) in computing its taxable income for that last taxation year

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts deducted under subsection 111(1) in computing the non-CCPC predecessor's taxable income for its last taxation year,

D is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of any debt owing by the non-CCPC predecessor, or of any other obligation of the non-CCPC predecessor to pay any amount, that was outstanding immediately before the end of its last taxation year,

E is the paid up capital, immediately before the end of its last taxation year, of all of the issued and outstanding shares of the capital stock of the non-CCPC predecessor,

F is the total of all amounts each of which is a reserve deducted in computing the non-CCPC predecessor's income for its last taxation year,

G is the non-CCPC predecessor's capital dividend account, if any, immediately before the end of its last taxation year, and

H is the non-CCPC predecessor's low rate income pool immediately before the end of its last taxation year.

(6) GRIP addition — post-winding-up — If subsection 88(1) applies to the winding-up of a subsidiary into a parent (within the meanings assigned by that subsection) that is a Canadian-controlled private corporation or a deposit insurance corporation, there shall be included in computing the parent's general rate income pool at the end of its taxation year that immediately follows the taxation year during which it receives the assets of the subsidiary on the winding-up

(a) if the subsidiary was, in its taxation year during which its assets were distributed to the parent on the winding-up (in this paragraph referred to as its "last taxation year"), a Canadian-controlled private corporation or a deposit insurance corporation, the positive or negative amount determined by the formula

where

A is the subsidiary's general rate income pool at the end of its last taxation year, and

B is the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is an eligible dividend paid by the subsidiary in its last taxation year

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is an excessive eligible dividend designation made by the subsidiary in its last taxation year; and

(b) in any other case, the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the cost amount to the subsidiary of a property immediately before the end of its taxation year during which its assets were distributed to the parent on the winding-up (in this paragraph referred to as its "last taxation year"),

B is the amount of any money of the subsidiary on hand immediately before the end of its last taxation year,

C is the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts that, if the subsidiary had had unlimited income for its last taxation year from each business carried on, and from each property held, by it in that last taxation year and had realized an unlimited amount of capital gains for that last taxation year, would have been deductible under subsection 111(1) in computing its taxable income for that last taxation year

(14) Dividend designation — A corporation designates a portion of a dividend it pays at any time to be an eligible dividend by notifying in writing at that time each person or partnership to whom the dividend is paid that the portion of the dividend is an eligible dividend.

Related Provisions: 89(14.1) — Late designation; 185.1 — Penalty tax on excessive eligible dividend designation; 248(7)(a) — Notification deemed received once it is mailed.

History: Subsec. 89(14) amended by 2012, c. 19, subsec. 4(2), applicable to dividends paid after March 28, 2012. It formerly read:

> (14) A corporation designates a dividend it pays at any time to be an eligible dividend by notifying in writing at that time each person or partnership to whom it pays all or any part of the dividend that the dividend is an eligible dividend.

Subsec. 89(14) added by 2007, c. 2, subsec. 47(2), applicable to taxation years that end after 2005 except that, in respect of a dividend paid before February 21, 2007, a designation under subsec. 89(14) is deemed to have been made in a timely manner if it is made on or before May 22, 2007.

I.T. Technical News: 41 (eligible dividend designation).

(14.1) Late designation — If, in the opinion of the Minister, the circumstances are such that it would be just and equitable to permit a designation under subsection (14) to be made before the day that is three years after the day on which the designation was required to be made, the designation is deemed to have been made at the time the designation was required to be made.

History: Subsec. 89(14.1) added by 2012, c. 19, subsec. 4(2), applicable to dividends paid after March 28, 2012.

(15) Meaning of expression "deposit insurance corporation" — For the purposes of paragraphs 87(2)(vv) and (ww) (including, for greater certainty, in applying those paragraphs as provided under paragraph 88(1)(e.2)), the definitions "excessive eligible dividend designation", "general rate income pool", and "low rate income pool" in subsection (1) and subsections (4) to (6) and (8) to (10), a corporation is a deposit insurance corporation if it would be a deposit insurance corporation as defined in the definition "deposit insurance corporation" in subsection 137.1(5) were that definition read without reference to its paragraph (b) and were this Act read without reference to subsection 137.1(5.1).

89.1 [Repealed under former Act]

Subdivision i — Shareholders of Corporations Not Resident in Canada

90. Dividends received from non-resident corporation — In computing the income for a taxation year of a taxpayer resident in Canada, there shall be included any amounts received by the taxpayer in the year as, on account or in lieu of payment of, or in satisfaction of, dividends on a share owned by the taxpayer of the capital stock of a corporation not resident in Canada.

Proposed Amendment — 90

90. (1) Dividends received from non-resident corporation — In computing the income for a taxation year of a taxpayer resident in Canada, there is to be included any amount received by the taxpayer at any time in the year as, on account or in lieu of payment of, or in satisfaction of, a dividend on a share owned by the taxpayer of the capital stock of a non-resident corporation.

Technical Notes: Section 90 includes in the income of a taxpayer resident in Canada any dividends received from a non-resident corporation.

Section 90 is being significantly expanded to provide, among other things, specific rules for dividends from foreign affiliates and to address avoidance techniques involving socalled "upstream loans". As more fully explained below, new subsections 90(1) to (3) relate to dividends, while new subsections 90(4) to (10) relate to upstream loans.

New subsection 90(1) is substantively the same as existing section 90, the only difference being the modernization of its language.

Related Provisions: 82(1) — Dividends received from corporation resident in Canada; 93.1(1) — Shares owned by partnership deemed owned by partners; 113(1) — Deduction to corporation for dividend received from foreign affiliate.

(2) Dividend from foreign affiliate — For the purposes of this Act, an amount is deemed to be a dividend paid or received, as the case may be, at any time on a share of a class of the capital stock of a non-resident corporation that is a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer if the amount is the share's portion of a pro rata distribution (other than a distribution made in the course of a liquidation and dissolution of the corporation or on a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of the share by the corporation) made at that time by the corporation on all the shares of that class.

Technical Notes: New subsections 90(2) and (3), taken together, provide an all-encompassing definition of a dividend from a foreign affiliate for the purposes of the Act. By virtue of its application for all purposes of the Act, these rules also apply for all purposes of the Regulations, notably Part LIX of the Regulations which deals with the surplus accounts of a foreign affiliate.

Essentially subsection 90(2) treats all pro-rata distributions in respect of shares of a foreign affiliate as dividends, except where they are received on a liquidation of the affiliate or on a redemption of its shares. The only other way in which a dividend from a foreign affiliate will be considered to arise is if a specific provision of Part I of the Act so deems it, as per new subsection 90(3).

One of the implications of this new dividend definition for foreign affiliates is that the concept of a reduction of paid-up capital of a foreign affiliate should become irrelevant. This is why paragraph 53(2)(b) is being amended, as explained above. However, as noted in the commentary for new paragraph 5901(2)(b) of the Regulations, taxpayers will be able to elect, in most circumstances, to ignore the normal surplus ordering rules and instead have dividends paid by a foreign affiliate deemed to be paid out of pre-acquisition surplus. Since pre-acquisition surplus dividends are fully deductible from taxable income and reduce the adjusted cost base ("ACB") of a foreign affiliate's shares, this new regime will have the effect of allowing taxpayers to access the ACB of the shares of their foreign affiliates as a surrogate for the capital of their affiliates.

New subsections 90(1) to (3) apply after August 19, 2011. However, if a taxpayer elects retroactive application of the new pre-acquisition surplus election in subsection 5901(2) of the Regulations, subsections 90(1) to (3) also apply after February 27, 2004 and on or before August 19, 2011. In that case, there would, on or before August 19, 2011, be a transitional reading of paragraph 90(2)(a) whereby amounts received on a reduction of the paid-up capital of the foreign affiliate would not be deemed under subsection 90(2) to be a dividend.

Related Provisions 93.1(1) — Shares owned by partnership deemed owned by partners; 113(1) — Deductions against dividend from foreign affiliate; Reg. 5901(2)(b) — Election for dividend to come out of pre-acquisition surplus.

(3) Exclusion — No amount paid or received at any time is, for the purposes of this Act, a dividend paid or received on a share of the capital stock of a non-resident corporation that is a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer unless it is so deemed under this Part.

Technical Notes: See under 90(2).

Related Provisions: 93.1(1) — Shares owned by partnership deemed owned by partners.

(4) Loan from foreign affiliate — Except where subsection 15(2) applies, if a person or partnership that is at any time a specified debtor in respect of a taxpayer resident in Canada receives at that time a loan from, or becomes at that time indebted to, a creditor that is a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer or that is a partnership of which such an affiliate is a member, the specified amount in respect of the loan or indebtedness is to be included in computing the income of the taxpayer for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes that time.

Technical Notes: New subsections 90(4) to (10) introduce a series of rules to address upstream loans. These rules are anti-avoidance rules designed to prevent taxpayers from making synthetic dividend distributions from foreign affiliates in order to avoid what would otherwise be income inclusions under new subsection 90(1) that are not fully offset by deductions under paragraphs 113(1)(a) to (b).

New subsection 90(4) is the main operative component of the "upstream loan" rule. This rule which is modelled on subsection 15(2), provides for an inclusion of "specified amounts" in the income of a taxpayer resident in Canada where loans are made by foreign affiliates of the taxpayer to certain "specified debtors". "Specified amount" and "specified debtor" are defined in new subsection 90(10).

Given the potential for overlap between subsections 15(2) and 90(4), subsection 90(4) does not apply where subsection 15(2) already provides for an income inclusion.

Note that the reference in subsection 90(4) to a "member" of a partnership is to be applied with due regard to the "look through" rule in new subsection 93.1(3).

Related Provisions: 90(5) — Exceptions; 90(6) — Deduction where dividend could have been paid tax free; 90(9) — Deduction when loan repaid; 90(10) — Definitions of "specified amount" and "specified debtor"; 93.1(1) — Shares owned by partnership deemed owned by partners.

(5) Exceptions to subsec. (4) — Subsection (4) does not apply to

(a) a loan or indebtedness that is repaid, other than as part of a series of loans or other transactions and repayments, within two years of the day the loan was made or the indebtedness arose; or

(b) indebtedness that arose in the ordinary course of the business of the creditor or a loan made in the ordinary course of the creditor's business of lending money where, at the time the indebtedness arose or the loan was made, bona fide arrangements were made for repayment of the indebtedness or loan within a reasonable time.

Technical Notes: New subsection 90(5) provides some important exceptions to subsection 90(4). Specifically, subsection 90(4) will generally not apply to loans or indebtedness that are repaid within two years, nor to loans or indebtedness that arise in the ordinary course of the business of the creditor. These two exceptions are similar to those that apply in the context of subsection 15(2). They are found in new paragraphs 90(5)(a) and (b), respectively.

Related Provisions: 15(2.3) — Parallel rule to 90(5)(b) for shareholder loans; 15(2.6) — Similar rule to 90(5)(a) for shareholder loans.

(6) Deduction for amounts included under subsec. (4) or (7) — There may be deducted in computing the income of a taxpayer for a taxation year (referred to in this subsection as the "current year") any portion of an amount included under subsection (4) or (7) for a taxation year in respect of the specified amount in respect of a particular loan or indebtedness if

(a) the taxpayer demonstrates that the portion would, if instead the specified amount in respect of the particular loan or indebtedness were, at the time the particular loan was made or the particular indebtedness was incurred, distributed directly or indirectly to the taxpayer as one or more dividends, reasonably be considered to have given rise to a deduction under any of paragraphs 113(1)(a) to (b) for the full amount of those dividends in computing the taxpayer's taxable income for the taxation year in which the portion is included in the taxpayer's income under subsection (4);

(b) during the portion of the current year in which the particular loan or indebtedness is outstanding no dividends are paid to the taxpayer or another person resident in Canada with which the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length by any one or more of the taxpayer's foreign affiliates that are relevant to the determination made under paragraph (a); and

(c) no other loan or indebtedness made or incurred during the portion of the current year in which the particular loan or indebtedness is outstanding has relied on the same exempt, hybrid or taxable surplus balances of any foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in applying this subsection.

Technical Notes: A further exception is provided under new subsection 90(6). However, this exception works by way of an inclusion and deduction on an annual basis for the period during which the loan or indebtedness is outstanding. The deduction under subsection 90(6) applies to a portion of a specified amount in respect of a loan or indebtedness that is included in income under subsection 90(4) (or subsection 90(7), as discussed below) where three conditions are met.

The first condition is that the taxpayer must demonstrate that if the specified amount in respect of the portion of the loan or indebtedness had instead been received by the taxpayer as a dividend, the taxpayer would have been entitled to a full deduction for that dividend under any of paragraphs 113(1)(a) to (b). The use of the word "full" is meant to address situations where a hybrid surplus dividend would be received but the hybrid underlying taxes would be insufficient to enable the taxpayer to fully offset the inclusion under subsection 90(1). Where this is the case, such hypothetical dividends would not be considered in determining eligibility for the subsection 90(6) deduction. In the case of taxable surplus, because of the ability to make a so-called "disproportionate ERT" election, under paragraph (b) of the definition "underlying foreign tax applicable", it is intended that a taxable surplus amount equal to the grossed-up balance of underlying foreign tax be considered fully deductible.

The second condition is that no dividends can be paid by any relevant foreign affiliate during the time the loan or indebtedness is outstanding. Relevant foreign affiliates are intended to be those that are in the chain of foreign affiliates whose surplus could be aggregated and included in the determination of the hypothetical section 113 deductions referred to in the first condition (i.e. paragraph 90(6)(a)).

The third condition is that no other loan or indebtedness made or incurred during the same time period can rely on the same surplus balances in claiming a deduction under subsection 90(6). The second and third conditions are intended to prevent taxpayers from receiving the benefit of the deduction under subsection 90(6) more than once in respect of the same surplus balances. Essentially this deduction is intended to allow taxpayers to make loans instead of paying dividends where there is no intention to achieve a Canadian tax benefit.

It should also be noted that any attempts at getting around subsection 90(4) or fitting into one of the exceptions in subsection 90(5) or (6) that are not within the scope of the intended application of these rules, as set out in these notes, will be subject to review under the general anti-avoidance rule in section 245. In particular, it is intended that back-to-back loans, and similar financial arrangements, with arm's length parties would be considered a misuse of these new provisions and an abuse of the Act as a whole for the purposes of section 245.

Related Provisions: 90(7) — Amount deducted is added back the next year; 90(8) — No deduction under 90(6) if repayment of loan deducted under 90(9).

(7) Add-back for subsec. (6) deduction — There is to be included in computing the income of a taxpayer for a particular taxation year any amount deducted by the taxpayer under subsection (6) in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year that immediately precedes the particular year.

Technical Notes: New subsection 90(7) provides for the inclusion in the current taxation year of an amount deducted under subsection 90(6) in the immediately preceding taxation year. This inclusion can then be offset by a new deduction under subsection 90(6) if the conditions of that subsection continue to be met.

(8) No double deduction — A taxpayer may not claim a deduction for a taxation year under subsection (6) in respect of the same portion of the specified amount in respect of a loan or indebtedness for which a deduction is claimed for that year by the taxpayer under subsection (9).

Technical Notes: New subsection 90(8) is a rule to prevent a double deduction in respect of the same loan or indebtedness, or portion thereof. This subsection "turns off" the subsection 90(6) deduction in the year in which the relevant portion of a loan or indebtedness is repaid as that repayment should give rise to a deduction under subsection 90(9).

(9) Repayment of loan from foreign affiliate — There may be deducted in computing the income of a taxpayer for a particular taxation year the amount determined by the formula

$$A \times B/C$$

where

A is the specified amount, in respect of a loan or indebtedness, that is included under subsection (4) in computing the taxpayer's income for a preceding taxation year,

B is the portion of the loan or indebtedness that was repaid in the particular year, to the extent it is established, by subsequent events or otherwise, that the repayment was not part of a series of loans or other transactions and repayments, and

C is the amount, in respect of the loan or indebtedness, that is referred to in the description of A in the definition "specified amount".

Technical Notes: New subsection 90(9) is analogous to paragraph 20(1)(j) and provides for a deduction from a taxpayer's income to the extent that a loan that was subject to subsection 90(4) is repaid in a subsequent taxation year.

In this regard, see also the commentary for new subsection 20(13).

Related Provisions: 90(8) — No deduction under 90(6) if repayment of loan deducted under 90(9); 90(10) — Definition of "specified amount".

(10) Definitions — The following definitions apply in this section.

"specified amount", in respect of a loan or indebtedness referred to in subsection (4), means the amount determined by the formula

$$A \times B$$

where

A is the amount of the loan or indebtedness, and

B is, where the loan is received from, or the creditor under the indebtedness is,

(a) a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, the percentage that is or would be, if the taxpayer were a corporation resident in Canada, the taxpayer's surplus entitlement percentage in respect of the foreign affiliate at the time referred to in subsection (4), or

(b) a partnership of which a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer is a member, the percentage determined by the formula

where

C is the percentage that is or would be, if the taxpayer were a corporation resident in Canada, the taxpayer's surplus entitlement percentage in respect of the foreign affiliate at the time referred to in subsection (4),

D is the fair market value, at that time, of the foreign affiliate's direct or indirect interest in the partnership, and

E is the fair market value, at that time, of all interests in the partnership.

Related Provisions: 90(4) — Specified amount included in income; 93.1(1) — Shares owned by partnership deemed owned by partners.

"specified debtor", in respect of a taxpayer resident in Canada, at any time, means

(a) the taxpayer;

(b) a person (other than a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, within the meaning assigned by section 17) with which the taxpayer does not, at that time, deal at arm's length;

(c) a partnership of which a person or partnership referred to in paragraph (a) or (b) is, at that time, a member; and

(d) if the taxpayer is a partnership,

(i) any member of the partnership that is a corporation resident in Canada if the foreign affiliate referred to in subsection (4) is, at that time, a foreign affiliate of the corporation,

(ii) a person (other than a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, within the meaning assigned by section 17) with which a corporation referred to in subparagraph (i) does not, at that time, deal at arm's length,

(iii) a person (other than a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, within the meaning assigned by section 17) with which a corporation resident in Canada does not, at that time, deal at arm's length if a foreign affiliate of the corporation is, at that time, a member of the partnership, and

(iv) a partnership of which a person or partnership referred to in any of subparagraphs (i) to (iii) is, at that time, a member.

Related Provisions: 90(4) — Inclusion of loan from foreign affiliate in specified debtor's income.

Technical Notes: New subsection 90(10) defines the expressions "specified amount" and "specified debtor", which are used in subsection 90(4) and, in the case of "specified amount", in subsections 90(6), (8) and (9).

"Specified amount" is essentially the amount of the loan multiplied by the taxpayer's equity interest in the lending affiliate. This equity interest is measured by reference to the taxpayer's "surplus entitlement percentage" in the affiliate, as defined in subsection 95(1) by reference to subsection 5905(13) of the Regulations. See the commentary under subsection 5905(13), and related provisions, of the Regulations for details about important amendments to the "surplus entitlement percentage" definition.

"Specified debtor" includes the taxpayer, certain non-arm's length persons and certain partnerships of which the taxpayer or non-arm's length persons are members. An exception is made for controlled foreign affiliates ("CFA") of the taxpayer. However, for these purposes, it is the CFA definition in subsection 17(15) that applies. The reference to section 17, as opposed to subsection 17(15), is meant to ensure that the anti-avoidance rule in subsection 17(14) applies for these purposes.

It is also notable that the partnership "look-through" rule in subsection 93.1(1) is being expanded so that it applies for the purposes of section 90 and, thus, the definition of "specified debtor" in subsection 90(10).

New subsections 90(4) to (8) and (10) apply after August 19, 2011 and, because it is framed in the context of a taxation year of a taxpayer, new subsection 90(9) applies to taxation years that end after August 19, 2011. However, any loans or indebtedness incurred before August 19, 2011 are subject to a "re-birth" rule that deems the amounts outstanding on August 19, 2011 to be separate loans or indebtedness issued on that date. This "re-birth" rule is intended to ensure that all pre-August 19, 2011 loans or indebtedness are entitled to the same two-year repayment window to which new, post-August 19, 2011, loans and indebtedness are entitled.

Example

Assumptions

1. Canco and Cansub are corporations resident in Canada.

2. Canco owns all of the shares of Cansub and 40% of the shares of FA1.

3. FA1 owns 60% of the shares of FA2.

4. Cansub owns the remaining 60% of the shares of FA1 and 40% of the shares of FA2.

5. FA1 and FA2 are non-resident corporations and each has only one class of shares.

6. On January 15, 2012, FA2 loans $800 to Canco. The loan is repaid by Canco on November 30, 2014.

7. Immediately before the loan was made,

a. FA1 had hybrid surplus of $270, and hybrid underlying tax of $30, in respect of both Canco and Cansub, and no other surplus balances; and

b. FA2 had exempt surplus of $200 in respect of both Canco and Cansub, and no other surplus balances.

8. Neither FA1 nor FA2 is in the money lending business.

9. Canco and Cansub both have a 25% tax rate and both have a December 31st taxation year end.

Analysis

In this example, the $800 loan made by FA2 to Canco is a "tainted" loan for the purposes of subsection 90(4) as the loan is not repaid within 2 years, and Canco is a "specified debtor" (as defined in subsection 90(10)) in respect of both itself and Cansub.

Subsection 90(4) requires each of Canco and Cansub to include in their income for their 2012 taxation years their respective "specified amount" (as defined in subsection 90(10)) in respect of the $800 loan made by FA2 to Canco. The inclusion for Canco is $192 ($800 multiplied by Canco's surplus entitlement percentage ("SEP") in FA2 of 24%), and for Cansub it is $608 ($800 multiplied by Cansub's SEP in FA2 of 76%).

However, Canco and Cansub are entitled to partially offsetting deductions under subsection 90(6) in 2012 and 2013. These deductions are based on what the results would have been if FA2 had instead paid the $800 as dividends up the chain to its two ultimate shareholders, Canco and Cansub. In this case, an $800 dividend from FA2 would have moved cash of $320 to Cansub, of which $80 would have been deductible under paragraph 113(1)(a), and would have moved $480 of cash and $120 of exempt surplus to FA1. FA1 would then have paid a $480 dividend with Canco and Cansub receiving $192 and $288 of cash, respectively. Of the $192 dividend received by Canco, $48 would have been deductible under paragraph 113(1)(a). Of the $288 dividend received by Cansub, $72 would have been deductible under paragraph 113(1)(a). Because all dividends from exempt surplus are fully deductible, all such hypothetical dividends are eligible for deduction under subsection 90(6).

Canco and Cansub would also be considered to have received hybrid surplus dividends from FA1 in the amount of $108 and $162, respectively. However, because only a portion of these dividends would be deductible under paragraph 113(1)(a.1), because the 10% hybrid underlying tax rate is below the Canadian capital gains tax rate of 12.5%, these dividends would not be considered fully deductible and are thus not eligible for the subsection 90(6) deduction.

Thus, in this example, the following inclusions and deductions would arise in 2012, assuming the conditions of paragraphs 90(6)(b) and (c) are met during the period from January 15th to the end of 2012:

Canco

- $192 inclusion under subsection 90(4); and
- $48 deduction under subsection 90(6).

Cansub

- $608 inclusion under subsection 90(4); and
- $152 ($80 + $72) deduction under subsection 90(6).

Under subsection 90(7), Canco and Cansub would have to include their subsection 90(6) amounts in income in 2013, but they would be entitled to deduct equivalent amounts under subsection 90(6) in that year provided the conditions of paragraphs 90(6)(b) and (c) continue to be met during that entire year.

In the 2014 taxation year, subsection 90(7) would again require an inclusion of the subsection 90(6) amounts. However, no deduction would be claimable under subsection 90(6) in that year, by virtue of subsection 90(8), because the loan is repaid in that year and subsection 90(9) should give each of Canco and Cansub a fully offsetting deduction.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), s. 12, will amend s. 90 to read as above, applicable as follows:

(a) subsecs. 90(1)-(3) applicable after August 19, 2011; however, if a taxpayer has elected under para. 24(2)(a) of the draft legislation (see Application to Reg. 5901(1)–(2)), subsecs. 90(1)-(3) also apply after February 27, 2004 and before August 20, 2011 in respect of the taxpayer, except that, before August 20, 2011, subsec. 90(2), as proposed, is, in respect of the taxpayer, to be read as follows:

> (2) For the purposes of this Act, an amount is deemed to be a dividend paid or received, as the case may be, at any time on a share of a class of the capital stock of a non-resident corporation that is a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer if the amount is the share's portion of a pro rata distribution (other than a distribution made in the course of a liquidation and dissolution of the corporation, on a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of the share by the corporation, or on a reduction of the paid-up capital of the corporation in respect of the share) made at that time by the corporation on all the shares of that class.

(b) subsecs. 90(4)-(8) and (10) applicable after August 19, 2011, and subsec. 90(9) applicable to taxation years that end after August 19, 2011; however, if the loan or indebtedness referred to in subsec. 90(4) is received or incurred, as the case may be, before August 19, 2011, subsecs. 90(4)-(10) are to be applied as if the portion of the loan or indebtedness that was outstanding on August 19, 2011 were a separate loan or indebtedness that was received or incurred, as the case may be, on August 19, 2011 in the same manner as the actual loan or indebtedness and no other portion of that loan or indebtedness is to be considered a loan or indebtedness for the purposes of applying those subsecs. 90(4)-(10).

S. 34 of the draft legislation provides the following regarding an extended reassessment deadline:

> 34. Any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that ends before the day on which this Act is assented to that would, in the absence of this section, be precluded because of subsections 152(4) to (5) of the Act shall be made to the extent necessary to take into account sections 1 to 33 [which propose all the August 19, 2011 changes to legislation and regulations — ed.].

Technical Notes: Assessments

Clause 34 of these amendments provides for the automatic override of the normal limitation periods for assessments in subsections 152(4) to (5) of the Act as they would otherwise apply to a taxpayer for the purposes of clauses 1 to 33 of this package of amendments.

Definitions: "amount" — 248(1); "arm's length" — 251(1); "business" — 248(1); "controlled foreign affiliate" — 17(15); "corporation" — 248(1), Interpretation Act 35(1); "dividend" — 90(2), (3), 248(1); "exempt, hybrid or taxable surplus" — 113(1), Reg. 5907(1); "foreign affiliate" — 95(1), 248(1); "non-resident", "person" — 248(1); "resident in Canada" — 250; "share" — 248(1); "specified amount", "specified debtor" — 90(10); "surplus entitlement percentage" — 95(1); "taxable income" — 2(1), 248(1); "taxable surplus" — 113(1)(b)(i), Reg. 5907(1), (1.01); "taxation year" — 95(1), 249; "taxpayer" — 248(1).

Possible Future Amendments — Advisory Panel on International Taxation

Department of Finance news release 2008-102, Dec. 10, 2008: Minister of Finance Receives Report From the Advisory Panel on Canada's System of International Taxation

The Honourable Jim Flaherty, Minister of Finance, today received the report of the Advisory Panel on Canada's System of International Taxation.

"Our Government is working to create a tax advantage for Canadians and Canadian businesses," said Minister Flaherty. "In November 2007, we established an advisory panel to provide recommendations to enhance the fairness and competitiveness of Canada's international tax rules, thereby encouraging investment and strengthening the economy. I look forward to reviewing those recommendations, and I thank the Chair of the Panel, Mr. Peter Godsoe, and all of the Panel members for their dedicated work on behalf of all Canadians."

In addition to Mr. Godsoe, other members of the panel were: Mr. Kevin Dancey, who served as Vice-Chair, Mr. James Love, Mr. Nick Pantaleo, Mr. Finn Poschmann, Mr. Guy Saint-Pierre and Ms. Cathy Williams.

Copies of the report are available on the Internet at www.apcsit-gcrcfi.ca or by calling the Department of Finance Distribution Centre at 613-995-2855.

For further information, media may contact: Chisholm Pothier, Press Secretary, Office of the Minister of Finance, 613-996-7861; Jack Aubry, Media Relations, Department of Finance, 613-996-8080.

[The following is excerpted from the Executive Summary, which along with the full report is at www.apcsit-gcrcfi.ca — ed.]

Our Recommendations

The Panel has designed an integrated package of specific recommendations for improving Canada's system of international taxation in the following areas: outbound and inbound tax rules, non-resident withholding taxes, and administration, compliance and legislative process.

Two key directives emerge from applying the Panel's principles:

- The federal government should maintain the existing system for the taxation of foreign-source income of Canadian companies and extend the existing exemption system to all active business income earned outside of Canada by foreign affiliates.
- The federal government should maintain the existing system for the taxation of inbound investment and adopt targeted measures to ensure that Canadian-source income is properly measured and taxed.

These principles and the recommendations in our final report are pragmatic ones, reflecting the Panel's belief that Canada's current international tax system is a good one that requires only some improvements.

List of Recommendations

The Panel's recommendations to the Minister of Finance are listed below. Recommendation numbers correspond to the chapters in which they are discussed in the Panel's final report, Enhancing Canada's International Tax Advantage.

Taxation of outbound direct investment

Recommendation 4.1: Broaden the existing exemption system to cover all foreign active business income earned by foreign affiliates.

Recommendation 4.2: Pursue tax information exchange agreements (TIEA) on a government-to-government basis without resort to accrual taxation for foreign active business income if a TIEA is not obtained.

Recommendation 4.3: Extend the exemption system to capital gains and losses realized on the disposition of shares of a foreign affiliate where the shares derive all or substantially all of their value from active business assets.

Recommendation 4.4: Review the "foreign affiliate" definition, taking into account the Panel's other recommendations on outbound taxation. the approaches of other countries, and the impact of any changes on existing investments.

Recommendation 4.5: In light of the Panel's recommendations on outbound taxation, review and undertake consultation on how to reduce overlap and complexity in the anti-deferral regimes while ensuring all foreign passive income is taxed in Canada on a current basis.

Recommendation 4.6: Review the scope of the base erosion and investment business rules to ensure they are properly targeted and do not impede bona fide business transactions and the competitiveness of Canadian businesses.

Recommendation 4.7: Impose no additional rules to restrict the deductibility of interest expense of Canadian companies where the borrowed funds are used to invest in foreign affiliates and section 18.2 of the Income Tax Act should be repealed [this repeal was done — ed.].

Taxation of inbound direct investment

Recommendation 5.1: Retain the current thin capitalization system, and reduce the maximum debt-to-equity ratio under the current thin capitalization rules from 2:1 to 1.5:1.

Recommendation 5.2: Extend the scope of the thin capitalization rules to partnerships, trusts and Canadian branches of non-resident corporations.

Recommendation 5.3: Curtail tax-motivated debt-dumping transactions within related corporate groups involving the acquisition, directly or indirectly, by a foreign-controlled Canadian company of an equity interest in a related foreign corporation while ensuring bona fide business transactions are not affected.

Non-resident withholding taxes

Recommendation 6.1: Consider further reducing withholding taxes bilaterally in future tax treaties and protocols to the extent permitted by the government's fiscal framework and its agenda regarding additional corporate tax rate reductions.

Administration, compliance and legislative process

Recommendation 7.1: Take immediate action to enhance the dialogue among taxpayers, tax advisors and the Canada Revenue Agency to promote the mutual responsibility and cooperation required to uphold Canada's self-assessment system.

Recommendation 7.2: Take steps to improve administration of the transfer pricing rules in resolving disputes, centralizing knowledge for better consistency. and resolving technical issues.

Recommendation 7.3: Eliminate withholding tax requirements related to services performed and employment functions carried on in Canada where the non-resident certifies the income is exempt from Canadian tax because of a tax treaty.

Recommendation 7.4: Eliminate withholding tax requirements related to the disposition of taxable Canadian property where the non-resident certifies that the gain is exempt from Canadian tax because of a tax treaty [largely resolved now with 2010 amendments to 248(1)"taxable Canadian property" — ed.].

Recommendation 7.5: Exclude the sale of all publicly traded Canadian securities from notification and withholding requirements under section 116 of the Income Tax Act.

Recommendation 7.6: Develop a comprehensive, long-term plan to optimize tax information collection, and set up the information management systems needed to efficiently process and analyze this information.

[For earlier news releases when the Advisory Panel was established and finalized, see Finance news releases 2007-092 (Nov. 30/07) and 2007-097 (Dec. 11/07), in SITA 43rd-45th ed. or at www.fin.gc.ca — ed.]

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, Jan. 27, 2009: International Taxation

Canada's system of international taxation plays a critical role in attracting investment and facilitating the growth of Canadian companies. In December 2008, the Government received the final report of the Advisory Panel on Canada's System of International Taxation (the Panel). The Government is studying the report and will provide a response in due course, on which consultations will be held.

At the same time, certain issues which arose in the context of the Panel's report merit a more immediate response.

Interest Deductibility

[Section 18.2 will be repealed. This has been done — ed.]

Non-Resident Trusts and Foreign Investment Entities

[Submissions received will be considered. Revised draft legislation was issued in August 2010. See under proposed s. 94 — ed.]

2004 Foreign Affiliate Proposals

The Government will consider the Panel's recommendations relating to foreign affiliates before proceeding with the remaining foreign affiliate measures announced in February 2004 [see under 95 and Reg. Part LIX — ed.], as modified to take into account consultations and deliberations since their release.

Dept. of Finance news release 2011-070, Aug. 19, 2011: Government of Canada Releases Draft Foreign Affiliate Rules . . .

In its December 2008 report to the Minister of Finance, the Advisory Panel on Canada's System of International Taxation recommended fundamental changes to Canada's system of international taxation, particularly in respect of its exemption system for foreign source business income earned by foreign affiliates.

At this time, however, the priority of the Government is to encourage countries to enter into Tax Information Exchange Agreements with Canada and to provide exempt surplus treatment as an incentive to those which choose to do so. The measures released today are aimed at improving the current international tax system, which the Panel characterized as a "good one that has served Canada well."

91. (1) Amounts to be included in respect of share of foreign affiliate — In computing the income for a taxation year of a taxpayer resident in Canada, there shall be included, in respect of each share owned by the taxpayer of the capital stock of a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, as income from the share, the percentage of the foreign accrual property income of any controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, for each taxation year of the affiliate ending in the taxation year of the taxpayer, equal to that share's participating percentage in respect of the affiliate, determined at the end of each such taxation year of the affiliate.

Proposed Amendments — Foreign affiliates

Dept. of Finance news release 2009-120, Dec. 18, 2009: Government of Canada Releases Draft Foreign Affiliate Regulations

The Honourable Jim Flaherty, Minister of Finance. today released for consultation a package of draft Income Tax Regulations, as well as other draft legislation, relating to the taxation of Canadian multinational corporations with foreign affiliates. Among other things, the package includes the Income Tax Regulations that are consequential to the Budget 2007 foreign affiliate changes to the Income Tax Act.

"Our government is committed to enhancing the fairness and competitiveness of Canada's international tax rules," said Minister Flaherty. "The proposals I am announcing today will improve the tax system and assist Canadian businesses in complying with the tax law."

Bill C-28, the second Budget 2007 implementation bill, provided substantial tax relief for Canadian businesses, including the historic corporate income tax rate reductions announced in the 2007 Economic Statement. In addition, the bill, which received Royal Assent on December 14, 2007, implemented a number of amendments to the Income Tax Act relating to foreign affiliates.

Included in Bill C-28 were provisions allowing taxpayers to elect retroactive application of some of its foreign affiliate amendments. In response to concerns that the deadline for filing those elections was too early, the Government announced in June 2008 an 18-month extension of that deadline [see Dept. of Finance news release in Proposed Amendment within Notes to 95(2)(a) — ed.] — the new deadline for a corporation having a taxation year coinciding with the calendar year is December 31, 2009. The package being released today contains all of the proposed changes to the Income Tax Regulations that are relevant in determining whether or not to make any of the retroactive elections provided for in Bill C-28. Furthermore, all seven of these retroactive elections are being made revocable. Thus, for example, calendar year corporations will have until June 30, 2011 to decide whether or not to cancel any such election.

The attached Annex outlines all of the measures being proposed in this package. Explanatory notes providing additional details are also being released.

References to "announcement date" in the draft legislation and explanatory notes released today should be read as referring to today's date [Dec. 18, 2009 — ed.]

Minister Flaherty indicated that the Government will be accepting comments from stakeholders until February 15, 2010 and will proceed with legislation at an early opportunity to implement the proposed amendments, taking into account any comments received.

Annex

The following provides the highlights of the income tax proposals relating to foreign affiliates that were announced by the Honourable Jim Flaherty, Minister of Finance, on December 18, 2009 [Note: these were re-released with minor amendments on Aug. 27, 2010 — ed.]

- Minor amendments to the Act that are necessary to provide authority to enact certain aspects of the Regulations noted below [88(1)d(ii), 92(11), 93(3)(c), 95(1)"foreign accrual property income"F, 95(1)"permanent establishment" and others — ed.]
- Amendments to 2007 Bill C-28 to - implement the 18-month extension of the foreign affiliate election deadlines, and
  - extend the ability to revoke one of the foreign affiliate elections in Bill C-28 to the other six foreign affiliate elections in that Bill.
- Amendments to the Regulations to
  - implement consequential changes to the Regulations [Reg. 5900-5910 —ed.] that flow from the amendments to the foreign affiliate provisions of the Act contained in Bill C-28 and, to a lesser extent, Budget Implementation Act, 2009;
  - implement measures first announced in March 2001 relating to
    - foreign accrual property losses [Reg. 5903 — ed.], and
    - partnerships [Reg. 5908 — ed.];
  - implement measures first announced in December 2002 relating to
    - foreign oil and gas levies [Reg. 5910 — ed.],
    - exempt surplus reductions following certain winding up transactions [Reg. 5905(5.11)-(5.13), (5.4) — ed.], and
    - foreign tax consolidation [Reg. 5907(1.1) — ed.]; and
  - implement a rule to replace a component of the outstanding February 2004 foreign affiliate proposals relating to surplus consolidation [Reg. 5902, 5905 — ed.]

[See also Technical Notes under Proposed Amendment to Reg. 5900(3) and Reg. 5902, 5908, and "Possible Future Amendments" under s. 90 — ed.]

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010 Previously Announced Measures

Budget 2010 confirms the Government's intention to proceed with the following previously announced tax measures, as modified to take into account consultations and deliberations since their release:

- Measures released in draft form on December 18, 2009 relating to the income taxation of shareholders of foreign affiliates, as well as the remaining measures released in a previous draft relating to foreign affiliates.

Dept. of Finance news release 2010-074, Aug. 27, 2010 Government of Canada Releases Consultation Draft of Legislative Tax Proposals

The draft legislative proposals also include other previously announced measures identified in Budget 2010, as modified to take into account consultations and deliberations since their release, as well as an income tax amendment relating to the enactment of the Fairness for the Self-Employed Act.

- Measures relating to the income taxation of shareholders of foreign affiliates, previously released in draft form on December 18, 2009.

References to "Announcement Date" are to be read as references to today's date. Explanatory notes to the legislative proposals will be posted on the Department of Finance website shortly.

Interested parties are invited to provide comments on the draft legislative proposals by September 27, 2010. Please send your comments to: Tax Policy Branch, Department of Finance, 140 O'Connor Street, Ottawa, Ontario K1A 0G5.

Dept. of Finance news release 2011-070, Aug. 19, 2011 Government of Canada Releases Draft Foreign Affiliate Rules

The Honourable Jim Flaherty, Minister of Finance, today released for consultation a package of draft legislative proposals relating to the Income Tax Act and Income Tax Regulations concerning the taxation of Canadian multinational corporations with foreign affiliates.

The package includes revisions to the foreign affiliate reorganization and distribution rules originally proposed in a February 27, 2004 release. It also includes new proposals in place of the 2004 proposals which suspended certain gains from the sale of shares and other assets of foreign affiliates for the purposes of the surplus accounting rules.

Consistent with the approach adopted in a December 18, 2009 release in which other measures from the 2004 proposals were revised and simplified, the legislative proposals being released today are intended to be easier for taxpayers to comply with and for the Government to administer.

In its December 2008 report to the Minister of Finance, the Advisory Panel on Canada's System of International Taxation recommended fundamental changes to Canada's system of international taxation, particularly in respect of its exemption system for foreign source business income earned by foreign affiliates.

At this time, however, the priority of the Government is to encourage countries to enter into Tax Information Exchange Agreements with Canada and to provide exempt surplus treatment as an incentive to those which choose to do so. The measures released today are aimed at improving the current international tax system, which the Panel characterized as a "good one that has served Canada well."

The Government remains committed to continuing its review and analysis of all of the Panel's recommendations and consideration of further legislative amendments.

The attached Annex outlines the key measures proposed in today's package, while explanatory notes provide further details.

References to "Announcement Date" in the draft legislation and explanatory notes should be read as referring to today's date.

Interested parties may submit comments on the package until October 19, 2011. The Government will then proceed with legislation at an early opportunity to implement the amendments, taking into account comments received.

Comments can be sent to ConsultationFA-SEA@fin.gc.ca or to: Tax Policy Branch, Department of Finance, 140 O'Connor Street, Ottawa, Ontario K1A 0G5.

Annex

The following provides the highlights of the income tax proposals relating to foreign affiliates that were announced by the Honourable Jim Flaherty, Minister of Finance, on August 19, 2011.

- Hybrid surplus — a new surplus account to capture gains from the sale of foreign affiliate shares [113(1)a.1) and Reg. 5907(1)"hybrid surplus" — ed.].
- Upstream loans — a rule to protect the integrity of the hybrid and taxable surplus regimes by discouraging transactions designed to avoid taxation of taxable dividends through the use of loans from foreign affiliates to their Canadian shareholders [90(4)-(10) — ed.].
- Reorganizations — rules to - allow more generous foreign accrual property income (FAPI) rollover treatment of asset dispositions by a foreign affiliate in the context of mergers and liquidations by, for example, allowing all types of property, not just capital property, to qualify for rollover treatment [95(2)(c) — ed.], and
  - prevent the duplication of losses on certain share-for-share transactions [13(21.2)(e)(iii)-(iii.2), 14(12)(g)(i)-(ii.3), 18(15)(b)(iv)(A)-(B), 40(3.4)(b)(iv)(A)-(B), 40(3.5)(c)(iii) — ed.].
- Return of capital — rules to allow more generous and simplified treatment of distributions from the capital of a foreign affiliate by allowing taxpayers to elect to have the full amount of their cost of the shares be returned before any distributions become taxable [Reg. 5901(2)(b) — ed.].
- Surplus reclassification — a rule to reclassify certain gains from business asset sales from exempt to taxable surplus in situations where a taxpayer forces the disposition of such an asset for the primary purpose of creating exempt surplus [Reg. 5907(2.02) — ed.].
- Stop-loss rules — amendments to - provide relief from loss denial rules [93(2)-(2.31) — ed.] that apply on the disposition of shares of a foreign affiliate by allowing a portion of such a loss to the extent the taxpayer realizes a foreign exchange gain on a related financial instrument; and
  - ensure that certain loss denial rules do not apply in the computation of foreign affiliate surplus balances and apply properly in the context of foreign accrual property losses.
- FAPI capital losses — new rules to align the FAPI system with domestic rules by providing that capital losses can only be deducted against capital gains [95(1)"foreign accrual property income"F.1, Reg. 5903.1 — ed.], and
- Various technical matters all of which are described in the explanatory notes.

Technical Notes: Overview

Various provisions of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") and Income Tax Regulations (the "Regulations") that deal with foreign affiliates of taxpayers resident in Canada are being amended or repealed, and some new provisions are being added. Most of these provisions deal with sales and reorganizations of, and distributions from, foreign affiliates and represent revisions to those aspects of proposals previously released on February 27, 2004 (the "2004 Proposals") that have not yet been finalized. The following provisions are included in this legislative package:

1. Hybrid Surplus: This package of amendments introduces a new category of surplus called "hybrid surplus". (This term and related terms are defined in subsection 5907(1) of the Regulations.) As its name suggests, "hybrid surplus" is a hybrid of exempt and taxable surplus in that one half of any distributions from hybrid surplus is exempt [113(1)(a.1)(i) — ed.] and the other half is taxable, with allowance for a deduction reflecting grossed-up underlying taxes [113(1)(a.1)(ii) — ed.]. Hybrid surplus is the replacement for a regime, proposed as part of the 2004 Proposals, of gain suspension in respect of internal transfers of shares of foreign affiliates. Hybrid surplus will generally capture 100% of any gains from the sale of shares of a foreign affiliate by another foreign affiliate [Reg. 5907(1)"hybrid surplus"A(ii)(A), (B) — ed.]. This contrasts with the currently-enacted rules which classify one half of such gains as exempt surplus and the other half as taxable surplus. Essentially, hybrid surplus retains that principle but requires the two surplus pools to be distributed together.

2. Upstream Loans: This package introduces a new "upstream loan" rule to protect the integrity of the existing taxable surplus and the new hybrid surplus regimes. This rule is modelled on existing subsection 15(2) of the Act and is found in new subsections 90(4) to (10) of the Act. This new rule generally provides for an inclusion in the income of a taxpayer resident in Canada where loans are made by foreign affiliates of the taxpayer to certain "specified debtors" and the loans remain outstanding for more than 2 years.

3. Reorganizations: This package amends various provisions of the Act and Regulations that deal with liquidations and dissolutions of foreign affiliates as well as mergers or combinations of foreign affiliates [88(3)–(3.5), 95(2) — ed.]. These amendments are in part based on the 2004 Proposals and in part on comfort letters issued in respect of those proposals. Amendments are also being made to certain share-for-share exchange provisions involving foreign affiliates in order to prevent the transfer and duplication of losses [13(21.2), 14(12), 18(15), 40(3.4), (3.5) — ed.].

4. Return of Capital: This package also replaces proposals made in the 2004 Proposals, and subsequently refined by way of comfort letters, dealing with distributions of capital from a foreign affiliate. The new proposals make the concept of capital of a foreign affiliate irrelevant and treat most distributions in respect of the shares of a foreign affiliate as dividends. However, taxpayers will be able to elect, in most circumstances, to ignore the normal surplus ordering rules and instead have dividends paid by a foreign affiliate deemed to be paid out of pre-acquisition surplus [Reg. 5901(2)(b) — ed.]. Since pre-acquisition surplus dividends are fully deductible from taxable income and reduce the adjusted cost base ("ACB") of a foreign affiliate's shares, this new regime will have the effect of allowing taxpayers to access the ACB of the shares of their foreign affiliates as a surrogate for the capital of their foreign affiliates.

5. Surplus Reclassification: This package also contains a new anti-avoidance rule (in subsection 5907(2.02) of the Regulations) that reclassifies certain amounts from exempt to taxable surplus where the amounts arise from transactions that are avoidance transactions, within the meaning of subsection 245(3) of the Act. This new rule replaces a suspension regime in respect of certain internal transfers of property (other than foreign affiliate shares) that was proposed as part of the 2004 Proposals.

6. Stop-Loss Rules: This package contains revisions to the proposals announced as part of the 2004 Proposals that deal with the foreign affiliate "stop-loss" rules found in current subsections 93(2) to (2.3) of the Act. In addition to improving certain of the formulas in the 2004 Proposals, these amendments take a more focussed approach as to the relief granted. Amendments are also being made to various other stop-loss rules to prevent them from applying to dispositions of excluded property by a foreign affiliate and to ensure that suspended losses from non-excluded property dispositions are released at appropriate times.

7. FAPI Capital Losses: This package includes new rules to prevent capital losses of a foreign affiliate from dispositions of non-excluded property from being deducted against ordinary FAPI income [95(1)"foreign accrual property income"F.1, Reg. 5903.1 — ed.]. As is currently the case for Canadian corporations, the FAPI capital losses of a foreign affiliate will now only be deductible against the FAPI capital gains of the affiliate.

8. Safe Income: This package includes amendments to the so-called "safe income" rules in section 55 of the Act in respect of the surplus of a foreign affiliate [55(5)(d) — ed.]. These amendments ensure that appropriate amounts in respect of foreign affiliates are counted towards the safe income of a relevant Canadian corporation.

9. Surplus Entitlement Percentage: This package contains revisions to certain interpretive rules in respect of "surplus entitlement percentage", as defined in subsection 5905(13) of the Regulations, as well as related rules found in sections 5902 and 5904 of the Regulations. These amendments deal with so-called "circular" shareholdings as well as situations where a foreign affiliate group has no net surplus.

10. Absorptive Mergers: This package includes a new rule to clarify that certain U.S.-style absorptive mergers will qualify for certain foreign affiliate rollover provisions in respect of mergers. This rule is found in new subsection 95(4.2) of the Act.

11. Immigration: This package includes revisions to the 2004 Proposals that deal with foreign affiliates that immigrate to Canada. These provisions are found in subsections 5907(13) to (15) of the Regulations.

12. Insurance Businesses and Fresh Start: This package includes revisions to the 2004 Proposals that deal with the FAPI computation of policy reserves of an insurance business and the so-called "fresh start" FAPI rules [95(2)(j.1)–(k.2) — ed.].

13. Computation of Income, Gains and Losses: This package contains revisions to the rules in paragraphs 95(2)(f) to (f.15) of the Act for computing income, gains and losses of a foreign affiliate to deal with gains and losses in respect of debts owing by a foreign affiliate. As part of this initiative, amendments are also being made to subsection 39(2) of the Act.

For details of all provisions included in this legislative package, refer to the notes below under the relevant headings.

This legislative package represents the Department of Finance's final tranche of revisions to the 2004 Proposals. As such, it is notable that the following provisions that were introduced as part of the 2004 Proposals are being abandoned:

- The concept of a special foreign affiliate paid-up capital or "FPUC" (previously proposed in paragraph 88(3)(e) and refined in subsequent comfort letters);
- The suspension of gains from the disposition of excluded property (previously proposed in the paragraph (c.1) [(c.1)–(c.6) — ed.] and (f.3) [(f.3)–(f.9) — ed.] series of proposals in subsection 95(2));
- The deemed cost rules for non-resident corporations that become foreign affiliates (previously proposed in paragraphs (f.91) to (f.93) of subsection 95(2));
- The suspension of losses from the disposition of non-excluded property (previously proposed in the paragraph (h) [(h)–(h.5) — ed.] series of proposals in subsection 95(2)); and

(2) Reserve where foreign exchange restriction — Where an amount in respect of a share has been included in computing the income of a taxpayer for a taxation year by virtue of subsection (1) or (3) and the Minister is satisfied that, by reason of the operation of monetary or exchange restrictions of a country other than Canada, the inclusion of the whole amount with no deduction for a reserve in respect thereof would impose undue hardship on the taxpayer, there may be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for the year such amount as a reserve in respect of the amount so included as the Minister deems reasonable in the circumstances.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-392: Meaning of the term "share".

(3) Reserve for preceding year to be included — In computing the income of a taxpayer for a taxation year, there shall be included each amount in respect of a share that was deducted by virtue of subsection (2) in computing the taxpayer's income for the immediately preceding year.

(4) Amounts deductible in respect of foreign taxes — Where, by virtue of subsection (1), an amount in respect of a share has been included in computing the income of a taxpayer for a taxation year or for any of the 5 immediately preceding taxation years (in this subsection referred to as the "income amount"), there may be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for the year the lesser of

(a) the product obtained when

(i) the portion of the foreign accrual tax applicable to the income amount that was not deductible under this subsection in any previous year is multiplied by

(ii) the relevant tax factor, and

Proposed Amendment — 91(4)(a)(ii)

(ii) the taxpayer's relevant tax factor for the year, and

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 47, will amend subpara. 91(4)(a)(ii) to read as above, applicable to 2002 et seq.

Technical Notes (July 2010): Subsection 91(4) provides for a deduction in computing the income of a taxpayer resident in Canada. The deduction is available where the taxpayer has included an amount under subsection 91(1) in computing income in respect of a share of the capital stock of a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer. The deduction is generally determined with reference to foreign taxes payable by the affiliate and a "relevant tax factor". The "relevant tax factor" for a resident taxpayer is designed to permit a deduction for the resident taxpayer that will result in tax relief that is a proxy for a foreign tax credit in respect of foreign taxes payable by a controlled foreign affiliate of the resident taxpayer.

Subsection 91(4) is amended to explicitly link the "relevant tax factor" to the resident taxpayer and the taxation year for which the deduction under subsection 91(4) is claimed. For more detail on the definition "relevant tax factor" in subsection 95(1), see the commentary on that provision.

(b) the amount, if any, by which the income amount exceeds the total of the amounts in respect of that share deductible under this subsection in any of the 5 immediately preceding taxation years in respect of the income amount.

Related Provisions: 53(2)(b.1) — Decrease in ACB of capital interest in non-resident trust; 94(1)(d) [to be repealed] — Certain trusts deemed to be non-resident corporations; 94.2 — Non-resident trust deemed to be controlled foreign affiliate for FAPI.

Proposed Addition — 91(4.1)–(4.5)

(4.1) Denial of foreign accrual tax [artificial foreign tax credit generators] — For the purposes of the definition "foreign accrual tax" in subsection 95(1), foreign accrual tax applicable to a particular amount included in computing a taxpayer's income under subsection (1) for a taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of a particular foreign affiliate of the taxpayer shall not include any income or profits tax paid in respect of, or any amount prescribed in respect of the particular affiliate to be foreign accrual tax applicable to, the particular amount if at any time in the taxation year (referred to in this subsection as the "affiliate year") of the particular affiliate that ends in the taxation year of the taxpayer

(a) a particular person or partnership that is, at any time in the affiliate year, a pertinent person or partnership in respect of the taxpayer is considered, under the income tax laws (referred to in subsections (4.2) and (4.3) as the "relevant foreign tax law") of any country other than Canada under the laws of which any income of the particular affiliate is subject to income taxation,

(i) to own less than all of the shares of the capital stock of a corporation that is, at any time in the affiliate year, a pertinent person or partnership in respect of the taxpayer that are considered to be owned by the particular person or partnership for the purposes of the Act, or

(ii) to have a lesser direct or indirect share of the income of a partnership that is, at any time in the affiliate year, a pertinent person or partnership in respect of the taxpayer than the particular person or partnership is considered to have for the purposes of the Act; or

(b) if the taxpayer is a partnership, the direct or indirect share of the income of the partnership of any member of the partnership that is, at any time in the affiliate year, a person resident in Canada, or that is a person or partnership that is, at any time in the affiliate year, a pertinent person or partnership in respect of such a person, is, under the income tax laws (referred to in subsection (4.3) as the "relevant foreign tax law") of any country other than Canada under the laws of which any income of the partnership is subject to income taxation, less than the member's direct or indirect share of the income for the purposes of the Act.

Related Provisions: 91(4.2) — Exception — hybrid entities; 91(4.3) — Exception — partnerships; 91(4.4) — Look-through rule for tiered partnerships; 91(4.5) — "Pertinent person or partnership"; 126(4.11), Reg. 5907(1.03) — Parallel rules.

(4.2) Exception — hybrid entities — For the purposes of subparagraph (4.1)(a)(i), a pertinent person or partnership in respect of the taxpayer is not to be considered to own less than all of the shares of the capital stock of a corporation under the relevant foreign tax law that are considered to be owned for the purposes of the Act solely because the pertinent person or partnership or the corporation is not treated as a corporation under the relevant foreign tax law.

Related Provisions: 91(4.4) — Look-through rule for tiered partnerships; 91(4.5) — "Pertinent person or partnership"; Reg. 5907(1.04) — Parallel rule.

(4.3) Exceptions — partnerships — For the purposes of subparagraph (4.1)(a)(ii) and paragraph (4.1)(b), a member of a partnership is not to be considered to have a lesser direct or indirect share of the income of the partnership under the relevant foreign tax law than for the purposes of the Act solely because of one or more of the following:

(a) a difference between the relevant foreign tax law and the Act in the manner of

(i) computing the income of the partnership, or

(ii) allocating the income of the partnership because of the admission to, or withdrawal from, the partnership of any of its members;

(b) the treatment of the partnership as a corporation under the relevant foreign tax law; or

(c) the fact that the member is not treated as a corporation under the relevant foreign tax law.

Related Provisions: 91(4.4) — Look-through rule for tiered partnerships; 126(4.12), Reg. 5907(1.05) — Parallel rules.

(4.4) Tiered partnerships — For the purposes of subsections (4.1) to (4.3), if a person or partnership is (or is deemed by this subsection to be) a member of a particular partnership that is a member of another partnership, the person or partnership is deemed to be a member of the other partnership.

Related Provisions: 126(4.13) — Parallel rule.

(4.5) Pertinent person or partnership — For the purposes of this subsection and subsections (4.1) and (4.2), a "pertinent person or partnership" in respect of a taxpayer at any time means a person or a partnership that is, at that time,

(a) the taxpayer;

(b) a person (other than a partnership) that is resident in Canada and does not, at that time, deal at arm's length with the taxpayer;

(c) a foreign affiliate of

(i) the taxpayer,

(ii) a person that is at that time a pertinent person or partnership in respect of the taxpayer under this subsection because of paragraph (b), or

(iii) a partnership that is at that time a pertinent person or partnership in respect of the taxpayer under this subsection because of paragraph (d); or

(d) a partnership a member of which is at that time a pertinent person or partnership in respect of the taxpayer under this subsection.

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 3 — other amendments), s. 67, will add subsecs. 91(4.1) to (4.5), applicable to income or profits tax paid, and amounts prescribed in respect of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer to be foreign accrual tax applicable, in respect of amounts included in computing the taxpayer's income under subsec. 91(1) for taxation years of the taxpayer that end after March 4, 2010, except that, for taxation years of the taxpayer that end on or before August 27, 2010,

(a) subsecs. 91(4.1) and (4.2) are to be read as follows:

(4.1) For the purposes of the definition "foreign accrual tax" in subsection 95(1), foreign accrual tax applicable to a particular amount included in computing a taxpayer's income under subsection (1) for a taxation year in respect of a particular foreign affiliate of the taxpayer shall not include any income or profits tax paid, or any amount prescribed in respect of the particular affiliate to be foreign accrual tax applicable, in respect of the particular amount where that particular amount is earned during a period in which

(a) if the taxpayer is a partnership, the share of the income of any member of the partnership that is a person resident in Canada is, under the income tax laws (referred to in subsection (4.3) as the "relevant foreign tax law") of any country, other than Canada, under the laws of which the income of the partnership is subject to income taxation, less than its share of the income for the purposes of the Act, or

(b) in any other case, the taxpayer is considered, under the income tax laws (referred to in subsection (4.2) as the "relevant foreign tax law") of any country, other than Canada, under the laws of which the income of the particular affiliate is subject to income taxation, to own less than all of the shares of the capital stock of the particular affiliate, of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in which the particular affiliate has an equity percentage, or of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that has an equity percentage in the particular affiliate, that are considered to be owned by the taxpayer for the purposes of the Act.

(4.2) For the purposes of paragraph (4.1)(b), a taxpayer is not to be considered to own less than all of the shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer under the relevant foreign tax law that are considered to be owned by the taxpayer for the purposes of the Act solely because the taxpayer or the foreign affiliate is not treated as a corporation under the relevant foreign tax law.

(b) the opening words of subsec. 91(4.3) are to be read as follows:

(4.3) For the purposes of paragraph (4.1)(a), a member of a partnership is not to be considered to have a lesser share of the income of the partnership under the relevant foreign tax law than for the purposes of the Act solely because of one or more of the following:

(c) s. 91 is to be read without reference to subsecs. (4.4) and (4.5).

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): New subsections 91(4.1) to (4.5), together with new rules in section 126 [126(4.11)–(4.13) — ed.] and section 5907 [5907(1.02)–(1.06) — ed.] of the Regulations, are intended to address tax schemes established by taxpayers ["foreign tax credit generators" — ed.] with the intent of creating foreign tax credits and similar deductions for foreign tax the burden of which is not, in fact, borne by the taxpayer. The main thrust of all of these schemes is to exploit asymmetry as between the tax laws of Canada and those of a relevant foreign jurisdiction in the characterization of equity and debt instruments. These schemes clearly offend the policy underlying the foreign tax credit, foreign accrual tax and underlying foreign tax rules in the Act. Although the Government believes that these schemes can be successfully challenged under existing rules in the Act, including the General Anti-Avoidance Rule in section 245, the magnitude of the potential problem warrants greater assurance through specific and immediate legislative action.

New subsection 91(4.1) denies foreign accrual tax ("FAT") in respect of the foreign accrual property income ("FAPI") of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in certain circumstances. These circumstances would generally arise where an investment in either a partnership or a corporation that is characterized as an equity investment for the purposes of the Act is characterized as a debt instrument issued by that entity, or another entity, under the relevant foreign tax law.

More specifically, subparagraph 91(4.1)(a)(i) provides that this FAT denial rule will apply where the taxpayer (or certain other persons connected to the taxpayer, as set out in the new definition of "pertinent person or partnership" (or "PPOP") in subsection 91(4.5)), is considered to own less than all of the shares of the foreign affiliate, or certain other connected corporations (again, based on the new PPOP concept), under the relevant foreign tax law that are considered to be owned by the taxpayer (or PPOP) under the Act.

Subparagraph 91(4.1)(a)(ii) provides a similar rule for investments in partnerships. The reference to an "indirect" share is intended to address situations in which the taxpayer may, under foreign and Canadian tax law, be considered to have the same level of partnership interest in an upper-tier partnership, but a different level of interest in a partnership of which the upper-tier partnership is a member.

Paragraph 91(4.1)(b) is similar to subparagraph 91(4.1)(a)(ii), but it deals with situations in which the taxpayer itself is a partnership.

New subsection 91(4.2) applies for the purposes of subparagraph 91(4.1)(a)(i). It ensures that subsection 91(4.1) will not be invoked solely because an entity that is treated as a corporation under the Act but that is treated as a fiscally transparent entity under the relevant foreign tax law owns shares of a foreign corporation.

New subsection 91(4.3) applies for the purposes of subparagraph 91(4.1)(a)(ii) and paragraph 91(4.1)(b). It ensures that certain factors will not be taken into account in determining whether subsection 91(4.1) will apply to a particular situation. This exception will apply where one or more of the enumerated factors could otherwise be interpreted as invoking its application and there are no other factors that would trigger the application of the rule. The enumerated factors are, essentially,

- differences in the computation or, in certain circumstances, the allocation of partnership income as between the relevant foreign tax law and the Act,
- the treatment of the partnership as a corporation under the relevant foreign tax law, and
- the treatment of the member as a fiscally transparent entity under the relevant foreign tax law.

Subsections 91(4.2) and (4.3) taken together are intended to ensure, among other things, that so-called "hybrid entities" are not caught by the FAT denial rule where the sole reason for the application of the FAT denial rule would be that the entities are not characterized the same way under foreign and Canadian tax law.

New subsection 91(4.4) ensures that, for purposes of subsections 91(4.1) to (4.3), a taxpayer that is a member of an upper-tier partnership will also be considered to be a member of any partnership of which such upper-tier partnership is a direct or indirect member.

New subsections 91(4.1) to (4.5) generally apply to income or profits tax paid, and amounts prescribed in respect of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer to be foreign accrual tax applicable, in respect of amounts included in computing the taxpayer's income under subsection 91(1) for taxation years of the taxpayer that end after March 4, 2010. However, there are transitional rules for taxation years of the taxpayer that end on or before August 27, 2010.

Example 1:

Assumptions

1. Canco, a corporation resident in Canada, owns all the shares of FA1, a U.S. resident corporation.

2. FA1 owns all of the common and preferred shares of the capital stock of FA2, also a U.S. resident corporation.

3. FA2's common shares are worth $200 and its preferred shares are worth $100.

4. FA2 owns all the shares of FA3, also a U.S. resident corporation.

5. FA1 sells its preferred shares of FA2 to Canco for $100 cash and, at the same time, enters into an agreement to sell those shares back to FA1 at a fixed price and time in the future.

6. Under U.S. tax principles, Canco is considered to have loaned the $100 of cash to FA1 and is not considered to own the preferred shares of FA2.

Analysis

Since Canco is considered, under the relevant foreign tax law, to own less than all of the shares of FA2 that it is considered to own under Canadian tax law, subsection 91(4.1) can potentially apply. However, it will only have an effect where FA1, FA2 or FA3 has FAPI for which Canco wishes to claim a FAT deduction.

Example 2

Assumptions

1. Canco, a corporation resident in Canada, owns all the shares of FA1, a U.S. resident limited liability company that is treated as a disregarded entity under U.S. tax law.

2. FA1 owns all the shares of the capital stock of FA2, a U.S. resident corporation.

3. FA2 owns all the shares of FA3, also a U.S. resident corporation.

4. FA3 earns FAPI in respect of which it incurs U.S. tax.

Analysis

Absent subsection 91(4.2), subsection 91(4.1) could apply because under U.S. tax law Canco is not considered to own any shares of FA1, because FA1 is not considered to exist. However, provided there are no hybrid instruments in Canco's U.S. foreign affiliate group, subsection 91(4.2) should apply to prevent the application of the FAT denial rule in subsection 91(4.1).

(5.1)–(5.3) [Repealed]

History: Subsecs. 91(5.1)–(5.3) repealed without ever taking effect by 2009, c. 2, s. 23, applicable after 2011. The subsecs. would have read:

(5.1) Deduction of dividend by shareholder — Where in a taxation year a corporation resident in Canada receives a dividend on a share of the capital stock of a corporation that was at any time a foreign affiliate of the corporation and subsection (5) does not apply in respect of that dividend, there may be deducted, in respect of such portion of the dividend as is prescribed to have been paid out of the taxable surplus of the affiliate, in computing the corporation's income for the year, the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which that portion of the dividend exceeds the amount, if any, deductible in respect of the dividend under paragraph 113(1)(b), and

(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts required under subparagraph 92(1)(a)(ii) to be added in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the share before the dividend was so received by the corporation

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts required under paragraph 92(1)(b) to be deducted in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the share before the dividend was so received by the taxpayer.

(5.2) Deduction of dividend by member of partnership — Where in a taxation year a corporation is deemed under section 93.1 to have received a dividend from a foreign affiliate, there may be deducted, in respect of such portion of the dividend as is prescribed to have been paid out of the taxable surplus of the affiliate, in computing the corporation's income for the year, the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which that portion of the dividend exceeds the amount, if any, deductible in respect of the dividend under paragraph 113(1)(b), and

(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts required under subparagraph 53(1)(e)(xiv) to be added in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the partnership interest that are reasonably attributable to a share in respect of which the dividend was paid

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts required under subparagraph 53(2)(c)(xiii) to be deducted in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the partnership interest that are reasonably attributable to a share in respect of which the dividend was paid.

(5.3) Deduction of capital gain by member of partnership — Where in a taxation year a taxpayer is a member of a partnership, there may be deducted from the taxpayer's income for the taxation year an amount equal to the lesser of

(a) ½ the amount of the taxpayer's specified proportion (within the meaning of paragraph 18.2(10)(b)) of any capital gain that is attributable to a disposition by the partnership of a share of the capital stock of a corporation, and

(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts required under subparagraph 53(1)(e)(xiv) to be added in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of its interest in the partnership that are reasonably attributable to the share

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts required under subparagraph 53(2)(c)(xiii) to be deducted in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the partnership interest that are reasonably attributable to the share.

Subsecs. 91(5.1)–(5.3) added by 2007, c. 35, s. 24, applicable in respect of interest and other borrowing costs paid or payable in respect of a period or periods that begin after 2011, but repealed before taking effect, as per above.

(6) Idem — Where a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that is a taxable Canadian corporation is acquired by the taxpayer from another corporation resident in Canada with which the taxpayer is not dealing at arm's length, for the purpose of subsection (5), any amount required by section 92 to be added or deducted, as the case may be, in computing the adjusted cost base to the other corporation of the share shall be deemed to have been so required to be added or deducted, as the case may be, in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the share.

History: Subsec. 91(6) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), s. 68, applicable to 1990 et seq.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-392: Meaning of the term "share".

(7) Shares acquired from a partnership — For the purpose of subsection (5), where a taxpayer resident in Canada acquires a share of the capital stock of a corporation that is immediately after the acquisition a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer from a partnership of which the taxpayer, or a corporation resident in Canada with which the taxpayer was not dealing at arm's length at the time the share was acquired, was a member (each such person referred to in this subsection as the "member") at any time during any fiscal period of the partnership that began before the acquisition,

(a) that portion of any amount required by subsection 92(1) to be added to the adjusted cost base to the partnership of the share of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate equal to the amount included in the income of the member because of subsection 96(1) in respect of the amount that was included in the income of the partnership because of subsection (1) or (3) in respect of the foreign affiliate and added to that adjusted cost base, and

(b) that portion of any amount required by subsection 92(1) to be deducted from the adjusted cost base to the partnership of the share of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate equal to the amount by which the income of the member from the partnership under subsection 96(1) was reduced because of the amount deducted in computing the income of the partnership under subsection (2), (4) or (5) and deducted from that adjusted cost base is deemed to be an amount required by subsection 92(1) to be added or deducted, as the case may be, in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the share.

History: Subsec. 91(7) added by 2001, c. 17, s. 68, applicable to shares acquired after November 1999.

History: Subsec. 92(1) amended by 2009, c. 2, s. 24, applicable after 2011. It formerly read:

(1) In computing, at any time in a taxation year, the adjusted cost base to a taxpayer resident in Canada of any share owned by the taxpayer of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer,

(a) there shall be added any amount required to be included in respect of that share by reason of subsection 91(1) or (3) in computing the taxpayer's income for the year or any preceding taxation year (or that would have been so required to be included but for subsection 56(4.1) and sections 74.1 to 75 of this Act and section 74 of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952); and

(b) there shall be deducted in respect of that share

(i) any amount deducted by the taxpayer by reason of subsection 91(2) or (4), and

(ii) any dividend received by the taxpayer before that time to the extent of the amount deducted by the taxpayer in respect thereof by reason of subsection 91(5) in computing the taxpayer's income for the year or any preceding taxation year (or that would have been deductible by the taxpayer but for subsection 56(4.1) and sections 74.1 to 75 of this Act and section 74 of the Income Tax Act, chapter 148 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952).

I.T. Application Rules: 69 (meaning of "chapter 148 of ...").

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-392: Meaning of the term "share".

Proposed Addition — 92(1.1)

(1.1) Adjustment for prescribed amount — The prescribed amount shall be added in computing the adjusted cost base of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada to

(a) another foreign affiliate of the corporation; or

(b) a partnership of which another foreign affiliate of the corporation is a member.

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — foreign affiliates), s. 31, will add subsec. 92(1.1), applicable after December 18, 2009.

S. 53 of the draft legislation provides that any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that ends before the day on which the draft legislation is assented to and would, in the absence of this section, be precluded because of subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act shall be made to the extent necessary to take into account this amendment, if the taxpayer

(i) elects in writing in respect of all of its foreign affiliates that this section apply in respect of that provision, and

(ii) files that election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before June 30, 2011.

Former proposed 92(1.1)–(1.4) in the Feb. 27, 2004 draft legislation will not be enacted. These were part of the "consolidated surplus" regime, in parts of proposed Reg. 5902 and 5905, which has been abandoned (see Dec. 18/09 Technical Notes at beginning of Reg. 5900).

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Section 92 provides for certain adjustments to the adjusted cost base to a taxpayer of a share of a foreign affiliate. It also provides special rules relating to partnerships that hold foreign affiliate shares.

New subsection 92(1.1) provides for an increase in the adjusted cost base of certain foreign affiliate shares. Paragraph 92(1.1)(a) deals with foreign affiliate shares held by another foreign affiliate. Its adjustment is based on an amount prescribed in subsection 5905(7.6) of the Regulations. Paragraph 92(1.1)(b) deals with foreign affiliate shares held by a partnership of which another foreign affiliate is a member. Its adjustment is based on an amount prescribed in paragraph 5908(11)(a) of the Regulations. These adjusments apply to certain internal reorganization transactions to which the new "fill-the-hole" rule applies.

For more details about the new "fill-the-hole" rule, see the commentary for new subsections 5905(7.1) to (7.7) of the Regulations.

Related Provisions: 53(1)(d) — ACB additions.

Regulations: 5905(7.6), (7.7), 5908(11), (12) (prescribed amount).

Proposed Addition — 92(1.2)

(1.2) Adjustment re adjusted cost base — There is to be added in computing the adjusted cost base to a taxpayer of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer any amount required by paragraph 93(4)(b) to be so added.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), s. 13, will add subsec. 92(1.2), applicable after February 27, 2004.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: New subsection 92(1.2) is added to clarify that the addition to the adjusted cost base of a share of a foreign affiliate that is contemplated in paragraph 93(4)(b) is to apply for all purposes of the Act.

Related Provisions: 53(1)(c) — ACB additions.

Proposed Addition — 92(1.2)–(1.5) [transitional]

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — foreign affiliates), ss. 51 and 52, reads as follows:

51. Subject to section 52, if a corporation resident in Canada elects in writing in respect of all of its foreign affiliates and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the day that is the later of the corporation's filing-due date for the corporation's taxation year that includes the day on which this Act is assented to and the day that is one year after the day on which this Act is assented to, the following rules apply, namely,

(a) if there is an election (referred to in this section as a "designated section 93 election") made by the corporation under subsection 93(1) or (1.2) of the Act in respect of a disposition of shares (referred to in this section as the "designated shares") of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation that occurs after December 20, 2002 and before December 19, 2009, other than a disposition that is required to be made under an agreement in writing made by the vendor before December 21, 2002,

(i) section 92 of the Act is, in respect of the designated shares, to be read as if it also contained the following subsections:

(1.2) Where subsection (1.4) applies — Subsection (1.4) applies to a holder of a share (referred to in this subsection and subsections (1.3) and (1.4) as the "relevant share") of a foreign affiliate (referred to in subsection (1.3) as the "relevant foreign affiliate") of a particular corporation resident in Canada in computing at any time (referred to in this subsection and subsection (1.3) as the "computation time") the adjusted cost base to the holder of the relevant share, if, at the computation time, there is a specified section 93 election related to the relevant share.

Related Provisions: 92(1.3) — Whether 93(1) election is a specified section 93 election.

Note: This was 92(1.1) in the Feb. 27/04 draft legislation — ed.

(1.3) Specified section 93 election — An election made by the particular corporation resident in Canada under subsection 93(1) or (1.2), as the case may be, in respect of a share of a particular foreign affiliate of the particular corporation that is disposed of at a time (referred to in this subsection and subsection (1.4) as the "election time") before the computation time is, at the computation time, a specified section 93 election related to the relevant share if

(a) the particular foreign affiliate has, at the election time, an equity percentage in the relevant foreign affiliate;

(b) the relevant foreign affiliate was, at the election time, a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation;

(c) throughout the period that begins at the election time and ends at the computation time,

(i) the holder held the relevant share, and

(ii) the holder was

(A) a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation,

(B) a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada that was related to the particular corporation,

(C) a partnership of which a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation was a member, or

(D) a partnership of which a foreign affiliate, of a corporation resident in Canada that was related to the particular corporation, was a member;

(d) the relevant share was, at the election time, excluded property of the holder (or would have been, at the election time, excluded property of the holder if the holder had been a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation); and

(e) the relevant share is, at the computation time, excluded property of the holder (or would have been, at the computation time, excluded property of the holder if the holder had been a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation or of a corporation resident in Canada that is related to the particular corporation).

Related Provisions: Reg. 5902(6) (transitional) — Deemed amount designated.

Note: This was 92(1.2) in the Feb. 27/04 draft legislation — ed.

(1.4) Adjustments to adjusted cost base — If this subsection applies, for the purposes of computing, at any time after the election time, the exempt surplus or deficit, the taxable surplus or deficit, and the underlying foreign tax, of the holder, in respect of the particular corporation resident in Canada or in respect of any other person that would, at the time after the election time, be a designated person in respect of the particular corporation, the following rules apply in determining the adjusted cost base to the holder of the relevant share:

(a) there shall be added, to the adjusted cost base to the holder of the relevant share, the amount prescribed in respect of the relevant share in respect of the specified section 93 election, and

(b) there shall be deducted, from the adjusted cost base to the holder of the relevant share, the amount prescribed in respect of the relevant share in respect of the specified section 93 election.

Related Provisions: 92(1.2) — Conditions for 92 (1.4) to apply; 92(1.5) — Designated person.

Note: This was 92(1.3) in the Feb. 27/04 draft legislation — ed.

Regulations: 5902 (transitional version); 5905.1(1) (amount prescribed for 92(1.4)(a)); 5905.1(2) (amount prescribed for 92(1.4)(b)).

(1.5) Designated person — For the purposes of subsection (1.4), a designated person, in respect of a particular corporation, at any time means

(a) any person with whom the particular corporation was not dealing at arm's length;

(b) any person with whom the particular corporation would not have been dealing at arm's length if the person had been in existence after the particular corporation came into existence;

(c) any predecessor corporation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1) of the Act) of a person described in paragraph (a) or (b); or

(d) any predecessor corporation (within the meaning assigned by paragraph 87(2)(l.2) of the Act) of a person described in paragraph (a) or (b).

52. (1) Subsection (2) applies if

(a) a corporation has made an election under section 51;

(b) the corporation has made an election under subsection 93(1) or (1.2) of the Income Tax Act in respect of a disposition of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation that occurs after December 20, 2002 and on or before February 27, 2004 (other than a disposition required to be made under an agreement in writing made by a vendor on or before December 20, 2002), or in respect of a disposition that occurs after February 27, 2004 and that is required to be made under an agreement in writing made by a vendor after December 20, 2002 and before February 28, 2004; and

(c) the corporation elects in writing to apply subsection (2) in respect of all of its foreign affiliates and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the day that is the later of the corporation's filing-due date for the corporation's taxation year that includes the day on which this Act is assented to and the day that is one year after the day on which this Act is assented to.

(2) If this subsection applies, section 51 does not apply in respect of dispositions referred to in paragraph (1)(b) and the Regulations shall be read, in respect of the dispositions, as if section 5902 of the Regulations also contained a subsection (6.1) that read as follows:

(6.1) If an election under subsection 93(1) of the Act is made at any time by a particular corporation resident in Canada in respect of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate (in this subsection referred to as the "particular affiliate") of the particular corporation that is disposed of to the particular corporation, to another corporation resident in Canada with which the particular corporation does not deal at arm's length or to another foreign affiliate of the particular corporation, the amount of the particular affiliate's exempt surplus or exempt deficit, taxable surplus or taxable deficit, underlying foreign tax and net surplus in respect of the particular corporation at that time is to be determined under paragraph (1)(a) as if the amount of any dividend referred to in subparagraph (1)(a)(i) or (ii) were nil.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Consolidated Net Surplus Election

Clause 51 of these amendments provides a special election that allows taxpayers to apply, on a transitional basis, certain rules that were proposed in a February 2004 package of draft legislation but that were never enacted. These rules, which are referred to in these notes as the "consolidated net surplus" rules, were proposed to be found in section 92 of the Act and sections 5902, 5905 and a new section 5911 (which is renumbered herein as section 5905.1) of the Regulations. These transitional rules are generally the same as those published in the February 2004 draft, but do contain some modifications to take into account intervening changes to other provisions of the Act and Regulations as well as certain rules that have not yet been introduced. Readers are referred to the explanatory notes accompanying the February 2004 draft for additional details.

These rules, if elected, generally apply to dispositions of foreign affiliate shares that occur after December 20, 2002 and before December 19, 2009 in respect of which an election is made under subsection 93(1) or (1.2), but there are some exceptions. Furthermore, these rules are subject to a further election under section 59 of these amendments.

Modified Consolidated Net Surplus Election

Clause 52 of these amendments applies where a taxpayer has elected under clause 51 of these amendments and further elects to have this section apply. It allows taxpayers to forgo the "consolidated net surplus" rules for the period between December 20, 2002 and February 27, 2004 and instead apply a different rule, found in subsection 5902(6.1), that was originally announced in a December 20, 2002 package of draft legislation. Readers are referred to the explanatory notes accompanying the December 20, 2002 draft for additional details.

These rules, if elected, generally apply to dispositions of foreign affiliate shares that occur after December 20, 2002 and on or before February 27, 2004 in respect of which an election is made under subsection 93(1) or (1.2) of the Act.

(2) Deduction in computing adjusted cost base — In computing, at any time in a taxation year,

(a) the adjusted cost base to a corporation resident in Canada (in this subsection referred to as an "owner") of any share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation, or

(b) the adjusted cost base to a foreign affiliate (in this subsection referred to as an "owner") of a person resident in Canada of any share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of that person, there shall be deducted, in respect of any dividend received on the share before that time by the owner of the share, an amount equal to the amount, if any, by which

(c) such portion of the amount of the dividend so received as was deductible by virtue of paragraph 113(1)(d) from the income of the owner for the year in computing the owner's taxable income for the year or as would have been so deductible if the owner had been a corporation resident in Canada,

exceeds

(d) such portion of any income or profits tax paid by the owner to the government of a country other than Canada as may reasonably be regarded as having been paid in respect of the portion described in paragraph (c).

Related Provisions: 53(2)(b) — ACB deductions; 91(6) — Amounts deductible re dividends received.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-392: Meaning of the term "share".

(3) Idem — In computing, at any time in a taxation year, the adjusted cost base to a corporation resident in Canada of any share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation, there shall be deducted an amount in respect of any dividend received on the share by the corporation before that time equal to such portion of the amount so received as was deducted under subsection 113(2) from the income of the corporation for the year or any preceding year in computing its taxable income.

Related Provisions: 53(2)(b) — ACB deductions.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-392: Meaning of the term "share".

(4) Disposition of a partnership interest — Where a corporation resident in Canada or a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada has at any time disposed of all or a portion of an interest in a partnership of which it was a member, there shall be added, in computing the proceeds of disposition of that interest, the amount determined by the formula

$$(A - B) \times (C/D)$$

where

A is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that was deductible under paragraph 113(1)(d) by the member from its income in computing its taxable income for any taxation year of the member that began before that time in respect of any portion of a dividend received by the partnership, or would have been so deductible if the member were a corporation resident in Canada,

exceeds

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is the portion of any income or profits tax paid by the partnership or the member of the partnership to a government of a country other than Canada that can reasonably be considered as having been paid in respect of the member's share of the dividend described in paragraph (a);

B is the total of

(a) the total of all amounts each of which was an amount added under this subsection in computing the member's proceeds of a disposition before that time of another interest in the partnership, and

(b) the total of all amounts each of which was an amount deemed by subsection (5) to be a gain of the member from a disposition before that time of a share by the partnership;

C is the adjusted cost base, immediately before that time, of the portion of the member's interest in the partnership disposed of by the member at that time; and

D is the adjusted cost base, immediately before that time, of the member's interest in the partnership immediately before that time.

Related Provisions: 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: Subsec. 92(4) added by 2001, c. 17, s. 69, applicable to dispositions that occur after November 1999.

(5) Deemed gain from the disposition of a share — Where a partnership has, at any time in a fiscal period of the partnership at the end of which a corporation resident in Canada or a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada was a member, disposed of a share of the capital stock of a corporation, the amount determined under subsection (6) in respect of such a member is deemed to be a gain of the member from the disposition of the share by the partnership for the member's taxation year in which the fiscal period of the partnership ends.

History: Subsec. 92(5) added by 2001, c. 17, s. 69, applicable to dispositions that occur after November 1999.

(6) Formula — The amount determined for the purposes of subsection (5) is the amount determined by the formula

$$A - B$$

where

A is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that was deductible under paragraph 113(1)(d) by the member from its income in computing its taxable income for a taxation year in respect of any portion of a dividend received by the partnership on the share in a fiscal period of the partnership that began before the time referred to in subsection (5) and ends in the member's taxation year, or would have been so deductible if the member were a corporation resident in Canada,

exceeds

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is the portion of any income or profits tax paid by the partnership or the member to a government of a country other than Canada that can reasonably be considered as having been paid in respect of the member's share of the dividend described in paragraph (a); and

B is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that was added under subsection (4) in computing the member's proceeds of a disposition before the time referred to in subsection (5) of an interest in the partnership.

Related Provisions: 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: Subsec. 92(6) added by 2001, c. 17, s. 69, applicable to dispositions that occur after November 1999.

93. (1) Election re disposition of share in foreign affiliate — For the purposes of this Act, where a corporation resident in Canada so elects, in prescribed manner and within the prescribed time, in respect of any share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation disposed of by it or by another foreign affiliate of the corporation,

(a) the amount (in this subsection referred to as the "elected amount") designated by the corporation in its election not exceeding the proceeds of disposition of the share shall be deemed to have been a dividend received on the share from the affiliate by the disposing corporation or disposing affiliate, as the case may be, immediately before the disposition and not to have been proceeds of disposition; and

Proposed Amendment — 93(1) before (b)

93. Election re disposition of share of foreign affiliate — (1) For the purposes of this Act, if a corporation resident in Canada elects, in accordance with prescribed rules, in respect of any share of the capital stock of a particular foreign affiliate of the corporation that is disposed of, at any time, by the corporation (referred to in this subsection as the "disposing corporation") or by another foreign affiliate (referred to in this subsection as the "disposing affiliate") of the corporation,

(a) the amount (referred to in this subsection as the "elected amount") designated by the corporation in its election not exceeding the amount that would, in the absence of this subsection, be the gain of the disposing corporation or disposing affiliate, as the case may be, from the disposition of the share, is deemed

(i) to have been a dividend received on the share from the particular affiliate by the disposing corporation or disposing affiliate, as the case may be, immediately before that time, and

(ii) not to have been received by the disposing corporation or disposing affiliate, as the case may be, as proceeds of disposition in respect of the disposition of the share; and

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 14(1), will amend the portion of subsec. 93(1) before para. (b) to read as above, applicable in respect of elections in respect of dispositions that occur after August 19, 2011; however, the amendment does not apply in respect of the determination of the income earned or realized of a foreign affiliate of a corporation under para. 55(5)(d) unless para. 55(5)(d), as amended, applies in respect of that determination.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: Where a share of the capital stock of a particular foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada is disposed of by the corporation (referred to in this commentary as the "disposing corporation") or by another foreign affiliate (referred to in this commentary as the "disposing affiliate") of the corporation, subsection 93(1) permits the disposing corporation or the disposing affiliate, as the case may be, to elect to treat all or a portion of the proceeds of disposition of the share as a dividend.

Subsection 93(1) currently provides that the amount elected cannot exceed the proceeds of disposition of the share, as otherwise determined. The amount elected is deemed to be a dividend received on the share by the disposing corporation, or the disposing affiliate, and is deemed not to be proceeds of disposition.

Subsection 93(1) is being amended to limit the elected amount to the amount of the gain that would otherwise be realized on the disposition of the share.

This amendment applies in respect of elections made in respect of dispositions that occur after August 19, 2011. However, the current version of subsection 93(1) will continue to apply where it is being applied for the purposes of the current version of paragraph 55(5)(d) which, in some circumstances, can apply to dispositions after August 19, 2011.

(b) where subsection 40(3) applies to the disposing corporation or disposing affiliate, as the case may be, in respect of the share,

(i) the amount deemed by that subsection to be the gain of the disposing corporation or disposing affiliate, as the case may be, from the disposition of the share shall, except for the purposes of paragraph 53(1)(a), be deemed to be equal to the amount, if any, by which

(A) the amount deemed by that subsection to be the gain from the disposition of the share determined without reference to this subparagraph

exceeds

(B) the elected amount, and

(ii) for the purposes of determining the exempt surplus, exempt deficit, taxable surplus, taxable deficit and underlying foreign tax of the affiliate in respect of the corporation resident in Canada (within the meanings assigned by Part LIX of the Income Tax Regulations), the affiliate is deemed to have redeemed at the time of disposition shares of a class of its capital stock.

Proposed Amendment — 93(1)(b)

(b) where subsection 40(3) applies to the disposing corporation or disposing affiliate, as the case may be, in respect of the share, the amount deemed by that subsection to be the gain of the disposing corporation or disposing affiliate, as the case may be, from the disposition of the share is, except for the purposes of paragraph 53(1)(a), deemed to be equal to the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount deemed by that subsection to be the gain from the disposition of the share determined without reference to this paragraph

exceeds

(ii) the elected amount.

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — foreign affiliates), subsec. 32(1), will amend para. 93(1)(b) to read as above, applicable in respect of elections made in respect of dispositions that occur after December 18, 2009.

S. 53 of the draft legislation provides that any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that ends before the day on which the draft legislation is assented to and would, in the absence of this section, be precluded because of subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act shall be made to the extent necessary to take into account this amendment, if the taxpayer

(i) elects in writing in respect of all of its foreign affiliates that this section apply in respect of that provision, and

(ii) files that election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before June 30, 2011.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Paragraph 93(1)(b) applies whenever a corporation resident in Canada or a foreign affiliate of such a corporation (the corporation or affiliate being defined as the "disposing corporation") is treated as having realized a gain under subsection 40(3) on the disposition of a share of a foreign affiliate of the corporation (i.e., because of a "negative" adjusted cost base of the share).

Subparagraph 93(1)(b)(i) provides that any amount that the corporation elects to treat as a dividend in respect of the share, instead of proceeds of disposition of the share, will reduce the amount of the gain. In order to ensure that the adjusted cost base of the share of the foreign affiliate is returned to nil, this reduction will not apply for the purposes of paragraph 53(1)(a) which adds the gain under subsection 40(3) in determining the adjusted cost base of the share.

Subparagraph 93(1)(b)(ii) provides that the foreign affiliate will be considered to have redeemed shares of a class of its capital stock for the purposes of calculating its surplus accounts in respect of the corporation. This ensures that the exempt surplus, exempt deficit, taxable surplus, taxable deficit and underlying foreign tax in respect of the corporation are appropriately reduced under subsection 5905(2) of the Regulations to reflect the portion of these accounts that is utilized as a result of the deemed payment of the dividend by the foreign affiliate to the disposing corporation.

Paragraph 93(1)(b) is being restructured to remove the rule that is currently in subparagraph 93(1)(b)(ii). That rule is no longer necessary as the appropriate reductions to the surplus accounts of the foreign affiliate will now be effected under new paragraph 5902(1)(b) of the Regulations, without the need for any special deeming rule. For more detail, see the commentary for subsection 5902(1).

Related Provisions: 40(3) — Deemed gain where ACB goes negative; 93(1.1), (1.11) — Deemed election where foreign affiliate disposes of share or on election for dividend out of pre-acquisition surplus; 93(1.4) — Where no election permitted; 93(5) — Late filed elections; 93(5.2) — Amended election; 93.1(1) — Where shares are owned by partnership; 95(2)(c.1)–(c.6) — Suspended gain for FAPI on internal disposition by FA of another FA; 95(2)(f) — Determination of certain components of foreign accrual property income; Reg. 5900(2) — No election for dividend to have been paid out of taxable surplus; Reg. 5902(1)(b) — Reductions to surplus accounts of foreign affiliate; Reg. 5905(2) — Where shares of foreign affiliate are redeemed or cancelled.

History: Subpara. 93(1)(b)(ii) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 70(1), applicable to dispositions that occur after November 1999. The subpara. formerly read:

(ii) for the purposes of determining the exempt surplus, exempt deficit, taxable surplus, taxable deficit and underlying foreign tax of the affiliate in respect of the corporation resident in Canada (within the meanings assigned by the regulations for the purpose of section 95), the affiliate shall be deemed at the time of disposition to have redeemed shares of a class of its capital stock.

Subsec. 93(1) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 69(1), applicable to 1987 et seq. Subsec. 93(1) formerly read:

93. (1) Election re disposition of share in foreign affiliate — Where at any time a corporation resident in Canada has so elected, in prescribed manner and within the prescribed time, in respect of any share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation disposed of by it or by another foreign affiliate of the corporation, for the purposes of this Act, an amount equal to the lesser of

(a) the amount designated by the corporation in its election, and

(b) the proceeds of disposition of the share

shall be deemed to have been a dividend received on the share from the affiliate by the disposing corporation or disposing affiliate, as the case may be, immediately before the disposition and not to have been proceeds of disposition.

Selected Cases [subsec. 93(1)]: Terrador Investments Ltd. v. R., [1999] 3 C.T.C. 520 (FCA); leave to appeal to SCC refused (May 18, 2000), File 27499 (No bad debt possible where statute deemed amount to have been received).

Forms: T2107: Election for a disposition of shares in a foreign affiliate.

(1.1) Idem — Where at any time shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada that are excluded property are disposed of by another foreign affiliate of the corporation (other than a disposition to which paragraph 95(2)(c), (d) or (e) applies), the corporation shall be deemed to have made an election at that time under subsection (1) in respect of each such share disposed of and in the election to have designated an amount equal to such amount as is prescribed.

Proposed Amendment — 93(1.1)

(1.1) Application of subsec. (1.11) — Subsection (1.11) applies if

(a) a particular foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada disposes at any time of a share (referred to in this paragraph and subsection (1.11) as the "disposed share") of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the corporation and the particular affiliate would, in the absence of subsections (1) and (1.11), have a capital gain from the disposition of the disposed share; or

(b) a corporation resident in Canada would, in the absence of subsections (1) and (1.11), be deemed under subsection 40(3) because of an election under subparagraph 5901(2)(b)(i) of the Income Tax Regulations to have realized a gain from a disposition at any time of a share (referred to in subsection (1.11) as the "disposed share") of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 14(2), will amend subsec. 93(1.1) to read as above, applicable to dispositions of shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of a corporation that occur after August 19, 2011. However, if the corporation elects under para. 24(2)(a) of the draft legislation, the amendment applies to dispositions of shares of the capital stock of all foreign affiliates of the corporation that occur after February 27, 2004.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: Current subsection 93(1.1) provides, in certain circumstances, that the rules in subsection 93(1) will automatically apply, based on a prescribed elected amount, in respect of a disposition of a share of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada as if the corporation had made an actual election under subsection 93(1).

Current subsection 93(1.1) applies where:

- the transferor, being a foreign affiliate of a corporation, disposes of a share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the corporation,
- the disposed share was "excluded property" (as defined in subsection 95(1)) of the transferor, and
- none of paragraphs 95(2)(c), (d) and (e) applies to the disposition.

The deemed elected amount is prescribed under subsection 5902(6) of the Regulations to be the lesser of the capital gain from the disposition of the share and the share's portion of the aggregate net surplus of the disposed affiliate and all foreign affiliates underneath.

Subsection 93(1.1) is being restructured into two subsections. The operative rule is being moved to new subsection 93(1.11) while the conditions for its application are found in amended subsection 93(1.1). In addition, the deeming provision will now also apply where a taxpayer makes a pre-acquisition surplus election under subparagraph 5901(2)(b)(i) of the Regulations and that election causes a capital gain by virtue of the operation of subsection 40(3). Readers are referred to the commentary on paragraph 5901(2)(b) for more details.

Subsection 93(1.1) is also being expanded, as a result of these amendments, so that it applies to all shares of foreign affiliates that are disposed of by another foreign affiliate — in other words, it is no longer limited to certain types of excluded property.

Amended subsection 93(1.1) and new subsection 93(1.11) apply to dispositions of foreign affiliate shares that occur after August 19, 2011. However, if a taxpayer elects to have the new pre-acquisition surplus rule (in paragraph 5901(2)(b) of the Regulations) apply retroactively, these amendments will also apply retroactively, i.e. for dispositions that occur after February 27, 2004.

Related Provisions: 40(3) — Deemed gain where ACB goes negative; 95(2)(f) — Determination of certain components of foreign accrual property income; Reg. 5902(6) — Effect of election deemed by 93(1.11).

Regulations: 5902(6) (prescribed amount).

Proposed Addition — 93(1.11)

(1.11) Deemed election — If this subsection applies, the corporation resident in Canada referred to in subsection (1.1) is deemed

(a) to have made an election, at the time referred to in subsection (1.1), under subsection (1) in respect of the disposition of the disposed share; and

(b) to have designated, in the election, the prescribed amount in respect of the disposition of the disposed share.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 14(2), will add subsec. 93(1.11), applicable to dispositions of shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of a corporation that occur after August 19, 2011. However, if the corporation elects under para. 24(2)(a) of the draft legislation (see Application of proposed amendment to Reg. 5901(1)–(2)), subsec. 93(1.11) applies to dispositions of shares of the capital stock of all foreign affiliates of the corporation that occur after February 27, 2004.

Technical Notes: See under 93(1.1).

Related Provisions: 93(1.1) — Conditions for 93(1.11) to apply.

(1.2) Disposition of a share of a foreign affiliate held by a partnership — Where a particular corporation resident in Canada or a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation (each of which is referred to in this subsection as the "disposing corporation") would, but for this subsection, have a taxable capital gain from a disposition by a partnership, at any time, of shares of a class of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation and the particular corporation so elects in prescribed manner in respect of the disposition,

(a) twice

(i) the amount designated by the particular corporation (which amount shall not exceed the amount that is equal to the proportion of the taxable capital gain of the partnership that the number of shares of that class of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate, determined as the amount, if any, by which the number of those shares that were deemed to have been owned by the disposing corporation for the purposes of subsection 93.1(1) immediately before the disposition exceeds the number of those shares that were deemed to have been owned for those purposes by the disposing corporation immediately after the disposition, is of the number of those shares of the foreign affiliate that were owned by the partnership immediately before the disposition), or

(ii) where subsection (1.3) applies, the amount prescribed for the purpose of that subsection

Proposed Amendment — 93(1.2)(a)(ii)

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — foreign affiliates), subsec. 32(2), will amend subpara. 93(1.2)(a)(ii) to substitute "the prescribed amount" for "the amount prescribed for the purpose of that subsection", applicable in respect of elections made under subsec. 93(1.2) in respect of dispositions that occur after November 1999.

S. 53 of the draft legislation provides that any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that ends before the day on which the draft legislation is assented to and would, in the absence of this section, be precluded because of subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act shall be made to the extent necessary to take into account this amendment, if the taxpayer

(i) elects in writing in respect of all of its foreign affiliates that this section apply in respect of that provision, and

(ii) files that election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before June 30, 2011.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Subsection 93(1.2) provides rules for partnership dispositions of foreign affiliate shares that are similar to the rules in subsection 93(1). These rules allow for an election to reduce the taxable capital gain of the partnership in respect of such dispositions and to instead treat the grossed-up elected amount as a dividend from the foreign affiliate. Subsection 93(1.3) provides for the automatic application of subsection 93(1.2) where the partnership interest is held by another foreign affiliate. Where subsection 93(1.3) applies, the amount elected under subsection 93(1.2) is determined by reference to an amount prescribed by the Regulations.

Subparagraph 93(1,2)(a)(ii) is amended to clarify the link between that subparagraph and the relevant regulation — new paragraph 5908(8)(c) of the Regulations.

in respect of those shares is deemed to have been a dividend received immediately before that time on the number of those shares of the foreign affiliate which shall be determined as the amount, if any, by which the number of those shares that the disposing corporation was deemed to own for the purpose of subsection 93.1(1) immediately before the disposition exceeds the number of those shares of the foreign affiliate that the disposing corporation was deemed to own for the purposes of subsection 93.1 (1) immediately after the disposition;

(b) notwithstanding section 96, the disposing corporation's taxable capital gain from the disposition of those shares is deemed to be the amount, if any, by which the disposing corporation's taxable capital gain from the disposition of the shares otherwise determined exceeds the amount designated by the particular corporation in respect of the shares;

(c) for the purpose of any regulation made under this subsection, the disposing corporation is deemed to have disposed of the number of those shares of the foreign affiliate which shall be determined as the amount, if any, by which the number of those shares that the disposing corporation was deemed to own for the purposes of subsection 93.1(1) immediately before the disposition exceeds the number of those shares that the disposing corporation was deemed to own for those purposes immediately after the disposition;

(d) for the purposes of section 113 in respect of the dividend referred to in paragraph (a), the disposing corporation is deemed to have owned the shares on which that dividend was received; and

(e) where the disposing corporation has a taxable capital gain from the partnership because of the application of subsection 40(3) to the partnership in respect of those shares, for the purposes of this subsection, the shares are deemed to have been disposed of by the partnership.

Related Provisions: 40(3) — Deemed gain where ACB goes negative; 93(1.3) — Deemed election; 93(1.4) — Where no election permitted; 93.1(1) — Where shares are owned by partnership; Reg. 5900(2) — No election for dividend to have been paid out of taxable surplus; Reg. 5905(2) — Where shares of foreign affiliate are redeemed or cancelled.

History: Subsec. 93(1.2) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 70(4) to replace the reference to the expression "4/3 of" with a reference to the word "twice", applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000.

Proposed Amendment — Application of S.C. 2001, c. 17, subsec. 70(4)

Application: The July 16, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — technical), s. 162, will amend the application of the addition of subsec. 93(1.2) by S.C. 2001, c. 17, subsec. 70(4) (2000 Budget bill), deemed in force on June 14, 2001, to read as follows:

Subsec. 93(1.2) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 70(4) to replace the reference to the expression "4/3 of" with a reference to the word "twice", applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000 except that, for a taxation year of a taxpayer that includes February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000, or began after February 28, 2000 and ended before October 17, 2000, the reference to the word "twice" shall be read as a reference to the expression "the fraction that is the reciprocal of the fraction in para. 38(a), as amended by 2001, c. 17, that applies to the taxpayer for the year, multiplied by".

Technical Notes (July 2010): Section 93 contains a number of rules relating to the disposition of shares of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada.

Subsection 93(1.2) provides that, where a particular corporation resident in Canada or a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation (each of which is referred to as the "disposing corporation") would, but for this subsection, have a taxable capital gain from a partnership from the disposition by the partnership of shares of a class of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation, and the disposing corporation so elects in prescribed manner in respect of the gain, the amount designated will reduce the taxable capital gain and will be grossed up and recharacterized as a dividend received on the share by the disposing corporation.

Paragraph 93(1.2)(a) provides that twice the amount designated by the disposing corporation in respect of the shares (or where subsection 93(1.3) applies, twice the amount determined under that subsection) will be treated as a dividend received on the shares by the disposing corporation from the foreign affiliate.

Before the present amendment, subsection 93(1.2) was applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000. This amendment ensures that, for a taxation year of a taxpayer that includes either February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000 or began after February 28, 2000 and ended before October 17, 2000, the reference to the word "twice" is to read as references to the reciprocal of the capital gains inclusion rate applicable to the corporation resident in Canada or to the foreign affiliate for the taxation year. This amendment corrects a technical deficiency.

Subsec. 93(1.2) added by the said c. 17, subsec. 70(2), applicable to dispositions that occur after November 1999.

Regulations: 5902 (prescribed manner, prescribed time); 5908(8)(b) (how and when election made); 5908(8)(c) (prescribed amount for 93(1.2)(a)(ii)).

(1.3) Deemed election — Where a foreign affiliate of a particular corporation resident in Canada has a gain from the disposition by a partnership at any time of shares of a class of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation that are excluded property, the particular corporation is deemed to have made an election under subsection (1.2) in respect of the number of shares of the foreign affiliate which shall be determined as the amount, if any, by which the number of those shares that the disposing corporation was deemed to own for the purposes of subsection 93.1(1) immediately before the disposition exceeds the number of those shares that the disposing corporation was deemed to own for those purposes immediately after the disposition.

History: Subsec. 93(1.3) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 70(2), applicable to dispositions that occur after November 1999.

(2) Loss limitation on disposition of share — Where

(a) a corporation resident in Canada has a loss from the disposition by it at any time of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "affiliate share"), or

(b) a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada has a loss from the disposition by it at any time of a share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada that is not excluded property (in this subsection referred to as the "affiliate share"), the amount of the loss is deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount of the loss determined without reference to this subsection,

B is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount received before that time, in respect of an exempt dividend on the affiliate share or on a share for which the affiliate share was substituted, by

(a) the corporation resident in Canada,

(b) a corporation related to the corporation resident in Canada,

(c) a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or

(d) a foreign affiliate of a corporation related to the corporation resident in Canada,

C is the total of

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from another disposition at or before that time by a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B of the affiliate share or a share for which the affiliate share was substituted, was reduced under this subsection in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is twice the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from a previous disposition by a partnership of the affiliate share or a share for which the affiliate share was substituted, was reduced under subsection (2.1) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(c) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from a disposition at or before that time by a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B of an interest in a partnership, was reduced under subsection (2.2) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B, and

(d) the total of all amounts each of which is twice the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from a disposition at or before that time by a partnership of an interest in another partnership, was reduced under subsection (2.3) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B.

Proposed Amendment — 93(2)

(2) Application of subsec. (2.01) — Subsection (2.01) applies if

(a) a particular corporation (referred to in subparagraph (2.01)(b)(ii) as the "vendor", as the context requires) resident in Canada has a particular loss, determined without reference to this section, from the disposition by it at any time (referred to in subsection (2.01) as the "disposition time") of a share (referred to in subsection (2.01) as the "affiliate share") of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation; or

(b) a foreign affiliate (referred to in subparagraph (2.01)(b)(ii) as the "vendor") of a particular corporation resident in Canada has a particular loss, determined without reference to this section, from the disposition by it at any time (referred to in subsection (2.01) as the "disposition time") of a share (referred to in subsection (2.01) as the "affiliate share") of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the particular corporation that is not excluded property.

Related Provisions: 93(2.1), (2.2), (2.3) — Parallel rules for disposition by partnership.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 14(3), will amend subsec. 93(2) to read as above, applicable in respect of losses of a corporation resident in Canada, or of foreign affiliates of such a corporation, in respect of dispositions (referred to in paras. (a) and (c) below as "relevant dispositions" in respect of the corporation) of shares and partnership interests that occur after February 27, 2004; however,

(a) subject to para. (c) below, in respect of relevant dispositions in respect of the corporation that occur before the day that is one year after August 19, 2011, the draft legislation is to be read without reference to subsecs. 93(2.02), (2.12), (2.22) and (2.32), as enacted, and

(i) if the corporation does not elect under subparagraph (ii),

(A) para. 93(2.01)(b), as enacted, is to be read as follows:

(b) the total of the following amounts determined in respect of the particular corporation, or the foreign affiliate (that is referred to in paragraph (2)(b)), of the particular corporation, as the case may be,

(i) the amount of the gain that is included in the determination made under subsection 39(2) of the capital gain or capital loss of the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, for the taxation year that includes the time the gain was made from the disposition of currency of a country other than Canada that is in respect of

(A) the settlement or extinguishment of an obligation of the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share by the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, or

(B) the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a share of the capital stock of the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share by the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, and

(ii) the amount of any gain realized by the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, or from the disposition of a currency, which agreement or currency, as the case may be, can reasonably be considered to have been entered into or acquired, by the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the affiliate share.

(B) para. 93(2.11)(b), as enacted, is to be read as follows:

(b) ½ of the total of the following amounts determined in respect of the particular corporation, or the foreign affiliate (that is referred to in paragraph (2.1)(b)), of the particular corporation, as the case may be,

(i) the amount of the gain of the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate or the disposing partnership (to the extent that the gain is reasonably attributable to the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be) that is included in the determination made under subsection 39(2) of the capital gain or capital loss of the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate or the disposing partnership, as the case may be, for the taxation year that includes the time the gain was made from the disposition of currency of a country other than Canada that is in respect of

(A) the settlement or extinguishment of an obligation of the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate or the disposing partnership, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share by the disposing partnership, or

(B) the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a share of the capital stock of the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share by the disposing partnership, and

(ii) the amount of any gain realized by the disposing partnership (to the extent that the gain is reasonably attributable to the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be), the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, or from the disposition of a currency, which agreement or currency, as the case may be, can reasonably be considered to have been entered into or acquired, by the disposing partnership, the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the affiliate share.

(C) para. 93(2.21)(b), as enacted, is to be read as follows:

(b) the total of the following amounts determined in respect of the particular corporation, or the foreign affiliate (that is referred to in paragraph (2.2)(b)) of the particular corporation, as the case may be,

(i) the amount of the gain of the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate or the partnership (to the extent that the gain is reasonably attributable to the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be) that is included in the determination made under subsection 39(2) of the capital gain or capital loss of the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate or the partnership, as the case may be, for the taxation year that includes the time the gain was made from the disposition of currency of a country other than Canada that is in respect of

(A) the settlement or extinguishment of an obligation of the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate or the partnership, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate shares, or

(B) the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a share of the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, or of an interest in the partnership that can reasonably be considered to have been issued in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate shares, and

(ii) the amount of any gain realized by the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, or from the disposition of a currency, which agreement or currency, as the case may be, can reasonably be considered to have been entered into or acquired by the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate or the partnership, as the case may be, for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the affiliate shares.

(D) para. 93(2.31)(b), as enacted, is to be read as follows:

(b) ½ of the total of the following amounts determined in respect of the particular corporation, or the foreign affiliate (that is referred to in paragraph (2.3)(b)) of the particular corporation, as the case may be,

(i) the amount of the gain of the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate or the particular partnership (to the extent that the gain is reasonably attributable to the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be) that is included in the determination made under subsection 39(2) of the capital gain or capital loss of the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate or the particular partnership, as the case may be, for the taxation year that includes the time the gain was made from the disposition of currency of a country other than Canada that is in respect of

(A) the settlement or extinguishment of an obligation of the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate, the particular partnership or the other partnership, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate shares, or

(B) the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a share of the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, or an interest in the particular partnership or the other partnership, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate shares, and

(ii) the amount of any gain realized by a partnership (to the extent that the gain is reasonably attributable to the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be), by the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, or from the disposition of a currency, which agreement or currency, as the case may be, can reasonably be considered to have been entered into or acquired by the partnership, the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the affiliate shares

(b) if the corporation elects in writing under this subparagraph in respect of all relevant dispositions in respect of the corporation and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the day that is the later of the corporation's filing due date for the corporation's taxation year that includes the day on which this draft legislation is assented to and the day that is one year after the day on which this draft legislation is assented to,

(A) in respect of subsec. 93(2.01), as enacted,

(I) the formula in para. (a) of that subsec. 93(2.01) is, in respect of all relevant dispositions in respect of the corporation, to be read as follows

$$A - (B - C) + D$$

(II) para. 93(2.01)(a) is, in respect of all relevant dispositions in respect of the corporation, to be read as if it contained a description of D that read as follows

D is the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which the amount determined for B exceeds the amount determined for C, and

(b) the total of the following amounts determined in respect of the particular corporation, or the foreign affiliate that is referred to in paragraph 12(b)) of the particular corporation, as the case may be,

(i) the amount of the gain that is included in the determination made under subsection 39(2) of the capital gain or capital loss of the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, for the taxation year that includes the time the gain was made from the disposition of currency of a country other than Canada that is in respect of

(A) the settlement or extinguishment of an obligation of the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share by the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, or

(B) the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a share of the capital stock of the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share by the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, and

(ii) the amount of any gain realized by the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, or from the disposition of a currency, which agreement or currency, as the case may be, can reasonably be considered to have been entered into or acquired, by the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the affiliate share

(III) para. 93(2.01)(b) is, in respect of all relevant dispositions in respect of the corporation, to be read as follows

(b) nil

(B) in respect of subsec. 93(2.11), as enacted,

(I) the formula in para. 93(2.11)(a) is, in respect of all relevant dispositions in respect of the corporation, to be read as follows

$$A - (B - C) + D$$

(II) para. 93(2.11)(a) is, in respect of all relevant dispositions in respect of the corporation, to be read as if it contained a description of D that read as follows

D is the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which the amount determined for B exceeds the amount determined for C, and

(b) $\frac{1}{2}$ of the total of the following amounts determined in respect of the particular corporation, or the foreign affiliate (that is referred to in paragraph (2.1)(b)) of the particular corporation, as the case may be,

(i) the amount of the gain of the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate or the disposing partnership (to the extent that the gain is reasonably attributable to the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be) that is included in the determination made under subsection 39(2) of the capital gain or capital loss of the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate or the disposing partnership, as the case may be, for the taxation year that includes the time the gain was made from the disposition of currency of a country other than Canada that is in respect of

(A) the settlement or extinguishment of an obligation of the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate or the disposing partnership, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share by the disposing partnership, or

(B) the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a share of the capital stock of the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share by the disposing partnership, and

(ii) the amount of any gain realized by the disposing partnership (to the extent that the gain is reasonably attributable to the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be), the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, or from the disposition of a currency, which agreement or currency, as the case may be, can reasonably be considered to have been entered into or acquired, by the disposing partnership, the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the affiliate share

(III) para. 93(2.11)(b) is, in respect of all relevant dispositions in respect of the corporation, to be read as follows:

(b) nil.

(C) in respect of subsec. 93(2.21), as enacted,

(I) the formula in para. 93(2.21)(a) is, in respect of all relevant dispositions in respect of the corporation, to be read as follows:

$$A - (B - C) + D$$

(II) para. 93(2.21)(a) is, in respect of all relevant dispositions in respect of the corporation, to be read as if it contained a description of D that read as follows:

D is the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which the amount determined for B exceeds the amount determined for C, and

(b) the total of the following amounts determined in respect of the particular corporation, or the foreign affiliate (that is referred to in paragraph (2.2)(b)) of the particular corporation, as the case may be,

(i) the amount of the gain of the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate or the partnership (to the extent that the gain is reasonably attributable to the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be) that is included in the determination made under subsection 39(2) of the capital gain or capital loss of the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate or the partnership, as the case may be, for the taxation year that includes the time the gain was made from the disposition of currency of a country other than Canada that is in respect of

(A) the settlement or extinguishment of an obligation of the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate or the partnership, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate shares, or

(B) the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a share of the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, or of an interest in the partnership that can reasonably be considered to have been issued in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate shares, and

(ii) the amount of any gain realized by the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, or from the disposition of a currency, which agreement or currency, as the case may be, can reasonably be considered to have been entered into or acquired by the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate or the partnership, as the case may be, for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the affiliate shares.

(III) para. 93(2.21)(b) is, in respect of all relevant dispositions in respect of the corporation, to be read as follows:

(b) nil.

(D) in respect of subsection 93(2.31), as enacted,

(I) the formula in para. 93(2.31)(a) is, in respect of all relevant dispositions in respect of the corporation, to be read as follows:

$$A - (B - C) + D$$

(II) para. 93(2.31)(a) is, in respect of all relevant dispositions in respect of the corporation, to be read as if it contained a description of D that read as follows:

D is the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which the amount determined for B exceeds the amount determined for C, and

(b) 1/2 of the total of the following amounts determined in respect of the particular corporation, or the foreign affiliate (that is referred to in paragraph (2.3)(b)) of the particular corporation, as the case may be,

(i) the amount of the gain of the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate or the particular partnership (to the extent that the gain is reasonably attributable to the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be) that is included in the determination made under subsection 39(2) of the capital gain or capital loss of the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate or the particular partnership, as the case may be, for the taxation year that includes the time the gain was made from the disposition of currency of a country other than Canada that is in respect of

(A) the settlement or extinguishment of an obligation of the particular corporation, the foreign affiliate, the particular partnership or the other partnership, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate shares, or

(B) the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a share of the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, or an interest in the particular partnership or the other partnership, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate shares, and

(ii) the amount of any gain realized by a partnership (to the extent that the gain is reasonably attributable to the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be), by the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, or from the disposition of a currency, which agreement or currency, as the case may be, can reasonably be considered to have been entered into or acquired by the partnership, the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the affiliate shares.

(III) para. 93(2.31)(b) is, in respect of all relevant dispositions in respect of the corporation, to be read as follows:

(b) nil.

(b) if the corporation elects in writing under this paragraph in respect of all losses of the corporation, and of all foreign affiliates of the corporation, in respect of dispositions (referred to in this paragraph as "pertinent dispositions" in respect of the corporation) of shares and partnership interests that occur on or before February 27, 2004 and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the day that is the later of the corporation's filing-due date for the corporation's taxation year that includes the day on which this draft legislation is assented to and the day that is one year after the day on which this draft legislation is assented to,

(i) subsecs. 93(2) and (2.01), and (where para. (c) below applies) 93(2.02), as enacted, with the modifications described in para. (a) above (if applicable) being taken into account, also apply in respect of all pertinent dispositions in respect of the corporation that occur after 1994 and on or before February 27, 2004, except that the references to "twice" in subsec. 93(2.01), are, for taxation years of the corporation that

(A) end before February 28, 2000, to be read as references to "4/3 of", and

(B) include February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000 or that begin after February 28, 2000 and end before October 17, 2000, to be read as references to "the fraction that is the reciprocal of the fraction in paragraph 38(a), as amended by S.C. 2001, c. 17, that applies to the taxpayer for the year, multiplied by", and

(ii) subsecs. 93(2.1), (2.11), (2.2), (2.21), (2.3) and (2.31) and (where para. (c) below applies) 93(2.12), (2.22) and (2.32), as enacted, with the modifications described in para. (a) above (if applicable) being taken into account, also apply in respect of all pertinent dispositions in respect of the corporation that occur after November 1999 and on or before February 27, 2004, except that the references to "twice" in those subsecs. 93(2.11), (2.21) and (2.31), are, for taxation years of the corporation that

(A) end before February 28, 2000, to be read as references to "4/3 of", and

(B) include February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000 or that begin after February 28, 2000 and end before October 17, 2000, to be read as references to "the fraction that is the reciprocal of the fraction in paragraph 38(a), as amended by S.C. 2001, c. 17, that applies to the taxpayer for the year, multiplied by"; and

(c) if the corporation elects in writing under this paragraph in respect of all relevant dispositions in respect of the corporation that occur before the day that is one year after August 19, 2011 and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the day that is the later of the corporation's filing-due date for the corporation's taxation year that includes the day on which this draft legislation is assented to and the day that is one year after the day on which the draft legislation is assented to, para. (a) does not apply in respect of all those relevant dispositions.

Technical Notes: Current subsection 93(2) provides rules that limit (or "stop") the loss of a corporation resident in Canada from the disposition of a share of a foreign affiliate where exempt dividends (as defined in subsection 93(3)) are paid in respect of that share. It similarly deals with losses of a foreign affiliate from a disposition of a share of another foreign affiliate, where that share is not excluded property.

Current subsections 93(2.1) to (2.3) provide rules similar to those in subsection 93(2) to deal with dispositions by partnerships of foreign affiliate shares and dispositions of certain partnership interests where the disposed partnership holds foreign affiliate shares. The discussion below in the context of subsection 93(2) should apply equally to subsections 93(2.1) to (2.3) and thus only limited further comments are made herein in respect of those subsections.

Subsection 93(2) is being split into two subsections: new subsection 93(2) defines the losses to which the loss limitation rule applies and new subsection 93(2.01) sets out the loss limitation rule. A new subsection 93(2.02) is also being added which defines the term "specified gain" for the purposes of subparagraph 93(2.01)(b)(ii). (Each of subsections 93(2.1). (2.2) and (2.3) is similarly being split into two subsections and given a separate subsection which defines "specified gain".)

The main substantive amendment to this series of rules is the addition of a new aspect of these rules that is aimed at preserving, in certain circumstances, the portion of a loss that relates to foreign currency fluctuations, without regard to the quantum of exempt dividends paid in respect of the shares. That portion is preserved to the extent of a corresponding foreign currency gain from certain transactions ("hedging transactions") that arise in connection with the acquisition of the shares. However, as a result of the "specified gain" concept, a corresponding gain will not be taken into account where the taxpayer or a non-arm's length person has also hedged the hedging transaction. In other words, if the gain from the hedging transaction is already covered off by a loss (whether actual or unrealized) from a related hedging transaction, a loss from the foreign affiliate share disposition will not be entitled to further foreign currency protection under new subsection 93(2.01).

As a result of the restructuring of subsections 93(2) to (2.3), a number of consequential reference changes are also being made within new subsections 93(2) to (2.32) as well as in subparagraph 87(2)(u)(ii), as discussed above, and subsections 93(3) and (4), as discussed below.

New subsections 93(2) to (2.32) generally apply to dispositions of shares and partnership interests that occur after February 27, 2004. However, taxpayers can elect to have these rules apply as of 1995, and there are a number of transitional rules. The complexity of the transitional rules is primarily due to three things. First, current subsections 93(2.1) to (2.3) only came into force in 1999 and thus certain coordinating readings are necessary for taxpayers that make the retroactive election. Second, for taxpayers that make the retroactive election, different capital gains inclusion rates apply for certain periods. Third, taxpayers are being given options to apply certain aspects of a previous draft version of these amendments up to the day that is one year after August 19, 2011.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Feb. 12, 2001:

Angelo Nikolakakis, Stikeman Elliott, Toronto

Dear Mr. Nikolakakis:. . .

Relationship between 93(2) and 39(2)

Finally you have submitted that subsection 93(2) should not apply to deny a loss on the disposition of the shares of a foreign affiliate where the loss results from the fluctuation in the value of a foreign currency, particularly where subsection 39(2) also applies to require the recognition of a corresponding gain.

Although we will wish to give further consideration to the issue of how best to identify both gains and losses related to such shares, we are prepared to recommend that an amendment be made to subsection 93(2) of the Act to address your concerns.

Effective Date

It will be recommended that the amendments be made effective for taxation years commencing after announcement date. It will also be recommended that taxpayer be permitted to elect to have the amendments apply to the 1994 and subsequent taxation years of foreign affiliates where the taxpayer so elects in respect of all the taxpayer's foreign affiliates ...

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Related Provisions: 40(3) — Deemed gain where amounts to be deducted from ACB exceed cost plus amounts to be added; 40(3.3), (3.4) — Limitation on loss where share acquired by affiliated person; 87(2)(u)(ii) — Amalgamation; 93(3) — Exempt dividends; 93(4) — Loss on disposition of shares of foreign affiliate; 93.1(1) — Where shares are owned by partnership; 93.1(2) — Dividend on shares of foreign affiliate held by partnership; 257 — Formula amounts cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: Subsec. 93(2) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 70(5) to replace the references to the expression "4/3 of" with references to the word "twice", applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000 except that, for a taxation year of a taxpayer that includes February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000, or began after February 28, 2000 and ended before October 17, 2000, the references to the word "twice" shall be read as references to the expression "the fraction that is the reciprocal of the fraction in para. 38(a), as amended by 2001, c. 17, that applies to the taxpayer for the year, multiplied by".

Subsec. 93(2) amended by the said c. 17, subsec. 70(3), applicable to dispositions that occur after November 1999. The subsec. formerly read:

(2) Loss limitation on disposition of share — Where

(a) a corporation resident in Canada has disposed of a share of the capital stock of any foreign affiliate of the corporation, or

(b) a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada has disposed of a share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the corporation, the amount of the loss of the disposing corporation from the disposition of the share shall be deemed to be the amount, if any, by which

(c) the amount that would be the loss of the disposing corporation therefrom if this Act were read without reference to this subsection

exceeds

(d) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts received before the disposition of the share in respect of exempt dividends on the share or a share for which the share was substituted by

(A) the disposing corporation,

(B) a corporation related to the disposing corporation,

(C) a foreign affiliate of the disposing corporation, or

(D) a foreign affiliate of a corporation related to the disposing corporation

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which a loss from a previous disposition of the share or a share for which the share was substituted by a corporation referred to in any of clauses (i)(A) to (D) has been reduced because of this subsection.

That portion of subsec. 93(2) following para. (b) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 69(2), applicable to the determination of losses arising in 1985 et seq., except that, in its application to such losses from dispositions occurring before July 13, 1990, para. (d) shall be read as follows:

(d) the total of all amounts in respect of exempt dividends received by the disposing corporation on the share at any time before the disposition.

That portion of subsec. 93(2) formerly read:

the amount of any capital loss of the disposing corporation from the disposition of the share shall be deemed to be the amount, if any, by which the amount of the capital loss therefrom otherwise determined exceeds the total of all amounts in respect of exempt dividends received by the disposing corporation on the share at any time before the disposition.

Proposed Addition — 93(2.01), (2.02)

(2.01) Loss limitation on disposition of share of foreign affiliate — If this subsection applies, the amount of the particular loss referred to in paragraph (2)(a) or (b) is deemed to be the greater of

(a) the amount determined by the formula

$$A - (B - C)$$

where

A is the amount of the particular loss determined without reference to this section,

B is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount received before the disposition time, in respect of an exempt dividend on the affiliate share or on a share for which the affiliate share was substituted, by

(i) the particular corporation referred to in subsection (2),

(ii) another corporation that is related to the particular corporation,

(iii) a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation, or

(iv) a foreign affiliate of another corporation that is related to the particular corporation, and

C is the total of

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from a previous disposition by a corporation, or a foreign affiliate described in the description of B, of the affiliate share or a share for which the affiliate share was substituted, was reduced under this paragraph in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is twice the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or a foreign affiliate described in the description of B, from a previous disposition by a partnership of the affiliate share or a share for which the affiliate share was substituted, was reduced under paragraph (2.11)(a) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(iii) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from a previous disposition by a corporation, or a foreign affiliate described in the description of B, of an interest in a partnership, was reduced under paragraph (2.21)(a) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B, and

(iv) the total of all amounts each of which is twice the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation, or a foreign affiliate described in the description of B, from a previous disposition by a partnership of an interest in another partnership, was reduced under paragraph (2.31)(a) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B; and

(b) the lesser of

(i) the portion of the particular loss, determined without reference to this section, that can reasonably be considered to be attributable to a fluctuation in the value of a currency other than Canadian currency relative to Canadian currency, and

(ii) the amount determined in respect of the vendor that is

(A) where the particular loss is a capital loss, the amount of a gain (other than a specified gain) that

(I) was made within 30 days before or after the disposition time by the vendor and that

1. is deemed under subsection 39(2) to be a capital gain of the vendor for the taxation year that includes the time the gain was made from the disposition of currency other than Canadian currency, and

2. is in respect of the settlement or extinguishment of a foreign currency debt that was issued or incurred by the vendor within 30 days before or after the acquisition of the affiliate share by the vendor and that was, at all times at which it was a debt obligation of the vendor owing to a person or partnership that dealt, at all times during which the foreign currency debt was outstanding, at arm's length with the particular corporation and can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share, or

(II) is a capital gain realized within 30 days before or after the disposition time by the vendor under an agreement that

1. was entered into by the vendor within 30 days before or after the acquisition of the affiliate share by the vendor with a person or partnership that dealt, at all times during which the agreement was in force, at arm's length with the particular corporation,

2. provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, and

3. can reasonably be considered to have been entered into by the vendor for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the affiliate share, or

(B) in any other case, the amount of a gain (other than a specified gain or a capital gain) that was realized within 30 days before or after the disposition time by the vendor that is included in computing the income of the vendor for the taxation year that includes the time the gain was realized and

(I) that is in respect of the settlement or extinguishment of a foreign currency debt that

1. was issued or incurred by the vendor within 30 days before or after the acquisition of the affiliate share by the vendor,

2. was, at all times at which it was a debt obligation of the vendor owing to a person or partnership that dealt, at all times during which the foreign currency debt was outstanding, at arm's length with the particular corporation, and

3. can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share, or

(II) under an agreement that

1. was entered into by the vendor within 30 days before or after the acquisition of the affiliate share by the vendor with a person or partnership that dealt, at all times during which the agreement was in force, at arm's length with the particular corporation,

2. provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, and

3. can reasonably be considered to have been entered into by the vendor for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the affiliate share.

Related Provisions: 40(3) — Deemed gain where ACB goes negative; 40(3.3), (3.4) — Limitation on loss where share acquired by affiliated person; 87(2)(u)(ii) — Amalgamation; 93(2) — Conditions for 93(2.01) to apply; 93(2.02) — Meaning of "specified gain"; 93(2.11), (2.21), (2.31) — Parallel rules for disposition by partnership; 93(3) — Exempt dividends; 93(4) — Loss on disposition of shares of foreign affiliate; 93.1(1) — Where shares are owned by partnership; 93.1(2) — Dividend on shares of foreign affiliate held by partnership; 261(5)(f)(i) — Functional currency reporting — meaning of "Canadian currency"; 257 — Formula amounts cannot calculate to less than zero.

(2.02) Specified gain — For the purposes of clauses (2.01)(b)(ii)(A) and (B), a "specified gain" means a gain in respect of the settlement or extinguishment of a foreign currency debt referred to in sub-subclause (2.01)(b)(ii)(A)(I)2 or subclause (2.01)(b)(ii)(B)(I), as the case may be, or that arises under a particular agreement referred to in subclause (2.01)(b)(ii)(A)(II) or (B)(II), if the particular corporation or any person or partnership with which the particular corporation was not — at any time during which the foreign currency debt was outstanding or the particular agreement was in force, as the case may be — dealing at arm's length entered into an agreement that may reasonably be considered to have been entered into for the principal purpose of hedging any foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the foreign currency debt or the particular agreement.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 14(3), will add subsecs. 93(2.01) and (2.02), applicable as shown in the Proposed Amendment to subsec. 93(2) above.

Technical Notes: See under 93(2).

(2.1) Loss limitation — disposition of share by partnership — Where

(a) a corporation resident in Canada has an allowable capital loss from a disposition at any time by a partnership of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "affiliate share"), or

(b) a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada has an allowable capital loss from a disposition at any time by a partnership of a share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada that would not be excluded property of the affiliate if the affiliate owned the share immediately before it was disposed of (in this subsection referred to as the "affiliate share"), the amount of the allowable capital loss is deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount of the allowable capital loss determined without reference to this subsection,

B is ½ of the total of all amounts each of which was received before that time, in respect of an exempt dividend on the affiliate share or on a share for which the affiliate share was substituted, by

(a) the corporation resident in Canada,

(b) a corporation related to the corporation resident in Canada,

(c) a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or

(d) a foreign affiliate of a corporation related to the corporation resident in Canada, and

C is the total of

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from a disposition at or before that time by a partnership of the affiliate share or a share for which the affiliate share was substituted, was reduced under this subsection in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is ½ of the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from another disposition at or before that time of the affiliate share or a share for which the affiliate share was substituted, was reduced under subsection (2) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(c) the total of all amounts each of which is ½ of the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from a disposition at or before that time by a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B of an interest in a partnership, was reduced under subsection (2.2) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B, and

(d) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from a disposition at or before that time by a partnership of an interest in another partnership, was reduced under subsection (2.3) in respect of exempt dividends referred to in the description of B.

Proposed Amendment — 93(2.1)

(2.1) Application of subsec. (2.11) — Subsection (2.11) applies if

(a) a particular corporation resident in Canada has a particular allowable capital loss, determined without reference to this section, from the disposition at any time (referred to in subsection (2.11) as the "disposition time") by a partnership (referred to in subsections (2.11) and (2.12) as the "disposing partnership") of a share (referred to in subsection (2.11) as the "affiliate share") of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation; or

(b) a foreign affiliate of a particular corporation resident in Canada has a particular allowable capital loss, determined without reference to this section, from the disposition at any time (referred to in subsection (2.11) as the "disposition time") by a partnership (referred to in subsections (2.11) and (2.12) as the "disposing partnership") of a share (referred to in subsection (2.11) as the "affiliate share") of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the particular corporation that would not be excluded property of the affiliate if the affiliate had owned the share immediately before the disposition time.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 14(3), will amend subsec. 93(2.1) to read as above, applicable as shown in the Proposed Amendment to subsec. 93(2) above.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: See under 93(2).

Related Provisions: 93(2.2), (2.3) — Parallel rules for disposition by partnership with FA shares.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(u)(ii) — Amalgamation; 93(3) — Exempt dividends; 93.1(2) — Dividend on shares of foreign affiliate held by partnership; 257 — Formula amounts cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: Subsec. 93(2.1) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 70(6) to replace the references to the fraction "3/4" with references to the fraction "1/2", applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000 except that, for a taxation year of a taxpayer that includes February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000, or began after February 28, 2000 and ended before October 17, 2000, the references to the fraction "1/2" shall be read as references to the fraction in para. 38(a), as amended by 2001, c. 17, that applies to the taxpayer for the year.

Subsec. 93(2.1) added by the said c. 17, subsec. 70(3), applicable to dispositions that occur after November 1999.

Proposed Addition — 93(2.11), (2.12)

(2.11) Loss limitation on disposition of foreign affiliate share by a partnership — If this subsection applies, the amount of the particular allowable capital loss referred to in paragraph (2.1)(a) or (b) is deemed to be the greater of

(a) the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount of the particular allowable capital loss determined without reference to this section,

B is ½ of the total of all amounts each of which is an amount received before the disposition time, in respect of an exempt dividend on the affiliate share or on a share for which the affiliate share was substituted, by

(i) the particular corporation referred to in subsection (2.1),

(ii) another corporation that is related to the particular corporation,

(iii) a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation, or

(iv) a foreign affiliate of another corporation that is related to the particular corporation, and

C is the total of

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is ½ of the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from a previous disposition by a corporation, or a foreign affiliate described in the description of B, of the affiliate share or a share for which the affiliate share was substituted, was reduced under paragraph (2.01)(a) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or a foreign affiliate described in the description of B, from a previous disposition by a partnership of the affiliate share or a share for which the affiliate share was substituted, was reduced under this paragraph in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(iii) the total of all amounts each of which is ½ of the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from a previous disposition by a corporation, or a foreign affiliate described in the description of B, of an interest in a partnership, was reduced under paragraph (2.21)(a) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B, and

(iv) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation, or a foreign affiliate described in the description of B, from a previous disposition by a partnership of an interest in another partnership, was reduced under paragraph (2.31)(a) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B; and

(b) the lesser of

(i) the portion of the particular allowable capital loss, determined without reference to this section, that can reasonably be considered to be attributable to a fluctuation in the value of a currency other than Canadian currency relative to Canadian currency, and

(ii) ½ of the amount determined in respect of the particular corporation, or the foreign affiliate (that is referred to in paragraph (2.1)(b)) of the particular corporation, that is the amount of a gain (other than a specified gain) that

(A) was made within 30 days before or after the disposition time by the disposing partnership to the extent that the gain is reasonably attributable to the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, and that

(I) is deemed under subsection 39(2) to be a capital gain of the disposing partnership for the taxation year that includes the time the gain was made from the disposition of currency other than Canadian currency, and

(II) is in respect of the settlement or extinguishment of a foreign currency debt that

1. was issued or incurred by the disposing partnership within 30 days before or after the acquisition of the affiliate share by the disposing partnership,

2. was, at all times at which it was a debt obligation of the disposing partnership, owing to a person or partnership that dealt, at all times during which the foreign currency debt was outstanding, at arm's length with the particular corporation, and

3. can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share, or

(B) is a capital gain (to the extent that the capital gain is reasonably attributable to the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be) realized within 30 days before or after the disposition time by the disposing partnership under an agreement that

(I) was entered into by the disposing partnership, within 30 days before or after the acquisition of the affiliate share by the disposing partnership, with a person or partnership that dealt, at all times during which the agreement was in force, at arm's length with the particular corporation,

(II) provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, and

(III) can reasonably be considered to have been entered into by the disposing partnership for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the affiliate share.

(2.2) Loss limitation — disposition of partnership interest — Where

(a) a corporation resident in Canada has a loss from the disposition by it at any time of an interest in a partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "partnership interest"), which has a direct or indirect interest in shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada (in this subsection referred to as "affiliate shares"), or

(b) a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada has a loss from the disposition by it at any time of an interest in a partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "partnership interest"), which has a direct or indirect interest in shares of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada that would not be excluded property if the shares were owned by the affiliate (in this subsection referred to as "affiliate shares"), the amount of the loss is deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

$$A - (B - C)$$

where

A is the amount of the loss determined without reference to this subsection,

B is the total of all amounts each of which was received before that time, in respect of an exempt dividend on affiliate shares or on shares for which affiliate shares were substituted, by

(a) the corporation resident in Canada,

(b) a corporation related to the corporation resident in Canada,

(c) a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or

(d) a foreign affiliate of a corporation related to the corporation resident in Canada, and

C is the total of

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from another disposition at or before that time by a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B of affiliate shares or shares for which affiliate shares were substituted, was reduced under subsection (2) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is twice the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from another disposition at or before that time by a partnership of affiliate shares or shares for which affiliate shares were substituted, was reduced under subsection (2.1) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(c) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from a disposition at or before that time by a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B of an interest in a partnership, was reduced under this subsection in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B, and

(d) the total of all amounts each of which is twice the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from a disposition at or before that time by a partnership of an interest in another partnership, was reduced under subsection (2.3) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B.

(2.2) Application of subsec. (2.21) — Subsection (2.21) applies if

(a) a particular corporation (referred to in subparagraph (2.21)(b)(ii) as the "vendor", as the context requires) resident in Canada has a particular loss, determined without reference to this section, from the disposition by it at any time (referred to in subsection (2.21) as the "disposition time") of an interest (referred to in subsection (2.21) as the "partnership interest") in a partnership that has a direct or indirect interest in shares (referred to in subsection (2.21) as the "affiliate shares") of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation; or

(b) a foreign affiliate (referred to in subparagraph (2.21)(b)(ii) as the "vendor") of a particular corporation resident in Canada has a particular loss, determined without reference to this section, from the disposition by it at any time (referred to in subsection (2.21) as the "disposition time") of an interest (referred to in subsection (2.21) as the "partnership interest") in a partnership that has a direct or indirect interest in shares (referred to in subsection (2.21) as the "affiliate shares") of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the particular corporation that would not be excluded property of the affiliate if the affiliate had owned the shares immediately before the disposition time.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 14(3), will amend subsec. 93(2.2) to read as above, applicable as shown in the Proposed Amendment to subsec. 93(2) above.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: See under 93(2).

Related Provisions: 87(2)(u)(ii) — Amalgamation; 93(3) — Exempt dividends; 93.1(1) — Where shares are owned by partnership; 93.1(2) — Dividend on shares of foreign affiliate held by partnership; 257 — Formula amounts cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: Subsec. 93(2.2) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 70(7) to replace the references to the expression "4/3 of" with references to the word "twice", applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000 except that, for a taxation year of a taxpayer that includes February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000, or began after February 28, 2000 and ended before October 17, 2000, the references to the word "twice" shall be read as references to the expression "the fraction that is the reciprocal of the fraction in para. 38(a), as amended by 2001, c. 17, that applies to the taxpayer for the year, multiplied by".

Subsec. 93(2.2) added by the said c. 17, subsec. 70(3), applicable to dispositions that occur after November 1999.

Proposed Addition — 93(2.21), (2.22)

(2.21) Loss limitation on disposition of partnership that has foreign affiliate shares — If this subsection applies, the amount of the particular loss referred to in paragraph (2.2)(a) or (b) is deemed to be the greater of

(a) the amount determined by the formula

$$A - (B - C)$$

where

A is the amount of the particular loss determined without reference to this section,

B is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount received before the disposition time, in respect of an exempt dividend on affiliate shares or on shares for which affiliate shares were substituted, by

(i) the particular corporation referred to in subsection (2.2),

(ii) another corporation that is related to the particular corporation,

(iii) a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation, or

(iv) a foreign affiliate of another corporation that is related to the particular corporation, and

C is the total of

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from a previous disposition by a corporation, or a foreign affiliate described in the description of B, of the affiliate shares or shares for which the affiliate shares were substituted, was reduced under paragraph (2.01)(a) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is twice the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or a foreign affiliate described in the description of B, from a previous disposition by a partnership of the affiliate shares or shares for which the affiliate shares were substituted, was reduced under paragraph (2.11)(a) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(iii) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from a previous disposition by a corporation, or a foreign affiliate described in the description of B, of an interest in a partnership, was reduced under this paragraph in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B, and

(iv) the total of all amounts each of which is twice the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined

without reference to this section), of a corporation, or a foreign affiliate described in the description of B, from a previous disposition by a partnership of an interest in another partnership, was reduced under paragraph (2.31)(a) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B; and

(b) the lesser of

(i) the portion of the particular loss, determined without reference to this section, that can reasonably be considered to be attributable to a fluctuation in the value of a currency other than Canadian currency relative to Canadian currency, and

(ii) the amount determined in respect of the vendor that is

(A) where the particular loss is a capital loss, the amount of a gain (other than a specified gain) that

(I) was made within 30 days before or after the disposition time by the vendor and that

1. is deemed under subsection 39(2) to be a capital gain of the vendor for the taxation year that includes the time the gain was made from the disposition of currency other than Canadian currency, and

2. is in respect of the settlement or extinguishment of a foreign currency debt that was issued or incurred by the vendor within 30 days before or after the acquisition of the partnership interest by the vendor and that was, at all times at which it was a debt obligation of the vendor owing to a person or partnership that dealt, at all times during which the foreign currency debt was outstanding, at arm's length with the particular corporation and can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the partnership interest, or

(II) is a capital gain realized within 30 days before or after the disposition time by the vendor under an agreement that

1. was entered into by the vendor within 30 days before or after the acquisition of the partnership interest by the vendor with a person or partnership that dealt, at all times during which the agreement was in force, at arm's length with the particular corporation,

2. provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, and

3. can reasonably be considered to have been entered into by the vendor for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the partnership interest, or

(B) in any other case, the amount of a gain (other than a specified gain or a capital gain) that was realized within 30 days before or after the disposition time by the vendor that is included in computing the income of the vendor for the taxation year that includes the time the gain was realized and

(I) that is in respect of the settlement or extinguishment of a foreign currency debt that

1. was issued or incurred by the vendor within 30 days before or after the acquisition of the partnership interest by the vendor,

2. was, at all times at which it was a debt obligation of the vendor owing to a person or partnership that dealt, at all times during which the foreign currency debt was outstanding, at arm's length with the particular corporation, and

3. can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the partnership interest, or

(II) under an agreement that

1. was entered into by the vendor within 30 days before or after the acquisition of the partnership interest by the vendor with a person or partnership that dealt, at all times during which the agreement was in force, at arm's length with the particular corporation,

2. provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, and

3. can reasonably be considered to have been entered into by the vendor for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the partnership interest.

Related Provisions: 40(3) — Deemed gain where ACB goes negative; 87(2)(u)(ii) — Amalgamation; 93(2.2) — Conditions for 93(2.21) to apply; 93(2.22) — Meaning of "specified gain"; 93(2.31) — Parallel rules for disposition by partnership with indirect interest in FA shares; 93(3) — Exempt dividends; 93.1(1) — Where shares are owned by partnership; 93.1(2) — Dividend on shares of foreign affiliate held by partnership; 257 — Formula amounts cannot calculate to less than zero; 261(5)(f)(i) — Functional currency reporting — meaning of "Canadian currency".

(2.22) Specified gain — For the purposes of clauses (2.21)(b)(ii)(A) and (B), a "specified gain" means a gain in respect of the settlement or extinguishment of a foreign currency debt referred to in sub-subclause (2.21)(b)(ii)(A)(I)2 or subclause (2.21)(b)(ii)(B)(I), as the case may be, or that arises under a particular agreement referred to in subclause (2.21)(b)(ii)(A)(II) or (B)(II), if the particular corporation or any person or partnership with which the particular corporation was not — at any time during which the foreign currency debt was outstanding or the particular agreement was in force, as the case may be — dealing at arm's length entered into an agreement that may reasonably be considered to have been entered into for the principal purpose of hedging any foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the foreign currency debt or the particular agreement.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 14(3), will add subsecs. 93(2.21) and (2.22), applicable as shown in the Proposed Amendment to subsec. 93(2) above.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: See under 93(2).

(2.3) Loss limitation — disposition of partnership interest — Where

(a) corporation resident in Canada has an allowable capital loss from a partnership from a disposition at any time of an interest in another partnership that has a direct or indirect interest in shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada (in this subsection referred to as "affiliate shares"), or

(b) a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada has an allowable capital loss from a partnership from a disposition at any time by a partnership of an interest in another partnership that has a direct or indirect interest in shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada that would not be excluded property of the affiliate if the affiliate owned the shares immediately before the disposition (in this subsection referred to as "affiliate shares"), the amount of the allowable capital loss is deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

$$A - (B - C)$$

where

A is the amount of the allowable capital loss determined without reference to this subsection,

B is ½ of the total of all amounts each of which was received before that time, in respect of an exempt dividend on affiliate shares or on shares for which affiliate shares were substituted, by

(a) the corporation resident in Canada,

(b) a corporation related to the corporation resident in Canada,

(c) a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or

(d) a foreign affiliate of a corporation related to the corporation resident in Canada, and

C is the total of

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is ½ of the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from another disposition at or before that time of affiliate shares or shares for which affiliate shares were substituted, was reduced under subsection (2) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from a disposition at or before that time by a partnership of affiliate shares or shares for which affiliate shares were substituted, was reduced under subsection (2.1) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(c) the total of all amounts each of which is ½ of the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from a disposition at or before that time by a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B of an interest in a partnership, was reduced under subsection (2.2) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B, and

(d) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from a disposition at or before that time by a partnership of an interest in another partnership, was reduced under this subsection in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B.

Proposed Amendment — 93(2.3)

(2.3) Application of subsec. (2.31) — Subsection (2.31) applies if

(a) a particular corporation resident in Canada has a particular allowable capital loss, determined without reference to this section, from the disposition at any time (referred to in subsection (2.31) as the "disposition time") by a particular partnership of an interest (referred to in subsection (2.31) as the "partnership interest") in another partnership that has a direct or indirect interest in shares (referred to in subsection (2.31) as the "affiliate shares") of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation; or

(b) a foreign affiliate of a particular corporation resident in Canada has a particular allowable capital loss, determined without reference to this section, from the disposition at any time (referred to in subsection (2.31) as the "disposition time") by a particular partnership of an interest (referred to in subsection (2.31) as the "partnership interest") in another partnership that has a direct or indirect interest in shares (referred to in subsection (2.31) as the "affiliate shares") of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation that would not be excluded property of the affiliate if the affiliate had owned the shares immediately before the disposition time.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 14(3), will amend subsec. 93(2.3) to read as above, applicable as shown in the Proposed Amendment to subsec. 93(2) above.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: See under 93(2).

Related Provisions: 87(2)(u)(ii) — Amalgamation; 93(3) — Exempt dividends; 93.1(1) — Where shares are owned by partnership; 93.1(2) — Dividend on shares of foreign affiliate held by partnership; 257 — Formula amounts cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: Subsec. 93(2.3) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 70(8) to replace the references to the fraction "3/4" with references to the fraction "1/2", applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000 except that, for a taxation year of a taxpayer that includes February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000, or began after February 28, 2000 and ended before October 17, 2000, the references to the fraction "1/2" shall be read as references to the fraction in para. 38(a), as amended by 2001, c. 17, that applies to the taxpayer for the year.

Subsec. 93(2.3) added by the said c. 17, subsec. 70(3), applicable to dispositions that occur after November 1999.

Proposed Addition — 93(2.31), (2.32)

(2.31) Loss limitation on disposition by a partnership of an indirect interest in foreign affiliate shares — If this subsection applies, the amount of the particular allowable capital loss referred to in paragraph (2.3)(a) or (b) is deemed to be the greater of

(a) the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount of the particular allowable capital loss determined without reference to this section,

B is ½ of the total of all amounts each of which is an amount received before the disposition time, in respect of an exempt dividend on the affiliate shares or on shares for which the affiliate shares were substituted, by

(i) the particular corporation referred to in subsection (2.3),

(ii) another corporation that is related to the particular corporation,

(iii) a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation, or

(iv) a foreign affiliate of another corporation that is related to the particular corporation, and

C is the total of

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is ½ of the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from a previous disposition by a corporation, or a foreign affiliate described in the description of B, of the affiliate shares or shares for which the affiliate shares were substituted, was reduced under paragraph (2.01)(a) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or a foreign affiliate described in the description of B, from a previous disposition by a partnership of the affiliate shares or shares for which the affiliate shares were substituted, was reduced under paragraph (2.11)(a) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(iii) the total of all amounts each of which is ½ of the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from a previous disposition by a corporation, or a foreign affiliate described in the description of B, of an interest in a partnership, was reduced under paragraph (2.21)(a) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B, and

(iv) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation, or a foreign affiliate described in the description of B, from a previous disposition by a partnership of an interest in another partnership, was reduced under this paragraph in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B; and

(b) the lesser of

(i) the portion of the particular allowable capital loss, determined without reference to this section, that can reasonably be considered to be attributable to a fluctuation in the value of a currency other than Canadian currency relative to Canadian currency, and

(ii) ½ of the amount determined in respect of the particular corporation, or the foreign affiliate (that is referred to in paragraph (2.3)(b)), of the particular corporation, that is the amount of a gain (other than a specified gain) that

(A) was made within 30 days before or after the disposition time by the particular partnership to the extent that the gain is reasonably attributable to the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, and that

(I) is deemed under subsection 39(2) to be a capital gain of the particular partnership for the taxation year that includes the time the gain was made from the disposition of currency other than Canadian currency, and

(II) is in respect of the settlement or extinguishment of a foreign currency debt that

1. was issued or incurred by the particular partnership within 30 days before or after the acquisition of the partnership interest by the particular partnership,

2. was, at all times at which it was a debt obligation of the particular partnership, owing to a person or partnership that dealt, at all times during which the foreign currency debt was outstanding, at arm's length with the particular corporation, and

3. can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the partnership interest, or

(B) is a capital gain (to the extent that the capital gain is reasonably attributable to the particular corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be) realized within 30 days before or after the disposition time by the particular partnership under an agreement that

(I) was entered into by the particular partnership, within 30 days before or after the acquisition of the partnership interest by the particular partnership, with a person or partnership that dealt, at all times during which the agreement was in force, at arm's length with the particular corporation,

(II) provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, and

(III) can reasonably be considered to have been entered into by the particular partnership for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the partnership interest.

Related Provisions: 40(3) — Deemed gain where ACB goes negative; 87(2)(u)(ii) — Amalgamation; 93(2.3) — Conditions for 93(2.31) to apply; 93(2.32) — Meaning of "specified gain"; 93(3) — Exempt dividends; 93.1(1) — Where shares are owned by partnership; 93.1(2) — Dividend on shares of foreign affiliate held by partnership; 257 — Formula amounts cannot calculate to less than zero; 261(5)(f)(i) — Functional currency reporting — meaning of "Canadian currency".

(2.32) Specified gain — For the purposes of subparagraph (2.31)(b)(ii), a "specified gain" means a gain in respect of the settlement or extinguishment of a foreign currency debt referred to in subclause (2.31)(b)(ii)(A)(II), or that arises under a particular agreement referred to in clause (2.31)(b)(ii)(B), if the particular partnership or any person or partnership with which the particular corporation was not — at any time during which the foreign currency debt was outstanding or the particular agreement was in force, as the case may be — dealing at arm's length entered into an agreement that may reasonably be considered to have been entered into for the principal purpose of hedging any foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the foreign currency debt or the particular agreement.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 14(3), will add subsecs. 93(2.31) and (2.32), applicable as shown in the Proposed Amendment to subsec. 93(2) above.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: See under 93(2).

(3) Exempt dividends — For the purposes of subsections (2) to (2.3),

(a) a dividend received by a corporation resident in Canada is an exempt dividend to the extent of the amount in respect of the dividend that is deductible from the income of the corporation for the purpose of computing the taxable income of the corporation because of paragraph 113(1)(a), (b) or (c); and

Proposed Amendment — 93(3) before (b)

(3) Exempt dividends — For the purposes of subsections (2.01), (2.11), (2.21) and (2.31),

(a) a dividend received by a corporation resident in Canada is an exempt dividend to the extent of the amount in respect of the dividend that is deductible from the income of the corporation for the purposes of computing the taxable income of the corporation because of any of paragraphs 113(1)(a) to (c); and

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 14(4), will amend the portion of subsec. 93(3) before para. (b) to read as above, applicable where subsec. 93(2.01) applies (see Application of the proposed amendment to subsec. 93(2)) except that,

(a) where that subsec. 93(2.01) applies but subsec. 93(2.11) does not apply, the portion of subsec. 93(3) before para. (a) is to be read as follows:

(3) For the purposes of subsection (2.01),

(b) in respect of dispositions that occur on or before August 19, 2011, para. 93(3)(a) is to be read as follows:

(a) a dividend received by a corporation resident in Canada is an exempt dividend to the extent of the amount in respect of the dividend that is deductible from the income of the corporation for the purposes of computing the taxable income of the corporation because of paragraph 113(1)(a), (b) or (c); and

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: Subsection 93(3) is being amended consequential to the restructuring of subsections 93(2) to (2.3), as discussed above, and to the introduction of the concept of "hybrid surplus", for which a deduction may be claimed under paragraph 113(1)(a.1).

These amendments apply when new subsection 93(2.01) applies. However, a transitional reading of the preamble of subsection 93(3) applies when new subsection 93(2.01) applies but new subsection 93(2.11) does not apply. As well, there is a transitional reading of paragraph 93(3)(a) that maintains the current rule for dispositions that occur on or before August 19, 2011, as "hybrid surplus" only applies to dispositions after that time.

(b) a dividend received by a particular foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada from another foreign affiliate of the corporation is an exempt dividend to the extent of the amount, if any, by which the portion of the dividend that was not prescribed to have been paid out of the pre-acquisition surplus of the other affiliate exceeds the total of such portion of the income or profits tax that can reasonably be considered to have been paid in respect of that portion of the dividend by the particular affiliate or by a partnership in which the particular affiliate had, at the time of the payment of the income or profits tax, a partnership interest, either directly or indirectly.

Proposed Addition — 93(3)(c)

(c) the prescribed amount is deemed to be an amount that is received by a particular foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada from another foreign affiliate of the corporation and that is in respect of an exempt dividend on a share of the capital stock of the other affiliate.

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — foreign affiliates), subsec. 32(3), will add para. 93(3)(c), applicable after December 18, 2009.

S. 53 of the draft legislation provides that any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that ends before the day on which the draft legislation is assented to and would, in the absence of this section, be precluded because of subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act shall be made to the extent necessary to take into account this amendment, if the taxpayer

(i) elects in writing in respect of all of its foreign affiliates that this section apply in respect of that provision, and

(ii) files that election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before June 30, 2011.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Subsection 93(3) is an interpretive rule for the foreign affiliate "stop-loss" rules in subsections 93(2) to (2.3). It provides the circumstances in which certain dividends received from a foreign affiliate are considered "exempt dividends" for the purposes of those stop-loss rules.

Subsection 93(3) is being amended by adding new paragraph (c) which deems a prescribed amount to be an exempt dividend that is subject to those stop-loss rules. The rules that prescribe that amount are found in new subsection 5905(7.7) of the Regulations.

History: Subsec. 93(3) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 70(9), applicable to dispositions that occur after November 1999. The subsec. formerly read:

(3) For the purposes of subsection (2),

(a) a dividend received by a corporation resident in Canada is an exempt dividend to the extent of the amount in respect of the dividend that is deductible from the income of the corporation in computing its taxable income by virtue of paragraph 113(1)(a), (b) or (c); and

(b) a dividend received by a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada from another foreign affiliate of that corporation is an exempt dividend to the extent of the amount, if any, by which the portion of the dividend that was not prescribed to have been paid out of the pre-acquisition surplus of that other affiliate exceeds such portion of any income or profits tax paid by the first-mentioned affiliate as may reasonably be regarded as having been paid in respect of that portion of the dividend.

Regulations: 5900(1)(c) (amount prescribed to have been paid out of pre-acquisition surplus); 5905(7.7) (prescribed amount for 93(3)(c)).

(4) Loss on disposition of shares of foreign affiliate — Where a taxpayer resident in Canada or a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer (in this subsection referred to as the "vendor") has acquired shares of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer (in this subsection referred to as the "acquired affiliate") on the disposition of shares of any other foreign affiliate of the taxpayer (other than a disposition to which subsection 40(3.4) applies),

(a) the capital loss therefrom otherwise determined shall be deemed to be nil; and

(b) in computing the adjusted cost base to the vendor of all shares of any particular class of the capital stock of the acquired affiliate owned by the vendor immediately after the disposition, there shall be added an amount determined by the formula

$$(A - B) \times \frac{C}{D}$$

where

A is the cost amount to the vendor immediately before the disposition of the shares disposed of,

B is the total of

(i) the proceeds of disposition of the shares disposed of, and

(ii) the total of all amounts deducted under paragraph (2)(d) in computing losses of the vendor from the dispositions of the shares disposed of,

C is the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of all shares of that particular class owned by it at that time, and

D is the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of all shares of the capital stock of the acquired affiliate owned by it at that time.

Proposed Amendment — 93(4)

(4) Loss on disposition of shares of foreign affiliate — If a taxpayer resident in Canada or a foreign affiliate (which taxpayer or foreign affiliate is referred to in this subsection as the "transferee") of the taxpayer has acquired shares of the capital stock of one or more foreign affiliates (each referred to in this subsection as an "acquired affiliate") of the taxpayer on a disposition of shares (such shares disposed of being referred to in this subsection as the "disposed shares") of the capital stock of any other foreign affiliate of the taxpayer (other than, where the transferee is a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, a disposition of shares that are, immediately before the acquisition, excluded property of the transferee or a disposition to which subsection 40(3.4) applies), the following rules apply:

(a) the capital loss, if any, of the transferee from the disposition, is deemed to be nil; and

(b) in computing the adjusted cost base to the transferee of a share of a particular class of the capital stock of an acquired affiliate that is owned by the transferee immediately after the disposition, there is to be added the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the cost amount to the transferee, immediately before the disposition, of a disposed share,

B is the total of

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is the proceeds of disposition of a disposed share, and

(ii) the total of all amounts in respect of the computation of losses of the transferee from the dispositions of the disposed shares, each of which is, in respect of the disposition of a disposed share, the amount by which the amount for A in the formula in paragraph (2.01)(a) exceeds the amount determined by that formula,

C is the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of all shares of the particular class owned, immediately after the disposition, by the transferee,

D is the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of all shares owned, immediately after the disposition, by the transferee of the capital stock of all acquired affiliates, and

E is the number of shares of the particular class that are owned by the transferee immediately after the disposition.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 14(5), will amend subsec. 93(4) to read as above, applicable to acquisitions of shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that occur after February 27, 2004; however, if

(a) the acquisition occurs on or before August 19, 2011, the opening words of subsec. 93(4) are to be read as follows:

(4) If a taxpayer resident in Canada or a foreign affiliate (which taxpayer or foreign affiliate is referred to in this subsection as the "transferee") of the taxpayer has acquired shares of the capital stock of one or more foreign affiliates (each referred to in this subsection as an "acquired affiliate") of the taxpayer on a disposition of shares (such shares disposed of being referred to in this subsection as the "disposed shares") of the capital stock of any other foreign affiliate of the taxpayer (other than a disposition to which subsection 40(3.4) applies), the following rules apply:

(b) the taxpayer has elected under para. (b) of the Application of the proposed amendment to subsec. 93(2), this amendment, with the opening words of subsec. 93(4) being read as required by para. (a) above, applies to all acquisitions of shares of the capital stock of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer that occur after 1994.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: Subsection 93(4) applies where a taxpayer resident in Canada or a foreign affiliate of such a taxpayer (the "vendor") has acquired shares of one foreign affiliate on the disposition of shares of another foreign affiliate. Any capital loss realized by the vendor on the disposition is denied and the amount of such a loss (minus the amount of any portion of such a loss that is attributable to exempt dividends, as defined in subsection 93(3), received on that share and that thereby reduced a capital loss by virtue of subsection 93(2)) is added to the vendor's adjusted cost base of the shares of the acquired affiliate.

Subsection 93(4) is being amended to modernize its language, clarify its application, and to incorporate references to the new version of subsection 93(2), as discussed above.

Subsection 93(4) is also being amended so that it does not apply to excluded property dispositions of a foreign affiliate. Readers are referred to the [Aug. 2011 TN (foreign affiliates)] under subsection 13(21.2) for more information.

Except for the carve-out of excluded property of a foreign affiliate, the amendments to subsection 93(4) apply to any acquisition of shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that occurs after February 27, 2004. However, if the taxpayer has made the retroactive election described in the commentary to subsection 93(2), the amendments to subsection 93(4) apply to acquisitions of shares that occur after 1994. The excluded property carve-out applies for acquisitions that occur after August 19, 2011.

Related Provisions: 92(1.2) — Addition to ACB of share of foreign affiliate; 93(2)–(2.31) — Loss limitation on disposition of share; 93.1(1) — Where shares are owned by partnership; 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

History: The opening words of subsec. 93(4) amended by 1998, c. 19, s. 120, applicable, subject to s. 247 of 1998, c. 19 (grandfathering rule reproduced at the end of the Act), to dispositions of property that occur after April 26, 1995. The opening words formerly read:

> (4) Where a taxpayer resident in Canada or a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer (in this subsection referred to as the "vendor") has acquired shares of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer (in this subsection referred to as the "acquired affiliate") on the disposition of shares of any other foreign affiliate of the taxpayer (other than a disposition to which subsection 85(4) applies), the following rules apply:

Para. 93(4)(b) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 69(3), applicable to dispositions of shares occurring after July 13, 1990. Para. 93(4)(b) formerly read:

> (b) in computing the adjusted cost base to the vendor of all shares of any particular class of the capital stock of the acquired affiliate owned by it immediately after the disposition there shall be added the amount that is equal to that proportion of the amount, if any, by which

(5) Late filed elections — Where the election referred to in subsection (1) was not made on or before the day on or before which the election was required by that subsection to be made, the election shall be deemed to have been made on that day if, on or before the day that is 3 years after that day,

(a) the election is made in prescribed manner; and

(b) an estimate of the penalty in respect of that election is paid by the corporation when that election is made.

(5.1) Special cases — Where, in the opinion of the Minister, the circumstances of a case are such that it would be just and equitable

(a) to permit an election under subsection (1) to be made after the day that is 3 years after the day on or before which the election was required by that subsection to be made, or

(b) to permit an election made under subsection (1) to be amended, the election or amended election shall be deemed to have been made on the day on or before which the election was so required to be made if

(c) the election or amended election is made in prescribed form, and

(d) an estimate of the penalty in respect of the election or amended election is paid by the corporation when the election or amended election is made, and where this subsection applies to the amendment of an election, that election shall be deemed not to have been effective.

Proposed Addition — 93(5.2)

(5.2) Amended election — An election (referred to in this subsection as the "amended election") by a taxpayer under subsection (1) in respect of a disposition of shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer is deemed to have been made on the day on or before which the election was so required to be made and any previous election (referred to in this subsection as the "old election") under subsection (1) in respect of that disposition is deemed not to have been effective if

(a) the taxpayer has not elected under [section 51 of title of implementing enactment];

(b) the taxpayer made the old election on or before December 18, 2009;

(c) in the opinion of the Minister, the circumstances are such that it would be just and equitable to permit the old election to be amended; and

(d) the amended election is made in prescribed form on or before December 31, 2012.

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 2 — foreign affiliates), subsec. 32(4), will add subsec. 93(5.2), applicable after December 18, 2009.

S. 53 of the draft legislation provides that any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that ends before the day on which the draft legislation is assented to and would, in the absence of this section, be precluded because of subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act shall be made to the extent necessary to take into account this amendment, if the taxpayer

(i) elects in writing in respect of all of its foreign affiliates that this section apply in respect of that provision, and

(ii) files that election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before June 30, 2011.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): New subsection 93(5.2) is added in order to provide taxpayers with the ability to amend certain subsection 93(1) elections without having to pay a late-filing penalty. This new provision is related to the announcement on December 18, 2009 of the abandonment of the "consolidated net surplus" proposals that were issued in draft form on February 27, 2004. Although the ability to amend such an election is subject to the discretion of the Minister, it is generally expected that the "just and equitable" standard would be met where the taxpayer's original subsection 93(1) election was filed on the basis of the "consolidated net surplus" rules and the taxpayer simply wishes to amend the election to reflect their non-application.

(6) Penalty for late filed election — For the purposes of this section, the penalty in respect of an election or amended election referred to in paragraph (5)(a) or (5.1)(c) is an amount equal to the lesser of

(a) ¼ of 1% of the amount designated in the election or amended election for each month or part of a month during the period commencing with the day on or before which the election is required by subsection (1) to be made and ending on the day the election is made, and

(b) an amount, not exceeding $8,000, equal to the product obtained by multiplying $100 by the number of months each of which is a month all or part of which is during the period referred to in paragraph (a).

Related Provisions: 93(7) — Assessment of penalty; 220(3.1) — Waiver of penalty by CRA.

CRA Audit Manual: 28.6.1: Penalties for late filed/amended elections — disposition of shares in a foreign affiliate.

(7) Unpaid balance of penalty — The Minister shall, with all due dispatch, examine each election and amended election referred to in paragraph (5)(a) or (5.1)(c), assess the penalty payable and send a notice of assessment to the corporation, and the corporation shall pay forthwith to the Receiver General the amount, if any, by which the penalty so assessed exceeds the total of all amounts previously paid on account of that penalty.

Technical Notes: Subsection 93.1(1) applies for the purpose of determining whether a nonresident corporation is a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada, for certain enumerated provisions of the Act and Regulations, where the Canadian corporation owns a non-resident corporation's shares through a partnership. In this regard, subsection 93.1(1) deems the Canadian corporation to own its proportionate number of the nonresident corporation's shares based on its relative fair market value interest in the partnership.

Subsection 93.1(1) is being amended to add section 90 to its list of enumerated provisions. This amendment is consequential to the introduction of the "upstream loan" rule in section 90, as discussed above.

Application: The August 19, 2011 draft legislation (foreign affiliates), subsec. 15(2), will add subsec. 93.1(3), applicable in respect of taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that end after August 19, 2011.

See also Application under s. 90 re extended reassessment deadline.

Technical Notes: New subsection 93.1(3) is being added to replace and expand upon an existing provision of the Act that deals with tiered partnerships. Currently, paragraph 95(2)(u) provides "look-through" rules to deal with cases where one partnership (i.e. an upper-tier partnership) is a member of another partnership (i.e. a lower-tier partnership), but these rules only apply for specifically identified provisions of the Act.

New subsection 93.1(3) applies the look-through rules of paragraph 95(2)(u) more generally in respect of all of subdivision i of Division B of Part I of the Act (i.e. sections 90 to 95) as well as to certain other provisions of the Act that are outside of subdivision i. However, the broad application to subdivision i is subject to an exception for situations where such a look-through would not be appropriate in the context of a particular provision. For example, look-through treatment under subsection 93.1(3) would not be appropriate in subsection 93.1(1) because that subsection works iteratively to achieve a look-through of its own.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, April 19, 2006:

Mr. Stephen S. Ruby, Davies Ward Phillips & Vineberg LLP, Toronto, Ontario

Dear Mr. Ruby:

I am writing in response to your many recent letters, e-mails and phone calls relating to certain narrow issues arising from the foreign affiliate proposals announced on February 27, 2004 by the Minister of Finance. . . .

Draft subsections 93.1(2) and 95(2.2) of the Act

Subsection 93.1(1) provides that, for the purpose of determining whether (for the limited purposes described in that subsection) a non-resident corporation is a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada, the shares of a non-resident corporation are deemed to be owned by the members of the partnership in the proportion that the fair market value of their interests in the partnership is of the fair market value of all members' interests in the partnership. That rule applies on an iterative basis, such that, where members of a partnership that owns (or is deemed by that rule to own) the shares of a non-resident corporation are themselves partnerships, those shares are deemed to be owned by the members of those other partnerships using the same proportionality rule.

Subsection 93.1(2) applies where a corporation resident in Canada is a member of a partnership that owns shares of a non-resident corporation that is deemed by subsection 93.1(1) to be a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada. It provides, for the purposes of sections 93 and 113, that, where the non-resident corporation pays a dividend to the partnership, the corporation resident in Canada is deemed to receive a share of that dividend equal to the proportion that the fair market value of its interest in the partnership is of the fair market value of all interests in the partnership. Thus, the corporation resident in Canada can benefit from the deductions available under section 113 in respect of dividends on shares of a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada.

However, unlike subsection 93.1(1), subsection 93.1(2) is not an iterative rule that applies through a chain of partnerships; therefore, it does not apply where (as in the example that you provided in your February 28 letter) the corporation resident in Canada is a member of a partnership that is itself a member of the partnership that owns the shares in the non-resident corporation. As a result, in your example, the corporation resident in Canada would not be able to claim a deduction under subsection 113(1) in respect of dividends from the non-resident corporation that are included, because of subsection 96(1), in the income of the corporation resident in Canada.

You have also identified issues with respect to the application of current subsection 95(2.2) of the Act where the shares of the non-resident corporation are acquired by a partnership rather than by a person referred to in paragraph (a) of that subsection. For the purpose of subsection 95(2), paragraph 95(2.2)(a) deems that corporation to be a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout a year. That paragraph applies where that corporation either became or ceased to be a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in the year and that corporation was, at the beginning of the year or the end of the year, a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest.

You express the view that the reference, in paragraph 95(2.2)(a), to a "person" acquiring or disposing of shares of the capital stock of that corporation would not cover the case where the shares are acquired or disposed of by a partnership and the governing partnership law of the partnership is such that the members of the partnership are not considered to acquire or dispose of the shares. You make a similar observation with respect to applying the reference, in subparagraph 95(2.2)(b)(i), to "person" in the case where shares of that corporation or any other corporation are acquired or disposed of by a partnership.

A clarification of the intended application of subsections 93.1(2) and 95(2.2) is appropriate. Consequently, we will propose that

- section 93.1 be modified to provide a rule, for the purposes of subsection 93.1(2), that
  - where a particular partnership owns (or is deemed by that rule to own) at any time a partnership interest in another partnership, each member of the particular partnership is deemed to own, at that time, the partnership interest in the other partnership in the proportion that the fair market value at that time of the member's partnership interest in the particular partnership is of the fair market value at that time of all members' partnership interests in the particular partnership, and
  - a person or partnership that is a member (or is deemed by that rule to be a member) of a particular partnership that is a member of another partnership is deemed to be a member of the other partnership,
- subsection 93.1(1) be amended so that the rule in that amended subsection
  - applies for the purposes of subsection 95(2,2), and
  - continues to apply for the purposes of determining (for the limited purposes as presently referred to in that subsection) whether a non-resident corporation is a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada, and
- paragraphs 95(2.2)(a) and (b) be amended [done by S.C. 2007, c. 35 — ed.] so that the expression "person" in subparagraphs 95(2)(a)(i) and (b)(i) is replaced by the expression "person or partnership".

It is contemplated that

- the new rule (referred to above) in section 93.1 would have effect for dividends received after November 1999, and
- the revisions to paragraphs 95(2.2)(a) and (b), and the revision to subsection 93.1(1) to extend the ambit of the rule in that subsection so that it applies for the purpose of subsection 95(2.2), would have effect for taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that end after 1999.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Addition — 93.1(3)(d)

Federal Budget, Notice of Ways and Means Motion, March 29, 2012: (36) That, effective March 29, 2012, subsection 93.1(3) of the Act, as proposed in Department of Finance news release 2011-070 (dated August 19, 2011), be amended by deleting "and" at the end of paragraph (b), by adding "and" at the end of paragraph (c) and by adding the following after paragraph (c):

(d) section 212.3.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 29, 2012: See under 212.3.

History: S. 93.1 added by 2001, c. 17, s. 71, subsec. 93.1(1) applicable in determining whether a non-resident corporation is, at any time after November 1999, a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer and, where a taxpayer so elects and notifies the Minister of National Revenue in writing before 2002 of its election, that subsection also applies in determining (other than for the purposes of subsec. 20(12) and s. 126) whether a non-resident corporation was, at any time after 1972 and before December 1999, a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer; subsec. 93.1(2) applicable in respect of dividends received after November 1999.

94. (1) Application of certain provisions to trusts not resident in Canada — Where,

(a) at any time in a taxation year of a trust that is not resident in Canada or that, but for paragraph (c), would not be so resident, a person beneficially interested in the trust (in this section referred to as a "beneficiary") was

(i) a person resident in Canada,

(ii) a corporation or trust with which a person resident in Canada was not dealing at arm's length, or

(iii) a controlled foreign affiliate of a person resident in Canada, and

(b) at any time in or before the taxation year of the trust,

(i) the trust, or a non-resident corporation that would, if the trust were resident in Canada, be a controlled foreign affiliate of the trust, has, other than in prescribed circumstances, acquired property, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, from

(A) a particular person who

(I) was the beneficiary referred to in paragraph (a), was related to that beneficiary or was the uncle, aunt, nephew or niece of that beneficiary,

(II) was resident in Canada at any time in the 18 month period before the end of that year or, in the case of a person who has ceased to exist, was resident in Canada at any time in the 18 month period before the person ceased to exist, and

(III) in the case of an individual, had before the end of that year been resident in Canada for a period of, or periods the total of which is, more than 60 months, or

(B) a trust or corporation that acquired the property, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, from a particular person described in clause (A) with whom it was not dealing at arm's length

and the trust was not

(C) an inter vivos trust created at any time before 1960 by a person who at that time was a non-resident person,

(D) a testamentary trust that arose as a consequence of the death of an individual before 1976, or

(E) governed by a foreign retirement arrangement, or

(ii) all or any part of the interest of the beneficiary in the trust was acquired directly or indirectly by the beneficiary by way of

(A) purchase,

(B) gift, bequest or inheritance from a person referred to in clause (i)(A) or (B), or

(C) the exercise of a power of appointment by a person referred to in clause (i)(A) or (B),

the following rules apply for that taxation year of the trust:

(c) where the amount of the income or capital of the trust to be distributed at any time to any beneficiary of the trust depends on the exercise by any person of, or the failure by any person to exercise, any discretionary power,

(i) the trust is deemed for the purposes of this Part and sections 233.3 and 233.4 to be a person resident in Canada no part of whose taxable income is exempt because of section 149 from tax under this Part and whose taxable income for the year is the amount, if any, by which the total of

(A) the amount, if any, that would but for this subparagraph be its taxable income earned in Canada for the year,

(B) the amount that would be its foreign accrual property income for the year if

(I) except for the purpose of applying subsections 104(4) to (5.2) to days after 1998 that are determined under subsection 104(4), the trust were a non-resident corporation all the shares of which were owned by a person who was resident in Canada,

(II) the description of A in the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsection 95(1) were, in respect of dividends received after 1998, read without reference to paragraph (b) of that description,

(III) the descriptions of B and E in that definition were, in respect of dispositions that occur after 1998, read without reference to "other than dispositions of excluded property to which none of paragraphs (2)(c), (d) and (e) apply",

(IV) the value of C in that definition were nil, and

(V) for the purposes of computing the trust's foreign accrual property income, the consequences of the application of subsections 104(4) to (5.2) applied in respect of days after 1998 that are determined under subsection 104(4),

(C) the amount, if any, by which the total of all amounts each of which is an amount required by subsection 91(1) or (3) to be included in computing its income for the year exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deducted by it for that year under subsection 91(2), (4) or (5), and

(D) the amount, if any, required by section 94.1 to be included in computing its income for the year

exceeds

(E) the amount, if any, by which the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deducted by it under subsection 91(2), (4) or (5) in computing its income for the year exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is an amount included in computing its income for the year because of subsection 91(1) or (3), and

(ii) for the purposes of section 126,

(A) the amount that would be determined under subparagraph (i) in respect of the trust for the year, if that subparagraph were read without reference to clause (i)(A), is deemed to be income of the trust for the year from sources in the country other than Canada in which the trust would, but for subparagraph (i), be resident, and

(B) any income or profits tax paid by the trust for the year (other than any tax paid because of this section), to the extent that it can reasonably be regarded as having been paid in respect of that income, is deemed to be non-business income tax paid by the trust to the government of that country, and

(d) in any other case, for the purposes of subsections 91(1) to (4) and sections 95 and 233.4,

(i) the trust shall, with respect to any beneficiary under the trust the fair market value of whose beneficial interest in the trust is not less than 10% of the aggregate fair market value of all beneficial interests in the trust, be deemed to be a non-resident corporation that is controlled by the beneficiary,

(ii) the trust shall be deemed to be a non-resident corporation having a capital stock of a single class divided into 100 issued shares, and

(iii) each beneficiary under the trust shall be deemed to own at any time the number of the issued shares that is equal to the proportion of 100 that

(A) the fair market value at that time of the beneficiary's beneficial interest in the trust

is of

(B) the fair market value at that time of all beneficial interests in the trust.

Proposed Amendment — 94

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010) OVERVIEW

Existing Rules

Section 94 sets out rules that tax certain income earned by certain non-resident trusts. Section 94 generally applies if a person resident in Canada has transferred or loaned property to a non-resident trust that has one or more beneficiaries that are resident in Canada.

Section 94 uses two different methods to impose tax, depending on the terms of the non-resident trust.

If the amount to be distributed to a beneficiary of the trust depends upon a discretionary power, paragraph 94(1)(c) deems the trust to be resident in Canada for the purposes of Part I of the Act and deems its taxable income for tax purposes to be the total of its Canadian source income and its foreign accrual property income ("FAPI"), if any. Each beneficiary is jointly and severally liable to pay the Canadian tax of the trust. However, the liability can be enforced against a particular beneficiary only to the extent that the beneficiary has received a distribution from the trust or proceeds from the sale of an interest in the trust.

For other non-resident trusts to which section 94 applies, paragraph 94(1)(d) provides that it is to be treated in much the same manner that a non-resident corporation is treated. If a Canadian resident beneficiary holds an interest in the trust with a fair market value equal to 10% or more of the total fair market value of all beneficial interests in the trust, the trust is deemed to be a controlled foreign affiliate of the beneficiary. Consequently, the FAPI rules apply to the trust and the beneficiary, requiring the beneficiary to include in income, under section 91, a percentage of the trust's FAPI. On the other hand, beneficiaries whose beneficial interests are less than 10% of the total fair market value of all interests in the trust may be subject to tax under the offshore investment fund rules in section 94.1. If section 94.1 does not apply, such beneficiaries are generally taxed in respect of trust-level income only if trust income becomes payable to them in the year in which it arises or they otherwise enjoy certain taxable benefits in respect of the trust.

New Rules

New section 94 takes a different approach to the taxation of non-resident trusts (NRTs). In general, if a Canadian resident contributes property to a NRT (other than an "exempt foreign trust"), the NRT is deemed to be resident in Canada for a number of purposes, and the contributor (excepting electing contributors in respect of the NRT), the NRT and certain Canadian resident beneficiaries of the NRT may all become jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable to pay Canadian tax on the income of the trust.

More specifically, new section 94 divides the NRT into two notional portions. The "resident portion" of the trust generally includes all property of the trust in respect of which there has been a contribution by a current or former resident of Canada, and certain other non-contributed amounts. The "non-resident portion" of the trust generally includes all other property of the trust. The NRT generally is not taxed on income derived from its non-resident portion, unless the income is from certain Canadian sources.

In computing its income under the Act, the NRT will have the ordinary deductions available, under subsections 104(6) and (12), for certain amounts in respect of beneficiaries. After claiming any such deductions, the NRT will then have available a deduction in respect of amounts included in the income of an "electing contributor" in respect of the trust.

New section 94 is intended to apply to NRTs where the amount to be distributed to a beneficiary of the trust depends upon a discretionary power, but may also apply to a trust in which all interests are "specified fixed interests" if the trust is not an "exempt foreign trust" as defined in subsection 94(1) (which can include cases where the trust elects not to be an exempt foreign trust). The new rules are not intended to impact upon legitimate commercial trusts. In respect of these NRTs, existing paragraph 94(1)(d) is carried forward with some modifications, as new section 94.2. For more information, see the commentary on new section 94.2.

The English-language expression "jointly and severally" no longer exists in the civil law of the province of Quebec and has been replaced in that civil law with the expression "solidarily". In the English-language version of section 94, the expression "solidarily" is added to the expression "jointly and severally", which latter expression is maintained for common-law purposes. The French-language version of new section 94 uses only the expression "solidairement" as this expression is appropriate for both the civil and common law. These changes ensure that the Act appropriately reflects both the civil law of the province of Quebec and the law of other provinces.

Except as indicated otherwise, the amendments to section 94 apply to trust taxation years that end after 2006. They also apply to each of a trust's taxation years in which it exists and that end after 2000 and before 2007, and to each taxation year of the beneficiaries under, and contributors to, the trust in which such a trust taxation year ends, if the trust

- was created in one of those taxation years, and
- elects in writing to have new section 94 apply to each of those taxation years of the trust by filing the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the trust's filing-due date for the trust's taxation year in which new section 94 is assented to.

Note that, under the coming-into-force provision for new section 94, any election or form (but for greater certainty, not including returns of income) referred to in new section 94 that would otherwise be required to be filed before 120 days after Royal Assent of the Act giving effect to these changes is deemed to have been filed with the Minister of National Revenue on a timely basis if it is filed with the Minister of National Revenue within 365 days after Royal Assent.

For more detail on filing obligations regarding returns of income, contact the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA).

The following table briefly summarizes section 94 and related rules.

Issue	Summary	References
1. Which trusts are subject to the new NRT rules?	A. In general, a trust (other than an exempt foreign trust) will be subject to tax for a taxation year as a trust resident in Canada if a contribution was made to the trust by a person (other than a recent immigrant to Canada or an exempt taxpayer) that is resident in Canada at a specified time (generally, the end of the year).	s. 94(3) "exempt person" — s. 94(1) "exempt foreign trust" — s. 94(1) "contribution" — s. 94(1) and (2) "resident contributor" — s. 94(1) "specified time" — s. 94(1)
	B. In addition, a trust (other than an exempt foreign trust) will generally be subject to Canadian tax for a taxation year if there is a resident beneficiary under the trust. More specifically, if: • a contribution was made by a person when the person was resident in Canada (or generally within a 60-month period before the person became resident in Canada or within a 60-month period after the person ceased to be resident in Canada), • where the contributing person is an individual (other than a trust), at the specified time the individual had been resident in Canada for more than 60 months, and • at the specified time there is a person (other than a successor beneficiary) that is resident in Canada and is a beneficiary under the trust.	s. 94(3) and (10) "beneficiary" — s. 94(1) "contribution" — s. 94(1) and (2) "connected contributor" — s. 94(1) "non-resident time" — s. 94(1) "resident beneficiary" — s. 94(1) "specified time" — s. 94(1) "successor beneficiary" — s. 94(1)
2. Who is responsible for the tax payable by an NRT?	The trust is required to pay its Canadian taxes. If it fails to do so, each contributor (other than an electing contributor) referred to in 1(A) and/or each beneficiary referred to in 1(B) is jointly and severally or solidarily liable with the trust for the tax. However, the amount recoverable from a person that is only a beneficiary is limited to the beneficiary's recovery limit. Relief is also available in some cases for a contributor whose contribution to the trust is insignificant relative to other contributions made to the trust.	Jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable: paragraphs s. 94(3)(d) and (e) Limit to amount recoverable — s. 94(7) Recovery limit — s. 94(8) Determination of fair market value — s. 94(9) Definitions — s. 94(1)
3. Where the NRT rules apply to a trust for a taxation year, how will the trust's tax liabilities be calculated?	A. Canadian rules generally apply to the trust as if the trust were resident in Canada throughout the year for the purpose of computing the trust's income.	s. 94(3)(a) and 94(4)
	B. Explicit rule treats the trust as becoming resident in Canada, with resulting adjustment to cost amount of property.	s. 94(3)(c)
	C. The trust's tax liabilities will be reduced by amounts attributed to electing contributors in respect of the trust.	"electing contributor" — s. 94(1) s. 94(16) and (17)
	D. The trust's income for Canadian tax purposes will be computed without regard to its property income from the non-resident portion (except for certain Canadian source amounts).	"non-resident portion" — s. 94(1) "resident portion" — s. 94(1) s. 94(3)(f)

	E. Part XII.2 does not apply to the trust. Explicit exemption from Part XIII tax on amounts distributed to the trust, although payer must still withhold and trust is granted a credit for such amounts withheld. Part XIII tax will generally apply to amounts (other than exempt amounts) paid or credited by the trust to non-resident beneficiaries.	s. 94(3)(a)(viii) and (ix), (3)(g) and (4)(c) and 215 and 216(4.1) "exempt amount" — s. 94(1)
	F. Flow-through of income to resident and non-resident beneficiaries permitted, subject to special rules in the event that Canadian-source income is distributed to non-residents.	s. 94(3)(a)(ix) and 104(7.01) — special rules
4. What is the treatment of an investment in a commercial NRT?	Where the trust is a paragraph (h) exempt foreign trust, a Canadian investor with a 10% or more interest in the trust (together with persons not dealing at arm's length with the investor), or who has contributed restricted property to the trust, will be subject to a modified foreign accrual property income (FAPI) regime under section 94.2. Other investors will be subject to offshore investment property regime in section 94.1. Remittances out of a trust's current year income remain taxable in the investor's hands under subsection 104(13), with relief from double taxation provided. Federal budget, Supplementary Information, Feb. 16, 1999: Taxation of trusts — Background

Trusts that are resident in Canada are subject to tax in Canada annually on their undistributed income.

Beneficiaries of resident trusts are taxable on distributions received from such trusts, to the extent that the distributions are made out of the income of the trust. Distributions made out of the capital of the trust are tax-free. As a result, the Canadian tax base is protected.

Generally, non-resident trusts are not taxable in Canada and income can be accumulated in such trusts on a tax-deferred basis. When such trusts pay little or no foreign tax on their accumulated income and capital gains, taxpayers making use of such trusts may benefit either from a deferral of tax or complete avoidance of tax. Avoidance occurs where the accumulated income is transformed into the capital of the trust, which is distributed to the Canadian beneficiaries tax-free.

Issue

The anti-avoidance rules in the Act attempt to tax income earned by non-resident trusts in certain circumstances in order to ensure that they are not used to defer Canadian tax on the income accumulating in the trusts. Current rules apply only to non-resident trusts with a Canadian beneficiary. However, these rules are not fully effective and relatively little of such income is taxed in Canada.

Canadian residents are able to transfer funds to non-resident trusts under circumstances designed to circumvent the application of existing anti-avoidance rules. The trust regimes in several tax-haven jurisdictions have been specifically modified in an attempt to permit Canadians to avoid the application of the anti-avoidance rules. A feature of such schemes is to disguise the fact that the non-resident trust has a Canadian resident beneficiary. A number of tax-haven jurisdictions have modified their trust laws so that no beneficiaries need to be designated, thus facilitating tax planning by Canadians in order to defer the taxation of the income accumulating in the non-resident trust. Arrangements between the Canadian transferors and the trustee ensure that the Canadian transferors retain effective control of the trust, or are able to designate who may ultimately receive capital of the trust, including its accumulated income.

Non-resident trusts can therefore offer higher-income Canadians the opportunity to defer or avoid Canadian tax on investment income that would otherwise be taxable in Canada.

Consultations will also be initiated on the following proposed modifications to the tax rules governing non-resident trusts:

- That where a Canadian resident transfers or loans property to a non-resident trust, the trust be treated as being resident in Canada and be taxed on all of its undistributed income, subject to a number of exceptions noted below. The Canadian resident transferor would be jointly (with the trust) liable for tax. Where a foreign income tax is imposed in respect of the undistributed income of the trust, a foreign tax credit would be provided. The proposed rules would apply whether or not the trust has a Canadian-resident beneficiary, since in practice it may not be possible to determine whether the property in the trust will be distributed to Canadian beneficiaries.
- That the proposed changes also deal with the distributions from trusts. Distributions out of current income of the trust would be taxed in the hands of the beneficiaries. As well, distributions out of any previously untaxed accumulated income of the trust would be subject to tax.
- That the following trusts be excluded from the application of the proposed rules:
  - trusts resident in the United States and subject to United States tax provisions;
  - non-resident trusts set up prior to immigrants' arrival in Canada, for a five-year period after immigration; and
  - non-resident trusts set up for the benefit of individuals with disabilities or children of divorced parents where the trust and beneficiaries are resident within the same country.
- Additional exceptions could be contemplated to remove from the rules non-resident trusts that are clearly not used to avoid or defer Canadian tax, such as bona fide foreign charitable trusts.
- The proposed rules would apply to any taxation year commencing after 1999, with respect to non-resident trusts to which a Canadian resident transfers or loans property on or after February 16, 1999, subject to the exceptions noted above. Other non-resident trusts to which a transfer or a loan of property was made by a Canadian resident before February 16, 1999, would be subject to the proposed rules for taxation years commencing after 2000.

The proposed changes are consistent with Revenue Canada devoting more resources to the audit of taxpayers whose investment activities extend beyond Canada.

Dept. of Finance news release 2001-120, Dec. 17, 2001: Non-Resident Trusts and Foreign Investment Entities

Finance Minister Paul Martin today announced a one-year delay of the effective date of income tax proposals affecting non-resident trusts and foreign investment entities.

Draft income tax legislation to implement these proposals, which were first put forward in the 1999 budget, was released for comment on August 2, 2001. Several detailed submissions have recently been received by the Department concerning the proposed legislation. Minister Martin noted that it is important to carefully consider these submissions before finalizing changes in this complex area of the income tax system.

Accordingly, it is proposed that the effective date for the new income tax rules affecting non-resident trusts and foreign investment entities be delayed by one year, generally to take effect for taxation years that begin after 2002. This delay will allow for full consideration, in the first part of next year, of all of the submissions that have been received, in order to finalize and implement these proposals before the end of 2002.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 31, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

I an responding to your letter to Len Farber dated May 1, 2001 concerning the Legislative Proposals and Explanatory Notes on Taxation of Non-Resident Trusts and Foreign Investment Entities (the "Legislative Proposals") released by the Department of Finance by way of Finance Canada News Release number 2000-050, dated June 22, 2000. As you know, Finance Canada News Release number 2000-064, dated September 7, 2000, states that the implementation date for the Legislative Proposals will be delayed by one year, to taxation years that begin after 2001.

Firstly, you suggested that the Legislative Proposals should be revised to allow a trust to elect to have the rules in proposed amended section 94 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") apply to the trust in respect of trust taxation years that begin after 2000. You noted that such a revision would be especially useful in cases such as where the trust is formed in 2001 and that the availability of such an election would obviate the need for the trust to report for the 2001 taxation year under the rules in existing subsection 94(1) and then to switch over to the rules in proposed new section 94 for the 2002 and subsequent taxation years.

We have no objections to this suggestion and we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance a revision to the implementation provision for proposed new section 94. The recommended implementation provision would provide that

- in general, proposed new section 94 would apply to trust taxation years that begin after 2001, and
- proposed new section 94 would apply to taxation years of the trust that begin after 2000, if the trust was formed in 2001 and has, on or before the trust's filing-due date for the taxation year of the trust that includes the day on which the Act implementing proposed new section 94 receives Royal Assent, notified the Minister of National Revenue in writing of its election to have proposed new subsection 94 apply to taxation years of the trust that begin after 2000.

Secondly, you made suggestions concerning paragraph (h) of the proposed new definition "exempt foreign trust" in proposed new subsection 94(1) . That paragraph essentially results in a trust described in paragraph (c) of the definition "exempt trust" in subsection 233.2(1) (i.e., a unit trust that has at least 150 beneficiaries in respect of the same class of units of the trust and meets the other conditions prescribed by section 4801.1 of the Income Tax Regulations) being an "exempt foreign trust" for the purpose of proposed new section 94. A unit trust that would not be subject to the rules in proposed new section 94 relating to non-resident trusts (the "new NRT rules") could, however, be subject to the rules in proposed new sections 94.1 and 94.2 relating to foreign investment entities (the "new FIE rules"). You pointed out that paragraph (h) of the proposed definition "exempt foreign trust" (as presently worded in the Legislative Proposals) could result in a situation where a unit trust would be subject to the new NRT rules in a particular taxation year of the trust if the trust did not, at the end of the particular year, have at least 150 beneficiaries, but would become subject to the new FIE rules in the subsequent year if, at the end of that subsequent year, the trust had at least 150 beneficiaries. You suggested that the Legislative Proposals should be revised to allow a trust to have the right to make an election, applicable to a current taxation year of the trust and all subsequent taxation years, to have the definition "exempt foreign trust" read without reference to paragraph (h).

We have no objections to this suggestion and we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance a revision to paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in proposed new subsection 94(1). The recommended revision would provide that a non-resident trust that is, at the particular time, a trust described in paragraph (c) of the definition "exempt trust" in subsection 233.2(1) will not be a trust described in paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in proposed new subsection 94(1) for the trust's taxation year that includes the particular time (referred to in this letter as the trust's "current year") if it meets all the following conditions:

- the trust has, on or before the trust's filing-due date for the taxation year of the trust that is the later of — the "electing year" (as defined below) of the trust,

  and

  — the taxation year of the trust that includes the day on which the Act implementing new section 94 receives Royal Assent, notified the Minister of National Revenue in writing that the trust is electing to have the definition "exempt foreign trust" read without reference to paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" for the "electing year" of the trust and for all subsequent taxation years of the trust, and

- throughout the period that begins at the beginning of the trust's "electing year" and ends at the end of the trust's current year (referred to in this letter as the "specified period"), all of the income of the trust for Canadian income tax purposes in any particular taxation year of the trust was paid, or became payable, in the particular year to a beneficiary under the trust.

For this purpose, the trust's "electing year" means the first particular taxation year of the trust in respect of which both of the following conditions are met:

- the trust is an "exempt foreign trust" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) at the end of the particular year and would, but for paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in new subsection 94(1), have been deemed by new subsection 94(3) to be resident in Canada in the particular year, and
- the trust was, because of new subsection 94(3) or existing subsection 94(l) of the Act, deemed to be resident in Canada in the trust's taxation year immediately preceding the particular year.

Thirdly, you made a suggestion for a change to paragraph (a) of the definition "foreign investment entity" in proposed new subsection 94.1(1) with a view to simplification of the drafting. While we will continue to consider your suggestion, we cannot at this time recommend the adoption of your suggestion.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

[This amendment is incorporated into the proposed legislation below — ed.]

CRA Notice, Jan. 3, 2008: Non-resident trusts and foreign investment entities

The 1999 federal budget contained proposed changes to the taxation of non-resident trusts (NRTs) and their beneficiaries and to the taxation of Canadian taxpayers who hold interests in foreign investment entities. The proposed changes, which were to apply to tax years that began after 2002, are generally designed to ensure that income earned indirectly by Canadian taxpayers through foreign intermediaries is not taxed at a more favourable rate than would be the case were the income earned without the involvement of those intermediaries.

On November 9, 2006, legislation to implement those changes was tabled in Parliament. The legislation, included in Bill C-10, would generally apply to tax years that begin after 2006, instead of tax years that begin after 2002. However, as discussed in more detail below, provision has been made to allow taxpayers to elect an earlier application of the rules as far back as their first tax year beginning after 2002 (or, for certain non-resident trusts, beginning after 2000). As a result of this change in the proposed implementation date, taxpayers who filed based on the proposed changes for a tax year that began before 2007 will need to either elect an earlier application of the rules or amend their tax returns.

Taxpayers who have filed their returns based on the proposed legislation but who do not intend to make an election should write to the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) as soon as possible to request an adjustment to their tax returns. Taxpayers should include the reasons for the reassessment and supporting documentation, along with amended information slips where applicable. Taxpayers who do not have the proper documentation to ask for a reassessment within the normal reassessment period and who need additional time to produce such documentation can file a waiver request to permit the CRA to reassess beyond the normal reassessment period. For more information, see Form T2029, Waiver in Respect of The Normal Reassessment Period.

NRTs may elect to apply the proposed legislation to any of their tax years that begin after 2002 (and before 2007) and subsequent tax years (or, where the trust was created in 2001 or 2002, the trust may elect to have the legislation apply for the tax year in which the trust was created and subsequent tax years). Taxpayers who hold interests in foreign investment entities may elect to apply the proposed legislation to any of their tax years that begin after 2002 (and before 2007) and subsequent tax years. To make an election, NRTs and taxpayers who hold interests in foreign investment entities will have to send a letter to the CRA on or before their filing due date for the tax year in which the legislation applies.

Adjustment requests and elections for NRTs should be sent to the International Tax Services Office. Adjustment requests and elections by taxpayers who hold interests in foreign investment entities should be sent to the local tax centre.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, Jan. 27, 2009: Non-Resident Trusts and Foreign Investment Entities

Outstanding proposals for non-resident trusts and foreign investment entities, first introduced in the 1999 Budget, apply in respect of arrangements under which Canadian residents seek to avoid Canadian tax through the use of foreign intermediaries under circumstances designed to circumvent the application of existing anti-avoidance rules. The Government has received submissions, including the [International Taxation Advisory] Panel's recommendations [see under s. 90 — ed.], on these proposals; the Government supports the fundamental policy objective of ensuring that Canadian taxpayers should not be able to avoid paying their fair share of income tax through the use of foreign intermediaries, but will review the existing proposals in light of these submissions before proceeding with measures in this area.

Federal Budget, Notice of Ways and Means Motion, March 4, 2010: (45) That the provisions of the Act relating to foreign investment entities and non-resident trusts be modified in accordance with the proposals described in the budget documents tabled by the Minister of Finance in the House of Commons on March 4, 2010.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: Foreign Investment Entities and Non-Resident Trusts

The Income Tax Act includes rules designed to prevent Canadians from using foreign intermediaries to avoid paying their fair share of tax. However, the rules are not fully effective in certain circumstances where aggressive offshore tax-planning schemes are used to circumvent their application.

The Government continues to make efforts to ensure that appropriate rules exist to counter these schemes. Most recently, proposals for amendments were tabled during the second session of the 39th Parliament. Those proposals were not enacted before Parliament was dissolved in September 2008. Budget 2009 stated that the Government would review the outstanding proposals before proceeding with measures in this area. As a result of this review, the Government has developed the following revised proposals to replace the outstanding proposals for public consultation with a view to developing revised legislation, which will then also be released for comment.

Foreign Investment Entities [former proposed 94.1-94.4 — ed.]

The revised proposals replace the outstanding proposals with respect to foreign investment entities with the following limited enhancements to the existing rules in the Income Tax Act:

- Section 94.1 of the Income Tax Act currently requires an income inclusion with respect to interests in an "offshore investment fund property" in certain circumstances. It is proposed that the prescribed rate applicable in computing the income inclusion for an interest in an offshore investment fund property be increased to the three-month-average Treasury Bill rate plus two percentage points. This increase in the prescribed rate is intended to better reflect actual long-term investment returns.
- Section 94 of the Income Tax Act currently requires certain beneficiaries of a non-resident trust that is not otherwise deemed resident in Canada to report income on a modified foreign accrual property income basis where the fair market value of the beneficiary's interest in the trust exceeds 10% of the value of all interests in the trust. It is proposed that these rules be broadened to apply to any resident beneficiary who, together with any person not dealing at arm's length with the beneficiary, holds 10% or more of any class of interests in a non-resident trust determined by fair market value. They will also apply to any resident who has contributed "restricted property" (as proposed to be defined, which is described below) to a non-resident trust. These changes will be relevant for beneficiaries of non-resident trusts that are not deemed resident in Canada by the revised proposals discussed below.
- It is proposed that the relevant reassessment period in respect of interests in offshore investment fund property and interests in trusts described in the previous paragraph be extended by three years. It is also proposed that the existing reporting requirements with respect to "specified foreign property" be expanded so that more detailed information is available for audit use. These additional measures are needed to ensure that the Canada Revenue Agency has the information and time required to identify and reassess those taxpayers who have not properly reported their income from transactions involving offshore investment fund properties and non-resident trusts.

Non-Resident Trusts

The revised proposals are based on the outstanding proposals with respect to non-resident trusts, but with substantial modifications meant to simplify the outstanding proposals and to better target arrangements that seek to avoid paying the appropriate amount of Canadian tax.

Scope of the Rules

The existing rules in the Income Tax Act deem a non-resident discretionary trust to be resident in Canada if it has a Canadian contributor and a related Canadian beneficiary. Such a trust is required to pay tax on its income in the same manner as other residents of Canada. The Canada Revenue Agency, however, has identified complex tax-planning arrangements that attempt to frustrate the fundamental policy objectives of these rules. The outstanding proposals were intended to prevent this type of tax avoidance by broadening the scope of non-resident trusts to which deemed residence would apply.

The outstanding proposals would have applied to non-resident trusts (other than exempt foreign trusts) with a resident contributor regardless of the current existence of a Canadian beneficiary. They would have also applied where the non-resident trust had a Canadian beneficiary and the contributor had been resident in Canada within 60 months of having made the contribution to the trust (referred to as a resident beneficiary under the outstanding proposals). A deemed resident trust would have been taxed on all of its income, regardless of who contributed the property upon which the income was earned or the source of the income. The outstanding proposals would have generally made both resident contributors and resident beneficiaries jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable for tax payable by a trust deemed resident.

The Government has received representations from taxpayers citing the complexity of the outstanding proposals and the difficulty for taxpayers in proceeding with legitimate, non-tax-motivated transactions because of uncertainty as to how those proposals would apply in a variety of particular situations. It is proposed that the scope of the outstanding proposals be simplified and better targeted in several ways.

First, concerns have been expressed that the outstanding proposals would have inadvertently caused a Canadian tax-exempt entity, such as a pension plan, that invested in a non-resident trust to become jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable for the trust's income tax liability despite its tax-exempt status under the Income Tax Act. It is proposed that an exemption from resident-contributor and resident-beneficiary status be provided for all persons exempt from tax under section 149 of the Income Tax Act (for example, pension funds, Crown corporations and registered charities). However, if a tax-exempt entity were to be used as a conduit to allow a resident of Canada to make an indirect contribution to a non-resident trust, provisions in the outstanding proposals would continue to ensure that the resident of Canada making the indirect contribution is still considered a resident contributor to the trust.

Secondly, concerns have been raised that under the outstanding proposals, an investor would be unable to determine with certainty whether any particular commercial trust would be deemed resident in Canada. Concerns have also been raised about the possibility that a commercial trust might be deemed resident in Canada due to circumstances beyond the investor's control. It has been argued that these uncertainties with respect to the potential application of the outstanding proposals deter genuine commercial investments from being made.

It is not intended that investments in bona fide commercial trusts be deterred; nor is it intended that bona fide commercial trusts be deemed resident in Canada. Consequently, it is proposed that the provision in the outstanding proposals that would have imposed deemed Canadian residence on a trust by reason only of the trust acquiring or holding restricted property be eliminated. This change will have the effect of expanding the exemption for commercial trusts under paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in the outstanding proposals. Furthermore, a commercial trust will not be deemed resident in Canada if the trust satisfies all the following conditions:

- each beneficiary is entitled to both the income and capital of the trust;
- any transfer of an interest by a beneficiary results in a disposition for the purposes of the Income Tax Act and interests in the trust cannot cease to exist otherwise than as a consequence of a redemption or cancellation under which the beneficiary is entitled to receive the fair market value of the interests;
- the amount of income and capital payable to a beneficiary does not depend on the exercise of, or failure to exercise, discretion by any person (discretion only with respect to the timing of distributions will not prevent a trust from being an exempt foreign trust);
- interests in the trust: (i) are listed and regularly traded on a designated stock exchange, (ii) were issued by the trust for fair market value, or (iii) where the trust has at least 150 investors, are available to the public in an open market;
- the terms of the trust cannot be varied without the consent of all the beneficiaries or, in the case of a widely held trust, a majority of the beneficiaries; and
- the trust is not a personal trust.

A commercial trust that is varied in a non-permitted way will lose its status as an exempt foreign trust and, at that time, will be taxable on all the trust's income that has been accumulated (together with an interest amount) since the time it first acquired a resident beneficiary or resident contributor. Taxing the trust on its accumulated income in this manner reflects the fact that the trust would not have qualified as an exempt foreign trust in the first place had the terms of the trust always provided for the trust to be varied in that manner; and consequently, the trust should have been subject to tax in Canada in earlier years. This new anti-avoidance rule is intended to reduce the incentive for Canadians to seek to avoid tax on their personal investments by structuring an arrangement to mimic a genuine commercial trust. However, recognizing that legitimate circumstances may exist in which non-resident beneficiaries may disclaim an interest in a commercial trust for non-tax reasons, a safe harbour will be provided where the interest being disclaimed is under a de minimis threshold.

Thirdly, as a result of the proposed changes to the definition "exempt foreign trust", the role of restricted property will be significantly reduced. Restricted property will, however, remain relevant for certain other purposes (for example, in determining whether a particular transfer of property results in an "arm's length transfer" as defined in the outstanding proposals). It is proposed that the definition "restricted property" be narrowed and better targeted. It will be limited to shares or rights (or property that derives its value from such shares or rights) acquired, held, loaned or transferred by a taxpayer as part of a series of transactions or events in which "specified shares" (as defined in the outstanding proposals being, generally, shares with fixed entitlement rights) of a closely-held corporation were issued at a tax cost less than their fair market value.

Finally, it was noted that under the outstanding proposals a conventional loan made by a Canadian financial institution to a non-resident trust in the ordinary course of its business could be viewed as a contribution to that trust, if as part of the terms and conditions of the loan, there was a potential for a transfer of restricted property between the parties (on default of the loan, for example). It is proposed that a new rule be added to ensure that loans made by a Canadian financial institution to a non-resident trust will not result in the financial institution being a resident contributor to the trust as long as the loan is made in the ordinary course of the financial institution's business.

Application of the Rules

Taxation of a Deemed Resident Trust

Where a non-resident trust has a resident beneficiary or a resident contributor, the outstanding proposals would have imposed tax on all of the trust's income and generally made the resident beneficiaries and resident contributors jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable for that tax. It is proposed that a number of refinements to the taxation of a trust deemed resident in Canada be made. For this purpose, it is proposed that the trust's property be divided into a resident portion and a non-resident portion. The resident portion will consist of property acquired by the trust by way of contributions from residents and certain former residents, and any property substituted for such property. The non-resident portion will consist of any property that is not part of the resident portion.

It is proposed that any income arising from property that is part of the non-resident portion, other than income from sources in Canada upon which non-residents are normally required to pay tax, be excluded from the trust's income for Canadian tax purposes. In addition, it is proposed that the trust's income be attributed to its resident contributors in proportion to their relative contributions to the trust (discussed below). The trust will be entitled to a deduction for both the amount of its income that is payable to its beneficiaries in the year and for amounts attributed to resident contributors. As a result, the trust itself will ordinarily pay tax in Canada only on income derived from contributions of certain former resident contributors.

It is proposed that, when income of the trust is not distributed to beneficiaries, the amount of the accumulated income for the relevant taxation year will be deemed to be a contribution by the trust's connected contributors and will form part of the resident portion for the next taxation year. There will be an exception to this deeming rule; accumulated income that arises from property that is part of the non-resident portion will not be subject to the deeming rule if it is kept separate and apart from all the property of the resident portion.

In addition, it is proposed that ordering rules be introduced with respect to distributions to beneficiaries of the trust. Distributions to resident beneficiaries will be deemed to be made first out of the resident portion of the trust's income while distributions to non-resident beneficiaries will be deemed to be made first out of the non-resident portion. Distributions to non-resident beneficiaries out of the non-resident portion of the trust will not be subject to Part XIII tax, but distributions to non-resident beneficiaries out of the resident portion of the trust will be subject to Part XIII tax.

It has been noted that the outstanding proposals do not fully recognize the foreign taxes paid to another country that also treats the trust as a resident for tax purposes. It is proposed to address this concern by permitting a trust that is deemed to be resident in Canada under these rules to claim a foreign tax credit for income taxes paid to another country that treats the trust as a resident of that country for income tax purposes, irrespective of the limits under subsection 20(11) of the Income Tax Act but up to the Canadian tax rate (which generally limits the foreign tax credit in respect of property income to 15% of the foreign income).

Attribution

As noted, the outstanding proposals would have generally made both resident contributors and resident beneficiaries jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable for tax payable by a trust deemed resident. This liability has raised concerns on the basis that resident contributors could be held liable for tax on income that has no connection with the property they contributed to the trust.

In response to these concerns, it is proposed that resident contributors to a trust that is deemed to be resident under these rules be attributed, and taxed on, their proportionate share of the trust's income for Canadian tax purposes. They will not be jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable for the trust's own income tax obligations (although resident beneficiaries will be liable with respect to the trust's income tax payable to the same extent as under the outstanding proposals).

The income attributed to resident contributors will generally be based on the proportion of the fair market value of their contributions to the trust (at the times the contributions were made) to the fair market value of all contributions received by the trust from connected contributors. Income distributions from the trust will reduce the amount of income that is attributed to resident contributors. When a resident contributor dies or otherwise ceases to be resident in Canada in a year, the income to be attributed to that person for that year will be limited to the relevant portion of the trust's income earned to the date of death or departure, as the case may be.

As part of the attribution rules, the amount attributed to resident contributors will be reduced by the amount of losses of other years claimed by the trust. In addition, it is proposed that a trust be able to designate a reasonable portion of its foreign tax credit to those contributors to whom amounts have been attributed, in a manner similar to the allocation of foreign tax credits to beneficiaries under the existing rules.

It is further proposed that the relevant reassessment period for income in respect of trusts subject to these rules be extended by three years. As indicated above with respect to foreign investment entities, this will assist the Canada Revenue Agency in identifying and reassessing those taxpayers who have not properly reported their income from transactions involving these trusts.

It is further proposed that the Income Tax Conventions Interpretation Act be amended to clarify that a trust that is deemed to be resident in Canada under these rules is a resident of Canada and subject to tax under the Income Tax Act for tax treaty purposes. One of the major purposes of Canada's tax treaties is to prevent tax avoidance and tax evasion. These proposals are anti-avoidance rules aimed at ensuring that residents of Canada pay tax on their worldwide income and as such, they are consistent with Canada's treaty obligations.

Date of Application

It is proposed that the measures regarding foreign investment entities apply for taxation years that end after March 4, 2010. A taxpayer who voluntarily complied with the outstanding proposals in previous years will have the option of having those years reassessed. If the taxpayer does not wish to be reassessed for those years, and had more income than would have been the case under the existing rules, the taxpayer will be entitled to a deduction in the current year for the excess income.

It is proposed that the measures regarding non-resident trusts apply for the 2007 and subsequent taxation years. An election allowing a trust to be deemed resident for the 2001 and subsequent taxation years will be available. The attribution of trust income to resident contributors will apply only to taxation years that end after March 4, 2010.

Public Consultation Process

The revised proposals described above will be subject to a consultation process before being tabled in Parliament. The public is welcomed and encouraged to submit comments with respect to these proposals before May 4, 2010. A panel consisting of respected tax practitioners will be formed to work with the Department of Finance in reviewing any issues identified in comments received and in making recommendations on the design of the draft legislation to implement the revised proposals, following which draft legislation will be released for public commentary.

94. [Treatment of trusts with Canadian contributors] — (1) Definitions — The definitions in this subsection apply in this section and in section 94.2.

"arm's length transfer", at any time by a person or partnership (referred to in this definition as the "transferor") means a transfer or loan (which transfer or loan is referred to in this definition as the "transfer") of property (other than restricted property) that is made at that time (referred to in this definition as the "transfer time") by the transferor to a particular person or partnership (referred to in this definition as the "recipient") where

(a) it is reasonable to conclude that none of the reasons (determined by reference to all the circumstances including the terms of a trust, an intention, the laws of a country or the existence of an agreement, a memorandum, a letter of wishes, or any other arrangement) for the transfer is the acquisition at any time by any person or partnership of an interest as a beneficiary under a non-resident trust; and

(b) the transfer

(i) is a payment of interest, of a dividend, of rent, of a royalty or of any other return on investment, or any substitute for such a return on investment, in respect of a particular property held by the recipient, if the amount of the payment is not more than the amount that the transferor would have paid if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient,

(ii) is a payment made by a corporation on a reduction of the paid-up capital in respect of shares of a class of its capital stock held by the recipient, if the amount of the payment is not more than the lesser of the amount of the reduction in the paid-up capital and the consideration for which the shares were issued,

(iii) is a transfer in exchange for which, the recipient transfers or loans property to the transferor, or becomes obligated to transfer or loan property to the transferor, and for which it is reasonable to conclude

(A) having regard only to the transfer and the exchange, that the transferor would have been willing to make the transfer if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient, and

(B) that the terms and conditions, and circumstances, under which the transfer was made would have been acceptable to the transferor if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient,

(iv) is a transfer made in satisfaction of an obligation referred to in subparagraph (iii), and for which it is reasonable to conclude

(A) having regard only to the transfer and the obligation, that the transferor would have been willing to make the transfer if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient, and

(B) that the terms and conditions, and circumstances, under which the transfer was made would have been acceptable to the transferor if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient,

(v) is a payment of an amount owing by the transferor under a written agreement the terms and conditions of which, when entered into, were terms and conditions that, having regard only to the amount owing and the agreement, would have been acceptable to the transferor if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient of the payment,

(vi) is a payment made before 2002 to a trust, to a corporation controlled by a trust or to a partnership of which a trust is a majority interest partner in repayment of or otherwise in respect of a loan made by a trust, corporation or partnership to the transferor, or

(vii) is a payment made after 2001 to a trust, to a corporation controlled by the trust or to a partnership of which the trust is a majority interest partner, in repayment of or otherwise in respect of a particular loan made by the trust, corporation or partnership to the transferor and either

(A) the payment is made before 2011, and they would have been willing to enter into the particular loan if they dealt at arm's length with each other, or

(B) the payment is made before 2005 in accordance with fixed repayment terms agreed to before June 23, 2000.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010). A loan or transfer of property by a person or partnership in respect of a trust will generally not be considered a "contribution" to the trust where the loan or transfer is an "arm's length transfer". In these circumstances, that loan or transfer generally will not cause the transferor to be considered to be a "contributor" to the trust. Accordingly, subsection 94(3) does not apply to a non-resident trust as a consequence only of an "arm's length transfer" in respect of the trust unless a deemed contribution or deemed contributor rule applies. For more information on the definitions "contribution" and "contributor" in subsection 94(1), see the commentary on those definitions.

The definition "arm's length transfer" also is relevant in applying some of the rules in new subsection 94(2).

If property transferred or loaned is "restricted property", the transfer or loan will not be an arm's length transfer. For more information on the definition "restricted property", see the commentary on that definition and subsection 94(14).

Under paragraph (a) of the definition, a transfer or loan will be an arm's length transfer only if it is reasonable to conclude that none of the reasons (determined by reference to all the circumstances including the terms of a trust, an intention, the laws of a country or the existence of an agreement, a memorandum, a letter of wishes or any other arrangement) for the transfer is the acquisition at any time by any person or partnership of an interest as a beneficiary under a non-resident trust. Thus, if any person receives a beneficial interest in a non-resident trust as a result of a particular transfer or loan of property or if it is reasonable to conclude that one of the reasons for the transfer was to facilitate the acquisition of such an interest, the transfer will not be an arm's length transfer.

Under subparagraphs (b)(i) and (ii) of the definition, an arm's length transfer includes, in general terms, an arm's length return on an investment (conferred by the entity in which the investment is made) and certain payments made by a corporation on a reduction of the paid-up capital in respect of shares of a class of the corporation's capital stock.

Under subparagraph (b)(iii) of the definition, an arm's length transfer includes a transfer (other than of restricted property) in exchange for which the recipient transfers or loans property (other than restricted property) to the transferor, or becomes obligated to so transfer or loan such property, and for which it is reasonable to conclude

- having regard only to the transfer and the exchange that the transferor would have been willing to make the transfer if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient, and
- that the terms and conditions, and circumstances, under which the transfer was made would have been acceptable to the transferor if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient.

An arm's length transfer described in subparagraph (b)(iii) will include most purchases and sales made to and by persons dealing at arm's length with one another. It may also include a repayment of a loan provided that the amounts of any interest and principal repaid were amounts that the transferor would have been willing to pay if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the trust.

Under subparagraph (b)(iv) of the definition, an arm's length transfer includes a transfer that is made in satisfaction of an obligation that arose because of a transfer to which subparagraph (b)(iii) applied, if

- the transferor would have been willing to make the transfer if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient, and
- the terms and conditions, and circumstances, under which the transfer was made would have been acceptable to the transferor if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient.

Under subparagraph (b)(v) of the definition, an arm's length transfer includes a transfer that is a payment of an amount owing by the transferor under a written agreement the terms and conditions of which, when entered into, were terms and conditions that, having regard only to the amount owing and the agreement, would have been acceptable to the transferor if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient.

Under subparagraph (b)(vi) of the definition, an arm's length transfer includes a transfer that is a payment made before 2002 to a trust, to a corporation controlled by the trust or to a partnership of which the trust is a majority interest partner, in repayment of or otherwise in respect of a particular loan made by the trust, corporation or partnership, as the case may be, to the transferor. The conditions that must be met in order to qualify as an arm's length transfer described in subparagraph (b)(vi) of the definition are similar to the circumstances prescribed by former section 5909 of the Income Tax Regulations (the "Regulations").

Finally, under subparagraph (b)(vii) of the definition, an arm's length transfer includes a transfer that is a payment made after 2001 to a trust, to a corporation controlled by the trust or to a partnership of which the trust is a majority interest partner, in repayment of or otherwise in respect of a particular loan made by the trust, corporation or partnership, as the case may be, to the transferor in circumstances where either

- the payment is made before 2011, and the parties would have been willing to enter into the particular loan if they dealt at arm's length with each other, or
- the payment is made before 2005 in accordance with fixed repayment terms agreed to before June 23, 2000.

The definition "arm's length transfer" generally applies to trust taxation years that end after 2006. However, where a trust elects, by notifying the Minister in writing on or before its filing-due date for its taxation year that includes the day on which the amending legislation introducing section 94 is assented to, the definition "arm's length transfer" will be read without reference to a loan or transfer of property that is made in a taxation year that begins before 2003 and is identified in the election. This electing provision recognizes that the definition "arm's length transfer" in the new rules does not have an equivalent under existing subsection 94(1). In particular, a non-resident trust considered resident under the existing law by reason of existing subsection 94(1) might not, in the absence of such an election, continue to be deemed resident under new subsection 94(3), which would result in the change in residency rules in subsection 128.1(4) applying. The election, which is found in the coming-into-force provision of the amending legislation, effectively permits a trust to elect to continue to be deemed resident.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamations — continuing corporation; 94(4)(a) [proposed] — Deeming non-resident trust to be resident in Canada does not apply.

"beneficiary", under a trust, includes

(a) a person or partnership that is beneficially interested in the trust; and

(b) a person or partnership that would be beneficially interested in the trust if the reference in subparagraph 248(25)(b)(ii) to

(i) "any arrangement in respect of the particular trust" were read as a reference to "any arrangement (including, for greater certainty, the terms or conditions of a share, or any arrangement in respect of a share, of the capital stock of a corporation that is beneficially interested in the particular trust) in respect of the particular trust", and

(ii) "the particular person or partnership might" were read as a reference to "the particular person or partnership becomes (or could become on the exercise of any discretion by any person or partnership), directly or indirectly, entitled to any amount derived, directly or indirectly, from the income or capital of the particular trust or might".

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Under paragraph (a) of the new definition "beneficiary" in subsection 94(1), a beneficiary under a trust includes a person or partnership beneficially interested in the trust. For greater certainty, where a partnership is a beneficiary under a trust, each of its partners is also a beneficiary under the trust by reason of paragraph 248(25)(c).

Under paragraph (b) of the new definition "beneficiary", a beneficiary under a trust also includes a person that would be beneficially interested in the trust if the reference in subparagraph 248(25)(b)(ii) to

(A) "any arrangement in respect of the particular trust" were read as a reference to "any arrangement (including the terms or conditions of a share, or any arrangement in respect of a share, of the capital stock of a corporation that is beneficially interested in the particular trust) in respect of the particular trust", and

(B) "the particular person or partnership might" were read as a reference to "the particular person or partnership becomes (or could become on the exercise of any discretion by any person or partnership), directly or indirectly, entitled to any amount derived, directly or indirectly, from the income or capital of the particular trust or might".

As a result, the shareholders of a corporate beneficiary would typically be considered beneficiaries of a trust for the purposes of new sections 94 and 94.2.

For the purposes of the Act, the expression "beneficially interested" has the meaning assigned by subsection 248(25).

Related Provisions: 248(25) — Meaning of "beneficially interested".

"closely-held corporation", at any time, means a corporation, other than a corporation in respect of which

(a) there is at least one class of shares of its capital stock that includes shares prescribed for the purpose of paragraph 110(1)(d);

(b) it is reasonable to conclude that at that time, in respect of each class of shares described by paragraph (a), shares of the class are held by at least 150 shareholders each of whom holds shares of the class that have a total fair market value of at least $500; and

(c) it is reasonable to conclude that at that time in no case does a particular shareholder (or particular shareholder together with any other shareholder with whom the particular shareholder does not deal at arm's length) hold shares of the corporation

(i) that would give the particular shareholder (or the particular shareholder together with those other shareholders referred to in this paragraph) 10% or more of the votes that could be cast under any circumstance at an annual meeting of shareholders of the corporation if the meeting were held at that time, or

(ii) that have a fair market value of 10% or more of the fair market value of all of the issued and outstanding shares of the corporation.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): The definition "closely-held corporation" is relevant to the definition "restricted property" and new subsection 233.2(2). For more information on the definition "restricted property" in subsection 94(1) and new subsection 233.2(2), see the commentary on those provisions. Paragraph 94(15)(a) is an anti-avoidance provision that applies in determining whether a corporation is a closely-held corporation at any time. For more detail, see the commentary on that provision.

A closely-held corporation, at any time, means a corporation, other than a corporation in respect of which

- there is at least one class of shares of its capital stock that includes shares prescribed for the purpose of paragraph 110(1)(d);
- it is reasonable to conclude that at that time, in respect of each class of shares of the corporation's capital stock that are shares prescribed for the purpose of paragraph 110(1)(d), shares of the class are held by at least 150 shareholders each of whom holds shares, of the class, that have a total fair market value of at least $500 — i.e., in general terms, the shares must be widely-held; and
- it is reasonable to conclude that at that time, in no case does a particular shareholder (or the particular shareholder together with any other shareholders with whom the particular shareholder does not deal at arm's length) hold shares of the capital stock of the corporation
  - — that would give the particular shareholder (or the particular shareholder together with those other shareholders with whom the particular shareholder does not deal at arm's length) 10% or more of the votes that could be cast under any circumstance at an annual meeting of shareholders of the corporation if the meeting were held at that time, or
  - — that have a fair market value of 10% or more of the fair market value of all of the issued and outstanding shares of the corporation.

Related Provisions: 94(15)(a)(i) — Anti-avoidance rule re conditions in para. (b).

"connected contributor", to a trust at a particular time, means a contributor to the trust at the particular time, other than

(a) an individual (other than a trust) who was, at or before the particular time, resident in Canada for a period of, or periods the total of which is, not more than 60 months (but not including an individual who, before the particular time, was never non-resident); or

(b) a person all of whose contributions to the trust made at or before the particular time were made at a non-resident time of the person.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): The definition "connected contributor" is relevant in determining whether a beneficiary is, at a particular time, a "resident beneficiary" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) under a non-resident trust. Under new paragraph 94(3)(d), such a resident beneficiary can, to an extent, be liable for the trust's income tax. For more information, see the commentary on subsections 94(3) and (7) to (10), subparagraph 152(4)(b)(vi) [now 152(4)(b)(vii) — ed.] and subsections 160(2.1) and (3).

A connected contributor at a particular time is any person, including a person that has ceased to exist, that is a "contributor" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) to the trust at that time, other than

- an individual who was resident in Canada for a period of, or periods the total of which is, not more than 60 months (but not including a trust or an individual who before that time was never non-resident), or
- a person all of whose contributions to the trust made at or before that time occurred at a "non-resident time" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) of the person.

For more information on the definitions "contributor", "resident beneficiary" and "non-resident time" in subsection 94(1), see the commentary on those definitions.

In the context of the definition "connected contributor", reference should also be made to new paragraphs 94(2)(a), (b) and (d) to (m) (which generally extend the circumstances in which a transfer is considered to occur for the purposes of section 94), new paragraphs 94(2)(n) to (q), subsections 94(11) to (13) (which generally extend the circumstances in which a contribution is considered to be made for the purposes of section 94 and may apply to deem a person or partnership to be a connected contributor to a trust), and paragraphs 94(2)(c) and (r) to (u) (which generally narrow the circumstances in which a contribution is considered to be made for the purposes of section 94). Reference should also be made to new subsection 94(10), which applies where a contributor becomes resident in Canada within 60 months after making a contribution to a trust.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation; 94(1)"contributor" — Exempt person excluded; 94(10) — Where contributor becomes resident in Canada within 60 months; 94(13)(a) — Deemed connected contributor if trust transfers property to another trust.

"contribution", to a trust by a particular person or partnership, means

(a) a transfer or loan (other than an arm's length transfer) of property to the trust by the particular person or partnership;

(b) if a particular transfer or loan (other than an arm's length transfer) of property is made by the particular person or partnership as part of a series of transactions that includes another transfer or loan (other than an arm's length transfer) of property to the trust by another person or partnership, that other transfer or loan to the extent that it can reasonably be considered to have been made in respect of the particular transfer or loan; and

(c) if the particular person or partnership becomes obligated to make a particular transfer or loan (other than a transfer or loan that would, if it were made, be an arm's length transfer) of property as part of a series of transactions that includes another transfer or loan (other than an arm's length transfer) of property to the trust by another person or partnership, that other transfer or loan to the extent that it can reasonably be considered to have been made in respect of the obligation.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Where a "contribution" is made at or before a particular time to a non-resident trust by a person or partnership, that person — or in the case of a partnership, a person that is a member of that partnership — will generally be considered to be a "contributor" at the particular time and, in certain cases (excluding, for example, electing contributors), will be jointly and severally or solidarily liable under subsection 94(3) for the trust's income taxes. For more detail on the expression "solidarily", please refer to the introductory commentary above on new section 94. For more information on subsection 94(3), see the commentary on that subsection.

Under paragraph (a) of the definition, a "contribution" to a trust by a particular person or partnership means a loan or transfer of property (in this commentary referred to as a "transfer") by the person or partnership to the trust (other than an "arm's length transfer", as defined in new subsection 94(1)).

Under paragraphs (b) and (c) of the definition "contribution", a contribution is also considered to have been made by a particular person or partnership where

- the particular person or partnership makes a particular transfer (other than an "arm's length transfer") as part of a series of transactions or events that includes another transfer (other than an arm's length transfer), to the trust, by another person or partnership; or
- the particular person or partnership becomes obligated to make a particular transfer (other than a transfer that would, if it were made, be an "arm's length transfer") as part of a series of transactions or events that includes another transfer (other than an arm's length transfer), to the trust, by another person or partnership.

In these circumstances, the other transfer is considered to be a contribution to the trust by the particular person or partnership only to the extent that the other transfer can reasonably be considered to have been made in respect of the particular transfer or the particular person or partnership's obligation to make the particular transfer, as the case may be. In either case, a contribution is considered to be made at the time of the other transfer.

There are a number of rules that have the effect of expanding the application of the definition "contribution". See the commentary on new paragraphs 94(2)(a), (b) and (d) to (m) (which generally extend the circumstances in which a transfer is considered to occur for the purposes of section 94), and new paragraphs 94(2)(n) to (q) and subsections 94(11) to (13) (which generally extend the circumstances in which a contribution is considered to be made for the purposes of section 94). See also the commentary on paragraphs 94(2)(c) and (r) to (u), which generally narrow the circumstances in which a contribution is considered to be made for the purposes of section 94.

The definition "contribution" applies to all loans and transfers, irrespective of when made.

Related Provisions: 94(2)(g) [proposed] — Deemed transfers; 94(2)(c), (s)–(u) [proposed] — Certain transfers deemed not to be contribution; 94(9) — Determination of contribution amount.

"contributor", to a trust at any time, means a person (other than an exempt person but including a person that has ceased to exist) that, at or before that time, has made a contribution to the trust.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): A "contributor" to a trust at any time means a person, other than an exempt person but including a person that has ceased to exist, that at or before that time has made a "contribution" (within the meaning assigned by subsections 94(1) and (2)) to the trust. The definition "contributor" is significant primarily for the purposes of the definitions "resident contributor" and "connected contributor" in new subsection 94(1). For more information, see the commentary on those definitions and on the definition "exempt person".

Reference should be made in this context to new paragraphs 94(2)(a), (b) and (d) to (m) (which generally extend the circumstances in which a transfer is considered to occur for the purposes of section 94), new paragraphs 94(2)(n) to (q) and subsections 94(11) to (13) (which generally extend the circumstances in which a contribution is considered to be made for the purposes of section 94) and paragraphs 94(2)(c) and (r) to (u) (which generally narrow the circumstances in which a contribution is considered to be made for the purposes of section 94).

Note that although a partnership is not considered to be a contributor in respect of contributions made by the partnership to a trust, persons that are members of the partnership are considered to have also made those contributions to the trust and, therefore, are contributors to the trust in respect of those contributions.

Related Provisions: 75(3)(c.3) — Reversionary trust rules do not apply to non-resident trust even with Canadian resident contributor; 94(13)(a) — Deemed connected contributor where trust transfers property to another trust; 233.2(4) — Annual information return required by contributor to non-resident trust.

"electing contributor" at any time in respect of a trust means a resident contributor, to the trust, who has elected to have subsection (16) apply in respect of the contributor and the trust for a taxation year of the contributor, that includes that time or that ends before that time, and for all subsequent taxation years, if

(a) the election was in writing filed with the Minister on or before the contributor's filing-due date for the first taxation year of the contributor for which the election was to take effect (referred to in this definition as the "initial year"); and

(b) the election included both the trust's account number as assigned by the Minister and evidence that the contributor notified, no later than 30 days after the end of the trust's taxation year that ends in the initial year, the trust that the election would be made.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): The definition "electing contributor" is relevant in applying the rules for attributing, under new subsections 94(16) and (17), trust income to a resident contributor. An electing contributor to a trust means a resident contributor to the trust who has elected to be attributed the electing contributor's share of the trust's income. For this purpose, the trust's income is determined after taking into account allocations to beneficiaries (i.e., after deducting amounts under subsections 104(6) and (12)) and after excluding amounts in respect of property income from the non-resident portion of the trust (i.e., as provided by subparagraph 94(3)(f)(i)). For more information on the definitions "resident contributor" and "resident portion" in new subsection 94(1), see the commentary on those definitions.

In order for an election to be valid it must be made to have subsection 94(16) apply to the contributor for the taxation year in which the election is made and for all subsequent taxation years, and it must be filed with the Minister on or before the contributor's filing-due date for that first taxation year. A valid election must also include the trust's account number assigned by the Minister (i.e., the number found in box 14 of the T3 information slip and also identified as the "Trust account number" on the first page of the trust's T3 return of income), and evidence that the contributor notified the trust, no later than 30 days after the end of the trust's taxation year that ends in the first year for which the election is to have effect, that the election would be made.

For more detail on the effect of making an election to be an electing contributor, see the commentary on subsections 94(7), 94(16) and 94(17).

Related Provisions: 75(3)(c.2) — Revocable trust rules do not apply; 94(16) — Election to limit liability from trust; 94(17) — Liability for joint contribution.

"exempt amount", in respect of a particular taxation year of a trust, means an amount that is

(a) paid or credited (in this definition within the meaning assigned by Part XIII) by the trust before 2004;

(b) paid or credited by the trust and referred to in paragraph 104(7.01)(b) in respect of the trust for the particular taxation year; or

(c) paid in the particular taxation year (or within 60 days after the end of the particular taxation year) by the trust directly to a beneficiary (determined without reference to subsection 248(25)) under the trust, if

(i) the beneficiary is a natural person none of whose interests as a beneficiary under the trust was ever acquired for consideration,

(ii) the amount is described in subparagraph 212(1)(c)(i) and is not included in computing an exempt amount in respect of any other taxation year of the trust,

(iii) the trust was created before October 30, 2003, and

(iv) no contribution has been made to the trust on or after July 18, 2005.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): The expression "exempt amount" is relevant in determining whether Part XIII tax applies to a non-resident person in respect of an amount paid or credited after 2003 by a trust to which subsection 94(3) applies. In general terms, Part XIII tax will not apply to such amounts if they are exempt amounts.

Three kinds of amounts may qualify as an exempt amount in respect of a particular taxation year of a trust. The first is any amount paid or credited (within the meaning assigned by Part XIII) by the trust before 2004.

The second is an amount that is paid or credited by the trust and referred to in paragraph 104(7.01)(b) in respect of the trust for the particular taxation year. For more detail on paragraph 104(7.01)(b), see the commentary on that provision.

The third type of exempt amount arises only in respect of trusts created before October 30, 2003 and to which no contributions have been made on or after July 18, 2005. In respect of such trusts, an exempt amount also means an amount (other than an amount included in computing an exempt amount in respect of any other taxation year of the trust) that is described in subparagraph 212(1)(c)(i) and paid in the particular taxation year (or within 60 days after the end of the particular taxation year) by the trust directly to a qualifying beneficiary under the trust. In this regard, a qualifying beneficiary means a beneficiary (determined without reference to subsection 248(25)) who is a natural person none of whose interests as a beneficiary under the trust was ever acquired for consideration (determined by reference to subsection 108(7)).

For more detail on subsection 108(7), see the commentary on that provision.

Related Provisions: 108(7) — Meaning of "acquired for consideration" in para. (c)(i).

"exempt foreign trust", at a particular time, means

(a) a non-resident trust, if

(i) each beneficiary under the trust at the particular time is

(A) an individual who, at the time that the trust was created, was, because of mental or physical infirmity, dependent on an individual who is a contributor to the trust or on an individual related to such a contributor (which beneficiary is referred to in this paragraph as an "infirm beneficiary"), or

(B) a person who is entitled, only after the particular time, to receive or otherwise obtain the use of any of the trust's income or capital,

(ii) at the particular time there is at least one infirm beneficiary who suffers from a mental or physical infirmity that causes the beneficiary to be dependent on a person,

(iii) each infirm beneficiary is, at all times that the infirm beneficiary is a beneficiary under the trust during the trust's taxation year that includes the particular time, non-resident, and

(iv) each contribution to the trust made at or before the particular time can reasonably be considered to have been, at the time that the contribution was made, made to provide for the maintenance of an infirm beneficiary during the expected period of the beneficiary's infirmity;

(b) a non-resident trust, if

(i) the trust was created as a consequence of the breakdown of a marriage or common-law partnership of two particular individuals to provide for the maintenance of a beneficiary under the trust who was, during that marriage or common-law partnership,

(A) a child of both of those particular individuals (which beneficiary is referred to in this paragraph as a "child beneficiary"), or

(B) one of those particular individuals (which beneficiary is referred to in this paragraph as the "adult beneficiary"),

(ii) each beneficiary under the trust at the particular time is

(A) a child beneficiary under 21 years of age,

(B) a child beneficiary under 31 years of age who is enrolled at any time in the trust's taxation year that includes the particular time at an educational institution that is described in subclause (iv)(B)(I) or (II),

(C) the adult beneficiary, or

(D) a person who is entitled, only after the particular time, to receive or otherwise obtain the use of any of the trust's income or capital,

(iii) each beneficiary described in any of clauses (ii)(A) to (C) is, at all times that the beneficiary is a beneficiary under the trust during the trust's taxation year that includes the particular time, non-resident,

(iv) each contribution to the trust, at the time that the contribution was made, was

(A) an amount paid by the particular individual other than the adult beneficiary that would be a support amount as defined in subsection 56.1(4) if it had been paid by that particular individual directly to the adult beneficiary, or

(B) made by one of those particular individuals or a person related to one of those particular individuals to provide for the maintenance of a child beneficiary, while the child was either under 21 years of age, or was under 31 years of age and enrolled at an educational institution located outside Canada that is

(I) a university, college or other educational institution that provides courses at a post-secondary school level, or

(II) an educational institution that provides courses designed to furnish a person with skills for, or improve a person's skills in, an occupation;

(c) a non-resident trust, if

(i) at the particular time, the trust is an agency of the United Nations,

(ii) at the particular time, the trust owns and administers a university described in paragraph (f) of the definition "total charitable gifts" in subsection 118.1(1),

(iii) at any time in the trust's taxation year that includes the particular time or at any time in the preceding calendar year, Her Majesty in right of Canada has made a gift to the trust, or

(iv) a trust established pursuant to the International Convention on the Establishment of an International Fund for Compensation for Oil Pollution Damage, 1992, or any protocol to it that has been ratified by the Government of Canada;

(d) a non-resident trust

(i) that, throughout the particular period that began at the time it was created and ends at the particular time, would be non-resident if this Act were read without reference to subsection (1) as that subsection read in its application to taxation years that include December 31, 2000,

(ii) that was created exclusively for charitable purposes and has been operated, throughout the particular period, exclusively for charitable purposes,

(iii) if the particular time is more than 24 months after the day on which the trust was created, in respect of which, there are at the particular time at least 20 persons (other than trusts) each of whom at the particular time

(A) is a contributor to the trust,

(B) exists, and

(C) deals at arm's length with at least 19 other contributors to the trust,

(iv) the income of which (determined in accordance with the laws described in subparagraph (v)) for each of its taxation years that ends at or before the particular time would, if the income were not distributed and the laws described in subparagraph (v) did not apply, be subject to an income or profits tax in the country in which it was resident in each of those taxation years, and

(v) that was, for each of its taxation years that ends at or before the particular time, exempt under the laws of the country in which it was resident from the payment of income or profits tax to the government of that country in recognition of the charitable purposes for which the trust is operated;

(e) a non-resident trust that, throughout the trust's taxation year that includes the particular time, is a trust governed by an employees profit sharing plan, a retirement compensation arrangement or a foreign retirement arrangement;

(f) a non-resident trust, if

(i) throughout the particular period that began when it was created and ends at the particular time it has been operated exclusively for the purpose of administering or providing employee benefits, and

(ii) throughout the trust's taxation year that includes the particular time

(A) the trust is a trust governed by an employee benefit plan or is a trust described in paragraph (a.1) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1),

(B) the trust is maintained for the benefit of natural persons the majority of whom are non-resident, and

(C) no benefits are provided under the trust, other than benefits in respect of qualifying services;

(g) a non-resident trust (other than a prescribed trust or a trust described in paragraph (a.1) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1)) that, throughout the particular period that began when it was created and ends at the particular time,

(i) has been resident in a particular country (other than Canada) the laws of which have, throughout the particular period,

(A) imposed an income or profits tax, and

(B) exempted the trust from the payment of all income tax, and all profits tax, to the government of that particular country in recognition of the purposes for which the trust is operated, and

(ii) has been operated exclusively for the purpose of administering or providing superannuation or pension benefits that are primarily in respect of services rendered, in the particular country, by natural persons who were non-resident at the time those services were rendered;

(h) a non-resident trust (other than a trust that elects, in writing filed with the Minister on or before the trust's filing-due date for the taxation year of the trust that includes the particular time, not to be an exempt foreign trust under this paragraph for the taxation year in which the election is made and for each subsequent taxation year), if at the particular time

(i) the only beneficiaries who may for any reason receive, at or after the particular time and directly from the trust, any of the income or capital of the trust are beneficiaries that hold specified fixed interests in the trust, and

(ii) any of the following applies:

(A) there are at least 150 beneficiaries described in subparagraph (i) under the trust each of whose specified fixed interests in the trust have at the particular time a total fair market value of at least $500,

(B) all specified fixed interests in the trust are listed on a designated stock exchange and in the 30 days immediately preceding the particular time specified fixed interests in the trust were traded on a designated stock exchange on at least 10 days,

(C) each outstanding specified fixed interest in the trust in the trust

(I) was issued by the trust in exchange for consideration that was not less than 90% of the interest's proportionate share of the net asset value of the trust's property at the time of its issuance, or

(II) was acquired in exchange for consideration equal to the fair market value of the interest at the time of its acquisition, or

(D) the trust is governed by

(I) a Roth IRA, within the meaning of section 408A of the Internal Revenue Code of the United States, or

(II) a plan or arrangement that was created after September 21, 2007, that is subject to that Code and that the Minister agrees is substantially similar to a Roth IRA; or

(i) a trust that is at the particular time a prescribed trust.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): An "exempt foreign trust" includes a number of different types of non-resident trusts that are exempt from deemed Canadian residence under new subsection 94(3). The expression refers to the following types of non-resident trusts:

(a) a non-resident trust the current income (determined with reference to amended subsection 108(3)) or capital from which can be provided only to one or more physically or mentally infirm dependent individuals, provided that each such individual is at all times that they are a beneficiary under the trust during the trust's current taxation year, non-resident, and that any property settled on the trust could reasonably be considered, at the time it was settled, to be necessary for the maintenance of those individuals;

(b) a non-resident trust created as a consequence of the breakdown of a marriage or common-law partnership of two individuals, the current income (determined with reference to amended subsection 108(3)) or capital from which can be provided only for the maintenance of non-resident beneficiaries of the trust who, during that marriage or common-law partnership, were either

- children of both of the individuals, if the beneficiaries are under 21 years of age (or under 31 years of age and enrolled in a specified educational institution); or
- one of those individuals.

Under this exemption, each contribution to the trust must have been to provide for the maintenance of those children or a former spouse or common-law partner of the relationship. In the case of contributions to provide for the maintenance of a former spouse or common-law partner of the relationship, those contributions must be an amount paid that would be a "support amount" (as defined in subsection 56.1(4)) if the amount had been paid directly to the former spouse or common-law partner;

(c) a non-resident trust that is an agency of the United Nations, certain non-resident trusts that own or administer a university described in paragraph (f) of the definition "total charitable gifts" in subsection 118.1(1), a non-resident trust to which her Majesty in right of Canada has made a gift in the trust's current taxation year or at any time in the preceding calendar year, or a non-resident trust established pursuant to the International Convention on the Establishment of an International Fund for Compensation for Oil Pollution Damage, 1992, or any protocol to that Convention ratified by the Government of Canada;

(d) certain non-resident trusts established exclusively for charitable purposes (as those purposes are defined under the laws of Canada);

(e) a non-resident trust that is governed by an employee profit sharing plan (as defined in subsection 248(1)), by a retirement compensation arrangement (as defined in subsection 248(1)), or, by a foreign retirement arrangement (as defined in subsection 248(1));

(f) certain foreign-trusteed employee benefit plans if at all times that the trust exists, it is operated exclusively for the purposes of providing employee benefits, and throughout its current taxation year the trust

- is governed by an employee benefit plan or described in paragraph (a.1) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1),
- is maintained for the benefit of natural persons, the majority of whom are non-resident, and
- provides only benefits in respect of qualifying services, as defined in subsection 94(1) (or, as provided in the enacting provision, only in respect of taxation years that end before 2009, benefits in respect of particular services rendered before November 9, 2006 to an employer by an employee if the employee had a right before November 9, 2006 to receive the benefits in respect of the particular services pursuant to a written agreement entered into before November 9, 2006, and (where the employee was resident in Canada on November 9, 2006), a copy of which was filed with a prescribed form with the Minister by or on behalf of the employer no later than April 30 of the first calendar year that begins after November 9, 2006;

(g) a non-resident trust (other than a trust prescribed in section 4800.1 of the Regulations or a trust described in paragraph (a.1) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1)) that at all times since it was created has been operated exclusively for the specific purposes described below, is resident in a particular country other than Canada and has been exempt — because it is operated for these specific purposes — from paying income tax to the government of that country. The specific purposes are administering or providing superannuation or pension benefits, where those benefits are primarily in respect of services rendered in that particular country by natural persons who were non-resident at the time the services were rendered — as a result, certain trusteed foreign pension plans or similar arrangements are intended to qualify as an exempt foreign trust under this provision;

(h) a non-resident trust (other than a trust that files an appropriate election with the Minister not to be an exempt foreign trust for the taxation year in which the election is made and for each subsequent taxation year) whose only beneficiaries with rights to receive directly from the trust any of the income or capital of the trust are beneficiaries that hold specified fixed interests (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) in the trust and one of the following applies:

- there are at least 150 direct beneficiaries under the trust each of whom holds specified fixed interests in the trust worth at least $500,
- all specified fixed interests in the trust are listed on a designated stock exchange and were traded on a designated stock exchange on at least 10 days in the 30 immediately preceding days,
- each outstanding specified fixed interest in the trust was either
  - — issued by the trust for at least 90 per cent of the interest's proportionate share of the net asset value of the trust's property at the time the interest was issued, or
  - — acquired for fair market value at the time the interest was issued, or
- the trust is governed by a Roth IRA within the meaning of section 408A of the United States Internal Revenue Code or a plan or arrangement created after September 21, 2007 that the Minister agrees is substantially similar to a Roth IRA, and that is substantially subject to the Code (in this context, the reference to the Minister means the Minister of National Revenue, acting as competent authority under the authority of the Convention between Canada and the United States of America with respect to Taxes on Income and on Capital); or

(i) a non-resident trust that is a prescribed trust.

Paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" is intended to apply to non-resident investment trusts that are truly commercial. Under new section 94.2, if a resident beneficiary holds, together with persons not dealing at arm's length with the resident beneficiary, 10% or more of the specified fixed interests in a trust described by paragraph (h) of the definition exempt foreign trust, the resident beneficiary is required to include in income a participating percentage of the trust's FAPI (determined as if the trust were a corporation). If section 94.2 does not apply in respect of an interest in the trust, section 94.1 may instead apply to require the beneficiary to include an amount in income. For more information on sections 94.1 and 94.2, see the commentary on those provisions.

"exempt person", at any time, means

(a) Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province;

(b) a person whose taxable income for the taxation year that includes that time is exempt from tax under this Part because of subsection 149(1);

(c) a trust resident in Canada or a Canadian corporation

(i) that was established by or arises by virtue of an Act of Parliament or the legislature of a province, and

(ii) the principal activities of which at that time are to administer, manage or invest the monies of one or more pension funds or plans established pursuant to an Act of Parliament or the legislature of a province or an order or regulation made under such an Act;

(d) a trust or corporation established by or arising by reason of an Act of Parliament or the legislature of a province in connection with a scheme or program for the compensation of workers injured in an accident arising out of or in the course of their employment;

(e) a trust resident in Canada all of the beneficiaries under which are at that time exempt persons;

(f) a Canadian corporation all of the shares, or rights to shares, of which are held at that time by exempt persons;

(g) a Canadian corporation without share capital all of the property of which is held at that time exclusively for the benefit of exempt persons; and

(h) a partnership all the members of which are at that time exempt persons.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010) The definition "exempt person" is relevant to the definitions "contributor" and "resident beneficiary" under new subsection 94(1). Generally, an exempt person means a person exempt by subsection 149(1) from paying tax on their taxable income. Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province, certain federal or provincial pension or workers compensation administrators, and intermediaries wholly owned by such entities. Exempt persons are neither contributors nor resident beneficiaries under sections 94 and 94.2.

Related Provisions: 94(1)"contributor" — Exempt person excluded from being contributor (and thus also from "resident contributor" and "connected contributor"); 94(1)"resident beneficiary" — Exempt person excluded from being resident beneficiary.

"exempt service" means a service rendered at any time by a person or partnership (referred to in this definition as the "service provider") to, for or on behalf of, another person or partnership (referred to in this definition as the "recipient") if

(a) the recipient is a trust and the service relates to the administration of the trust; or

(b) the following conditions apply in respect of the service, namely,

(i) the service is rendered in the service provider's capacity at that time as an employee or agent of the recipient,

(ii) in exchange for the service, the recipient transfers or loans property or becomes obligated to transfer or loan property, and

(iii) it is reasonable to conclude

(A) having regard only to the service and the exchange, that the service provider would be willing to carry out the service if the service provider were dealing at arm's length with the recipient, and

(B) that the terms, conditions and circumstances under which the service is provided would be acceptable to the service provider if the service provider were dealing at arm's length with the recipient.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010) The definition "exempt service" is relevant to new paragraph 94.2(d), which deems the provision of certain services (other than exempt services) to be a transfer of property.

An exempt service means a service rendered at any time by a person or partnership (the "service provider") to, for or on behalf of, another person or partnership (a "recipient"), if either

- the recipient is at that time a trust and the service relates to the administration of the trust; or
- the following conditions apply in respect of the service; namely

(i) the service is rendered in the service provider's capacity at that time as an employee or agent of the recipient,

(ii) in exchange for the service, the recipient transfers or loans property or becomes obligated to transfer or loan property, and

(iii) it is reasonable to conclude

(A) having regard only to the service and the exchange, that the service provider would have been willing to carry out the service if the service provider had dealt at arm's length with the recipient, and

(B) that the terms, conditions, and circumstances under which the service was provided would have been acceptable to the service provider if the service provider had dealt at arm's length with the recipient.

An exempt service that relates to the administration of the trust is not limited to services provided by a trustee of the trust, and may include legal, accounting and similar services provided in connection with the administration of the trust. However, where legal, accounting or similar services are provided in connection with a service provided by the trust, such services would not relate to the administration of the trust.

Related Provisions: 94(2)(d) — Exempt service excluded from rule deeming service to be transfer of property.

"joint contributor" at any time in respect of a contribution to a trust means, if more than one contributor has made the contribution, each of those contributors that is at that time a resident contributor to the trust.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010) The definition "joint contributor" is relevant in applying the rules for attributing, under new subsections 94(16) and (17), trust income to a resident contributor where, in respect of a given contribution to the trust, there is more than one contributor. In this circumstance, a joint contributor refers to each person that made (including a person that is deemed to have made) the contribution to the trust.

For more information on contributions, see the commentary on the extended meanings of transfers, loans and contributions in new subsection 94(2), and the commentary on the definition "contribution" in subsection 94(1).

Related Provisions: 94(16)(a)(ii) — Attribution of trust's income to electing contributors; 94(17) — Liability of joint contributor.

"non-resident portion" of a trust, at any time, means all property held by the trust to the extent that it is not at that time part of the resident portion of the trust.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010) The non-resident portion of a trust is defined by reference to the resident portion of a trust. Essentially, the non-resident portion of a trust constitutes all property held by the trust that is not part of the resident portion of the trust. Under new paragraph 94(3)(f), a trust that is deemed to be resident in Canada for a taxation year may disregard certain amounts in computing its income for the year.

Specifically, an income or loss from property, or a taxable capital gain or allowable capital loss from a disposition of property, is generally disregarded to the extent that the property is part of its non-resident portion (an exception applies in respect of certain Canadian source amounts, which are still required to be included in the trust's income even if they relate to property in the trust's non-resident portion.)

For more information on the definition "resident portion" in new subsection 94(1), see the commentary on that definition.

"non-resident time", of a person in respect of a contribution to a trust and a particular time, means a time (referred to in this definition as the "contribution time") at which the person made a contribution to a trust that is before the particular time and at which the person was non-resident (or, if the person is not in existence at the contribution time, the person was non-resident throughout the 18 months before ceasing to exist), where the person was non-resident or not in existence throughout the period that began 60 months before the contribution time (or, if the person is an individual and the trust arose on and as a consequence of the death of the individual, 18 months before the contribution time) and ends at the earlier of

(a) the time that is 60 months after the contribution time, and

(b) the particular time.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010) The definition "non-resident time" is relevant in determining whether a contributor to a trust is a "connected contributor" and whether the extended transfer ("look-through") rule in paragraph 94(2)(d) applies in determining whether a person or partnership has made a contribution to a trust.

The "non-resident time" of a person in respect of a contribution to a trust and a particular time means a time (referred to in this commentary as the "contribution time") at which the person made a contribution to a trust, that is before the particular time and at which the person was non-resident (or not in existence). However, such a time will qualify as a non-resident time only if the person was non-resident (or not in existence) throughout a specified period.

(i) General rule

In general (subject to the specific exceptions discussed below), the specified period is the period that begins 60 months before the contribution time and ends at the earlier of 60 months after the contribution time and the particular time.

The measurement of the specified period by reference to any particular time is meant to ensure that the contributing person and the trust may treat the contribution time as a non-resident time for the purposes of applying subsection 94(3) at a specified time (as defined in subsection 94(1)) in respect of the trust for a taxation year of the trust (generally, the end of that taxation year) if at the end of that particular year the contributor still has not become resident in Canada within the 60-month period after the contribution time.

However, new subsection 94(10) ensures that such a contributor will, for the purposes of the definition "connected contributor", be considered to have made the contribution at a time other than a non-resident time if the contributor becomes resident in Canada within the 60-month period after the contribution time. In such a case, at each such specified time in respect of the trust for a taxation year of the trust (generally, the end of each of those taxation years) following the contribution, there would be a connected contributor to the trust and, if there were a resident beneficiary under the trust, subsection 94(3) would also apply in respect of those years.

Amended subparagraph 152(4)(b)(vi) [now 152(4)(b)(vii) — ed.] ensures that a reassessment of a taxpayer arising out of the application of subsection 94(10) may be undertaken by the CRA within 3 years after the end of the taxpayer's normal reassessment period for the taxpayer's relevant taxation year.

(ii) Contributions made on and as a consequence of death

For contributions made by an individual to a trust or estate that arose on and as a consequence of the individual's death, the specified period will start 18 months before the individual's death and will end 60 months after the contribution time. However, since the individual will not be in existence after death, those contributions will, in effect, be considered to have been made at a non-resident time provided the individual was not resident in Canada throughout the 18 month period before the individual's death.

(iii) Contributions made before June 23, 2000

As indicated in the coming-into-force provision for new section 94, where the contribution time occurs before June 23, 2000, the specified period is the period that begins 18 months before the end of the trust's taxation year that includes the contribution time and ends at the earlier of 60 months after the contribution time and the particular time. In effect, a contribution made before June 23, 2000 will be considered to have been made by a person at a non-resident time if the person was non-resident in Canada for at least 18 consecutive months before the contribution was made, and remained non-resident for at least another 60 consecutive months after the contribution.

Example 1

Marie has never been resident in Canada. Upon her death in 2011, her property was transferred to a trust that is non-resident in Canada for the benefit of her adult children, one of whom is currently resident in Canada. No other property is contributed to the trust.

Results

1. Under paragraph 94(2)(j), the contribution is deemed to have been made immediately before Marie's death. Since Marie was not resident in Canada for the 18 months before her death and not in existence for the 60 months following her death, the contribution is considered to have been made at a non-resident time.

2. Although one of the beneficiaries is resident in Canada, that beneficiary is not a resident beneficiary for the purposes of these rules, and the trust is not deemed to be resident in Canada. If, at some time in the future, the trust is resettled or the property is otherwise transferred to a new trust, Marie will be deemed to be a contributor to the new trust by reason of new paragraph 94(2)(n). However, since Marie will either have been non-resident or not in existence for the 60 months before and after that transfer to the new trust, Marie's deemed contribution will be made at a non-resident time. The new trust will not be deemed resident even if one or more of the beneficiaries are resident in Canada at that time.

For more information on new subsection 94(10) and amended subparagraph 152(4)(b)(vi) [now 152(4)(b)(vii) — ed.], see the commentary on those provisions.

Related Provisions: 94(2)(j) — Where trust acquires property as a consequence of death of individual; 94(10) — Where contributor becomes resident in Canada within 60 months; 248(8) — Meaning of "consequence" of death.

"promoter", of a trust at any time, means a person or partnership that at or before that time establishes, organizes or substantially reorganizes the undertakings of the trust.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): The definition "promoter" is relevant in applying new paragraph 94(2)(s), which provides that a transfer to a trust will not be considered a contribution where certain conditions, described in that paragraph, are met. For this purpose a promoter means a person or partnership that establishes, organizes or substantially reorganizes the undertakings of the trust. For more information on paragraph 94(2)(s), see the commentary on that paragraph.

Related Provisions: 94(2)(s) — Where promoter required by securities law to acquire interest in commercial investment trust.

"qualifying services" means services that are

(a) rendered to an employer by an employee of the employer, which employee was non-resident throughout the period during which the services were rendered;

(b) rendered to an employer by an employee of the employer, other than services that were

(i) rendered primarily in Canada,

(ii) rendered primarily in connection with a business carried on by the employer in Canada, or

(iii) a combination of services described in subparagraphs (i) and (ii);

(c) rendered in a particular calendar month to an employer by an employee of the employer, which employee

(i) was resident in Canada throughout no more than 60 months during the 72-month period that ends at the end of the particular month, and

(ii) became a member of, or a beneficiary under, the plan or trust under which benefits in respect of the services may be provided (or a similar plan or trust for which the plan or the trust was substituted) before the end of the calendar month following the month in which the employee became resident in Canada; or

(d) any combination of services that are qualifying services determined without reference to this paragraph.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): The definition "qualifying services" is relevant in applying paragraph (f) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1).

In general terms, "qualifying services" are

- services rendered by an employee of an employer while the employee was non resident,
- services rendered to an employer other than services that were rendered primarily in Canada, services rendered in connection with a business carried on by an employer in Canada, or a combination of these services,
- services rendered in a particular calendar month by an employee of the employer which employee
  - — was resident in Canada no more than 60 months during the 72 month period that ends at the end of the particular month. and
  - — became a member of, or a beneficiary under the plan or trust under which benefits in respect of the services may be provided (or a similar plan or trust for which the plan or the trust was substituted) before the end of the calendar month following the month in which the employee became resident in Canada, or
- any combination of services that are qualifying services described above.

For more detail on paragraph (f) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1), see the commentary on that definition.

Related Provisions: 94(1)"exempt foreign trust"(f)(ii)(C) — Providing benefits in respect of qualifying services does not disqualify trust.

"resident beneficiary", under a trust at any time, means a person (other than a person that is at that time a successor beneficiary under the trust or an exempt person) that is, at that time, a beneficiary under the trust where, at that time,

(a) the person is resident in Canada; and

(b) there is a connected contributor to the trust.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Under new subsection 94(3), a particular trust is generally treated as resident in Canada for a particular taxation year of the trust if there is a "resident beneficiary" under the particular trust at a "specified time" (generally, the end of the particular year). Under new paragraph 94(3)(d), each resident beneficiary can be jointly and severally or solidarily liable with the particular trust for the particular trust's income tax liabilities under the Act for the particular year. For further information with respect to the expression "solidarily", please refer to the introductory commentary on new section 94. See also the commentary on new subsection 94(3).

A resident beneficiary at a particular time under a trust is a person (other than a person that is at that time an "exempt person" or a "successor beneficiary" in respect of the trust) that, at that time, is a beneficiary under the trust, if, at that time,

- the person is resident in Canada; and
- there is a "connected contributor" to the trust.

The expressions "connected contributor", "exempt person", "specified time" and "successor beneficiary" are defined in new subsection 94(1). For further information, see the commentary on those definitions.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Apr. 2, 2008:

Ms. Katie A. Walmsley, The Investment Counsel Association of Canada

Dear Ms. Walmsley:

Thank you for your correspondence, on behalf of the Investment Counsel Association of Canada (ICAC), dated January 22, 2008 and concerning Bill C-10. I also acknowledge our discussions on this subject matter.

Bill C-10 contains proposed amendments (the "NRT proposals") to the existing deemed residency rules in the Income Tax Act that apply in respect of non-resident trusts. The amended regime treats certain otherwise non-resident trusts as residents of Canada where the trust has either a "resident contributor" or a "resident beneficiary". Each resident contributor and resident beneficiary is generally liable together with the trust for any unpaid Canadian tax of the trust. The determination of whether an entity is a resident contributor or a resident beneficiary is made without regard to the tax status of the entity for purposes of the Act.

The statutory trust residence rule is suspended, however, where the trust is a non-resident commercial trust (as set out in the "exempt foreign trust" definition in proposed subsection 94(1) of the Act), in which case the foreign investment entity regime applies instead. The relevant provisions in the exempt foreign trust definition were developed after extensive consultations with taxpayers and representatives from the tax community and were understood to have accommodated investments of Canadians in foreign commercial trusts. Nonetheless, I appreciate from your submissions that ICAC is concerned with how the NRT proposals would apply in the context of investments made by registered pension plans, registered retirement savings plans and similar plans in non-resident commercial investment trusts.

I understand that ICAC is prepared to support the enactment of Bill C-10 but is seeking two amendments to these rules as soon as possible after the passage of Bill C-10. In general terms, the first amendment would involve an exemption from resident contributor and resident beneficiary status for most registered pension plans, the Canada Pension Plan Investment Board (and similar provincial pension funds), and certain Canadian intermediaries (trusts and corporations) in which these qualifying pension plans are the only holders of equity interests or participating debt. The exemption would not, however, apply to a plan that is a designated plan (as defined in subsection 8500(1) of the Income Tax Regulations), a plan that has fewer than 10 members (as defined in subsection 147.1(1) of the Act), or a trust or corporation any of the activities of which is to administer, manage or invest the monies of a retirement compensation arrangement.

The second amendment would modify the provisions of paragraph (h) of the exempt foreign trust definition to include a non-resident commercial investment trust, without regard to whether the trust holds restricted property, in which the only Canadian resident investors are Canadian mutual funds (as defined in sections 131 and 132 of the Act, and having at least 150 investors) whose investors are exclusively the pension plan entities that qualify for the exemption described above, registered retirement savings plans, and registered retirement income funds.

I am prepared to recommend to the Minister that these two amendments be made at the earliest opportunity following the passage of Bill C-10. It would also be my recommendation that these proposed changes apply to the 2007 and subsequent taxation years. While I cannot give any assurance that Parliament will agree with this recommendation, I hope that this statement of our position is helpful to you.

Sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, General Director, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Apr. 2, 2008:

Mr. Roger Robineau, Chair, Pension Investment Association of Canada (PIAC)

Dear Mr. Robineau:

Thank you for your correspondence, dated January 28, 2008, concerning Bill C-10.

Bill C-10 contains proposed amendments (the "NRT proposals") to the existing deemed residency rules in the Income Tax Act that apply in respect of non-resident trusts. The amended regime treats certain otherwise non-resident trusts as residents of Canada where the trust has either a "resident contributor" or a "resident beneficiary". Each resident contributor and resident beneficiary is generally liable together with the trust for any unpaid Canadian tax of the trust. The determination of whether an entity is a resident contributor or a resident beneficiary is made without regard to the tax status of the entity for purposes of the Act.

The statutory trust residence rule is suspended, however, where the trust is a non-resident commercial trust (as set out in the "exempt foreign trust" definition in proposed subsection 94(1) of the Act), in which case the foreign investment entity regime applies instead. The relevant provisions in the exempt foreign trust definition were developed after extensive consultations with taxpayers and representatives from the tax community and were understood to have accommodated investments of Canadians in foreign commercial trusts. Nonetheless, I appreciate from your submissions that PIAC is concerned with how the NRT proposals would apply in the context of investments made by registered pension plans, registered retirement savings plans and similar plans in non-resident commercial investment trusts.

I understand that PIAC is prepared to support the enactment of Bill C-10 but is seeking two amendments to these rules as soon as possible after the passage of Bill C-10. In general terms, the first amendment would involve an exemption from resident contributor and resident beneficiary status for most registered pension plans, the Canada Pension Plan Investment Board (and similar provincial pension funds), and certain Canadian intermediaries (trusts and corporations) in which these qualifying pension plans are the only holders of equity interests or participating debt. The exemption would not, however, apply to a plan that is a designated plan (as defined in subsection 8500(1) of the Income Tax Regulations), a plan that has fewer than 10 members (as defined in subsection 147.1(1) of the Act), or a trust or corporation any of the activities of which is to administer, manage or invest the monies of a retirement compensation arrangement.

The second amendment would modify the provisions of paragraph (h) of the exempt foreign trust definition to include a non-resident commercial investment trust, without regard to whether the trust holds restricted property, in which the only Canadian resident investors are Canadian mutual funds (as defined in sections 131 and 132 of the Act, and having at least 150 investors) whose investors are exclusively the pension plan entities that qualify for the exemption described above, registered retirement savings plans, and registered retirement income funds.

I am prepared to recommend to the Minister that these two amendments be made at the earliest opportunity following the passage of Bill C-10. It would also be my recommendation that these proposed changes apply to the 2007 and subsequent taxation years. While I cannot give any assurance that Parliament will agree with this recommendation, I hope that this statement of our position is helpful to you.

Sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, General Director, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Apr. 29, 2008:

Mr. Roger Robineau, Chair, Pension Investment Association of Canada

Dear Mr. Robineau:

This is further to your letter of April 21, in response to my letter of April 2, 2008, concerning Bill C-10 and, in particular, the application of the proposed income tax rules for non-resident trusts (NRTs) to investments made by pension entities in NRTs. I also acknowledge discussions between officials of this Department and representatives of your Association and the Investment Counsel Association of Canada.

In my previous letter, I confirmed that we were prepared to recommend amendments to the Income Tax Act following the passage of Bill C-10 that would exempt certain pension entities, including registered pension plans (RPPs), from resident contributor and resident beneficiary status under the NRT rules. You have expressed concern that the constraint on retirement compensation arrangement (RCA) related activities mentioned in my letter would apply to RPPs.

As noted in our discussions, it is intended that the exemption apply to the following "qualifying pension entities":

- an RPP, other than a "designated plan" (as defined in subsection 8500(1) of the Income Tax Regulations) or a plan that has fewer than 10 members;
- a trust (other than an "RCA trust" (as defined in subsection 207.5(1) of the Act)) or corporation (such as, for example, the Canada Pension Plan Investment Board, the Public Sector Pension Investment Board and the Caisse de dépôt et placement du Québec) established by federal or provincial legislation the principal activities of which are to administer, manage or invest the monies of one or more pension funds or plans established pursuant to such legislation; and
- certain Canadian intermediaries — corporations and trusts (including segregated fund trusts) — in which qualifying pension entities are the only beneficiaries and holders of participating debt.

I trust this addresses your concerns and look forward to receiving your confirmation to this effect.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, General Director — Legislation, Tax Policy Branch

Related Provisions: 94(1)"beneficiary" — Extended meaning of "beneficiary"; 94(3)(a) — Trust with resident beneficiary deemed resident in Canada for certain purposes; 94(3)(d), 94(7) — Liability of resident beneficiary for trust's tax.

"resident contributor", to a trust at any time, means a person that is, at that time, resident in Canada and a contributor to the trust, but does not include

(a) an individual (other than a trust) who has not, at that time, been resident in Canada for a period of, or periods the total of which is, more than 60 months (other than an individual who, before that time, was never non-resident); or

(b) an individual (other than a trust), if

(i) the trust is an inter vivos trust that was created before 1960 by a person who was non-resident when the trust was created, and

(ii) the individual has not, after 1959, made a contribution to the trust.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Under new subsection 94(3), a trust is generally treated as resident in Canada for a particular taxation year of the trust if there is a "resident contributor" to the trust at a "specified time" in respect of the trust for the particular taxation year (generally, the end of the particular year). Under new paragraph 94(3)(d), a "resident contributor" to a trust, other than an electing contributor to the trust, can be jointly and severally or solidarily liable with the trust for the trust's income tax liabilities under the Act for the particular year. For further information with respect to the expression "solidarily", please refer to the introductory commentary above on new section 94.

A "resident contributor" to a trust at any time means a person that is, at that time, resident in Canada and a "contributor" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) to the trust. However, an exemption from treatment as a resident contributor is provided for a contributor who is:

- an individual who has been resident in Canada for a period of, or periods the total of which is, not more than 60 months (but not including an individual who before that time was never non-resident); and

- an individual, if the trust is an inter vivos trust that was created before 1960 by a person who was non-resident when the trust was created and the individual made no contribution after 1959 to the trust.

In the context of this definition, reference should also be made to new paragraphs 94(2)(a), (b) and (d) to (m) (which extend the circumstances in which a transfer is considered to occur for the purposes of section 94), new paragraphs 94(2)(n) to (q) and subsections 94(11) to (13) (which generally extend the circumstances in which a contribution is considered to be made for the purposes of section 94) and paragraphs 94(2)(c) and (r) to (u) (which generally narrow the circumstances in which a contribution is considered to be made for the purposes of section 94).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, Sept. 22, 2000:

Dear [xxx]:

I am responding to your faxed memo to me dated August 25, 2000 concerning the Legislative Proposals and Explanatory Notes on Taxation of Non-Resident Trusts and Foreign Investment Entities (the "Legislative Proposals") released by the Department of Finance by way of Finance Canada News Release number 2000-050, dated June 22, 2000.

In your memo, you referred to the grandfathering provision in existing clause 94(l)(b)(i)(D) of the Income Tax Act in relation to inter vivos trusts created at any time before 1960 by a person who at that time was a non-resident person. In this connection, you have suggested that a grandfathering rule be introduced in the Legislative Proposals. In particular, you have suggested that the definition "resident contributor" in new proposed subsection 94(1) of the Act be revised to exclude from that definition an individual, in the case of a particular trust, where

(i) the particular trust is an inter vivos trust that was created at any time before 1960 by a person who at that time was a non-resident person, and

(ii) no contribution is made to the particular trust by the individual at any time after 1959.

We are prepared to recommend to the Minister your suggested revision to that definition.

We confirm that the effect of this revision would be to save a non-resident trust from the application of the rule in proposed paragraph 94(3)(a) (which deems the trust to be resident in Canada for tax purposes) in any particular trust taxation year only if all the following conditions are met:

1. the trust is an inter vivos trust that was created at any time before 1960 by a person who at that time was a non-resident person,

2. no contribution is made to the trust at any time after 1959 by any individual who, at the end of the particular year, is both resident in Canada and a contributor to the trust (except an individual (other than a trust) who has not, at the end of the particular year, been resident in Canada for a period of, or periods the total of which is, more than 60 months), and

3. there are no resident beneficiaries (as defined in the Legislative Proposals) under the trust at the end of the particular year.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber, General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

[This amendment is incorporated into the proposed legislation above — ed.]

Letters from Dept. of Finance, Apr. 2 and 29, 2008: See under 94(1)"resident beneficiary".

Related Provisions: 75(3)(c.3) — Whether revocable trust rules apply; 94(1)"connected contributor"(a) — 60-month limit; 94(1)"contributor" — Exempt person excluded; 94.1(2)"non-resident entity"(c) — Offshore investment property rules do not apply to immigration trust; 94(3)(a) [proposed] — Trust with resident beneficiary deemed resident in Canada for certain purposes; 94(3)(d)(i) [proposed] — Liability of resident contributor for trust's tax; 94(5) [proposed] — Trust ceases to be resident in Canada once there is no resident contributor.

"resident portion" of a trust, at a particular time, means all property held by the trust

(a) in respect of which a contribution has been made at or before the particular time to the trust by a contributor that is at the particular time a connected contributor or a resident contributor (except that if a property held in common or in partnership is contributed by one or more connected contributors or resident contributors and one or more persons who are not a connected contributor or a resident contributor, then that property is described by this paragraph only to the extent of the contributions by the connected contributors or resident contributors);

(b) if the trust has incurred indebtedness in the course of acquiring at or before the particular time a property, or substituted property, all or part of which would not, if this definition were read without reference to this paragraph, be part of the resident portion of the trust (such property, or part of such property, referred to in this paragraph as the "subject property"), and the acquisition by the trust of the subject property is not a contribution to the trust, that is the subject property to the extent of the greater of

(i) the amount determined by the formula

$$A/B \times C$$

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a property held in the resident portion of the trust at the beginning of the trust's taxation year in which the trust acquired the subject property,

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a property held by the trust at the beginning of the trust's taxation year in which the trust acquired the subject property, and

C is the fair market value of the subject property at the time it was acquired by the trust, and

(ii) the amount that would be determined by the formula in subparagraph (i) if the references in that formula to the beginning of the trust's taxation year were read as references to the end of the trust's taxation year and the subject property was not held by the trust at the end of that taxation year;

(c) to the extent that it is at the particular time substituted for a property described by paragraph (a) or (b); and

(d) not described by any of paragraphs (a) to (c), to the extent that it is derived, directly or indirectly, in any manner whatever, from property described by any of paragraphs (a) to (c), and, without limiting the generality of the foregoing, including property derived from the income (computed without reference to paragraph (16)(f)) of the trust for a taxation year of the trust that ends at or before the particular time and property in respect of which an amount would be described at the particular time in respect of the trust under the definition "capital dividend account" in subsection 89(1) if the trust were at the particular time a corporation.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): The expression "resident portion" is relevant to determining which property of a trust will be considered in determining the Canadian income tax consequences to a trust that is deemed by subsection 94(3) to be resident in Canada for a taxation year. In general, contributions of property to the trust will form part of the resident portion of the trust to the extent that they were made by current or former residents of Canada.

More specifically, paragraph (a) of the definition provides that all property held by the trust in respect of which a contribution has been made by a "connected contributor" or a "resident contributor" will be a part of the resident portion of the trust. Therefore, if a contribution of property is made jointly by a resident contributor and a non-resident contributor (whether in fact, or by reason of a deeming provision), the property will form part of the resident portion. However, an exception is provided for property held in common or in partnership and that is contributed by one or more connected or resident contributors and one or more persons who are not connected or resident contributors. In such a case, the property will form part of the resident portion of the trust only to the extent of the contributions by connected or resident contributors. This exception contemplates that a particular property be notionally divided, such that part of the property will form part of the resident portion and part of the property will form part of the non-resident portion of the trust, according to the extent to which contributions were made by connected contributors and resident contributors to the trust and by persons who are not connected or resident contributors to the trust in respect of the property.

When a non-resident makes a contribution within 60 months of becoming resident in Canada, the contribution will form part of the resident portion as of the date of the contribution by operation of subsection 94(10). For more information on the effect of 94(10) on electing contributors, see the commentary on subsection 94(16).

Paragraph (b) of the definition provides a rule to apportion a specified property, or property substituted for it, a part of which would not otherwise be part of the resident portion of the trust, in respect of which the trust has incurred indebtedness (e.g., by way of a loan, or the unpaid portion of the purchase price) in order to fund its acquisition. If the acquisition of the specified property is not a contribution to the trust, paragraph (b) applies a formula to allocate a part of the specified property to the resident portion of the trust to the extent of the greater of

- the fair market value of the specified property multiplied by the proportion that the total fair market value of all property held in the resident portion of the trust at the beginning of the trust's taxation year in which the trust acquired the specified property is of the total fair market value of all property held by the trust at the beginning of the trust's taxation year in which the trust acquired the specified property; and

- the amount determined by the computation directly above if references to the beginning of the trust's taxation year were read as the end of the trust's taxation year, and if the specified property was not held by the trust at the end of that taxation year.

Paragraph (b) therefore has the effect of allocating the specified property between the resident portion and the non-resident portion on a reasonable basis, accounting for additional contributions to the trust made in the year.

Paragraph (c) provides that the resident portion of the trust will also include property to the extent that it is substituted for property described in paragraphs (a) and (b) of the definition. In this context, paragraph (c) is informed by the meaning of "substituted property" under subsection 248(5) such that property substituted for substituted property within the meaning of paragraph (c) will also form part of the resident portion of the trust.

Paragraph (d) of the definition includes in the resident portion of the trust property that is not described by any of paragraphs (a) to (c) of the definition to the extent that it is derived, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, from property described in those paragraphs. Under paragraph (d), such property would include, but not be limited to, income accumulating in the trust and income earned on such accumulating income, capital gains (i.e., the tax-free portion of a capital gain), and insurance proceeds in respect of which the insurance premiums were funded in whole in part by property from the resident portion of the trust.

For more information on the definitions "connected contributor", "resident contributor" and "non-resident portion" in new subsection 94(1), see the commentary on those definitions.

Example 1

1. Cathy, who has never been resident in Canada, settled a non-resident trust in 2004 for the benefit of her daughter, Mary, and Mary's family (all of whom are resident in Canada), by making a contribution of $100,000 to the trust. The trust used $50,000 of this amount to acquire a guaranteed investment certificate issued by a financial institution that is not resident in Canada and provides a 6% annual return on investment (with simple interest), and used the remaining $50,000 to acquire shares in a public corporation, Corporation A. The $3,000 earned annually on the guaranteed investment certificate is used by the trust to pay, on an annual basis, $3,000 in investment counsel fees that meet the conditions set out in paragraph 20(1)(bb). At the end of 2009, the total fair market value of all of the trust's assets is $200,000 (comprised of the guaranteed investment certificate valued at $50,000 and shares of Corporation A valued at $150,000).

2. On May 15, 2010, Mary made a contribution of $200,000 to the trust which was deposited in an interest-bearing foreign bank account that earns $20,000 in 2010 and each following year as simple interest, payable at the end of each year. As a result, the trust's income for 2010 is $23,000 ($3,000 in interest from the guaranteed investment certificate and $20,000 in interest from the foreign bank account, none of which is derived from a source in Canada). As such, none of the trust's investments is derived from sources in Canada. At the end of 2010, the total fair market value of all of the trust's assets is $420,000 (comprised of the guaranteed investment certificate valued at $50,000, $220,000 held on deposit, and the shares of Corporation A valued at $150,000).

3. On May 15, 2011, the trust disposes of all its shares of Corporation A for $250,000 and invests the proceeds in shares of another corporation, Corporation B (the fair market value of which, at December 31, 2011, is $250,000). At the end of 2011, the total fair market value of all of the trust's assets is $540,000 (comprised of the guaranteed investment certificate valued at $50,000, $240,000 held on deposit, and the shares of Corporation B valued at $250,000).

4. On May 15, 2012, the trust borrows $100,000 from a bank. The trust uses the proceeds of the loan to acquire shares of another public corporation, Corporation C, the fair market value of which, at December 31, 2012, is $100,000. The trust also earns in 2012 another $20,000 on the amount held on deposit in the interest-bearing account and another $3,000 in interest on the guaranteed investment certificate which it uses to pay the investment counsel fees of an equal amount. At the end of 2012, the total fair market value of all of the trust's assets is $660,000 (comprised of the guaranteed investment certificate valued at $50,000, $260,000 held on deposit, the shares of Corporation B valued at $250,000 and the shares of Corporation C valued at $100,000).

5. Although the trust is resident in Country X, it is not required to pay any income tax to Country X. In addition, since Mary elects to be an electing contributor, the trust is not required to pay any Canadian income tax.

6. At no time has the trust has made a distribution to its beneficiaries.

Results

2004–2009

1. The trust is not deemed to be resident in Canada under new subsection 94(3) for any of its 2004 to 2009 taxation years.

2010

2. The trust is deemed to be resident in Canada under subsection 94(3) for its 2010 taxation year because Mary is a resident contributor to, and a resident beneficiary under, the trust at the end of that year. Since the trust is deemed resident for its 2010 taxation year (and not the immediately preceding year), new paragraph 94(3)(c) deems the trust to have disposed of its shares in Corporation A immediately before its 2010 taxation year such that the adjusted cost base of those shares at the end of 2009 is $150,000. In computing the trust's income for 2010 for Canadian tax purposes, the amount of the trust's income from its "non-resident portion" is excluded and the deduction under paragraph 20(1)(bb) is limited to the portion of the investment counsel fees that relates to its "resident portion" (both terms as defined in new subsection 94(1)). At the end of the trust's 2010 taxation year, its resident portion is comprised of the $200,000 contribution by Mary. The balance of its property (the $100,000 contributed by Cathy and the accumulated capital of $100,000) is included in its non-resident portion. These amounts do not include amounts in respect of the interest income earned by the trust in 2010. As a result, the trust may exclude 200,000/400,000 of its gross income ($23,000) as computed for Canadian tax purposes. In addition, the amount deductible under paragraph 20(1)(bb) is limited to the portion that relates to the resident portion, or 200,000/400,000 of $3,000, such that its income for its 2010 taxation year for Canadian tax purposes is $10,000 (200,000/400,000 × $23,000 – 200,000/400,000 × $3,000). Therefore, of the $20,000 of net accumulated income earned by the trust during 2010, $10,000 is included in its resident portion for its 2010 taxation year by reason of paragraph (d) of the definition "resident portion". The remaining $10,000 is included in its "non-resident portion".

3. In 2011 the trust earns $23,000 in gross interest income and realizes a capital gain on the disposition of the shares of Corporation A in respect of its resident portion. The amount of the trust's capital gain on the Corporation A shares before determining what portion of the shares relates to its resident portion and non-resident portion is $100,000 ($250,000 – $150,000).

The portion of the Corporation A shares that relates to the trust's resident portion is reflected by the proportion that the property in the resident portion of the trust is of all property held by the trust. At the time immediately before the disposition, the resident portion of the trust is $210,000 (comprised of the original $200,000 resident contribution and the $10,000 included at the end of 2010). The total amount of the trust's property, immediately before the disposition, is $420,000. Accordingly, of the $100,000 of the capital gain earned by the trust, $50,000 (210,000/420,000 × $100,000) is included in its resident portion for its 2011 taxation year by reason of paragraph (d) of the definition "resident portion".

Similarly, of the $20,000 net interest income, $10,000 will be included in the trust's resident portion.

At the end of the trust's 2011 taxation year, the trust's resident portion will equal $270,000 (comprised of the original $200,000 contribution by Mary, the $10,000 included at the end of 2010, the $50,000 included of the capital gain realized in 2011 and the $10,000 included at the end of 2011).

2012

4. Under paragraph (b) of the definition "resident portion", the portion of the property (the Corporation C shares) acquired by way of the loan from the bank included in the resident portion of the trust is the greater of two amounts. The first is determined by the formula

where $A/B \times C$

A is $270,000, the fair market value of each property that forms part of the resident portion of the trust at the beginning of the trust's 2012 taxation year,

B is $540,000, the fair market value of all property of the trust held at the beginning of its 2012 taxation year, and

C is $100,000, the fair market value of the property acquired with the proceeds of the loan from the bank.

The second amount is determined by the formula

where $A/B \times C$

A is $280,000, the fair market value of each property that forms part of the resident portion of the trust at the end of its 2012 taxation year (including the amount included in respect of the net interest income of the trust) computed without reference to the property (shares in Corporation C) acquired by the trust during it's 2011 taxation year

B is $560,000, the fair market value of all property of the trust held at the end of its 2011 taxation year computed without reference to the property acquired by the trust during it's 2012 taxation year, and

C is $100,000, the fair market value of the property acquired with the proceeds of the loan from the bank.

In this example, both amounts as determined by the formula are $50,000, which is the expected result when a trust has received no additional contributions from a contributor in a taxation year. As a result $50,000 of the value of the Corporation C shares is included in the resident portion and $50,000 of their value is included in the non-resident portion. Thus, of the trust's property for its 2012 taxation year, which is comprised of $660,000, the resident portion has a value of $330,000 and the non-resident portion has a value of $330,000. As a result, the income (taxable under Part I of Act) from the trust's resident portion for its 2012 taxation year is $10,000 (($23,000 – 3,000) × ($320,000/640,000)).

5. The resident portion and non-resident portion at the beginning of 2013 are therefore comprised of the following:

	Resident portion ($)	Non-resident portion ($)
Contributions — 2010	200,000	200,000
Accumulated Income — 2010	10,000	10,000
Totals — end of 2010 taxation year	210,000	210,000
Accumulated Income — 2011	60,000 (50,000 capital gain and 10,000 interest)	60,000 (50,000 capital gain and 10,000 interest)
Totals — end of 2011 taxation year	270,000	270,000
Contribution (bank loan) — 2011	50,000	50,000
Accumulated Income — 2011	10,000	10,000
Totals — end of 2011 taxation year	330,000	330,000

Related Provisions: 94(1)"non-resident portion" — Trust property that is not the resident portion; 94(3)(f) — Only resident portion included in trust's income.

"restricted property" of a person or partnership means property that the person or partnership holds and that is

(a) a share (or a right to acquire a share) of the capital stock of a closely-held corporation if the share or right, or a property for which the share or right was substituted, was at any time acquired by the person or partnership as part of a transaction or series of transactions under which

(i) a specified share of the capital stock of a closely-held corporation was acquired by any person or partnership in exchange for, as consideration for, or upon the conversion of, any property and the cost of the specified share to the person who acquired it was less than the fair market value of the specified share at the time of the acquisition, or,

(ii) a share (other than a specified share) of the capital stock of a closely-held corporation becomes a specified share of the capital stock of the corporation;

(b) an indebtedness or other obligation, or a right to acquire an indebtedness or other obligation, of a closely-held corporation if

(i) the indebtedness, obligation or right, or property for which the indebtedness, obligation or right was substituted, became property of the person or partnership as part of a transaction or series of transactions under which

(A) a specified share of the capital stock of a closely-held corporation was acquired by any person or partnership in exchange for, as consideration for, or upon the conversion of, any property and the cost of the specified share to the person who acquired it was less than the fair market value of the specified share at the time of the acquisition, or

(B) a share (other than a specified share) of a closely-held corporation becomes a specified share of the capital stock of the corporation, and

(ii) the amount of any payment under the indebtedness, obligation or right (whether the right to the amount is immediate or future, absolute or contingent or conditional on or subject to the exercise of any discretion by any person or partnership) is, directly or indirectly, determined primarily by one or more of the following criteria:

(A) the fair market value of, production from or use of any of the property of the closely-held corporation,

(B) gains or profits from the disposition of any of the property of the closely-held corporation,

(C) income, profits, revenue or cash flow of the closely-held corporation, or

(D) any other criterion similar to a criterion referred to in any of clauses (A) to (C); and

(c) property

(i) that the person or partnership acquired as part of a series of transactions described in paragraph (a) or (b) in respect of another property, and

(ii) the fair market value of which is derived in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, from that other property.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): The expression "restricted property" is relevant in applying a number of provisions in respect of non-resident trusts, including the definitions "arm's length transfer" and "exempt foreign trust" in new subsection 94(1). The definition "restricted property" is intended to serve as an anti-avoidance provision.

Specifically, restricted property of a person or partnership means property held by the person or partnership that is

- under paragraph (a) of the definition, a share (or a right to acquire a share) of the capital stock of a closely-held corporation if the share (or right), or a property for which the share (or right) was substituted, was at any time acquired as part of a transaction or series of transactions under which either
  - — a specified share of the capital stock of a closely-held corporation was acquired by any person or partnership in exchange for, as consideration for, or upon conversion of any property at a cost less than the fair market value of the specified share at the time of its acquisition,
  - — or a share (other than a specified share) of the capital stock of a closely-held corporation that was not a specified share becomes a specified share;
- under paragraph (b) of the definition, an indebtedness or other obligation (or a right to acquire an indebtedness or other obligation) of a closely-held corporation if
  - — the indebtedness, obligation or right, or a property substituted for it, was acquired as part of a transaction or series of transactions under which either
    - a specified share of the capital stock of a closely-held corporation was acquired by any person or partnership in exchange for, as consideration for, or upon conversion of any property at a cost less than the fair market value of the specified share at the time of its acquisition, or
    - a share (other than a specified share) of a closely-held corporation that was not a specified share becomes a specified share, and
  - — the amount of any payment under the indebtedness, obligation or right (whether immediate or future, absolute or contingent or conditional on or subject to the exercise of any discretion by any person or partnership) is, directly or indirectly, determined primarily by reference to one or more of
    - the fair market value of, production from or use of any of the property of the closely-held corporation,
    - gains or profits from the disposition of any of the closely-held corporation's property,
    - income, profits, revenue or cash flow of the closely-held corporation, or
    - any criterion similar to those listed immediately above; and
- under paragraph (c) of the definition, any property that was acquired by the person or partnership as part of a series of transactions described in paragraph (a) or (b) of the definition, and the fair market value of which is derived in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, from a particular share, indebtedness or right described in paragraph (a) or (b) of the definition.

New subsection 94(14) may apply in some circumstances to suspend a property's characterization as restricted property. For more details, see the commentary on that provision.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation; 94(2)(b) — Deemed restricted property on indirect transfer to trust; 94(9) — Determination of contribution amount when restricted property contributed to trust; 94(14) — Restricted property — exception; 94(15)(b) — Anti-avoidance; 94.2(1)(b) — FAPI treatment on contribution of restricted property to certain trusts.

"specified fixed interest", at any time of a person or partnership in a trust, means an interest of the person or partnership as a beneficiary (in this definition, determined without reference to subsection 248(25)) under the trust provided that no amount of the income or capital of the trust to be distributed at any time in respect of any interest in the trust depends on the exercise by any person or partnership of, or the failure by any person or partnership to exercise, any discretionary power.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): The expression "specified fixed interest" is relevant in applying paragraphs 94(2)(q) and (r), paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1), the anti-avoidance provisions in new subsection 94(15), and new section 94.2. These provisions are intended to apply only to commercial trusts and, in the case of paragraph 94(15)(b), employee benefit trusts that satisfy the criteria found in paragraph (f) of the definition "exempt foreign trust".

A specified fixed interest at any time of a person or partnership in a trust means an interest of the person or partnership as a beneficiary under the trust (determined without reference to subsection 248(25)) if none of the income or capital of the trust to be distributed in respect of any interest in the trust depends on the exercise, or the failure to exercise, by any person or partnership of any discretionary power. In the context of a commercial trust in which discretion with respect to the timing of distributions does not change the rights to income and capital in respect of any of the interests in the trust, such timing discretion will not disqualify the interests in the trust as specified fixed interests. This is so even if a beneficiary (the "seller") were to sell their interest to another beneficiary (the "purchaser"), such that an amount that would have been payable to the seller is instead paid to purchaser (the seller would presumably have been compensated for this in determining the proceeds of disposition of the interest). However, if the discretion with respect to the timing of distributions is such that the trustee may choose which beneficiary would be entitled to a particular distribution (i.e., where payments made before a specific date would be payable to one beneficiary and payments made after that date would be payable to another beneficiary), the beneficial interests in the trust would not be specified fixed interests. For greater certainty, beneficial interests in a trust the terms of which provide a person or partnership with a power to appoint new beneficiaries or to vary the beneficial interests in the trust would not be specified fixed interests.

Related Provisions: 94(2)(q), (r) [proposed] — Effect of acquiring specified fixed interest.

"specified party", in respect of a particular person at any time, means

(a) the particular person's spouse or common-law partner at that time;

(b) a corporation that at that time

(i) is a controlled foreign affiliate of the particular person or their spouse or common-law partner, or

(ii) would be a controlled foreign affiliate of a partnership, of which the particular person is a majority interest partner, if the partnership were a person resident in Canada at that time;

(c) a person, or a partnership of which the particular person is a majority interest partner, for which it is reasonable to conclude that the benefit referred to in subparagraph (8)(a)(iv) was conferred

(i) in contemplation of the person becoming after that time a corporation described by paragraph (b), or

(ii) to avoid or minimize a liability that arose, or that would otherwise have arisen, under this Part with respect to the particular person; or

(d) a corporation in which the particular person, or partnership of which the particular person is a majority interest partner, is a shareholder, if

(i) the corporation is at or before that time a beneficiary under a trust, and

(ii) the particular person or the partnership is a beneficiary under the trust solely because of the application of paragraph (b) of the definition "beneficiary" in this subsection to the particular person or the partnership in respect of the corporation.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): New subsection 94(8) provides a rule for calculating a person's recovery limit for the purpose of determining under subsection 94(7) the extent of the person's limitation on liability arising under a provision referred to in new paragraph 94(3)(d). A "specified party" in respect of a particular person at any time means:

- under paragraph (a) of the definition, a spouse or common-law partner of the particular person;
- under paragraph (b) of the definition, a corporation that is a "controlled foreign affiliate" of the particular person or their spouse or common-law partner, or a corporation that would be a controlled foreign affiliate of a partnership, of which the particular person is a majority interest partner, if the partnership were a person resident in Canada at that time;
- under paragraph (c) of the definition, a person, or partnership of which the particular person is a majority interest partner, for which it is reasonable to conclude that a benefit referred to in subparagraph 94(8)(a)(iv) (i.e., a benefit received or enjoyed under a trust) was conferred either
  - — in contemplation of the person becoming after that time a corporation described by paragraph (b) of the definition, or
  - — to avoid or minimize a liability that arose, or that would otherwise have arisen, under Part I of the Act with respect to the particular person; or
- under paragraph (d) of the definition, a corporation in which the particular person, or a partnership of which the particular person is a majority interest partner, is a shareholder, if the corporation is or was a beneficiary under a trust, and the particular person or partnership is a beneficiary under the trust solely because of the application of paragraph (b) of the definition "beneficiary" in new subsection 94(1) to the particular person or the partnership in respect of the corporation.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation.

"specified share" means a share of the capital stock of a corporation other than a share that is a prescribed share for the purpose of paragraph 110(1)(d).

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): A specified share means a share of the capital stock of a corporation other than a share that is prescribed for the purpose of paragraph 110(1)(d). This expression is relevant to the definition "restricted property" in subsection 94(1). For more information, see the commentary on the definition "restricted property".

"specified time", in respect of a trust for a taxation year of the trust, means

(a) if the trust exists at the end of the taxation year, the time that is the end of that taxation year; and

(b) in any other case, the time in that taxation year that is immediately before the time at which the trust ceases to exist.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): A specified time, in respect of a trust for a taxation year of the trust, means

- if the trust exists at the end of the taxation year, the time that is the end of that taxation year; and
- if the trust ceases to exist after October 30, 2003, the time in that taxation year that is immediately before the time at which the trust ceases to exist.

This definition is relevant in determining whether paragraph 94(3)(a) applies to deem the trust to be resident in Canada, for the taxation year, for a number of purposes. It also applies in respect of subsections 94(7), (10) and (15) to (17). For more detail, see the commentary on those provisions.

"successor beneficiary", at any time under a trust, means a person that is a beneficiary under the trust solely because of a right of the person to receive any of the trust's income or capital, if under that right the person may so receive that income or capital only on or after the death after that time of an individual who, at that time, is alive and

(a) is a contributor to the trust;

(b) is related to (in this definition including an uncle, aunt, niece or nephew of) a contributor to the trust; or

(c) would have been related to a contributor to the trust if every individual who was alive before that time were alive at that time.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): The expression "successor beneficiary" is used in the definition "resident beneficiary" in new subsection 94(1). A resident beneficiary under a trust does not include a successor beneficiary.

A successor beneficiary under a trust at a particular time means a person that is a beneficiary under the trust solely because of a right of the person to receive any of the trust's income or capital, if under that right the person may so receive that income or capital only on or after the death after that time of a specified individual. For this purpose a specified individual is an individual who is, at that time, alive and is a contributor to the trust, or is related to (including an aunt, uncle, niece or nephew of) a contributor to the trust or who would be so related if every individual who was alive before that time were alive at that time.

For more information on the definition "resident beneficiary" in new subsection 94(1), see the commentary on that definition.

"transaction" includes an arrangement or event.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): A definition "transaction" is provided for the purpose of applying section 94. The definition clarifies that a reference to a transaction in that section includes an arrangement or event.

"trust" includes, for greater certainty, an estate.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): A definition "trust" is provided for the purpose of applying section 94. The definition clarifies that a reference to a trust in that section includes an estate.

Related Provisions: 108(1) — Definition of "testamentary trust".

(2) Rules of application — In this section and section 94.2,

(a) [indirect transfer increasing value of trust property] — a person or partnership is deemed to have transferred, at any time, a property to a trust if

(i) at that time it transfers or loans property (other than by way of an arm's length transfer) to another person or partnership, and

(ii) because of that transfer or loan

(A) the fair market value of one or more properties held by the trust increases at that time, or

(B) a liability or potential liability of the trust decreases at that time;

(b) [value of transfer under (a)] — the fair market value, at any time, of a property deemed by paragraph (a) to be transferred at that time by a person or partnership is deemed to be the amount of the absolute value of the increase or decrease, as the case may be, referred to in subparagraph (a)(ii) in respect of the property, and if that time is after August 27, 2010, and the property that the person or partnership transfers or loans at that time is restricted property of the person or partnership, the property deemed by paragraph (a) to be transferred at that time to a trust is deemed to be restricted property of the trust;

(c) [loan by financial institution not a contribution] — a loan made by a particular specified financial institution to a trust is deemed not to be a contribution to the trust if

(i) the loan is made on terms and conditions that would have been agreed to by persons dealing at arm's length, and

(ii) the loan is made by the specified financial institution in the ordinary course of the business carried on by it;

(d) [guarantee of repayment deemed a transfer] — if, at any time, a particular person or partnership becomes obligated, either absolutely or contingently, to effect any undertaking including a guarantee, covenant or agreement given to ensure the repayment, in whole or in part, of a loan or other indebtedness incurred by another person or partnership, or has provided any other financial assistance to another person or partnership,

(i) the particular person or partnership is deemed to have transferred, at that time, property to that other person or partnership, and

(ii) the property, if any, transferred to the particular person or partnership from the other person or partnership in exchange for the guarantee or other financial assistance is deemed to have been transferred to the particular person or partnership in exchange for the property deemed by subparagraph (i) to have been transferred;

(e) [value of transfer under (d)] — the fair market value at any time of a property deemed by subparagraph (d)(i) to have been transferred at that time to another person or partnership is deemed to be the amount at that time of the loan or indebtedness incurred by the other person or partnership to which the property relates;

(f) [service deemed to be transfer of property] — if, at any time after June 22, 2000, a particular person or partnership renders any service (other than an exempt service) to, for or on behalf of, another person or partnership,

(i) the particular person or partnership is deemed to have transferred, at that time, property to that other person or partnership, and

(ii) the property, if any, transferred to the particular person or partnership from the other person or partnership in exchange for the service is deemed to have been transferred to the particular person or partnership in exchange for the property deemed by subparagraph (i) to have been transferred;

(g) [acquisition deemed to be transfer] — each of the following acquisitions of property by a particular person or partnership is deemed to be a transfer of the property, at the time of the acquisition of the property, to the particular person or partnership from the person or partnership from which the property was acquired, namely, the acquisition by the particular person or partnership of

(i) a share of a corporation from the corporation,

(ii) an interest as a beneficiary under a trust (otherwise than from a beneficiary under the trust),

(iii) an interest in a partnership (otherwise than from a member of the partnership),

(iv) a debt owing by a person or partnership from the person or partnership, and

(v) a right (granted after June 22, 2000 by the person or partnership from which the right was acquired) to acquire or to be loaned property;

(h) [value of transfer under (f)(i)] — the fair market value at any time of a property deemed by subparagraph (f)(i) to have been transferred at that time is deemed to be the fair market value at that time of the service to which the property relates;

(i) [obligation to do act that would be transfer or loan] — a person or partnership that at any time becomes obligated to do an act that would, if done, constitute the transfer or loan of a property to another person or partnership is deemed to have become obligated at that time to transfer or loan, as the case may be, property to that other person or partnership;

(j) [transfer as consequence of death] — in applying at any time the definition "non-resident time", if a trust acquires property of an individual as a consequence of the death of the individual, the individual is deemed to have transferred the property to the trust immediately before the individual's death;

(k) [anti-avoidance — transfer at direction of other person] — a transfer or loan of property at any time is deemed to be made at that time jointly by a particular person or partnership and a second person or partnership (referred to in this paragraph as the "specified person") if

(i) the particular person or partnership transfers or loans property at that time to another person or partnership,

(ii) the transfer or loan is made at the direction, or with the acquiescence, of the specified person, and

(iii) it is reasonable to conclude that one of the reasons the transfer or loan is made is to avoid or minimize the liability, of any person or partnership, under this Part that arose, or that would otherwise have arisen, because of the application of this section;

(k.1) [employee benefits — deemed transfer of property] — a transfer or loan of property made at any time on or after November 9, 2006, is deemed to be made at that time jointly by a particular person or partnership and a second person or partnership (referred to in this paragraph as the "specified person") if

(i) the particular person or partnership transfers or loans property at that time to another person or partnership, and

(ii) a purpose or effect of the transfer or loan may reasonably be considered to be to provide benefits in respect of services rendered by a person as an employee of the specified person (whether the provision of the benefits is pursuant to a right that is immediate or future, absolute or contingent, or conditional on or subject to the exercise of any discretion by any person or partnership);

(l) [transfer deemed made jointly by corporation and specified person] — a transfer or loan of property at any time is deemed to be made at that time jointly by a corporation and a person or partnership (referred to in this paragraph as the "specified person") if

(i) the corporation transfers or loans property at that time to another person or partnership,

(ii) the transfer or loan is made at the direction, or with the acquiescence, of the specified person,

(iii) that time is not, or would not be if the transfer or loan were a contribution of the specified person,

(A) a non-resident time of the specified person, or

(B) if the specified person is a partnership, a non-resident time of one or more members of the partnership, and

(iv) either

(A) the corporation is, at that time, a controlled foreign affiliate of the specified person, or would at that time be a controlled foreign affiliate of the specified person if the specified person were at that time resident in Canada, or

(B) it is reasonable to conclude that the transfer or loan was made in contemplation of the corporation becoming after that time a corporation described in clause (A);

(m) [exchange of shares or property] — a particular person or partnership is deemed to have transferred, at a particular time, a particular property or particular part of it, as the case may be, to a corporation described in subparagraph (i) or a second person or partnership described in subparagraph (ii) if

(i) the particular property is a share of the capital stock of a corporation held at the particular time by the particular person or partnership, and as consideration for the disposition at or before the particular time of the share, the particular person or partnership received at the particular time (or became entitled at the particular time to receive) from the corporation a share of the capital stock of the corporation, or

(ii) the particular property (or property for which the particular property is substituted) was acquired, before the particular time, from the second person or partnership by any person or partnership, in circumstances that are described by any of subparagraphs (g)(i) to (v) (or would be so described if it applied at the time of that acquisition) and at the particular time,

(A) the terms or conditions of the particular property change,

(B) the second person or partnership redeems, acquires or cancels the particular property or the particular part of it,

(C) where the particular property is a debt owing by the second person or partnership, the debt or the particular part of it is settled or cancelled, or

(D) where the particular property is a right to acquire or to be loaned property, the particular person or partnership exercises the right;

(n) [contribution by trust deemed contribution by its contributors] — a contribution made at any time by a particular trust to another trust is deemed to have been made at that time jointly by the particular trust and by each person or partnership that is at that time a contributor to the particular trust;

(o) [contribution by partnership deemed contribution by its partners] — a contribution made at any time by a particular partnership to a trust is deemed to have been made at that time jointly by the particular partnership and by each person or partnership that is at that time a member of the particular partnership;

(p) [amount of contribution is FMV of property contributed] — subject to paragraph (q) and subsection (9), the amount of a contribution to a trust at the time it was made is deemed to be the fair market value, at that time, of the property that was the subject of the contribution;

(q) [acquisition of specified fixed interest deemed to be contribution] — a person or partnership that at any time acquires a specified fixed interest in a trust (or a right, issued by the trust, to acquire a specified fixed interest in the trust) from another person or partnership (other than from the trust that issued the interest or the right) is deemed to have made at that time a contribution to the trust and the amount of the contribution is deemed to be equal to the fair market value at that time of the interest or right, as the case may be;

(r) [exception to (q)] — a particular person or partnership that has acquired a specified fixed interest in a trust as a consequence of making a contribution to the trust — or that has made a contribution to the trust as a consequence of having acquired a specified fixed interest in the trust or a right described in paragraph (q) — is, for the purpose of applying this section at any time after the time that the particular person or partnership transfers the specified fixed interest or the right, as the case may be, to another person or partnership (which transfer is referred to in this paragraph as the "sale"), deemed not to have made the contribution in respect of the specified fixed interest, or right, that is the subject of the sale where

(i) in exchange for the sale, the other person or partnership transfers or loans, or becomes obligated to transfer or loan, property (which property is referred to in subparagraph (ii) as the "consideration") to the particular person or partnership, and

(ii) it is reasonable to conclude

(A) having regard only to the sale and the consideration that the particular person or partnership would be willing to make the sale if the particular person or partnership were dealing at arm's length with the other person or partnership, and

(B) that the terms and conditions made or imposed in respect of the exchange would be acceptable to the particular person or partnership if the particular person or partnership were dealing at arm's length with the other person or partnership;

(s) [certain transfers required by securities law deemed not to be contributions] — a transfer to a trust by a particular person or partnership is deemed not to be, at a particular time, a contribution to the trust if

(i) the particular person or partnership has transferred, at or before the particular time and in the ordinary course of business of the particular person or partnership, property to the trust,

(ii) the transfer is not an arm's length transfer, but would be an arm's length transfer if the definition "arm's length transfer" were read without reference to paragraph (a), and subparagraphs (b)(i), (ii) and (iv) to (vii), of that definition,

(iii) it is reasonable to conclude that the particular person or partnership was the only person or partnership that acquired, in respect of the transfer, an interest as a beneficiary under the trust,

(iv) the particular person or partnership was required, under the securities law of a country or of a political subdivision of the country in respect of the issuance by the trust of interests as a beneficiary under the trust, to acquire an interest because of the particular person or partnership's status at the time of the transfer as a manager or promoter of the trust,

(v) at the particular time the trust is not an exempt foreign trust, but would be at that time an exempt foreign trust if it had not made an election under paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust", and

(vi) the particular time is before the earliest of

(A) the first time at which the trust becomes an exempt foreign trust,

(B) the first time at which the particular person or partnership ceases to be a manager or promoter of the trust, and

(C) the time that is 24 months after the first time at which the total fair market value of consideration received by the trust in exchange for interests as a beneficiary (other than the particular person or partnership's interest referred to in subparagraph (iii)) under the trust is greater than $500,000;

(t) [certain transfers deemed not to be contributions] — a transfer, by a Canadian corporation of particular property, that is at a particular time a contribution by the Canadian corporation to a trust, is deemed not to be, after the particular time, a contribution by the Canadian corporation to the trust if

(i) the trust acquired the property before the particular time from the Canadian corporation in circumstances described in subparagraph (g)(i) or (iv),

(ii) as a result of a transfer (which transfer is referred to in this paragraph as the "sale") at the particular time by any person or partnership (referred to in this paragraph as the "seller") to another person or partnership (referred to in this paragraph as the "buyer") the trust

(A) no longer holds any property that is shares of the capital stock of, or debt issued by, the Canadian corporation, and

(B) no longer holds any property that is property the fair market value of which is derived in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, from shares of the capital stock of, or debt issued by, the Canadian corporation,

(iii) the buyer deals at arm's length immediately before the particular time with the Canadian corporation, the trust and the seller,

(iv) in exchange for the sale, the buyer transfers or becomes obligated to transfer property (which property is referred to in this paragraph as the "consideration"), to the seller, and

(v) it is reasonable to conclude

(A) having regard only to the sale and the consideration that the seller would be willing to make the sale if the seller were dealing at arm's length with the buyer,

(B) that the terms and conditions made or imposed in respect of the exchange would be acceptable to the seller if the seller were dealing at arm's length with the buyer, and

(C) that the value of the consideration is not, at or after the particular time, determined in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, by reference to shares of the capital stock of, or debt issued by, the Canadian corporation; and

(u) [transfer to personal trust before Oct. 11/02] — a transfer, before October 11, 2002, to a personal trust by an individual (other than a trust) of particular property is deemed not to be a contribution of the particular property by the individual to the trust if

(i) the individual identifies the trust in prescribed form filed with the Minister on or before the individual's filing-due date for the individual's 2003 taxation year (or a later date that is acceptable to the Minister), and

(ii) the Minister is satisfied that

(A) the individual (and any person or partnership not dealing at any time at arm's length with the individual) has never loaned or transferred, directly or indirectly, restricted property to the trust,

(B) in respect of each contribution (determined without reference to this paragraph) made before October 11, 2002 by the individual to the trust, none of the reasons (determined by reference to all the circumstances including the terms of the trust, an intention, the laws of a country or the existence of an agreement, a memorandum, a letter of wishes or any other arrangement) for the contribution was to permit or facilitate, directly or indirectly, the conferral at any time of a benefit (for greater certainty, including an interest as a beneficiary under the trust) on

(I) the individual,

(II) a descendant of the individual, or

(III) any person or partnership with whom the individual or descendant does not, at any time, deal at arm's length, and

(C) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a contribution (determined without reference to this paragraph) made before October 11, 2002 by the individual to the trust does not exceed the greater of

(I) 1% of the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a contribution (determined without reference to this paragraph) made to the trust before October 11, 2002, and

(II) $500.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): New subsection 94(2) sets out a number of rules for use in applying section 94. These rules are primarily relevant for the purposes of determining whether a transaction constitutes a "contribution" of property to a trust. These rules are also relevant for the purposes of subsections 94(7) to (10) and (15) to (17) and the reporting penalty provisions in subsections 162(10.1) and 163(2.4) and section 233.2.

Paragraphs 94(2)(a) to (m), with the exception of paragraph 94(2)(c), include rules that deem certain loans or transfers, the granting of options and the provision of services to be transfers of property to a person or partnership. A deemed transfer will be considered to be a contribution to a trust if the transfer falls within the criteria of the definition "contribution" in subsection 94(1) or the deemed contribution rules. In this regard, it should be noted that a transfer or loan, unless it is deemed to be a contribution under a provision of section 94, will not be considered a contribution if it is an "arm's length transfer" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)). In addition, paragraphs 94(2)(c) and (r) to (u) may apply to deem certain transfers not to be contributions.

The rules in subsection 94(2) generally apply to taxation years of trusts that end after 2006, but in some cases relief is provided with regard to transactions or events that occur before June 23, 2000, October 11, 2002 or August 27, 2010. The rules in subsection 94(2) will also apply to taxation years of trusts that end after 2000 and before 2007 if the trust was created in one of those years, and if the trust elects (under the coming-into-force provision for new section 94) to have new section 94 apply to each of those years.

Deemed Transfers

Paragraph 94(2)(a) generally applies to indirect loans or transfers of property to a trust through transfers to other entities. Paragraph (a) deems a transfer of property (other than an "arm's length transfer", as defined in new subsection 94(1)) to be a direct transfer to a trust if the property is transferred from one person or partnership to another and, as a result of the transfer, the fair market value of the property of the trust increases or the liabilities of the trust decrease.

Where paragraph (a) applies, paragraph 94(2)(b) deems the fair market value of property deemed transferred under paragraph (a) to be the total of all amounts each of which is the absolute value of an increase in the fair market value of the trust property or a decrease in the liabilities of the trust because of the transfer. In the event that the deemed transfer is a contribution to a trust, paragraph 94(2)(p), described in greater detailed below, would deem the amount of the contribution to be that fair market value. In addition, if the time of the deemed transfer of property under paragraph (a) is after August 27, 2010, and the property that the person or partnership actually transferred or loaned is restricted property of the person or partnership, paragraph 94(2)(b) deems the property deemed transferred under paragraph (a) to be restricted property of the trust.

Paragraph 94(2)(d) applies when a particular person or partnership becomes obligated (e.g., by way of providing a guarantee) to effect any undertaking given to ensure repayment, wholly or partially, of a loan or other indebtedness incurred by another person or partnership, or when the particular person or partnership has provided any other financial assistance to another person or partnership. If these conditions are satisfied, the particular person or partnership is deemed to have transferred property at that time to the other person or partnership. Any property transferred (i.e., consideration paid such as a guarantee fee) to the particular person or partnership from the other person or partnership in exchange for the undertaking or other financial assistance is deemed to have been so transferred in exchange for the property deemed to be transferred to the other person or partnership.

Under paragraph 94(2)(e), the fair market value of property deemed under subparagraph 94(2)(d)(ii) to have been transferred is deemed to be equal to the amount of the loan or indebtedness incurred by the other person or partnership to which the property relates. For example, where a particular person provides a guarantee in respect of a $1,000 indebtedness entered into by another person, the particular person is deemed to have transferred at the time the guarantee is made to the other person property with a fair market value of $1,000. In the event that the deemed transfer is a contribution to a trust, paragraph 94(2)(p), described in greater detailed below, would deem the amount of the contribution to be $1,000.

Paragraph 94(2)(f) applies where any service (other than an exempt service, as defined in subsection 94(1)) is rendered after June 22, 2000 by a person or partnership to, for or on behalf of another person or partnership. In these circumstances, the person or partnership rendering the service is deemed to have transferred property to the other person or partnership. Any property given to the particular person or partnership by the other person or partnership in exchange for the service is deemed to have been transferred to the particular person or partnership in exchange for the property deemed by subparagraph (f)(i) to have been transferred. For more information on the definition "exempt service", see the commentary on that definition. Under paragraph 94(2)(f)(i), the fair market value of the property deemed under subparagraph 94(2)(f)(i) to have been transferred is deemed to be equal to the fair market value of the services rendered. In the event that the deemed transfer is a contribution to a trust, paragraph 94(2)(p), described in greater detailed below, would deem the amount of the contribution to be that fair market value.

For greater certainty, paragraph 94(2)(g) provides that a corporation is considered to transfer shares that it issues. Similar rules, also contained in paragraph 94(2)(g), apply to interests in a trust acquired otherwise than from a beneficiary under the trust and interests in a partnership acquired otherwise than from a member of the partnership, as well as to debt issued to a person or partnership by another person or partnership and a right granted after June 22, 2000 by the person or partnership from which the right was acquired to acquire or to be loaned property.

Paragraph 94(2)(i) deems a person or partnership to have become obligated at a particular time to transfer property to another person or partnership where the person or partnership becomes obligated to do an act (e.g., the rendering of a service) that would constitute the transfer of a property to another person or partnership if the act were to occur.

Paragraph 94(2)(j) applies, for the purpose of applying at any time the definition "non-resident trust" in subsection 94(1), if a trust acquires property of an individual as a consequence of the death of the individual. In these circumstances, paragraph 94(2)(j) deems the individual to have transferred the property to the trust immediately before the individual's death.

Paragraph 94(2)(k) applies where a particular person or partnership loans or transfers property to another person or partnership at the direction of or with the acquiescence of a third person or partnership (the "specified person"). In these circumstances, if it is reasonable to conclude that one of the reasons for the transfer is to avoid or minimize a liability of any person or partnership under Part I of the Act that arose, or that would otherwise have arisen, because of the application of section 94, the transfer is deemed to be a transfer made jointly by the particular person or partnership and the specified person.

Paragraph 94(2)(k.1) applies where a particular person or partnership loans or transfers property to another person or partnership, at any time after November 8, 2006 and at the direction of or with the acquiescence of a third person or partnership (the "specified person"). In these circumstances, if it is reasonable to conclude that one of the reasons for the loan or transfer is to provide benefits in respect of services rendered by a person as an employee of the specified entity, the transfer is deemed to be a transfer made jointly by the particular person or partnership and the specified person.

Paragraph 94(2)(l) applies where a corporation loans or transfers property to a person or partnership at the direction of or with the acquiescence of another person or partnership (the "specified person"). In these circumstances, the transfer is deemed to be a transfer made jointly by the corporation and the specified person if

- the transfer or loan is made at a time that is not, or would not be, if the transfer or loan were a contribution of the specified person, a "non-resident time" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) of the specified person, or if the specified person is a partnership, a non-resident time of one or more members of the partnership, and
- either
  - the corporation is at the time of the transfer or loan a controlled foreign affiliate of the specified person (or would be a controlled foreign affiliate of the specified person if the specified person were resident in Canada), or
  - it is reasonable to conclude that the transfer or loan was made in contemplation of the corporation becoming after the time of the transfer or loan a controlled foreign affiliate of the specified person (or a controlled foreign affiliate of the specified person if the specified person were resident in Canada).

The expression "controlled foreign affiliate" is defined in subsection 248(1) as having the meaning given in subsection 95(1).

The examples below illustrate the operation of a number of the provisions in subsection 94(2) and the definition "contribution" in subsection 94(1).

Example 1

Donald is a long-term resident of Canada. In 2011, Donald pays higher than fair market value consideration for a property acquired from a corporation. A non-resident trust holds shares in the corporation. The fair market value of those shares increases because of the transaction.

Results

1. Under paragraph 94(2)(a), Donald is considered to have transferred property to the trust in these circumstances. The exception for arm's length transfers does not apply.

2. As a consequence, Donald is considered to have made a contribution to the trust, which results in Donald being a contributor and a resident contributor to the trust.

Example 2

3. Lucie, a long-term resident of Canada, transfers property to Canco on condition that Canco direct Canco's wholly-owned foreign subsidiary (Foreignco-1) to transfer properties to another corporation (Foreignco-2) for consideration that is less than fair market value.

4. Shares of the capital stock of Foreignco-2 are held by a non-resident trust.

5. The fair market value of the Foreignco-2 shares increases as a result of the increase in the fair market value of the property owned by Foreignco-2.

Results

1. The transfers to Canco and to Foreignco-2 are part of the same series of transactions.

2. Because of paragraph 94(2)(a), the transfer to Foreignco-2 is considered to be a transfer by Foreignco-1 to the trust. Because of paragraph 94(2)(l), the transfer by Foreignco-1 to the trust is considered to be jointly made by Foreignco-1 and Canco. This would also be the result under paragraph 94(2)(k), if it was intended to avoid or minimize a liability under Part I. The exception for arm's length transfers does not apply.

3. Canco is considered to have made a contribution to the non-resident trust because of paragraph (a) of the definition "contribution" in new subsection 94(1). Lucie is considered to have made a contribution to the trust under paragraph (b) of that definition. Both Lucie and Canco are therefore contributors and resident contributors to the trust.

4. Foreignco-1 is also a "contributor" to the trust, but is not a "resident contributor" as long as it does not become resident in Canada.

Paragraph 94(2)(m) deems a particular person or partnership to have transferred, at a particular time, a particular property or particular part of it, as the case may be, to a corporation or a second person or partnership (described below) if

- the particular property is a share of the capital stock of a corporation held at the particular time by the particular person or partnership, and as consideration for the disposition at or before the particular time of the share, the particular person or partnership received at the particular time (or became entitled at the particular time to receive) from the corporation a share of the capital stock of the corporation, or
- the particular property (or property for which the particular property is substituted property) was acquired, before the particular time, from the second person or partnership by any person or partnership, in circumstances that are described by any of subparagraphs 94(2)(g)(i) to (v) (generally, the issuance by the second person or partnership of a financial instrument) and at the particular time,
  - the terms or conditions of the particular property change,
  - the second person or partnership redeems, acquires or cancels the particular property or the particular part of it,
  - where the particular property is a debt owing by the second person or partnership, the debt or the particular part of it is settled or cancelled, or
  - where the particular property is a right to acquire or to be loaned property, the particular person or partnership exercises the right.

Deemed Contributions

Paragraph 94(2)(n) applies where a particular trust makes a contribution to another trust. If this is the case, the contribution is deemed to have been made jointly by the particular trust and each other person or partnership that is a contributor to the particular trust.

Paragraph 94(2)(o) applies where a partnership makes a contribution to a trust. Where this is the case, the contribution is deemed to have been made jointly by the contributing partnership and by each person or partnership that is a member of the contributing partnership at the time of the contribution. For transfers made before August 27, 2010 by a partnership, a limited partner is not treated by paragraph 94(2)(o) as having made the transfer; however, if before that date a partnership has contributed to a trust, a limited partner of the partnership may also be considered to have made a contribution to the trust in respect of a transfer or loan made by the limited partner or another entity if any of the other rules in subsection 94(2) so provides.

Paragraph 94(2)(p) provides, subject to paragraphs 94(2)(q) and subsection 94(9), that the amount of a contribution to a trust at the time it was made is deemed to be the fair market value at that time of the property that was the subject of the contribution. This rule is useful for the purposes of new subsections 94(7) and (8) and (15) to (17), as well as the reporting penalty provisions in amended subsections 162(10.1) and 163(2.4). The rule is relevant because a contribution is defined by reference to a loan or transfer, rather than by reference to the property that was the subject of the loan or transfer.

Paragraphs 94(2)(q) and (r) apply to dealings in a "specified fixed interest" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) in a trust and in a right, issued by the trust, to acquire such an interest. The rules for specified fixed interests apply in respect of commercial trusts. For more detail, see the commentary on the definition "specified fixed interest" and on paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in new subsection 94(1). Paragraph 94(2)(q) deems a person or partnership, that at any time acquires a specified fixed interest in a trust (or a right, issued by the trust, to acquire such an interest) from another person or partnership (other than the trust), to have made a contribution to the trust at that time. The amount of the contribution is deemed to be the fair market value at that time of the specified fixed interest.

Transfers Deemed not to be Contributions

Paragraph 94(2)(c) provides an exception, from what would otherwise be a contribution to a trust, for a specified financial institution, as defined in subsection 248(1), that makes a loan to the trust. It provides that if the loan is made on arm's length terms and in the ordinary course of business of the specified financial institution, the loan will be deemed not to be a contribution to the trust.

Paragraph 94(2)(r) generally applies where a particular person or partnership has made a contribution (e.g., because of paragraph 94(2)(q)) to a trust because of acquiring a specified fixed interest in the trust or a right to acquire such an interest, or has acquired a specified fixed interest in a trust as a consequence of making a contribution to the trust, and at a later time the interest or right, as the case may be, is transferred, for arm's length consideration, to another person or partnership (i.e., upon a sale of the interest or right, or if the other person or partnership is the trust that issued the interest or right, upon a redemption of the interest or right). In these circumstances, the particular person or partnership is deemed, for the purpose of applying section 94 at any time after the later time, not to have made the contribution described above in respect of the specified fixed interest, or right, that is the subject of the sale. However, nothing in this provision would cause any other contribution to the trust by the particular person to cease to be a contribution to the trust.

Paragraph 94(2)(s), in very general terms, provides that a transfer of property to a trust by a particular person or partnership that is a manager or promoter of the trust, in exchange for an interest as a beneficiary under the trust, will not be considered a contribution of the particular person or partnership to the trust while the beneficial interest is acquired and held by the particular person or partnership because of a requirement imposed under securities laws. Paragraph 94(2)(s) will be relevant in the relatively rare circumstance (i.e., because of an election by the trust under paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" not to have that paragraph apply to it) that a commercial trust cannot rely on the exemption for exempt foreign trusts in order to avoid the application of subsection 94(3). Paragraph 94(2)(s) will apply in determining under that subsection whether the trust has a resident contributor or connected contributor (i.e., and hence, a resident beneficiary).

More specifically, under paragraph 94(2)(s), a transfer to a trust by a particular person or partnership is deemed not to be, at a particular time, a contribution to the trust if

- the particular person or partnership has transferred, at or before the particular time and in the ordinary course of business of the particular person or partnership, property to the trust,
- the transfer is not an arm's length transfer, but would be an arm's length transfer if the definition "arm's length transfer" in subsection 94(1) were read without reference to paragraph (a), and subparagraphs (b)(i), (ii) and (iv) to (vii) of that definition,
- it is reasonable to conclude that the particular person or partnership was the only person or partnership that acquired, in respect of the transfer, an interest as a beneficiary under the trust,
- the particular person or partnership was required, under the securities law of a country or of a political subdivision of the country in respect of the issuance of beneficial interests by the trust, to acquire the interest because of the particular person or partnership's status at the time of the transfer as a manager or promoter (as defined in subsection 94(1)) of the trust,
- at the particular time, the trust is not an exempt foreign trust, but would be at that time an exempt foreign trust if it had not made an election under paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust", and
- the particular time is before the earliest of
  - the first time at which the trust becomes an exempt foreign trust,
  - the first time at which the particular person or partnership ceases to be a manager or promoter of the trust, and
  - the time that is 24 months after the first time at which the total fair market value of consideration received by the trust in exchange for beneficial interests (other than the particular person or partnership's interest referred to in subparagraph 94(2)(s)(iii)) in the trust is greater than $500,000.

Paragraph 94(2)(t) generally expunges a contribution of shares or indebtedness of a Canadian corporation from the corporation to a trust if the corporation issued (in circumstances described in subparagraph 94(2)(g)(i) or (iv)) the shares or the debt to the trust and the trust later sells the shares or indebtedness in circumstances in which the parties to the sale deal with each other on an arm's length basis.

However, the application of paragraph 94(2)(t) will not affect the application of paragraph 94(2)(g) in respect of the original transfer by the corporation to the trust or the other person or partnership: such transfers will continue to be treated as transfers under section 94. In addition, the application of paragraph 94(2)(t) will not expunge the status as a contribution to the trust of a transfer made by a person or partnership and involving the corporation (e.g., a person or partnership that transferred property to the corporation, and hence the trust, because of the application of paragraph 94(2)(m)).

More specifically, under paragraph 94(2)(t) a transfer, by a Canadian corporation of particular property (i.e., a share or debt), that is at a particular time a contribution by the Canadian corporation to a trust, is deemed not to be, after the particular time, a contribution by the Canadian corporation to the trust if

- the trust acquired the particular property before the particular time from the Canadian corporation in circumstances described in subparagraph 94(2)(g)(i) or (iv);
- as a result of a transfer (i.e., a sale of, or a redemption by the Canadian corporation of, the issued shares or debt) at the particular time by any person or partnership (referred to in the paragraph as the "seller") to another person or partnership (referred to in the paragraph as the "buyer") the trust ceases to hold all of its property that is shares of the capital stock of, or debt issued by, the Canadian corporation and the trust ceases to hold property that is property the fair market value of which is derived in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, from shares of the capital stock of, or debt issued by, the Canadian corporation;
- the buyer deals at arm's length immediately before the particular time with the Canadian corporation, the trust and the seller;
- in exchange for the sale, the buyer transfers or becomes obligated to transfer property (which property is referred to in the paragraph as the "consideration"), to the seller; and
- it is reasonable to conclude
  - having regard only to the sale and the consideration that the seller would have been willing to make the sale if the seller dealt at arm's length with the buyer,
  - that the terms and conditions made or imposed in respect of the exchange are terms and conditions that would have been acceptable to the seller if the seller dealt at arm's length with the buyer, and
  - that the value of the consideration is not, at or after the particular time, determined in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, by reference to shares of the capital stock of, or debt issued by, the Canadian corporation.

Paragraph 94(2)(u) applies to a transfer, before October 11, 2002, to a personal trust by an individual (other than a trust) of particular property. Where the conditions in subparagraphs 94(2)(u)(i) and (ii) are met, the transfer of the particular property is deemed not to be a contribution of the particular property by the individual to the trust. Paragraph 94(2)(u) is intended to provide relief to individuals that have transferred a relatively small amount of property to a trust (e.g., the initial settlement of a coin on the trust) where the individual can reasonably be considered not to have been involved with the use of the trust as part of what is commonly referred to as an estate freeze (i.e., see the condition in clause 94(2)(u)(ii)(A) that the trust never have acquired from the individual restricted property).

The conditions in subparagraphs 94(2)(u)(i) and (ii) are that

- the individual identifies the trust in prescribed form filed with the Minister on or before the individual's filing-due date for the individual's 2003 taxation year (or a later date that is acceptable to the Minister), and

- the Minister is satisfied that
  - the individual (and any person or partnership not dealing at any time at arm's length with the individual) has never loaned or transferred, directly or indirectly, restricted property to the trust,
  - in respect of each contribution (determined without reference to paragraph 94(2)(d)) made before October 11, 2002 by the individual to the trust, none of the reasons (determined by reference to all the circumstances including the terms of the trust, an intention, the laws of a country or the existence of an agreement, a memorandum, a letter of wishes or any other arrangement) for the contribution was to permit or facilitate, directly or indirectly, the conferral at any time of a benefit (for greater certainty, including an interest as a beneficiary under the trust) on
    - (I) the individual,
    - (II) a descendant of the individual, or
    - (III) any person or partnership with whom the individual or descendant does not, at any time, deal at arm's length, and
  - the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a contribution (determined without reference to paragraph 94(2)(d)) made before October 11, 2002 by the individual to the trust does not exceed the greater of
    - (I) 1% of the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a contribution (determined without reference to paragraph 94(2)(d)) made to the trust before October 11, 2002, and
    - (II) $50,000.

Related Provisions: 51(1)(c) — Exchange of convertible property is disposition for purposes of 94(2)(m); 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation; 94(9) — Determination of contribution amount — restricted property.

(3) Liabilities of non-resident trusts [deemed resident in Canada] and others — Where at a specified time in a particular taxation year of a trust (other than a trust that is, at that time, an exempt foreign trust) the trust is non-resident (determined without reference to this subsection) and, at that time, there is a resident contributor to the trust or a resident beneficiary under the trust,

(a) [trust deemed resident in Canada for many purposes] — the trust is deemed to be resident in Canada throughout the particular taxation year for the purposes of

(i) section 2,

(ii) computing the trust's income for the particular taxation year,

(iii) applying subsections 104(13.1) to (29) and 107(2.1), in respect of the trust and a beneficiary under the trust,

(iv) applying clause 53(2)(h)(i.1)(B), the definition "non-resident entity" in subsection 94.1(2), subsection 107(2.002) and section 115, in respect of a beneficiary under the trust,

(v) subsection 111(9),

(vi) determining an obligation of the trust to file a return under section 233.3 or 233.4,

(vii) determining the rights and obligations of the trust under Divisions I and J,

(viii) determining the liability of the trust for tax under Part I, and under Part XIII on amounts paid or credited (in this paragraph having the meaning assigned by Part XIII) to the trust,

(ix) applying Part XIII in respect of an amount (other than an exempt amount) paid or credited by the trust to any person, and

(x) determining whether a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer (other than the trust) is a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer;

(b) [foreign tax credit] — no deduction shall be made under subsection 20(11) by the trust in computing its income for the particular taxation year, and for the purposes of applying subsection 20(12) and section 126 to the trust for the particular taxation year

(i) the business-income tax (in this paragraph as defined by subsection 126(7)), and non-business-income tax (in this paragraph as defined by subsection 126(7)), paid by the trust for the particular taxation year are deemed not to include a tax, or the portion of a tax, that can reasonably be regarded as relating to an amount that was excluded under subparagraph (f)(i) in computing the trust's income for the particular taxation year,

(ii) in determining the non-business-income tax paid by the trust for the particular taxation year, paragraph (b) of the definition "non-business-income tax" does not apply, and

(iii) if, at that specified time, the trust is resident in a country other than Canada,

(A) the trust's income for the particular taxation year is deemed to be from sources in that country and not to be from any other source, and

(B) the business-income tax, and the non-business-income tax, paid by the trust for the particular taxation year are deemed to have been paid by the trust to the government of that country and not to any other government;

(c) [bump of asset costs to FMV] — if the trust was non-resident throughout its taxation year (referred to in this paragraph as the "preceding year") immediately preceding the particular taxation year, the trust is deemed to have

(i) immediately before the end of the preceding year, disposed of each property (other than property described in any of subparagraphs 128.1(1)(b)(i) to (iv)) held by the trust at that time for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value at that time, and

(ii) at the beginning of the particular taxation year, acquired each of those properties so disposed of at a cost equal to its proceeds of disposition;

(d) [resident contributor and resident beneficiary liable for trust's income tax] — each person that at any time in the particular taxation year is a resident contributor to the trust (other than an electing contributor in respect of the trust at the specified time) or a resident beneficiary under the trust

(i) has jointly and severally, or solidarily, with the trust and with each other such person, the rights and obligations of the trust in respect of the particular taxation year under Divisions I and J, and

(ii) is subject to Part XV in respect of those rights and obligations;

(e) [liability of pre-2007 beneficiary] — each person that at any time in the particular taxation year is a beneficiary under the trust and was a person from whom an amount would be recoverable at the end of the trust's 2006 taxation year under subsection (2) (as it read in its application to taxation years that end before 2007) in respect of the trust if the person had received before the trust's 2007 taxation year amounts described under paragraph (2)(a) or (b) in respect of the trust (as those paragraphs read in their application to taxation years that end before 2007)

(i) has, to the extent of the person's recovery limit for the year, jointly and severally, or solidarily, with the trust and with each other such person, the rights and obligations of the trust in respect of the taxation years, of the trust, that end before 2007 under Divisions I and J, and

(ii) is, to the extent of the person's recovery limit for the year, subject to Part XV in respect of those rights and obligations;

(f) [trust's income calculated only on resident portion of assets] — notwithstanding any other provision in the Act, in computing the trust's income for the particular taxation year

(i) no amount shall be included, in respect of property that is part of its non-resident portion, that is an income or loss from property, or that is a taxable capital gain or allowable capital loss from a disposition of property, except to the extent that the amount would be included under any of paragraphs 115(1)(a) to (c) in computing its taxable income earned in Canada for the year if it were at no time in the year resident in Canada, and

(ii) no amount is to be deducted in respect of an outlay or expense except to the extent that it was made or incurred by the trust for the purpose of gaining or producing income from a property that is part of the trust's resident portion; and

(g) [withholding tax deemed paid by trust on account] — if a person deducts or withholds any amount (referred to in this paragraph as the "withholding amount") as required by section 215 from a particular amount paid or credited or deemed to have been paid or credited to the trust, and the particular amount has been included in the trust's income for the particular taxation year, the withholding amount shall be deemed to have been paid on account of the trust's tax under this Part for the particular taxation year.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): New subsection 94(3) applies to a non-resident trust (other than an "exempt foreign trust", as defined in subsection 94(1)) for a taxation year where, at a "specified time" in respect of the trust for the taxation year (generally, the end of the taxation year), there is a "resident contributor" to the trust or a "resident beneficiary" under the trust. All of these defined expressions are explained in detail in the commentary on new subsection 94(1).

Where subsection 94(3) applies to a non-resident trust for a taxation year, the trust is deemed to be resident in Canada throughout the year for the purposes specified in paragraph 94(3)(a). Except to the extent otherwise provided by subsection 94(4), a trust is deemed to be resident in Canada for a taxation year under subsection 94(3):

- for the purposes of applying section 2, in computing the trust's income for the year and computing the trust's liability for tax under Part I — with the result that the trust is subject to tax under that Part on its world-wide income for the year (including, for example, its income determined as a result of deemed dispositions under subsections 104(4) to (5.2) or 128.1(4) and, for example, in determining whether a foreign affiliate of the trust is its controlled foreign affiliate and whether it has FAPI) that is not distributed to beneficiaries of the trust or attributed to resident contributors of the trust; however, because of paragraph 94(3)(f), the trust will not be required to include in computing its income certain non-Canadian source income from property to the extent that it forms part of its "non-resident portion";
- for the purpose of subsection 111(9), with the result that in determining the trust's losses for the taxation year, subsection 111(9) will not apply in computing its taxable income for the year;
- for the purpose of applying clause 53(2)(h)(i.1)(B) — with the result that the adjusted cost base to a beneficiary of the beneficiary's interest in a trust to which this clause applies is computed in the same way as for interests in trusts resident in Canada;
- for the purpose of applying the amended definition "non-resident entity" in subsection 94.1(2) — with the result that a beneficiary's interest in the trust is not treated as an interest of a beneficiary in an offshore investment fund property for the purpose of section 94.1;
- for the purposes of applying subsections 104(13.1) to (29), and 107(2.1) and (2.002) and section 115 — with the result that the tax treatment of beneficiaries under the trust generally accords with the tax treatment available to beneficiaries under trusts that are resident in Canada;
- for the purposes of determining the obligation of the trust to file a return under sections 233.3 and 233.4 — with the result that the trust is required to file information returns under sections 233.3 (information return on foreign property holdings the total cost of which exceeds $100,000) and 233.4 (information return on foreign affiliates);
- for the purpose of determining the liability of the trust for tax under Part XIII — with the result that the trust is exempt from Part XIII tax on amounts paid or credited to it (for more detail, see the commentary to subsection 94(4));
- for the purpose of applying Part XIII in respect of an amount (other than an exempt amount) paid or credited by the trust to any person;
- for the purpose of determining after July 18, 2005 whether a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer (other than the trust) is a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer; and
- for the purpose of determining the rights and obligations of the trust under sections 150 to 180 — with the result that various administrative provisions in the Act apply in the same way as to other trusts resident in Canada. These provisions include those with regard to the filing of returns, assessments, tax payments, arrears interest, refund interest, instalment interest, penalties, refunds and appeals.

Under paragraph 1 of the resident article in Canada's income tax treaties, a reference in such a treaty to a "resident of a Contracting State" means any person who, under the law of that State, is liable to taxation in that State by reason of the person's domicile, residence, place of management or any other criterion of a similar nature. A person, in this context, would generally include a trust because of the usual definition "person" in Canada's income tax treaties. Because a trust to which subsection 94(3) applies is resident in Canada, and is liable to tax in Canada because of being resident in Canada, it will be considered a resident of Canada under paragraph 1 of the resident article in Canada's income tax treaties, whether it is also considered to be resident, under the applicable treaty, in another country or not. An amendment to the Income Tax Conventions Interpretation Act, described elsewhere in this commentary, ensures that this result applies consistently across Canada's tax treaties.

Where subsection 94(3) applies to deem a trust to be resident in Canada for a particular taxation year of the trust, new paragraph 94(3)(b) provides a number of rules for determining the recognition by Canada of foreign taxes paid by the trust. In particular, new paragraph 94(3)(b) provides in respect of the trust for the particular taxation year that:

- no deduction under subsection 20(11) is permitted; however, a deduction continues to be available to the trust under subsection 20(12) in respect of non-business income tax paid by the trust in respect of an item of income included in computing the trust's income for the year;
- taxes paid in respect of an item excluded from the trust's income because of subparagraph 94(3)(f)(i) — that is, certain amounts excluded in respect of the trust's non-resident portion — are not included in computing the trust's business-income tax (BIT) and non-business-income tax (NBIT) for purposes of subsection 20(12) and section 126;
- for purposes of subsection 20(12) and section 126, the NBIT of the trust for the particular taxation year is determined without reference to paragraph (b) of the definition "non-business-income tax", with the result that its resulting NBIT is fully creditable against the trust's Canadian tax otherwise payable for the particular taxation year, or alternatively, fully deductible under subsection 20(12) in computing the trust's income from a source on which the tax was paid; and
- for purposes of subsection 20(12) and section 126, the trust's income, and foreign taxes paid by it, for the particular taxation year are "pooled" to the country, if any, other than Canada in which the trust is resident for the particular taxation year.

Paragraph 94(3)(c) provides that a non-resident trust that becomes subject to subsection 94(3) for a particular taxation year, after not being subject to either new subsection 94(3) or existing paragraph 94(1)(c) for the preceding year, is deemed, immediately before the end of the preceding taxation year, to have disposed of each property (other than property described in any of subparagraphs 128.1(1)(b)(i) to (iv)) held by the trust at that time for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value at that time. The trust is also deemed to have acquired, at the beginning of the particular taxation year, each of those properties so disposed of at a cost equal to its proceeds of disposition.

Note, in this regard, that, because of paragraph 94(4)(d), subsection 128.1(1) will not apply in the preceding taxation year only because of the application of paragraph 94(3)(a).

Paragraph 94(3)(c) is intended to ensure — in a manner similar to that for taxpayers that migrate to Canada — that certain gains or losses that accrued on certain property of the trust while the trust was non-resident are not subject to taxation in Canada.

Paragraph 94(3)(c) also complements the rule in subsection 94(6), which applies where a non-resident trust ceases to be an "exempt foreign trust" (as defined in subsection 94(1)). In this case, subsection 94(6) establishes the beginning of a new "stub" taxation year. If subsection 94(3) applies for that "stub" year, paragraph 94(3)(c) would be applicable with regard to the properties held by the trust at the beginning of that "stub" year.

For a summary of the tax consequences resulting from a change in the trust's status for tax purposes, see the commentary under subsection 128.1(1.1).

Example 1

A trust is created in 2011. The trust is not at any time an exempt foreign trust. At the end of its 2011 taxation year, the trust is non-resident and there are no resident contributors to the trust and no resident beneficiaries under the trust.

On February 1, 2012, John makes a contribution to the trust. At the end of the trust's 2012 taxation year, John is a resident contributor to the trust, and the trust is non-resident.

On July 1, 2013 the sole trustee of the trust moves to Canada, becomes resident in Canada at that time and remains resident in Canada throughout the remainder of the year. Immediately before the trustee became resident in Canada, the trustee was non-resident and John remained a resident contributor to the trust.

On July 1, 2014, John ceases to be resident in Canada. There are no other resident contributors to the trust and there are no resident beneficiaries under the trust (taking into account the fact that John is a connected contributor).

Results

Trust's 2011 Taxation Year

1. Subsection 94(3) does not apply to deem the trust to be resident in Canada in computing its income for its 2011 taxation year.

Trust's 2012 Taxation Year

2. Paragraph 94(3)(a) applies to deem the trust to be resident in Canada, throughout its 2012 taxation year, for a number of purposes, including the computation of its income. Because the trust was non-resident throughout its 2011 taxation year, paragraph 94(3)(c) also applies to deem the trust to have disposed of its property (other than certain properties described in subparagraphs 128.1(1)b)(i) to (iv)) for fair market value proceeds immediately before the end of its last 2011 taxation year and to have reacquired those properties at a cost equal to that fair market value at the beginning of the 2012 taxation year. Because of paragraph 94(4)(d), the application of the deemed residency rule in paragraph 94(3)(a) will not cause the trust to become resident in Canada for purposes of subsection 128.1(1).

Trust's 2013 Taxation Year

3. Because the trustee of the trust becomes resident in Canada on July 1, 2013, paragraph 128.1(1)(a) will apply to deem the trust to have a taxation year-end immediately before the change of residency. At the end of this first 2013 taxation year of the trust, paragraph 94(3)(a) applies to deem the trust to be resident in Canada, throughout that first 2013 taxation year, for a number of purposes, including the computing of its income. However, paragraph 94(3)(c) will not apply because the trust was resident in Canada (i.e. because of the application of paragraph 94(3)(a) to the trust's 2012 taxation year) throughout the year preceding the 2013 taxation year.

4. Paragraph 128.1(1)(a) also applies to deem the trust to have a new taxation year at the time the trustee becomes resident in Canada on July 1, 2013. Because the trust is resident in Canada at the end of this second 2013 taxation year, paragraph 94(3)(a) does not apply to deem the trust to be resident in Canada in computing its income for that year.

5. As the trust is resident in Canada for the first 2013 taxation year (i.e., the 2013 taxation year discussed in #3 above), subsection 128.1(1.1) suspends the application of the deemed disposition and re-acquisition rules in paragraphs 128.1(1)b) and (c) that would otherwise apply in respect of the end of that first 2013 taxation year because of the trust becoming resident in Canada on July 1, 2013. This ensures that the trust does not realize at the end of that first 2013 taxation year any accrued gains or losses of the trust solely because the basis of the trust's residency in Canada changes.

6. Note that where subsection 128.1(1.1) applies to a trust, it suspends only the application of paragraph 128.1(1)(b) (as a result of paragraph 128.1(1)(c) also has no application) to the trust. If the trust becomes resident in Canada, it would continue to be subject to paragraph 128.1(1)(a). Also note that paragraph 94(4)(d) ensures that the application of paragraph 94(3)(a) to the trust will not affect the determination of whether the trust becomes resident in Canada for the purposes of subsection 128.1(1).

7. The trust is deemed to cease to be resident in Canada on July 1, 2014 (the earliest time at which there is neither a resident contributor nor a resident beneficiary) by reason of subsection 94(5). As a result, and notwithstanding paragraph 94(4)(e), subsection 128.1(4) will apply to deem the trust to have a taxation year-end immediately before the time it is deemed to cease being resident in Canada. In addition, the deemed disposition and re-acquisition rules in paragraph 128.1(4)(b) and (c) will apply.

Paragraph 94(3)(d) imposes liabilities for a taxation year on persons who are "resident contributors" or "resident beneficiaries". Where subsection 94(3) applies to a trust for a taxation year, each of these persons, other than "electing contributors" for the particular taxation year, is jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable with the trust in respect of the trust's obligations under sections 150 to 180. Typically, the most significant obligation in this context is the obligation to pay tax instalments pursuant to section 156. However, the extent of the liability imposed by paragraph 94(3)(d) is limited by new subsection 94(7). For more information, see the commentary on subsections 94(7) to (9). However, nothing in this paragraph or paragraph 94(3)(e), as described below, limits the liabilities of the trust or of another resident contributor or resident beneficiary under the Act.

The expression "solidarily liable" is added to ensure that the Act appropriately reflects both the civil law of the province of Quebec and the law of other provinces.

Paragraph 94(3)(e) imposes liabilities for a taxation year on each person that is a beneficiary under the trust and was a person from whom an amount would be recoverable at the end of 2006 under subsection 94(2) (as it read in its application to taxation years that end before 2007) in respect of the trust if the person had received before 2007 amounts described under paragraphs 94(2)(a) or (b) in respect of the trust (as those paragraphs read in their application to taxation years that end before 2007). Where subsection 94(3) applies to the trust for a taxation year, each of these persons is, to the extent of the person's recovery limit for the year, jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable with the trust in respect of the trust's obligations under sections 150 to 180. Note that where a trust created after 2000 and before 2007 has elected under the coming-into-force of new section 94 to have new section 94 apply to it for all of its taxation years that end before 2007, paragraph 94(3)(e) does not apply to it (i.e., because "old" section 94 would never have applied to it).

Note that subsection 94(3) generally does not result in the creation of any obligations for a trust that is subject to subsection 94(3) to withhold tax under Part XIII or to pay any tax under Part XII.2 in respect of distributions of income earned by the trust from Canadian sources to non-resident beneficiaries. Instead, the rules in new subsection 104(7.01) are designed so that there will be a reasonable level of Part I tax in respect of Canadian-source income received by the trust in the event the trust also distributes that income to non-resident beneficiaries in their capacity as beneficiaries. For more information, see the commentary on subsection 104(7.01).

In addition, in the event that the trust pays or credits an amount to a non-resident and that amount is not referred to in paragraph 104(7.01)(b) in respect of the trust for the taxation year, the non-resident will continue to be liable for any Part XIII tax on the amount, except to the extent that the amount is described in paragraph (b) of the definition "exempt amount" in subsection 94(1), or paid or credited before 2004.

Paragraph 94(3)(f) provides additional rules that apply in computing the income of a trust that is deemed to be resident in Canada under paragraph 94(3)(a). First, such a trust's income will be computed without reference to any income from property that is part of the trust's "non-resident portion" (defined under new subsection 94(1)), except to the extent that the income would be included under any of paragraphs 115(1)(a) to (c) in computing the trust's income earned in Canada for the year if it were at no time in the year resident in Canada. Secondly, such a trust will only be able to deduct an outlay or expense to the extent that it was made or incurred by the trust for the purpose of gaining or producing income from a property that is part of the trust's resident portion.

Paragraph 94(3)(g) applies when a person withholds and remits Part XIII tax in respect of an amount paid or credited to a trust that is deemed resident in Canada under subsection 94(3). In these circumstances, the amount remitted is deemed to have been paid on account of the trust's Part I tax for the year to the extent that the amount paid or credited to the trust has been included in its income under that Part for the year.

CRA Audit Manual: 15.7.11: Non-resident trusts versus offshore trusts.

(4) Excluded provisions — For greater certainty, paragraph (3)(a) does not deem a trust to be resident in Canada for the purposes of

(a) the definitions "arm's length transfer" and "exempt foreign trust" in subsection (1);

(b) paragraph (14)(a), subsections 70(6) and 73(1), the definition "Canadian partnership" in subsection 102(1), paragraph 107.4(1)(c) and paragraph (a) of the definition "mutual fund trust" in subsection 132(6);

(c) determining the liability of a person (other than the trust) that would arise under section 215;

(d) determining whether, in applying subsection 128.1(1), the trust becomes resident in Canada at a particular time;

(e) determining whether, in applying subsection 128.1(4), the trust ceases to be resident in Canada at a particular time;

(f) subparagraph (f)(i) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1);

(g) determining whether subsection 107(5) applies to a distribution on or after July 18, 2005 of property to the trust; and

(h) determining whether subsection 75(2) applies to deem an amount to be an income, loss, taxable capital gain or allowable capital loss of the trust.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): New subsection 94(4) provides that the rules in paragraph 94(3)(a) treating non-resident trusts as resident in Canada do not apply for the purposes of:

- the definitions "arm's length transfer" and "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1) — thus ensuring that there is no circularity in applying those definitions due to fact that those definitions impose a requirement that a trust be non-resident;

- subsections 70(6) and 73(1) and paragraph 107.4(1)(c) (other than, for transfers to trusts that occurred before February 28, 2004, subparagraph 107.4(1)(c)(i)), and paragraph (f) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1) — thus ensuring that rules allowing in some cases for a rollover of property on transfers to a Canadian resident trust generally do not apply to transfers to a trust otherwise deemed to be resident in Canada by subsection 94(3));

- determining whether subsection 107(5) applies to a distribution on or after July 18, 2005 of property to the trust;

- determining whether an amount can be attributed, under subsection 75(2), to the trust;

- determining whether the exception, under paragraph 94(14)(a), to property that is restricted property is available in respect of property held by a non-resident trust;

- paragraph (a) of the definition "mutual fund trust" in subsection 132(6) — making it clear that a trust deemed to be resident in Canada by subsection 94(3) will not be treated as a mutual fund trust for any purpose;

- determining, for taxation years that begin after July 18, 2005, whether a partnership is a "Canadian partnership" (as defined in subsection 102(1)); and

- determining whether, in applying subsection 128.1(1), the trust becomes resident in Canada at a particular time and determining whether, in applying subsection 128.1(4), the trust ceases to be resident in Canada at a particular time — thus ensuring that the deeming of a trust to be resident under paragraph 94(3)(a) does not apply to affect a determination of whether a trust has changed residence at any time (e.g., upon a change of trustees or upon a change of residence of trustees).

Note that paragraphs 94(4)(d) and (e) are generally suspended, for a brief transitional period, in their application to a trust that is subject without interruption to "old" and "new" sections 94. That transitional period starts immediately before the end of the trust's last taxation year that ends before 2007 and for which it was deemed resident by "old" section 94 and ends immediately after the beginning of the trust's first taxation year that ends after 2006 (i.e., its first taxation year in respect of which "new" section 94 applies). This is intended to ensure that section 128.1 does not apply to a trust solely because of the transition between the old and new NRT regimes. The suspension of paragraphs 94(4)(d) and (e) does not apply, however, where in the transitional period a change in the trustees of the trust occurred (e.g., the number of trustees changed, the residency of any of the trustees changed, or any of the trustees was replaced). For a summary of the tax consequences resulting from a change in the trust's status for tax purposes, see the commentary under subsection 128.1(1.1).

Furthermore, except as otherwise permitted under subsection 216(4.1), paragraphs 94(3)(a) and 94(4)(c) do not relieve a payer of Canadian-source income from the obligation to withhold amounts under section 215 in connection with amounts paid to a trust deemed to be resident in Canada by subsection 94(3). This is so even though such a trust is not itself liable for Part XIII tax on amounts paid or credited to it, because of the application of subparagraph 94(3)(a)(viii). However, any Part XIII taxes withheld in respect of amounts that are paid or credited to the trust and included in its income will, under paragraph 94(3)(g), be treated as having been paid on account of the trust's liability for tax under Part I of the Act.

(5) Deemed cessation of residence — A trust is deemed to cease to be resident in Canada at the earliest time at which there is neither a resident contributor to the trust nor a resident beneficiary under the trust in a period that would, if this Act were read without reference to subsection 128.1(4), be a taxation year of the trust

(a) that immediately follows a taxation year of the trust throughout which it was resident in Canada;

(b) at the beginning of which there was a resident contributor to the trust or a resident beneficiary under the trust; and

(c) at the end of which the trust is non-resident.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): New subsection 94(5) deems a trust to have ceased to be resident in Canada at the earliest time in a specified period at which there is neither a "resident contributor" to the trust nor a "resident beneficiary" under the trust. For this purpose, the specified period is the period that would (if the Act were read without reference to subsection 128.1(4)) be a taxation year of the trust

- that immediately follows a taxation year of the trust throughout which it was resident in Canada,

- at the beginning of which there was either a resident contributor to the trust or a resident beneficiary under the trust, and

- at the end of which the trust is non-resident.

For more information on the expressions "resident contributor" and "resident beneficiary", as defined in new subsection 94(1), see the commentary on those provisions.

Where subsection 94(5) applies, the cessation of residence in Canada of a trust results in the application of subsection 128.1(4). Under that subsection, a taxation year of the trust is deemed to have ended immediately before the earliest time in the specified period described above. At that deemed taxation year-end, the criteria in subsection 94(3) are satisfied. Accordingly, the trust will be subject to tax under Part I on its world-wide income for that year because it is considered under subsection 94(3) to be resident in Canada throughout that year. Under new paragraph 94(3)(d), each "resident beneficiary" or "resident contributor" at the time of that deemed taxation year end, other than "electing contributors" for the particular taxation year, can be jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable with the trust for the trust's income tax liabilities under the Act for that year. For more detail on the expression "solidarily", please refer to the introductory commentary above on new section 94.

For a summary of the tax consequences resulting from a change in the trust's status for tax purposes, see the commentary under subsection 128.1(1.1).

Related Provisions: 94(3)(a) [proposed] — Trust deemed resident in Canada.

(6) Becoming or ceasing to be an exempt foreign trust — If at any time a trust becomes or ceases to be an exempt foreign trust (otherwise than because of becoming resident in Canada),

(a) its taxation year that would otherwise include that time is deemed to have ended immediately before that time and a new taxation year of the trust is deemed to begin at that time; and

(b) for the purpose of determining the trust's fiscal period after that time, the trust is deemed not to have established a fiscal period before that time.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): New subsection 94(6) generally provides that, if a trust becomes or ceases to be an "exempt foreign trust" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) at any time, the trust's taxation year is deemed to have ended immediately before that time, a new "stub" taxation year is deemed to have begun at that time, and the trust is deemed not to have established a fiscal period before that time. However, subsection 94(6) does not apply where a trust ceases to be an exempt foreign trust because it becomes resident in Canada.

For example, where subsection 94(6) applies because a trust ceases to be an exempt foreign trust, subsection 94(3) may apply to deem the trust to be resident in Canada for the new "stub" taxation year of the trust if the criteria set out in that subsection are satisfied at a "specified time" in respect of the trust for the taxation year (generally, the end of the taxation year). Where this is the case, the trust would be subject to tax under Part I on its world-wide income for that new "stub" year, subject to any amount that is attributed to a resident contributor, because it would be considered under subsection 94(3) to be resident in Canada for that year.

(7) Limit to amount recoverable — The maximum amount recoverable under the provisions referred to in paragraph (3)(d) at any particular time from a person in respect of a trust (other than a person that is deemed, under subsection (12) or (13), to be a contributor or a resident contributor to the trust) and a particular taxation year of the trust is the person's recovery limit at the particular time in respect of the trust and the particular year if

(a) either

(i) the person is liable under a provision referred to in paragraph (3)(d) in respect of the trust and the particular year solely because the person was a resident beneficiary under the trust at a specified time in respect of the trust in the particular year, or

(ii) at a specified time in respect of the trust in the particular year, the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, at the time it was made, of a contribution to the trust made before the specified time by the person or by another person or partnership not dealing at arm's length with the person, is not more than the greater of

(A) $10,000, and

(B) 10% of the total of all amounts each of which was the amount, at the time it was made, of a contribution made to the trust before the specified time;

(b) except where the total determined in subparagraph (a)(ii) in respect of the person and all persons or partnerships not dealing at arm's length with the person is $10,000 or less, the person has filed on a timely basis under section 233.2 all information returns required to be filed by the person before the particular time in respect of the trust (or on any later day that is acceptable to the Minister); and

(c) it is reasonable to conclude that for each transaction that occurred before the end of the particular year at the direction of, or with the acquiescence of, the person

(i) none of the purposes of the transaction was to enable the person to avoid or minimize any liability under a provision referred to in paragraph (3)(d) in respect of the trust, and

(ii) the transaction was not part of a series of transactions any of the purposes of which was to enable the person to avoid or minimize any liability under a provision referred to in paragraph (3)(d) in respect of the trust.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010) New subsection 94(7) allows for a limitation of the amount that may be recovered from a person that would otherwise be jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable for the entire amount of a trust's tax obligations under the Act. Subsection 94(7) applies to a person (other than one deemed, by subsection 94(12) or (13), to be a contributor or a resident contributor to the trust) in respect of a particular taxation year of the trust where three conditions are satisfied.

The first condition is satisfied in respect of a particular taxation year of the trust if

- under subparagraph 94(7)(a)(i), the person is jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable with the trust only because the person was a "resident beneficiary" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) under the trust at a specified time in respect of the trust for the particular year, or

- under subparagraph 94(7)(a)(ii), at a specified time in respect of the trust for the particular year, the total amount (determined with reference to paragraphs 94(2)(b) (ex. (ii)), (p) and (q) and subsection 94(9)) of contributions made to the trust by the person (or by another person or partnership not dealing at arm's length with the person) is not more than the greater of $10,000 and 10% of the total amount of all contributions made to the trust before that time.

The second condition, under paragraph 94(7)(b), requires that the person have filed on a timely basis all information returns required to be filed by the person in respect of the trust under section 233.2 (or on any later day that is acceptable to the Minister of National Revenue). However, the second condition need not be satisfied if the first condition is satisfied because the total determined under subparagraph 94(7)(a)(ii) (in respect of the person and all persons or partnerships not dealing at arm's length with it) is $10,000 or less.

The third condition, under paragraph 94(7)(c), is satisfied in respect of a person and a particular taxation year of the trust where it is reasonable to conclude that each transaction or event that occurred before the end of the particular year at the direction of, or with the acquiescence of, the person satisfied the following conditions.

- none of the purposes of the transaction or event was to enable the person to avoid or minimize any liability under a provision referred to in paragraph 94(3)(d) in respect of the trust, and

- the transaction or event was not part of a series of transactions or events any of the purposes of which was to enable the person to avoid or minimize any liability under a provision referred to in paragraph 94(3)(d) in respect of the trust.

There are a number of transactions or events, or series of transactions or events, that may result in a failure to satisfy the third condition (e.g., an artificial dilution of a person's relative contribution to the trust (i.e., below the 10% level), or corporate distributions that have the effect of avoiding or minimizing the impact of the three-year rule described in subsection 94(9)).

Reference should be made in this context to the definition "contribution" in subsection 94(1), as well as to related rules in subsection 94(2).

Where subsection 94(7) applies to a person in respect of a taxation year of a trust, the amount recoverable at any time from the person in respect of the year is limited to the person's "recovery limit", determined under subsection 94(8), in respect of the trust and the year.

Related Provisions: 94(8) — Recovery limit. 94(9) — Determination of contribution amount.

(8) Recovery limit — The recovery limit referred to in paragraph (3)(e) and subsection (7) at a particular time of a particular person in respect of a trust and a particular taxation year of the trust is the amount, if any, by which the greater of

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is

(i) an amount received or receivable after 2000 and before the particular time

(A) by the particular person on the disposition of all or part of the person's interest as a beneficiary under the trust, or

(B) by a person or partnership (that was, when the amount became receivable, a specified party in respect of the particular person) on the disposition of all or part of the specified party's interest as a beneficiary under the trust,

(ii) an amount (other than an amount described in subparagraph (i)) made payable by the trust after 2000 and before the particular time to

(A) the particular person because of the interest of the particular person as a beneficiary under the trust, or

(B) a person or partnership (that was, when the amount became payable, a specified party in respect of the particular person) because of the interest of the specified party as a beneficiary under the trust,

(iii) an amount received after August 27, 2010 by the particular person, or a person or partnership (that was, when the amount was received, a specified party in respect of the particular person), as a loan from the trust to the extent that the amount has not been repaid,

(iv) an amount (other than an amount described in any of subparagraphs (i) to (iii)) that is the fair market value of a benefit received or enjoyed, after 2000 and before the particular time, from or under the trust by

(A) the particular person, or

(B) a person or partnership that was, when the benefit was received or enjoyed, a specified party in respect of the particular person, or

(v) the maximum amount that would be recoverable from the particular person at the end of the trust's 2006 taxation year under subsection (2) (as it read in its application to taxation years that end before 2007) if the trust had tax payable under this Part at the end of the trust's 2006 taxation year and that tax payable exceeded the total of the amounts described in respect of the particular person under paragraphs (2)(a) and (b) (as they read in their application to taxation years that end before 2007), except to the extent that the amount so recoverable is in respect of an amount that is included in the particular person's recovery limit because of subparagraph (i) or (ii), and

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, when made, of a contribution to the trust before the particular time by the particular person, exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is

(c) an amount recovered before the particular time from the particular person in connection with a liability of the particular person (in respect of the trust and the particular year or a preceding taxation year of the trust) that arose because of the application of subsection (3) (or the application of this section as it read in its application to taxation years that end before 2007),

(d) an amount (other than an amount in respect of which this paragraph has applied in respect of any other person) recovered before the particular time from a specified party in respect of the particular person in connection with a liability of the particular person (in respect of the trust and the particular year or a preceding taxation year of the trust) that arose because of the application of subsection (3) (or the application of this section as it read in its application to taxation years that end before 2007), or

(e) the amount, if any, by which the particular person's tax payable under this Part for any taxation year in which an amount described in any of subparagraphs (a)(i) to (iv) was paid, became payable, was received, became receivable or was enjoyed by the particular person exceeds the amount that would have been the particular person's tax payable under this Part for that taxation year if no such amount were paid, became payable, were received, became receivable or were enjoyed by the particular person in that taxation year.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010) Under subsection 94(8), the amount of the recovery limit that applies to a particular person at any particular time is calculated as follows:

- ADD amounts received or receivable after 2000 and before the particular time by the particular person on the disposition of all or part of the particular person's interest as a beneficiary under the trust, or by another person or partnership that was, at the time the amount became receivable, a specified party (as defined in subsection 94(1)) in respect of the particular person on the disposition of all or part of the specified party's interest as a beneficiary under the trust;

- ADD an amount (other than an amount described in the paragraph above) made payable by the trust after 2000 and before the particular time to the particular person because of the interest of the particular person as a beneficiary under the trust, or to another person or partnership (that was, at the time the amount became payable, a specified party in respect of the particular person) because of the interest of the specified party as a beneficiary under the trust;

- ADD the amount of any loan received after August 27, 2010 by the particular person, or by another person or partnership (that was, when the amount was received, a specified party in respect of the particular person) to the extent that the amount has not been repaid;

- ADD the fair market value of benefits received or enjoyed (other than amount described in the paragraphs above), after 2000 and before the particular time, under the trust by the particular person (or by a person or partnership that was, at the time the benefit was received or enjoyed, a specified party in respect of the particular person);

- ADD the maximum amount that would be recoverable from the particular person at the end of the trust's 2006 taxation year under "old" subsection 94(2) (i.e., as it read in its application to taxation years that end before 2007) if the trust had had tax payable under Part I of the Act at the end of that taxation year in excess of the total of the amounts described in respect of the particular person under "old" paragraphs 94(2)(a) and (b) (i.e., as they read in their application to taxation years that end before 2007), except to the extent that the amount so recoverable is in respect of an amount that is included in the particular person's recovery limit because of subparagraph 94(8)(a)(i) or (ii) (note that where a trust created after 2000 and before 2007 has elected under the coming-into-force of new section 94 to have new section 94 apply to it for all of its taxation years that end before 2007, the amount described by this paragraph would not apply in respect of it because "old" section 94 would never have applied to it);

- ADD, to the extent that it exceeds the total of the first five amounts, the total amount (determined with reference to paragraphs 94(2)(b), (e), (h), (p) and (q) and subsection 94(9)) of contributions made to the trust by the particular person;

- SUBTRACT previous recoveries by the CRA under subsection 94(3) or under "old" section 94 (i.e., as it read in its application to taxation years that end before 2007);

- SUBTRACT previous recoveries by the CRA under subsection 94(3) or under "old" section 94 (i.e., as it read in its application to taxation years that end before 2007) from a specified party in respect of the particular person in respect of the trust and the year or a preceding taxation year of the trust; and

- SUBTRACT the amount, if any, by which the particular person's tax payable under Part I of the Act for any taxation year in which an amount described in any of subparagraphs 94(8)(a)(i) to (iv) was paid, became payable, was received, became receivable or was enjoyed by the particular person exceeds the amount that would have been the particular person's tax payable under Part I of the Act for that taxation year if no such amount were paid, became payable, were received, became receivable or were enjoyed by the particular person in that taxation year.

For more information on subsections 94(11) to (13), or the expression "specified party" as defined in subsection 94(1), see the commentary on those provisions.

Related Provisions: 94(9) — Determination of contribution amount; 104(24) — Whether amount payable to beneficiary.

(9) Determination of contribution amount — restricted property — If a person or partnership contributes at any time restricted property to a trust, the amount of the contribution at that time is deemed, for the purposes of this section, to be the greater of

(a) the amount, determined without reference to this subsection, of the contribution at that time, and

(b) the amount that is the greatest fair market value of the restricted property, or property substituted for it, in the period that

(i) begins immediately after that time, and

(ii) ends at the end of the third calendar year that ends after that time.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Subsection 94(9) affects the calculation of the amount of a "contribution" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) to a trust of "restricted property" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)). This special rule will be relevant in determining whether the "recovery limit" limitation applies to a contributor to the trust, and in determining the amount of that recovery limit. The rule is also relevant to determining certain amounts in respect of trust contributions under sections 162 and 164, as well as amounts in respect of an electing contributor for purposes of the attribution regime in subsections 94(16) and (17).

The amount of a contribution to a trust because of a transfer to the trust of restricted property is deemed by subsection 94(9) to be the greater of:

- the amount, otherwise determined, at that time of the contribution; and

- the amount that is the greatest fair market value of the restricted property (or of substituted property, determined by reference to subsection 248(5)) in the period that begins immediately after that time and ends at the end of the third calendar year after that time.

For more information on the expression "restricted property" as defined in new subsection 94(1), see the commentary on that definition.

Subsection 94(9) allows for a reasonable opportunity for recovery of tax by the CRA in the context of a transaction or series of transactions involving the transfer of restricted property. Consider, for example, an estate freeze under which common shares in the capital stock of a corporation are transferred directly or indirectly to a non-resident trust. Because of the difficulties associated with valuing the common shares at the time of the transfer, it is appropriate to provide for a valuation as described above.

In conjunction with new subsection 94(9), new subparagraph 152(4)(b)(vii) is added to ensure, among other things, that a reassessment of a taxpayer arising out of the application of subsection 94(9) can be undertaken by the CRA within 3 years after the normal reassessment period of the taxpayer in respect of the taxpayer's relevant taxation year.

Related Provisions: 152(4)(b)(vi) — Three-year extension to reassessment period.

(10) Where contributor becomes resident in Canada within 60 months after making a contribution — In applying this section at each specified time, in respect of a taxation year of a trust, that is before the particular time at which a contributor to the trust becomes resident in Canada within 60 months after making a contribution to the trust, the contribution is deemed to have been made at a time other than a non-resident time of the contributor if

(a) in applying the definition "non-resident time" in subsection (1) at each of those specified times, the contribution was made at a non-resident time of the contributor; and

(b) in applying the definition "non-resident time" in subsection (1) immediately after the particular time, the contribution is made at a time other than a non-resident time of the contributor.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): New subsection 94(10) applies to determine whether there is a "connected contributor" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) to a trust for the purposes of section 94, including in applying the definition "resident beneficiary" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)). Under new paragraph 94(3)(d), a resident beneficiary can, to an extent, be liable for the trust's income tax under Part I of the Act. For more information, see the commentary on those definitions and subsections 94(3) and (7) to (9).

A "contribution" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) to a trust by a contributor is considered to have been made at a time other than a "non-resident time" (as defined in subsection 94(1)) if the contributor becomes resident in Canada at any time within the period (referred to in this commentary as the "60-month post period") 60 months after the time of the contribution. However, to facilitate the administration of the definition "non-resident time", paragraph (b) of the definition "connected contributor" and subsection 94(3), the definition "non-resident time" is drafted so that such a contributor and the trust may, subject to subsection 94(10), treat the time of the contribution as a non-resident time for the purposes of applying the definition "connected contributor" and subsection 94(3) at a "specified time" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) in respect of the trust for any particular trust taxation year if at the specified time the contributor still has not become resident in Canada within the 60-month post period.

Subsection 94(10) deems (for the purpose of applying section 94 at each specified time, in respect of a trust for a taxation year of the trust, that is before the particular time at which the contributor becomes resident in Canada within the 60-month post period) the contribution to have been made at a time other than a non-resident time of the contributor if:

- in applying the definition "non-resident time" as of each of those specified times, the particular contribution was made at a non-resident time of the contributor; and

- in applying the definition "non-resident time" at the particular time, the contribution is made at a time other than a non-resident time of the contributor.

Where subsection 94(10) applies, the contributor will be considered to be a "connected contributor" to the trust and, if, as a result, there was a "resident beneficiary" at a specified time in the relevant prior taxation year of the trust. In cases where the trust was not already deemed by subsection 94(3) to be resident in Canada for the prior year (i.e., because for the prior year there were no resident contributors to the trust and no the resident beneficiaries under the trust), the trust would be treated as resident in Canada for that year and the resident beneficiary would, because of subsection 94(3), generally be jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable for Part I tax on the trust's income for the prior year. In this regard, please refer to the commentary on paragraphs 94(3)(c) and (d). For more details on the expression "solidarily", please refer to the introductory commentary above on new section 94. For more information on the definition "electing contributor", see the commentary on that definition.

New subparagraph 152(4)(b)(vii) is added to ensure, among other things, that a reassessment of a taxpayer arising out of the application of subsection 94(10) can be undertaken by the CRA within 3 years after the normal reassessment period of the taxpayer in respect of the taxpayer's relevant taxation year.

Related Provisions: 152(4)(b)(vi) — Three-year extension to reassessment period.

(11) Application of subsecs. (12) and (13) — Subsections (12) and (13) apply to a trust or a person in respect of a trust if

(a) at any time property of a trust (referred to in this subsection and subsections (12) and (13) as the "original trust") is transferred or loaned, directly or indirectly, in any manner, to another trust (referred to in this subsection and subsections (12) and (13) as the "transferee trust");

(b) the original trust

(i) is deemed to be resident in Canada immediately before that time because of paragraph (3)(a),

(ii) would be deemed to be resident in Canada immediately before that time because of paragraph (3)(a) if this section were read without reference to paragraph (a) of the definition "connected contributor" in subsection (1) and paragraph (a) of the definition "resident contributor" in that subsection,

(iii) was deemed to be resident in Canada immediately before that time because of subsection (1) as it read in its application to taxation years that end before 2007, or

(iv) would have been deemed to be resident in Canada immediately before that time because of subsection (1) as it read in its application to taxation years that end before 2007 if that subsection were read in that application without reference to subclause (b)(i)(A)(III) of that subsection; and

(c) it is reasonable to conclude that one of the reasons the transfer or loan is made is to avoid or minimize a liability under this Part that arose, or that would otherwise have arisen, because of the application of this section (or the application of this section as it read in its application to taxation years that end before 2007).

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Subsections 94(11) to (13) provide a set of related anti-avoidance rules that apply where it is reasonable to conclude that one of the reasons for a loan or transfer of property from a trust (the "original trust"), that is deemed under paragraph 94(3)(a) to be resident in Canada (or was deemed resident because of "old" subsection 94(1) as it read in its application to taxation years that end before 2007 or would have been so deemed under either of those provisions if they had applied without regard to the period of time in which a contributor to the trust was resident in Canada), to another trust (the "transferee trust") is to avoid or minimize the liability, of any person under Part I of the Act, that arose, or that would otherwise have arisen, because of the application of section 94 (or because of subsection 94(1) as it read in its application to taxation years that end before 2007). Note that if a deemed Canadian resident trust, that was created after 2000 and before 2007 and that has elected under the coming-into-force of new section 94 to have new section 94 apply to it for all of its taxation years that end before 2007, has made a transfer described by paragraph 94(11)(a), the trust will be an "original trust" by operation of subparagraph 94(11)(b)(i).

Where a loan or transfer described by subsection 94(11) is made at a particular time, the original trust is deemed, under subsection 94(12), to be a resident contributor to the transferee trust for the purpose of applying section 94 in respect of the transferee trust.

Where such a loan or transfer is made at a particular time, a person that is at that time a contributor to the original trust is deemed, under subsection 94(13), to be a contributor to the transferee trust and (if at that time the person is also a connected contributor to the original trust) a connected contributor to the transferee trust. For more information on the definitions "contributor" and "connected contributor" in subsection 94(1), see the commentary on those definitions.

Subsection 94(7), generally provides that the liability of a "resident contributor" is limited by that contributor's recovery limit, as determined by reference to subsections 94(7) to (9). However, subsection 94(7) does not apply to a person that is deemed, by subsection 94(12) or (13), to be a contributor or a resident contributor to the trust. For more information on the definition "resident contributor" or subsections 94(3) and (7) to (9), see the commentary on those provisions.

(12) Deemed resident contributor — The original trust described in subsection (11) (including a trust that has ceased to exist) is deemed to be, at and after the time of the transfer or loan referred to in that subsection, a resident contributor to the transferee trust for the purpose of applying this section in respect of the transferee trust.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): See under 94(11).

Related Provisions: 94(11) — Application of 94(12).

(13) Deemed contributor — A person (including any person that has ceased to exist) that is, at the time of the transfer or loan referred to in subsection (11), a contributor to the original trust, is deemed to be at and after that time

(a) a contributor to the transferee trust; and

(b) a connected contributor to the transferee trust, if at that time the person is a connected contributor to the original trust.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): See under 94(11).

Related Provisions: 94(11) — Application of 94(13).

(14) Restricted property — exception — A particular property that is, or will be, at any time held, loaned or transferred, as the case may be, by a particular person or partnership is not restricted property held, loaned or transferred, as the case may be, at that time by the particular person or partnership if

(a) the following conditions are met:

(i) the particular property (and property, if any, for which the particular property is, or is to be, substituted property) was not, and will not be, at any time acquired, held, loaned or transferred by the particular person or partnership (or any person or partnership with whom the particular person or partnership does not at any time deal at arm's length) in whole or in part for the purpose of permitting any change in the value of the property of a corporation (that is, at any time, a closely-held corporation) to accrue directly or indirectly in any manner whatever to the value of property held by a non-resident trust,

(ii) the Minister is satisfied that the particular property (and property, if any, for which it is, or is to be, substituted) is described by subparagraph (i), and

(iii) the particular property is identified in prescribed form, containing prescribed information, filed, by or on behalf of the particular person or partnership, with the Minister on or before

(A) in the case of a person, the particular person's filing-due date for the particular person's taxation year that includes that time,

(B) in the case of a partnership, the day on or before which a return is required by section 229 of the Income Tax Regulations to be filed in respect of the fiscal period of the particular partnership or would be required to be so filed if that section applied to the partnership, or

(C) another date that is acceptable to the Minister; or

(b) at that time

(i) the particular property is

(A) a share of the capital stock of a corporation,

(B) a specified fixed interest in a trust, or

(C) an interest, as a member of a partnership, under which, by operation of any law governing the arrangement in respect of the partnership, the liability of the member as a member of the partnership is limited,

(ii) there are at least 150 persons each of whom holds at that time property that at that time

(A) is identical to the particular property, and

(B) has a total fair market value of at least $500,

(iii) the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at that time, of the particular property (or of identical property that is held, at that time, by the particular person or partnership or a person or partnership with whom the particular person or partnership does not deal at arm's length) does not exceed 10% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at that time, of the particular property or of identical property held by any person or partnership,

(iv) property that is identical to the particular property can normally be acquired by and sold by members of the public in the open market, and

(v) the particular property, or identical property, is listed on a designated stock exchange.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Subsection 94(14) provides two separate rules that can operate to suspend, in limited circumstances, a particular property's status as restricted property of a particular person or partnership.

Paragraph 94(14)(a) provides that a particular property that is at any time held, loaned or transferred by the particular person or partnership will not be treated as restricted property held, loaned or transferred at that time by the person or partnership if

- the particular property (or property for which the particular property is, or is to be, substituted property) was not, and will not be, at any time acquired, held, loaned or transferred by the person or partnership (or any person or partnership with whom the person or partnership does not at any time deal at arm's length) in whole or in part for the purpose of permitting any change in the value of the property of a corporation (that is, at any time, a closely-held corporation) to accrue directly or indirectly in any manner whatever to the value of property held by a non-resident trust (n.b., because of subsection 94(4) a non-resident trust includes here a trust that is deemed to be resident in Canada for other purposes under subsection 94(3));

- the Minister is satisfied that this is the case with respect to the property (and property, if any, for which it is to be substituted); and

- the particular property is identified in prescribed form with prescribed information.

In the case of a person, the prescribed form in which the particular property is identified must be filed by the person's filing-due date for the person's taxation year that includes that time. In the case of a partnership, the prescribed form must be filed on or before the day on which a return is required by section 229 of the Regulations to be filed in respect of the partnership (or would be required to be filed if that section applied to the partnership). In either case, the prescribed form may be filed on or before another date acceptable to the Minister. That other date will generally be a date later than the person or partnership's relevant filing due-date, but in circumstances in which the person or partnership has no filing-due date, the other date is intended to provide the Minister with the ability to choose a filing deadline for the prescribed form.

Paragraph 94(14)(b) provides that property is not restricted property of a particular person or partnership that is held, loaned or transferred, as the case may be, at that time by the particular person or partnership if at that time:

- the particular property is a share of the capital stock of a corporation, a specified fixed interest in a trust, or an interest as a limited partner in a partnership;

- there are at least 150 persons each of whom holds at that time property that at that time is identical to the particular property, and has a total fair market value of at least $500;

- the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at that time, of the particular property (or of identical property that is held, at that time, by the particular person or partnership or a person or partnership with whom the particular person or partnership does not deal at arm's length) does not exceed 10% of the total fair market value, at that time, of the particular property and of identical property held by any person or partnership;

- property that is identical to the particular property can normally be acquired by and sold by members of the public in the open market; and

- the particular property, or identical property, is listed on a designated stock exchange

For more details on the definitions "restricted property" and "closely-held corporation", see the commentary on those provisions.

Related Provisions: 94(4)(b) — Deeming non-resident trust to be resident in Canada does not apply to para. (a); 94(15)(a)(iii) — Anti-avoidance rule re condition in 94(14)(b)(ii); 248(12) — Identical properties.

(15) Anti-avoidance — In applying this section,

(a) [150-investor rule] — if it can reasonably be considered that one of the main reasons that a person or partnership

(i) is at any time a shareholder of a corporation is to cause the condition in paragraph (b) of the definition "closely-held corporation" in subsection (1) to be satisfied in respect of the corporation, the condition is deemed not to have been satisfied at that time in respect of the corporation,

(ii) holds at any time an interest in a trust is to cause the condition in clause (h)(ii)(A) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection (1) to be satisfied in respect of the trust, the condition is deemed not to have been satisfied at that time in respect of the trust, and

(iii) holds at any time a property is to cause the condition described in subparagraph (14)(b)(ii) to be satisfied in respect of the property or an identical property held by any person, the condition is deemed not to have been satisfied at that time in respect of the property or the identical property;

(b) ["exempt foreign trust"(f)] — if at any time at or before a specified time in a taxation year of a trust, a resident contributor to the trust contributes to the trust property that is restricted property of the trust, or property for which restricted property of the trust is substituted, and the trust is at that specified time an exempt foreign trust by reason of paragraph (f) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection (1), the amount of the trust's income for the taxation year from the restricted property, and the amount of any taxable capital gain from the disposition in the taxation year by the trust of the restricted property, shall be included in computing the income of the resident contributor for its taxation year in which that taxation year of the trust ends and not in computing the income of the trust for that taxation year of the trust; and

(c) ["exempt foreign trust"(h)] — if at a particular time in a particular taxation year of a trust, that was at a specified time in its immediately preceding taxation year an exempt foreign trust by reason of paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection (1), a beneficiary who may receive, at or after the particular time and directly from the trust, any of the income or capital of the trust holds a specified fixed interest in the trust, and immediately after the particular time, the interest ceases to be a specified fixed interest in the trust,

(i) the trust shall include in computing its income for the particular taxation year an amount equal to the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount by which the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a property held by the trust at that specified time exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is the principal amount outstanding at that specified time of a liability of the trust,

B is the amount by which the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a property held by the trust at the earliest time at which there is a resident contributor to, or resident beneficiary under, the trust and at which the trust is an exempt foreign trust (referred to in this paragraph as the "initial time") exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is the principal amount outstanding at the initial time of a liability of the trust, and

C is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a contribution made to the trust in the period that begins at the initial time and ends at the specified time (in this paragraph referred to as the "interest gross-up period"); and

(ii) for the purposes of subsection 161(1), for each taxation year of the trust that ends in the interest gross-up period, the trust is (in addition to any excess otherwise determined in respect of the trust under that subsection) deemed to have throughout the period that begins at the trust's balance-due date [sic — should be "balance-due day" — ed.] for that taxation year and ends at that specified time, an excess equal to the amount determined by the following formula

$$A/B \times 42.92\%$$

where

A is the amount determined under subparagraph (i) in respect of the trust for the particular taxation year, and

B is the number of the trust's taxation years that end in the interest gross-up period.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): New subsection 94(15) is an anti-avoidance provision.

Determining whether There are 150 Persons

Paragraph 94(15)(a) is relevant to the application of the definition "closely-held corporation" in subsection 94(1), paragraph (b) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1), and paragraph 94(14)(b). These provisions, respectively, provide for different results based, in part, on the condition that there be at a particular time at least 150 shareholders of the capital stock of a corporation, at least 150 beneficiaries under a trust, or at least 150 persons that hold property (identical to a particular property) issued by a trust, corporation or limited partnership.

New paragraph 94(15)(a) provides that, if it can reasonably be considered that one of the main reasons that a person or partnership is at any time a shareholder of a corporation, holds a capital interest in a trust, or holds a property is to cause the applicable condition above to be met in respect of the corporation, the trust or — in the case of paragraph 94(14)(b) — the particular property (or an identical property), the condition is deemed not to have been met with respect to the corporation, the trust or the particular or identical property.

Where paragraph 94(15)(a) applies in respect of a particular time and in respect of the corporation or trust, in the case of the corporation, it would be treated at that time as a closely held corporation and in the case of the trust, it would not be treated at that time as an exempt foreign trust. In the case of paragraph 94(14)(b), the particular property and the identical property would no longer qualify under paragraph 94(14)(b) for an exemption from treatment as restricted property.

Exempt Foreign Trusts — paragraph (f)

New paragraph 94(15)(b) applies if at any time a resident contributor has contributed restricted property — or contributes property for which restricted property is later substituted (including by reference to subsection 248(5)) — to a trust. Where this is the case, for each taxation year of the trust for which it is at or after the contribution and at a specified time in that taxation year (generally meaning the end of the taxation year) an exempt foreign trust because of paragraph (f) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1), any of the trust's income from, or taxable capital gains from the disposition of, the restricted property is not to be included in computing the trust's income. Instead, those amounts are to be included in computing the income of the resident contributor for its taxation year in which the relevant trust taxation year ends.

Exempt Foreign Trusts — paragraph (h)

New paragraph 94(15)(c) is intended to apply to trusts that initially qualify for the commercial trust exemption under paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust", but that compromise an essential indicator of commerciality as a result of the interest of a beneficiary under the trust ceasing to be fixed. The anti-avoidance rule seeks to ensure that the trust is taxed as though it were not an exempt foreign trust during the entire period in which there are Canadian investors in the trust and the trust qualified as an exempt foreign trust under paragraph (h) of that definition.

Paragraph 94(15)(c) applies in respect of a trust for a particular taxation year of the trust if at the end of its immediately preceding taxation year it was an exempt foreign trust because of paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1), and in the particular taxation year the beneficial interest of a given trust investor ceases to be a specified fixed interest (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) in the trust (e.g., in these circumstances, the beneficial interests of all of the trust's investors would be expected to also cease to be specified fixed interests in the trust because the definition "specified fixed interest" requires that none of the rights to income or capital in respect of any interest under the trust depend upon a discretionary power).

Where this is the case, the trust is, in general terms, required to include a specified amount in computing its income for the particular taxation year. The specified amount is intended to be a proxy for the trust's accumulated income. More specifically, that amount is the increase, if any, in the net fair market value of the trust from the initial time at which there are Canadian investors in the trust and the trust qualifies as an exempt foreign trust under paragraph (h) of that definition to the end of the immediately preceding taxation year, minus the total amount of contributions made to the trust in that period ("the interest gross-up period").

In addition to this income inclusion for the trust in the particular taxation year, for each taxation year of the trust included in its interest gross-up period, the trust is made liable for unpaid instalment interest, computed as though the trust had unpaid Canadian taxes for the year (using the federal rate of 42.92% that applies for inter vivos trusts that have income not earned in a province) in respect of the specified amount. The resulting excess is in addition to any other excess otherwise determined in respect of the trust under subsection 161(1).

(16) Attribution to electing contributors — If at a specified time in respect of a trust for a taxation year of the trust (referred to in this subsection as the "trust's year"), there is an electing contributor in respect of the trust, the following rules apply:

(a) the electing contributor is required to include in computing their income for their taxation year (referred to in this subsection as the "contributor's year") in which the trust's year ends, the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is

(i) if, at or before the specified time, the electing contributor has made a contribution to the trust and is not a joint contributor in respect of the trust and the contribution, the amount of the contribution, or

(ii) if, at or before the specified time, the electing contributor has made a contribution to the trust and is a joint contributor in respect of the trust and the contribution, the amount obtained when the amount of the contribution is divided by the number of joint contributors in respect of the contribution,

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount that would be determined under A for each resident contributor, or connected contributor, to the trust at the specified time if all of those contributors were electing contributors in respect of the trust,

C is the trust's income, computed without reference to paragraph (f), for the trust's year, and

D is the amount deducted by the trust under section 111 in computing its taxable income for the trust's year;

(b) subject to paragraph (c), the amount, if any, required by paragraph (a) to be included in the electing contributor's income for the contributor's year is deemed to be income from property from a source in Canada;

(c) for the purposes of this paragraph, paragraph (d) and section 126, an amount in respect of the trust's income for the trust's year from a source in a country other than Canada is deemed to be income of the electing contributor for the contributor's year from that source if

(i) the amount is designated by the trust, in respect of the electing contributor, in the trust's return of income under this Part for the trust's year,

(ii) the amount may reasonably be considered (having regard to all the circumstances including the terms and conditions of the trust) to be part of the amount that because of paragraph (a) was included in computing the income of the electing contributor for the contributor's year, and

(iii) the total of all amounts designated by the trust, under this paragraph or subsection 104(22) in respect of that source, in the trust's return of income under this Part for the trust's year is not greater than the trust's income for the trust's year from that source;

(d) for the purposes of this paragraph and section 126, the electing contributor is deemed to have paid as business-income tax (in this subsection as defined by subsection 126(7)) or non-business-income tax (in this subsection as defined by subsection 126(7)), as the case may be, for the contributor's year in respect of a source the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount that, in the absence of subparagraph (e)(i), would be the business-income tax or non-business-income tax, as the case may be, paid by the trust in respect of that source for the trust's year,

B is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount designated under paragraph (c) in respect of that source by the trust in respect of the electing contributor in the trust's return of income under this Part for the trust's year, and

C is the trust's income for the trust's year from that source;

(e) in applying subsection 20(12) and section 126 to the trust for the trust's year there shall be deducted

(i) in computing the trust's income from a source for the trust's year the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deemed by paragraph (c) to be income from that source of the electing contributor for the contributor's year, and

(ii) in computing the business-income tax or non-business-income tax paid by the trust for the trust's year in respect of a source the total of all amounts in respect of that source each of which is an amount deemed by paragraph (d) to be paid by the electing contributor as business-income tax or non-business-income tax, as the case may be, in respect of that source;

(f) in computing the trust's income for the trust's year there may be deducted the amount that does not exceed the amount included by reason of paragraph (a) in the electing contributor's income for the contributor's year; and

(g) where before the specified time the electing contributor made a contribution to the trust as part of a series of transactions in which another person made the same contribution, in applying this subsection in respect of the electing contributor and the other person, the other person is deemed not to be a joint contributor in respect of the contribution if it can reasonably be considered that one of the main purposes of the series was to obtain the benefit of any deduction in computing income, taxable income or tax payable under this Act or any balance of undeducted outlays, expenses or other amounts available to the other person or any exemption available to the other person from tax payable under this Act.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): New subsection 94(16) provides rules for attributing the income of a trust that is deemed to be resident in Canada under new subsection 94(3) to its electing contributors. The provision applies on an electing contributor-by-electing contributor basis. Losses of a trust cannot be attributed to an electing contributor. However, the amount of trust income to be attributed to an electing contributor is reduced by the amount of the trust's losses of other years deducted by the trust in computing its taxable income. For more information on the definition "electing contributor" in new subsection 94(1), see the commentary on that definition.

New paragraph 94(16)(a) provides for an income inclusion for an electing contributor in respect of a trust. This income inclusion is computed by subtracting from the trust's income for the taxation year the amounts deducted by the trust under section 111 as losses for the year (thus ensuring that electing contributors benefit from their proportionate share of trust losses), and multiplying the result by the proportion that the electing contributor's share of contributions made to the trust is of the total amount that would be contributions to the trust by resident contributors or connected contributors if those contributors were electing contributors in respect of the trust. This proportion is itself computed to account for joint contributors (as defined under new subsection 94(1)). If there are joint contributors in respect of the trust and a contribution, the electing contributor's share of that contribution will be divided equally among the number of joint contributors in respect of that contribution. Paragraph 94(16)(a) therefore has the effect of attributing to electing contributors their proportionate share of the income of the trust. Paragraph 94(16)(a) provides that the income of the trust that is available to be attributed to electing contributors is its income computed after taking into account deductions available to the trust for amounts allocated to trust beneficiaries, but before taking into account amounts deducted by the trust under paragraph 94(16)(f). (After applying the attribution rules to any electing contributors in respect of the trust, the remaining income, if any, in the trust — ignoring income retained for purposes of applying losses in computing the trust's taxable income — would be subject to Part I tax. It is expected that this would mainly be income derived from contributions by former residents of Canada.)

New paragraph 94(16)(b) characterizes the income attributed to electing contributors of a trust. It operates, subject to the rules in new paragraph 94(16)(c), to deem amounts included in the income of electing contributors under paragraph 94(16)(a) to be income from property from a source in Canada.

New paragraphs 94(16)(c) to (e) provide rules that permit a trust to designate, for electing contributors in respect of the trust, an amount of the trust's foreign income. Such a designation is made by the trust on a source-by-source basis. Where the designation is made, the amount designated is deemed, for the purposes of paragraphs 94(16)(c) and (d) and section 126, to be the electing contributor's income for the year from that source. These rules operate in a manner similar to rules in subsections 104(22) to (22.3) that apply in respect of amounts made payable to beneficiaries under a trust.

A trust designation under these rules in respect of a source of its income is valid only if it is reasonable to consider that the amount designated is part of the amount included under paragraph 94(16)(a) in the income of the electing contributor for the electing contributor's taxation year in which that trust year ends, and only if the total of the amounts designated by the trust under paragraph 94(16)(c) or subsection 104(22) in respect of that source does not exceed the trust's income for its taxation year from that source.

New paragraph 94(16)(d) treats an electing contributor, as a consequence of the trust's designation of a source under paragraph 94(16)(c) in the contributor's favour, as having paid in respect of the source a pro-rata share of the business-income tax or non-business-income tax paid by the trust. The pro-rata share for the electing contributor is equal to the proportion of the trust's income from that source giving rise to such tax that was designated by the trust in favour of the electing contributor. For this purpose, paragraph 94(16)(d) specifies that the terms "business-income tax" and "non-business-income tax" have, in subsection 94(16), the meanings as defined under subsection 126(7).

New paragraph 94(16)(e) requires that a trust recalculate, for purposes of the trust computing certain deductions in respect of foreign taxes paid by it, amounts of its income and business-income tax and non-business-income tax to account for the designation made in favour of electing contributors.

New paragraph 94(16)(f) provides a trust with a deduction for a taxation year corresponding to amounts included in an electing contributor's income under paragraph 94(16)(a).

New paragraph 94(16)(g) is an anti-avoidance rule that prevents the definition "joint contributor" from applying in certain circumstances. If an electing contributor makes a contribution to a trust as part of a series of transactions or events in respect of which another person has made the same contribution (e.g., because of the extended transfer or contribution rules in subsection 94(2)), and one of the main purposes of the series of the transactions was to obtain a specified tax benefit, the contributor and the other person are not treated as joint contributors in applying the rules in paragraph 94(16)(a) to (g) to them. In effect, the income amount computed in respect of each of the other joint contributors' amounts in respect of the contribution will be based on subparagraph (i) of A of the formula in paragraph 94(16)(a), and the resulting income inclusion will be higher than otherwise determined. For this purpose, a specified tax benefit means a benefit from any deduction in computing income, taxable income or tax payable under the Act or any balance of undeducted outlays, expenses or other amounts available to the other person or any exemption available to the other person from tax payable under the Act.

Note that in respect of a contribution made by a person who is non-resident at the particular time of the contribution, if the person later becomes resident in Canada within 60 months after the particular time, subsection 94(10) applies to treat the person as having made that contribution at a time other than a non-resident time. As a result, the person will be treated as a connected contributor at the time ("change-in-status time") at which the requirements of paragraph (a) of the definition "connected contributor" cease to be met in respect of the person. That contribution will, as of the change-in-status time, be treated as having become part of the resident portion at the time at which the contribution was made. In these circumstances, and assuming that the trust has existing electing contributors at all relevant times, the portion of the trust's income derived from that contribution and that is required to be included in computing the trust's income for a taxation year that ends before the change-in-status time will not be attributed to any contributor during the time that is before the change-in-status time, but will instead be taxed at the trust level.

New subsection 94(16) applies to taxation years that end after March 4, 2010.

Example 1

Prior to 2011, Canadians have made contributions to a pre-existing non-resident trust totalling $30,000. None of those persons is resident in Canada in 2011. The trust has also received contributions from non-resident persons who have never been resident in Canada totalling $10,000. No distributions are made from the trust during its 2011 taxation year.

Kamil, Prasanna and Chris are long-term residents of Canada. In February 2011, Kamil makes a contribution of $10,000 to the trust and Prasanna makes a contribution of $5,000 to the trust. Both contributions were made in cash. In August 2011, Chris contributes securities that have a total fair market value of $5,000, to the trust. None of Kamil, Prasanna or Chris has previously contributed to trust. None of them takes an interest in the trust in exchange for their contributions.

The trust realizes income of $2,500 and losses of $500 during its 2011 taxation year. All of the income and losses result from the property contributed by the current and former residents of Canada. The $10,000 of property contributed by persons who have never been resident in Canada did not result in any income or losses during the 2011 taxation year.

Kamil and Prasanna do not elect to be "electing contributors" in respect of the trust. Chris elects to be an "electing contributor" in respect of the trust.

Results

1. The "resident portion" of the trust for its 2011 taxation year will total $50,000. This consists of the $30,000 of pre-2011 contributions from the former residents of Canada and the $20,000 total contributions from Kamil, Prasanna and Chris during 2011. The "non-resident portion" of the trust for its 2011 taxation year will total $10,000.

2. Since Chris is an "electing contributor" in respect of the trust, he is required to include an amount in income in respect of the contribution of securities for his taxation year in which the trust's 2011 taxation year ends. Applying the formula in paragraph 94(16)(a), he will be attributed $200 to be included in income as follows:

$($5,000 / $50,000) × ($2,500 – $500) = $200

3. Under paragraph 94(16)(f), the trust will be permitted a $200 deduction in computing its income for its 2011 taxation year.

4. Since Kamil and Prasanna do not elect to be "electing contributors" in respect of the trust, they will be jointly, severally and solidarily liable with the trust for the Canadian income tax liability on its remaining income of $1,800 for its 2011 taxation year (as will any beneficiaries of the trust who are resident in Canada).

5. Note that the "non-resident portion" of the trust is not involved in these computations. In other words, the results described above would be obtained even if the trust did realize income or losses resulting from the $10,000 of property contributed by the non-resident persons who have never been resident in Canada.

Example 2

Assume the same facts as in Example 1 except that the trust's income for the year before any deduction under subsection 104(6) or paragraph 94(16)(f) is $50,000 and that the trust has non-capital losses of other years totalling $15,000 and net capital losses of other years totalling $10,000, which are available to be deducted by the trust in computing its taxable income for 2011. In addition, the trust has made $20,000 of its income payable to its beneficiaries.

Results

1. The "resident portion" of the trust for its 2011 taxation year will total $50,000. This consists of the $30,000 of pre-2011 contributions from the former residents of Canada and the $20,000 total contributions from Kamil, Prasanna and Chris during 2011. The "non-resident portion" of the trust for its 2011 taxation year will total $10,000.

2. The trust's income for 2011(computed without reference to paragraph 94(16)(f)) is $50,000 less the $20,000 payable to the beneficiaries of the trust, or $30,000. The trust decides to deduct $10,000 of its non-capital losses of other years and $10,000 of its net capitul losses of other years. After the application of its losses to 2011, the trust will have $5,000 in non-capital losses of other years available to be applied to future years.

3. Since Chris is an "electing contributor" in respect of the trust, he is required to include an amount in income for his taxation year in which the trust's 2011 taxation year ends. Applying the formula in paragraph 94(16)(a), he will be required to include $1,000 in income as income from property from a source in Canada as follows:

$($5,000 / $50,000) × ($30,000 – $20,000) = $1,000

4. Under paragraph 94(16)(f), the trust will be permitted to deduct $1,000 in computing its income for its 2011 taxation year. As a result, its net income will be $29,000 ($50,000 – $20,000 – $1,000 (taking into account the $20,000 payable to its beneficiaries)) and its taxable income will be $9,000 ($29,000 – $20,000 (taking into account the $20,000 of total losses deducted by it)) for 2011. Kamil and Prasanna will be jointly, severally and solidarily liable with the trust for its income tax liability on that income.

5. Note that if the trust had made an election under subsection 104(13.1) in respect of the $20,000 of income payable to its beneficiaries, the amount to be included in Chris' income would have been $3,000 ($5,000 / $50,000) × ($50,000 – $20,000)), and the taxable income of the trust would have been $27,000 ($47,000 – $20,000).

Example 3

Luke and Marie are long-term residents of Canada and in 2004 each contributed $10,000 to a trust for the benefit of their adult children, Karen and Paul. There are no other beneficiaries under the trust. Karen lives in Canada and Paul lives in Country X. The trust is considered to be resident in Country X, a country with which Canada does not have a tax treaty. David, who is unrelated to Luke and Marie and their children, ceased to be resident in Canada on May 15, 2004 and made a $10,000 contribution to the trust on May 17, 2004. Marie elects to be an "electing contributor" in respect of the trust, but Luke does not.

The trust realizes $10,000 in income from property during its 2011 taxation year, of which $2,000 was earned in Country Y, $4,000 was earned in Country X, and the remainder was earned in Canada. The trust distributes $2,000 to each beneficiary. The terms of the trust are silent on the source of income to be distributed to the beneficiaries. The trust does not have any losses to apply during its 2011 taxation year.

Country Y imposes tax of 25% on the $2,000 earned in Country Y such that the trust pays $500 in tax to Country Y. Country X imposes tax on all of the trust's income at a rate of 30%, but allows a foreign tax credit for tax payable to another country to a maximum of 15% such that the trust pays $2,100 in tax to Country X (30% × $10,000 – 15% × $6,000). Although the tax payable to Canada and Country Y exceeds 15% of the income earned in each of those countries, Country X limits the foreign tax credit to 15%.

Results

1. All of the trust's property, including the $10,000 of income realized during its 2011 taxation year, is included in its "resident portion" as all contributions were made by either resident contributors or connected contributors.

2. Under new paragraph 94(16)(a), Marie is required to include an amount in her 2011 income computed according to the formula

where

A is the total of each of Marie's contributions, or $10,000 in this example.

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount that would be determined under A for each resident contributor, or connected contributor, to the trust at the specified time if all of those contributors were electing contributors in respect of the trust, or $30,000 in this example.

C is the trust's income for the year computed without reference to paragraph 94(16)(f), or $6,000 ($10,000 – $4,000) in this example.

D is the amount of net capital loss or non-capital loss of the trust applied in the year, or nil in this example.

As a result, Marie is required to include $2,000 ($10,000 / $30,000 × $6,000) in her income for 2011, and the trust is entitled to a deduction for that $2,000 under new paragraph 94(16)(f).

3. Under new paragraph 94(16)(c), the trust may designate an amount, in respect of Marie, not exceeding the lesser of its income from a source in a country other than Canada ($6,000) and the amount that may reasonably be considered (having regard to all the circumstances including the terms and conditions of the trust) to be part of the amount included in Marie's income because of new paragraph 94(16)(a) ($2,000).

Note that the amount designated in respect of Marie reduces the amount that can be designated in respect of Karen under subsection 104(22). Alternatively, an amount designated in respect of Karen would reduce the amount that could be designated in respect of Marie.

Assuming that the trust makes a designation of $2,000 in respect of Marie under new paragraph 94(16)(c), in addition to any non-business-income tax otherwise paid by Marie, Marie is, under paragraph 94(16)(d), deemed to have paid non-business-income tax equal to the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total non-business-income tax of the trust for its 2011 taxation year paid to a country other than Canada computed without reference to new paragraph 94(16)(e), or the $2,600 in total paid to Countries Y and X in this example.

B is the amount designated in respect of Marie, or $2,000 in this example.

C is the amount of the trust's income from property sourced in Country X, or $6,000 in this example. Note that new paragraph 94(3)(b)(iii)(A) deems the income from Country Y to be from Country X and not from any other source.

As a result, Marie is deemed to have paid $866.67 in non-business-income tax under new paragraph 94(16)(d).

4. In conjunction with the designation in respect of Marie under new paragraph 94(16)(d), new paragraph 94(16)(e) operates to reduce the trust's income from Country X for 2011 by the amount designated in respect of Marie, and to reduce the amount of non-business-income tax paid by the trust for 2011 by the amount deemed to have been paid by Marie. As a result of the application of new paragraph 94(16)(e), the maximum amount of foreign income from a source other than Canada that can be designated for the year in respect of any beneficiary under subsection 104(22) is limited to the trust's income from that source less any amount designated to an electing contributor. Similarly, the amount of foreign tax paid by the trust for the year that can be designated to a beneficiary under subsection 104(22.1) is limited to the foreign tax paid by the trust less the amount that is deemed to have been paid by an electing contributor.

5. In this example, the trust would be able to designate an amount under subsection 104(22) not exceeding the lesser of the amount of the trust's foreign income ($4,000) and the amount of income paid to Karen out of the income of the trust as income from Country X ($2,000). Since Paul is not resident in Canada such that no amount will be included in his income for the year under subsection 104(13) or (14), no designation can be made to him. Assuming the trust designates $2,000 of its income from Country X in respect of Karen, she will be deemed to have paid $866.67 ($1,733.33 × $2,000 / $4,000) in non-business-income tax for the purposes of computing her foreign tax credit.

6. As a result of the designations of $2,000 of its foreign income to Marie under paragraph 94(16)(e), and $2,000 to Karen under subsection 104(22), the trust has foreign income of $2,000 ($6,000 – $2,000 – $2,000) and foreign tax paid of $1,033.33 ($2,600 – $866.67 – $866.67) to use in computing its own foreign tax credit under section 126 (or alternatively, as a deduction under subsection 20(12)).

Related Provisions: 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

(17) Liability for joint contribution — If, at or before a specified time in a trust's taxation year (referred to in this subsection as the "trust's year"), there is an electing contributor in respect of the trust who is a joint contributor in respect of a contribution to the trust,

(a) each person who is a joint contributor in respect of the contribution

(i) has, in respect of the contribution, jointly and severally, or solidarily, the rights and obligations under Divisions I and J of each other person (referred to in this subsection as the "specified person") who is, at or before the specified time, a joint contributor in respect of that contribution, for the specified person's taxation year in which the trust's year ends, and

(ii) is subject to Part XV in respect of those rights and obligations; and

(b) the maximum recoverable under the provisions referred to in paragraph (a) at a particular time from the person in respect of the contribution and a particular specified person's taxation year in which the trust's year end is the amount determined by the formula

$$A - B - C$$

where

A is the total of the amounts payable by the particular specified person under this Part for the particular specified person's taxation year in which the trust's year ends,

B is the amount that would be determined for A if the total of the amounts payable by the particular specified person under this Part for the particular specified person's taxation year in which the trusts's year ends were computed without reference to the contribution, and

C is the amount recovered before the particular time from the specified person, and any other joint contributor in respect of the trust and the contribution, in connection with the liability of the specified person in respect of the contribution.

Related Provisions: 160(2.1) — Assessment of amount payable because of 94(7); 160(3) — Discharge of liability under 94(17); 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): New subsection 94(17) applies where there is an electing contributor (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) in respect of a trust who is a joint contributor (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) in respect of a contribution to the trust. Subject to the limits in paragraph 94(17)(b), paragraph 94(17)(a) provides that each joint contributor (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) in respect of the contribution has jointly, severally and solidarily with each other person who is a joint contributor in respect of the contribution, the rights and obligations under Divisions I and J of the Act of each other joint contributor for the taxation years of each other joint contributor in which the trust's taxation year ends. Note that paragraph 94(17)(a) will apply irrespective of whether a particular joint contributor is an electing contributor. Paragraph 94(17)(a) also provides that a "joint contributor" is subject to Part XV of the Act in respect of the rights and obligations mentioned above. For more information on the definitions "electing contributor" and "joint contributor" in subsection 94(1), see the commentary on those definitions. For more detail on the expression "solidarily", please refer to the introductory commentary above on new section 94.

Paragraph 94(17)(b) is a recovery limit rule in respect of amounts otherwise recoverable from a particular person in respect of another person's liabilities under the provisions referred to in paragraph 94(17)(a). The recovery amount is limited to the amount of tax, interest and penalties payable by the other person in respect of amounts arising from a contribution in respect of which the two persons are both joint contributors. The amount recoverable is further reduced by amounts already recovered in respect of those liabilities.

New subsection 94(17) applies to taxation years that end after March 4, 2010.

Example 1: Liability for Joint Contributions

Assume that the securities transferred by Chris to the trust in Example 1 above describing the application of subsection 94(16) were acquired by him from Kelly, a resident of Canada, as part of a series of transactions by which Kelly's securities would be transferred to the trust. The facts are otherwise the same as set out in Example 1 above, and are restated as follows.

Prior to 2011, Canadians have made contributions to a pre-existing non-resident trust totalling $30,000. None of those persons is resident in Canada in 2011. The trust has also received contributions from non-resident persons who have never been resident in Canada totalling $10,000. No distributions are made from the trust during its 2011 taxation year.

Kamil and Prasanna are long-term residents of Canada. In February 2011, Kamil makes a contribution of $10,000 to the trust and Prasanna makes a contribution of $5,000 to the trust. Chris and Kelly are also long-term residents of Canada. In June 2011, Kelly transfers securities to Chris. In August 2011, Chris contributes those same securities to the trust as part of a series of transactions that includes the transfer of Kelly's securities to Chris. The total fair market value of the securities at the time of their transfer to the trust is $5,000. None of Kamil, Prasanna, Chris or Kelly has previously contributed to trust. None of them takes an interest in the trust in exchange for their contributions.

The trust realizes income of $2,500 and losses of $500 during its 2011 taxation year. All of the income and losses result from the property contributed by the current and former residents of Canada. The $10,000 of property contributed by persons who have never been resident in Canada did not result in any income or losses during the 2011 taxation year.

Kamil and Prasanna do not elect to be "electing contributors" in respect of the trust. Chris and Kelly do elect to be "electing contributors" in respect of the trust.

Results

1. The "resident portion" of the trust for its 2011 taxation year will total $50,000. This consists of the $30,000 of pre-2011 contributions from the former residents of Canada and the $20,000 total contributions from Kamil, Prasanna, Chris and Kelly during 2011. The "non-resident portion" of the trust for its 2011 taxation year will total $10,000.

2. Kelly is deemed to have made a contribution to the trust of $5,000 by reason of paragraph (b) of the definition "contribution". As Chris and Kelly are both deemed to have made a contribution to the trust, they may both elect to be an "electing contributor" in respect of the trust.

3. For the purpose of computing the amount of income to be attributed to each of Chris and Kelly, they are each deemed to have made a contribution of $2,500 by reason of subparagraph (ii) of the description of A in paragraph 94(16)(a). Note that if Chris had also made a separate contribution to the trust of $10,000, such that his total contributions to the trust would have been $15,000, for the purpose of computing the amount of income to be attributed to him, the amount determined for him under A of the formula in subsection 94(16) would be $12,500.

4. Since Chris and Kelly have elected to be "electing contributors" in respect of the trust, they are each required to include an amount in income in respect of the contribution of securities for their taxation years in which the trust's 2011 taxation year ends. Applying the formula in paragraph 94(16)(a), they will each be attributed $100 to be included in income as follows:

$$($2,500 / $50,000) \times ($2,500 - $500) = $100$$

5. Under paragraph 94(16)(f), the trust will be permitted a $200 deduction in computing its income for its 2011 taxation year reflecting the amounts attributed to Chris and Kelly as electing contributors (2 × $100).

6. Since Kamil and Prasanna do not elect to be "electing contributors" in respect of the trust, they will be jointly, severally and solidarily liable with the trust for the Canadian income tax liability on its remaining income of $1,800 for its 2011 taxation year (as will any beneficiaries of the trust who are resident in Canada).

7. Since Kelly has jointly and severally, or solidarily, the same obligations under Divisions I and J as Chris in respect of the contribution of securities to the trust (and vice versa), if Chris is not able to pay the tax on the $100 included in his income as required under the Act, or does not do so, Kelly may be called upon to pay the tax, interest and penalties that would otherwise be paid by Chris, but only to the extent provided in paragraph 94(17)(b). Assume that Chris' tax payable for 2011 is $15,000, but that he computes his tax payable without regard to the $100 income inclusion such that he only pays $14,950. Further assume that he refuses to pay the additional $50 and that $5 in interest has accrued on the amount of his outstanding tax payable for 2011. Under new subsection 160(2.1), the Minister may issue Kelly a notice of assessment in respect of the $50 tax and the $5 in interest. If either Chris or Kelly subsequently pays the full amount owing, the liability of each is extinguished. See the commentary under new subsection 160(2.1) for further details.

Example 2

Adding to the facts of Example 1 above, assume that instead of transferring the securities to Chris, Kelly had transferred the securities to a Canadian corporation, Corporation A, which then transferred the securities to the trust. Assume further that Corporation A had significant losses of other years available to be applied against its 2011 income. In addition, assume that the total of the trust's income for 2011 is $5,000,000 instead of $2,500. Lastly, assume that the trust has no losses to apply in 2011. The facts are otherwise the same as set out in the example above.

Results

1. The "resident portion" of the trust for its 2011 taxation year will total $50,000 and the "non-resident portion" of the trust for its 2011 taxation year will total $10,000 as in the previous example.

2. Kelly and Corporation A are each deemed to have made a contribution to the trust of $8,000 in respect of Corporation A's transfer of the securities to the trust. As Corporation A and Kelly are both deemed to have made a contribution to the trust, they may both elect to be an "electing contributor" to the trust.

3. Provided that paragraph 94(16)(g) does not apply, Corporation A and Kelly will each be attributed $250,000 to be included in income as follows:

$$($2,500 / $50,000) \times $5,000,000 = $250,000$$

Corporation A applies its losses of other years to reduce its taxable income for 2011 such that it has no tax payable for 2011. Kelly includes $250,000 in income for 2011 and pays the resulting tax on that amount. However, if it can reasonably be considered that one of the main purposes of transferring the securities to Corporation A, instead of directly to the trust, was to allow Corporation A to apply its losses against a portion of the amount that would otherwise have been included in Kelly's income, paragraph 94(16)(g) will deem Corporation A to not be a contributor to the trust for the purpose of computing the amount to be attributed to electing contributors. As a result, Kelly would include the full $5,000,000 in income, instead of only $250,000.

Application The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), s. 6, will amend s. 94 to read as above, applicable to trust taxation years that end after 2006, except that

(a) subsecs. 94(1) to (15) also apply to each of a trust's taxation years in which it exists and that end after 2000 and before 2007, and to each taxation year of the beneficiaries under, and contributors to, the trust in which such a trust taxation year ends, if the trust

(i) was created in one of those taxation years, and

(ii) elects, in writing, to have s. 94 apply to each of those taxation years of the trust by filing the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the trust's filing due date for the trust's taxation year in which this draft legislation is assented to;

(b) subsecs. 94(16) and (17) apply only to taxation years that end after March 4, 2010;

(c) any election or form referred to in s. 94 that would otherwise be required to be filed before 120 days after the day on which this draft legislation is assented to is deemed to have been filed with the Minister of National Revenue on a timely basis if it is filed with the Minister of National Revenue within 365 days after the day on which this draft legislation is assented to;

(d) if a trust elects, by notifying the Minister of National Revenue in writing on or before its filing due date for its taxation year that includes the day on which the legislation enacting new s. 94 is assented to, that this paragraph apply, in applying s. 94 in respect of the trust the definition "arm's length transfer" in subsec. 94(1), does not include a loan or other transfer of property that is identified in the election and that is made in a taxation year that begins before 2003;

(e) el. (b)(iii)(C) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsec. 94(1) is, in respect of a trust for its taxation years that end before 2009, to be read as follows:

(C) no benefits are provided under the trust, other than benefits in respect of

(I) qualifying services,

(II) particular services rendered before November 9, 2006, to an employer by an employee of the employer if the employee had on November 8, 2006, a right (whether immediate or future or whether absolute or contingent) to receive the benefits in respect of the particular services pursuant to an agreement in writing

1. that was entered into before November 9, 2006, and

2. where the employee was resident in Canada on November 9, 2006, a copy of which was filed with a prescribed form with the Minister by or on behalf of the employer no later than April 30 of the first calendar year that begins after November 9, 2006, or

(III) any combination of services that are described in subclause (I) or (II).

(f) the expression "if the person is an individual and the trust arose on and as a consequence of the death of the individual, 18 months before the contribution time" in the definition "non-resident time" in subsec. 94(1) is, in respect of contributions made before June 23, 2000, to be read as the expression "if the contribution time is before June 23, 2000, 18 months before the end of the trust's taxation year that includes the contribution time",

(g) subpara. 94(3)(a)(x) does not apply in determining, on or before July 18, 2005, whether a foreign affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate of a taxpayer,

(h) paragraph 94(4)(b) is

(i) subject to subpara. (ii) below, for taxation years that begin on or before July 18, 2005, to be read without reference to "the definition "Canadian partnership" in subsection 102(1),", and

(ii) to be read as follows in its application to a transfer, by a trust, that occurred before February 28, 2004:

(b) subsections 70(6) and 73(1), paragraph 107.4(1)(c) other than subparagraph (i) of that paragraph and paragraph (a) of the definition "mutual fund trust" in subsection 132(6),

(i) para. 94(4)(f) is, in its application to a transfer by a trust that occurred before February 28, 2004, to be read as follows:

(f) determining the residency of the transferee in applying subparagraph (f)(ii) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1),

(j) para. 94(2)(e) is, in its application to a transfer that occurred before August 27, 2010 to be read as follows:

(e) a contribution made at any time by a particular partnership to a trust is deemed to have been made at that time jointly by the particular partnership and by each person or partnership that is at that time a member of the particular partnership (other than a member of the particular partnership where the liability of the member as a member of the particular partnership is limited by operation of any law governing the partnership arrangement);

(k) if a trust was, for its last taxation year that ends before 2007, deemed by para. 94(3)(c) (as it read in its application to that taxation year) to be resident in Canada, paras. 94(4)(d) and (e) do not apply to the trust for the period that starts immediately before the end of that last taxation year and that ends immediately after the beginning of its first taxation year that ends after 2006, unless during that period a change in the trustees of the trust occurred, and

(l) the reference to "designated stock exchange" in subpara. 94(14)(b)(v) is, before December 14, 2007, to be read as a reference to "prescribed stock exchange"

94.1 Offshore investment fund property — (1) Where in a taxation year a taxpayer holds or has an interest in property (referred to in this section as an "offshore investment fund property")

(a) that is a share of the capital stock of, an interest in, or a debt of, a non-resident entity (other than a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, a trust to which section 94.2 applies in respect of the taxpayer or a prescribed non-resident entity) or an interest in or a right or option to acquire such a share, interest or debt, and

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), subsec. 7(1), will amend the portion of subsec. 94.1(1) before para. (b) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that end after March 4, 2010, and to each taxation year of a beneficiary under a trust that ends before March 5, 2010 if subsec. 94(3), as amended, applies to the trust for a taxation year of the trust that ends in that earlier taxation year of the beneficiary.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Section 94.1 contains an anti-avoidance provision relating to investors in offshore investment funds. This provision applies where a taxpayer invests in an offshore investment fund and one of the main reasons for the investment is to reduce or defer the tax liability that would have applied to the income generated from the underlying assets of the fund if such income had been earned directly by the taxpayer. In these circumstances, section 94.1 requires an amount to be included in computing the taxpayer's income in respect of the investment. This amount is determined, in general terms, by multiplying the cost amount of the taxpayer's investment (more precisely, the "designated cost" of the investment, as defined in subsection 94.1(2)) by a factor based on interest rates prescribed under Part XLIII of the Regulations.

Subsection 94.1(1) sets out the rules for determining whether an amount is to be included in a taxpayer's income for the year, and if so, the rules for computing that amount, in respect of an interest in an offshore investment fund property.

Paragraph 94.1(1)(a) describes the types of interests in non-resident entities that are subject to the provision, and expressly excludes an interest in a controlled foreign affiliate of a taxpayer and an interest in a prescribed non-resident entity. Paragraph 94.1(1)(a) is amended to add to the list of excluded non-resident entities a trust to which section 94.2 applies in respect of the taxpayer. As a result, if section 94.2 applies to treat the trust as a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer for a taxation year, the taxpayer will not be required to include an amount in income under subsection 94.1(1). . . .

These amendments apply to taxation years that end after March 4, 2010. The amendment to paragraph 94.1(1)(a) also applies to each taxation year of a beneficiary under a trust that ends before March 5, 2010 if new subsection 94(3) applies to the trust (because of a valid election by the trust under the coming-into-force provision for new section 94) for a taxation year that ends in that earlier taxation year of the beneficiary.

(c) the nature, organization and operation of any non-resident entity and the form of, and the terms and conditions governing, the taxpayer's interest in, or connection with, any non-resident entity,

(d) the extent to which any income, profits and gains that may reasonably be considered to be earned or accrued, whether directly or indirectly, for the benefit of any non-resident entity are subject to an income or profits tax that is significantly less than the income tax that would be applicable to such income, profits and gains if they were earned directly by the taxpayer, and

(e) the extent to which the income, profits and gains of any non-resident entity for any fiscal period are distributed in that or the immediately following fiscal period, that one of the main reasons for the taxpayer acquiring, holding or having the interest in such property was to derive a benefit from portfolio investments in assets described in any of subparagraphs (b)(i) to (ix) in such a manner that the taxes, if any, on the income, profits and gains from such assets for any particular year are significantly less than the tax that would have been applicable under this Part if the income, profits and gains had been earned directly by the taxpayer, there shall be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the year the amount, if any, by which

(f) the total of all amounts each of which is the product obtained when

(i) the designated cost to the taxpayer of the offshore investment fund property at the end of a month in the year is multiplied by

(ii) the quotient obtained when the prescribed rate of interest for the period including that month is divided by 12

Proposed Amendment — 94.1(1)(f)(ii)

(ii) the quotient obtained when the total of the prescribed rate of interest for the period including that month plus two per cent is divided by 12

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), subsec. 7(2), will amend subpara. 94.1(1)(f)(ii) to read as above, applicable on the same basis as the proposed amendment to 94.1(1) before (b) above.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Where subsection 94.1(1) applies to a taxpayer for a taxation year, paragraphs 94.1(1)(f) and (g) determine the amount required to be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the year under that subsection. Paragraph 94.1(1)(f) is amended so that the interest factor used in computing the income inclusion under that subsection is the interest rate prescribed under Part XLIII of the Regulations for the relevant period plus 2%.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: Foreign Investment Entities and Non-Resident Trusts

The Income Tax Act includes rules designed to prevent Canadians from using foreign intermediaries to avoid paying their fair share of tax. However, the rules are not fully effective in certain circumstances where aggressive offshore tax-planning schemes are used to circumvent their application.

The Government continues to make efforts to ensure that appropriate rules exist to counter these schemes. Most recently, proposals for amendments were tabled during the second session of the 39th Parliament. Those proposals were not enacted before Parliament was dissolved in September 2008. Budget 2009 stated that the Government would review the outstanding proposals before proceeding with measures in this area. As a result of this review, the Government has developed the following revised proposals to replace the outstanding proposals for public consultation with a view to developing revised legislation, which will then also be released for comment.

Foreign Investment Entities [former proposed 94.1-94.4 — ed.]

The revised proposals replace the outstanding proposals with respect to foreign investment entities with the following limited enhancements to the existing rules in the Income Tax Act:

- Section 94.1 of the Income Tax Act currently requires an income inclusion with respect to interests in an "offshore investment fund property" in certain circumstances. It is proposed that the prescribed rate applicable in computing the income inclusion for an interest in an offshore investment fund property be increased to the three-month-average Treasury Bill rate plus two percentage points. This increase in the prescribed rate is intended to better reflect actual long-term investment returns.

- Section 94 of the Income Tax Act currently requires certain beneficiaries of a non-resident trust that is not otherwise deemed resident in Canada to report income on a modified foreign accrual property income basis where the fair market value of the beneficiary's interest in the trust exceeds 10% of the value of all interests in the trust. It is proposed that these rules be broadened to apply to any resident beneficiary who, together with any person not dealing at arm's length with the beneficiary, holds 10% or more of any class of interests in a non-resident trust determined by fair market value. They will also apply to any resident who has contributed "restricted property" (as proposed to be defined, which is described below) to a non-resident trust. These changes will be relevant for beneficiaries of non-resident trusts that are not deemed resident in Canada by the revised proposals discussed below.
- It is proposed that the relevant reassessment period in respect of interests in offshore investment fund property and interests in trusts described in the previous paragraph be extended by three years [see 152(4)(b)(vii) — ed.]. It is also proposed that the existing reporting requirements with respect to "specified foreign property" be expanded so that more detailed information is available for audit use. These additional measures are needed to ensure that the Canada Revenue Agency has the information and time required to identify and reassess those taxpayers who have not properly reported their income from transactions involving offshore investment fund properties and non-resident trusts.

Non-Resident Trusts

[Reproduced under Proposed Amendment to s. 94 — ed.]

Date of Application

It is proposed that the measures regarding foreign investment entities apply for taxation years that end after March 4, 2010. A taxpayer who voluntarily complied with the outstanding proposals in previous years will have the option of having those years reassessed. If the taxpayer does not wish to be reassessed for those years, and had more income than would have been the case under the existing rules, the taxpayer will be entitled to a deduction in the current year for the excess income.

Public Consultation Process

The revised proposals described above will be subject to a consultation process before being tabled in Parliament. The public is welcomed and encouraged to submit comments with respect to these proposals before May 4, 2010. A panel consisting of respected tax practitioners will be formed to work with the Department of Finance in reviewing any issues identified in comments received and in making recommendations on the design of the draft legislation to implement the revised proposals, following which draft legislation will be released for public commentary.

(2) Definitions — In this section,

"designated cost" to a taxpayer at any time in a taxation year of an offshore investment fund property that the taxpayer holds or has an interest in means the amount determined by the formula

$$A + B + C + D$$

where

A is the cost amount to the taxpayer of the property at that time (determined without reference to paragraphs 53(1)(m) and (q), subparagraph 53(2)(c)(i.3), paragraphs 53(2)(g) and (g.1) and section 143.2),

B is, where an additional amount has been made available by a person to another person after 1984 and before that time, whether by way of gift, loan, payment for a share, transfer of property at less than its fair market value or otherwise, in circumstances such that it may reasonably be concluded that one of the main reasons for so making the additional amount available to the other person was to increase the value of the property, the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which such an additional amount exceeds any increase in the cost amount to the taxpayer of the property by virtue of that additional amount,

C is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount included in respect of the offshore investment fund property by virtue of this section in computing the taxpayer's income for a preceding taxation year, and

D is

(a) where the taxpayer has held or has had the interest in the property at all times since the end of 1984, the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the property at the end of 1984 exceeds the cost amount to the taxpayer of the property at the end of 1984, or

(b) in any other case, the total of

(i) the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the property at the particular time the taxpayer acquired the property exceeds the cost amount to the taxpayer of the property at the particular time, and

(ii) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that would have been included in respect of the property because of this section in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year that began before June 20, 1996 if the cost to the taxpayer of the property were equal to the fair market value of the property at the particular time

exceeds

(B) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that was included in respect of the property because of this section in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year that began before June 20, 1996, except that the designated cost of an offshore investment fund property that is a prescribed offshore investment fund property is nil;

Related Provisions: 94.1(3) — Pre-Feb. 15/84 property.

Regulations: 6900 (prescribed offshore investment fund property).

"non-resident entity" means a corporation that is not resident in Canada, a partnership, organization, fund or entity that is not resident or is not situated in Canada or a trust with respect to which the rules in paragraph 94(1)(c) or (d) apply.

Proposed Amendment — 94.1(2)"non-resident entity"

"non-resident entity" means

(a) a corporation that is not resident in Canada,

(b) a partnership, organization, fund or entity that is not resident or is not situated in Canada, or

(c) a non-resident trust other than a trust described in subparagraph (b)(i) of the definition "resident contributor" in subsection 94(1) and a trust that is an "exempt foreign trust" as defined in subsection 94(1) because of any of paragraphs (a) to (g).

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), subsec. 7(3), will amend the definition "non-resident entity" in subsec. 94.1(2) to read as above, applicable on the same basis as the proposed amendment to 94.1(1) before (b) above.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Subsection 94.1(2) contains definitions, including the definition "non-resident entity", that apply for the purposes of section 94.1. The definition "non-resident entity" is amended to exclude certain "exempt foreign trusts", as defined in subsection 94(1), from being non-resident entities for purposes of section 94.1. Specifically, a reference in section 94.1 to a "non-resident entity" will not include a trust that is, at the relevant time, an exempt foreign trust under any of paragraphs (a) to (g) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1). A trust that is, at the relevant time, an exempt foreign trust under paragraph (h) of that definition will be a non-resident entity for purposes of section 94.1. Also excluded from a "non-resident entity" will be a trust in respect of which there are no resident contributors, including an "immigration trust" of which every contributor who is resident in Canada has not been resident in Canada for a period or periods of time the total of which is less than 60 months at the end of a taxation year. As noted above under the commentary on subsection 94(3), a non-resident entity will not include a trust that is deemed to be resident in Canada.

This amendment applies to taxation years that end after March 4, 2010. The amendment also applies to each taxation year of a beneficiary under a trust that ends before March 5, 2010 if new subsection 94(3) applies to the trust (because of a valid election by the trust under the coming-into-force provision for new section 94) for a taxation year that ends in that earlier taxation year of the beneficiary.

Federal Budget, Supplementary Information, March 4, 2010: See under 94.1(1)(f)(ii).

(3) Interpretation — Where subsection (1) is applied with respect to an offshore investment fund property that was

(a) held by the taxpayer on February 15, 1984,

(b) received as a stock dividend in respect of a share of the capital stock of a non-resident entity held by the taxpayer on February 15, 1984,

(c) received as a stock dividend in respect of a share of the capital stock of a non-resident entity that the taxpayer had previously received as described in paragraph (b), or

(d) substituted for a property held by the taxpayer on February 15, 1984 pursuant to an arrangement that existed on that date, the reference to "1984" in the descriptions of B and D in the definition "designated cost" in subsection (2) shall be read as a reference to "1985".

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), subsecs. 7(5)–(10), provide:

(5) Subsection (6) applies to a taxpayer for each taxation year that ends in the period that begins after 2000 and ends before the last taxation year of the taxpayer that ends before March 4, 2010 (referred to in this subsection and subsections (6) to (10) as the "relevant period"), if

(a) in a return of income for the year the taxpayer has, in respect of a participating interest in a foreign investment entity, in this subsection and subsections (6) to (10) having the meaning of those terms as set out in the provisions of sections 94.1 to 94.4 of the Act contained in section 18 of Bill C-10 of the second session of the 39th Parliament as passed by the House of Commons on October 29, 2007 [reproduced in SITA 43rd-47th ed. — ed.], included or deducted an amount (referred to in this subsection and subsections (6) to (10) as the "reported inclusion" or "reported deduction" as the case may be) under those provisions in computing income for the year; and

(b) the taxpayer files a prescribed form on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year in which this Act is assented to

(i) identifying each participating interest of the taxpayer described in paragraph (a), and

(ii) providing sufficient detail of each of those participating interests, including any reported inclusions or reported deductions in respect of those participating interests.

(6) If this subsection applies to a taxpayer for a taxation year,

(a) the taxpayer's reported inclusion for the year in respect of a participating interest is deemed to be the amount required to be included under the Act in computing the taxpayer's income for that year in respect of that participating interest; and

(b) the taxpayer's reported deduction for the year in respect of a participating interest is deemed to be the amount deductible under the Act in computing the taxpayer's income for that year in respect of that participating interest.

(7) If subsection (6) applies to a taxpayer for one or more taxation years, in computing the taxpayer's income for the first taxation year that ends after the relevant period, there may be deducted the amount that does not exceed the amount, if any, determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is a reported inclusion for a year in respect of a participating interest, or a taxable capital gain for a taxation year that ends in the relevant period from the disposition of a participating interest of the taxpayer described in paragraph (5)(a),

B is the total of all amounts each of which is a reported deduction for a year in respect of a participating interest, or an allowable capital loss for a taxation year that ends in the relevant period from the disposition of a participating interest of the taxpayer described in paragraph (5)(a),

C is the total of all amounts each of which is

(a) an amount that would be required to be included under the Act, read without reference to this Act, in the taxpayer's income for a taxation year that ends in the relevant period in respect of a property that is a participating interest of the taxpayer described in paragraph (5)(a), or

(b) a taxable capital gain computed without reference to this Act for a taxation year that ends in the relevant period from the disposition of a participating interest of the taxpayer described in paragraph (5)(a), and

D is the total of all amounts each of which is an allowable capital loss computed without reference to this Act for a taxation year that ends in the relevant period from the disposition of a participating interest of the taxpayer described in paragraph (5)(a).

(8) Subsection (9) applies to a taxpayer in respect of a participating interest described in paragraph (5)(a) for the first taxation year that ends after the relevant period if

(a) at the start of the year the taxpayer holds the participating interest;

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is a reported deduction for a year in respect of the participating interest exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is a reported inclusion for a year in respect of the participating interest (such amount referred to in subsection (9) as the "excess"); and

(c) the amount determined for B in applying the formula in subsection (7) in computing the taxpayer's income for that year exceeds the amount, if any, that is the amount determined for A in so applying that formula.

(9) If this subsection applies to a taxpayer in respect of a participating interest, in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the participating interest at any time after the start of the taxation year, there is to be deducted an amount equal to the excess determined in respect of the participating interest under paragraph (8)(b).

(10) If subsection (6) does not apply to a taxpayer, and in a return of income for a taxation year that ends in the relevant period, the taxpayer has in respect of a participating interest in a foreign investment entity a reported inclusion or a reported deduction for the year, notwithstanding subsection 152(4), for the purpose of determining, at any time after the end of the normal reassessment period of each taxation year of the taxpayer that ends in the relevant period, the amount of any refund to which the taxpayer is entitled in respect of any such year, or a reduction of an amount payable under this Part by the taxpayer for any such year, the Minister of National Revenue may, if the taxpayer makes an application for that determination on or before the day that is 365 days after this Act is assented to reassess tax, interest or penalties payable under this Part by the taxpayer in respect of each such year.

Definitions [subsecs. 7(5)-(10)]: "adjusted cost base" — 54, 248(1); "allowable capital loss" — 38(b), 248(1); "amount", "disposition", "filing-due date" — 248(1); "Minister" — 248(1); "Parliament" — Interpretation Act 35(1); "participating interest", "prescribed", "property" — 248(1); "taxable capital gain" — 38(a), 248(1); "taxation year" — 249; "taxpayer" — 248(1).

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): Transitional rules

The coming-into-force provisions for the amendments to section 94.1 also provide rules for determining the income tax treatment of a taxpayer who voluntarily complied with earlier proposed amendments (the "outstanding proposals") tabled during the second session of the 39th Parliament and which were not enacted before Parliament dissolved in September 2008. Budget 2010 announced that the Government would not be proceeding with the outstanding proposals. However, a taxpayer who voluntarily complied with the outstanding proposals in previous years will have the option of requesting to have those years reassessed by the CRA. Such a request must be made to the Minister of National Revenue on or before the day that is 365 days after the transitional rules receive Royal Assent.

If a taxpayer who voluntarily complied with the outstanding proposals in previous years does not wish to be reassessed for those years, and had more income than would have been the case under the existing rules, the taxpayer will have the option of taking a deduction for the excess income. Under such an option, the tax assessed on income from all foreign investment entities held by the taxpayer for the period 2001 to 2008 would be deemed to be the amount of tax required to be remitted under the Act (provided the taxpayer made a reasonable effort to compute that income in accordance with the outstanding proposals), and the taxpayer would be allowed a deduction for the amount, if any, by which the amounts included in income in respect of those investments for those years was in excess of the amount that would otherwise have been included in income in respect of those investments for those years. The deduction must be claimed by the taxpayer in computing the taxpayer's income for the first taxation year that ends after the last taxation year of the taxpayer that ends before March 4, 2010.

Note that the election is not intended to override the CRA's role in enforcing compliance with the provisions of the Act. For example, the election would not prevent the CRA from reassessing a particular tax return where the taxpayer failed to report an amount of income required by section 94.1.

If a taxpayer voluntarily complied with the outstanding proposals in previous years in respect of a participating interest, and included less in income than would have been the case under the existing rules, the excess is not required to be included in income. Instead, the taxpayer will be required to deduct an amount in computing the adjusted cost base of those participating interests held after the start of the taxpayer's first taxation year that ends after March 4, 2010. The deduction amount is the amount by which the deductions reported by the taxpayer under the outstanding proposals exceed the income inclusions reported by the taxpayer under the outstanding proposals.

The following examples illustrate the application of these transitional rules.

Example 1

Ms. Brown has, continuously since 2004, held interests in three foreign investments (X, Y and Z). Investment X is property that is an offshore investment fund property in respect of which section 94.1 requires Ms. Brown to include an amount in income. Investment Y consists of shares of a foreign corporation that is not a foreign affiliate of Ms. Brown and not an offshore investment fund property. Investment Z is a fixed interest in a non-resident trust, the fair market value of which represents 15% of the total fair market value of all interests in that trust. Under the rules applicable for 2004 to 2009, Ms. Brown was required to include the following amounts in income, as applicable, for the relevant taxation years: for investment X, an amount computed with reference to the designated cost of investment X and the prescribed rate for the year under section 94.1; for investment Y, the total of all dividends received from the corporation; and for investment Z, the amount determined under section 91 acting in operation with paragraph 94(1)(d) of the Income Tax Act. However, Ms. Brown instead made reasonable efforts to compute, and include in income amounts on the basis that each of the three investments was a participating interest (and not an exempt interest) in a foreign investment entity as defined in the outstanding proposals.

A summary of amounts required to be included in Ms. Brown's income and the amounts actually included in her income is as follows:

Taxation Year	Actual amount included in income	Required inclusion amount	Net Difference
2004	$ 1,000	$ 50	$ 950
2005	1,000	53	947
2006	<5,000>	1,000	<6,000>
2007	4,000	55	3,945
2008	2,000	60	1,940
Total	$ 3,000	$ 1,218	$ 1,782

In the result, Ms. Brown has the choice of amending her previously filed returns to reflect the correct amount of tax payable for each year, or she may choose to have her tax payable for those years computed as if the amounts that she actually included in income in respect of investments X, Y and Z resulted in the proper amount of tax payable for those years and claim the $1,782 difference as a deduction in computing her income for 2010. In the event that Ms. Brown's circumstances are such that the deduction of $1,782 is in excess of her income, the $1,782will form part of her non-capital loss for 2010. Any errors and omissions made by Ms Brown for the taxation years 2004 to 2008 that do not relate to her investments in X, Y and Z are subject to normal reassessment procedures.

Adjusted Cost Base Adjustments

If Ms. Brown chooses to amend her previously filed returns to reflect the amount of tax payable for each year as determined under the rules applicable to those years, the cost base of her investments will be adjusted by the income inclusions required for each year. If Ms. Brown elects to have her tax payable for those years computed as if the amounts that she included in income in respect of those investments resulted in the proper amount of tax payable for those years and claim the difference as a deduction in computing her income for 2010, the cost base of her investments will be adjusted for the actual amount of income inclusions and deductions claimed (as such amounts will be deemed to be the amounts required to be included in income or deducted for those years). In addition, the cost base of her investments will also be adjusted for the deduction claimed in 2010. As a result, in either case (in other words, whether she chooses to have her previous returns assessed, or elects to have her tax payable for those years computed as if the amounts that she included in income in respect of those investments resulted in the proper amount of tax payable for those years and claims the deduction in 2010), the adjusted cost base of her investments will be the same after taking into account the ACB adjustment for the deduction in 2010.

Example 2

Mr. Brown has, continuously since 2004, held interests in three foreign investments (X, Y and Z). Investment X is property that is an offshore investment fund property in respect of which section 94.1 requires Mr. Brown to include an amount in income. Investment Y consists of shares of a foreign corporation that is not a foreign affiliate of Mr. Brown and not an offshore investment fund property. Investment Z is a fixed interest in a non-resident trust, the fair market value of which represents 15% of the total fair market value of all interests in that trust. Under the rules applicable for 2004 to 2008, Mr. Brown was required to include the following amounts in income, as applicable, for the relevant taxation years: for investment X, an amount computed with reference to the designated cost of investment X and the prescribed rate for the year under section 94.1; for investment Y, the total of all dividends received from the corporation; and for investment Z, the amount determined under section 91 acting in operation with paragraph 94(1)(d) of the Income Tax Act. However, Mr. Brown instead included amounts in income on the basis that each of the three investments was a participating interest (and not an exempt interest) in a foreign investment entity as defined in the outstanding proposals.

A summary of amounts required to be included in Mr. Brown's income and the amounts actually included in his income is as follows:

Taxation Year	Actual amount included in income	Required inclusion amount	Net Difference
2004	$ 1,000	$ 50	$ 950
2005	1,000	53	947
2006	<5,000>	1,000	<6,000>
2007	<4,000>	55	<4,055>
2008	2,000	60	1,940
Total	$ <5,000>	$ 1,218	$ <6,218>

In the result, Mr. Brown has the choice of amending his previously filed returns to reflect the correct amount of tax payable for each year, or he may elect to have his tax payable for those years computed as if the amounts that he included in income in respect of investments X, Y and Z resulted in the proper amount of tax payable for those year. He is not required to include the $6,218 difference in income in 2010. However, Mr. Brown will be required to reduce the adjusted cost base of any of those investments in which the amount of the reported deduction for the relevant period exceeds the amount of the reported inclusion for the relevant period. For example, assume that the losses in 2006 and 2007 arose as a result of mark-to-market losses under the outstanding proposals for investment X. Assume also that the total of all reported deductions for investment X during the relevant period exceeds the total of all reported inclusions for investment X during the relevant period. Since Mr. Brown still holds investment X at the beginning of the first taxation year that ends after the relevant period and the net amount included in income from his investments that would be participating interests (and not an exempt interest) in a foreign investment entity as defined in the outstanding proposals for the relevent period is less than the amount that would have been included in income under the law in force during that period, Mr. Brown is required to reduce the adjusted cost base of his investment in investment X by the amount of such excess. As in the first example, any errors and omissions made by Mr. Brown for the taxation years 2004 to 2008 that do not relate to his investments in X, Y and Z are subject to normal reassessment procedures.

Proposed Addition — 94.2

94.2 (1) Investments in non-resident commercial trusts — For the purposes of subsections (2) and 91(1) to (4) and sections 95 and 233.4, an exempt foreign trust (other than a trust described in any of paragraphs (a) to (g) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1)) is deemed to be at a particular time a controlled foreign affiliate of each particular person that is a resident beneficiary that holds a specified fixed interest in the trust at that time, if, at that time

(a) the total fair market value at that time of all specified fixed interests in the trust held by the particular person, persons not dealing at arm's length with the particular person, or persons who acquired their interest in the trust in exchange for consideration given to the trust by the particular person, is at least 10% of the total fair market value at that time of all specified fixed interests in the trust; or

(b) the particular person has contributed restricted property to the trust.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation; 94.1(1)(a) — Offshore investment fund rules do not apply if 94.2 applies; 94.2(3) — Relief from double tax; 94.2(4) — Effect of not providing information to Minister; 152(4)(b)(vii) — Three-year extension to reassessment deadline.

(2) Participating percentage — For the purposes of subsections 91(1) to (4) and sections 95 and 233.4, if a trust is deemed under subsection (1) to be at a particular time a controlled foreign affiliate of a person, the person is deemed to own a share of the capital stock of the controlled foreign affiliate and the participating percentage of that share is deemed to be

(a) if the foreign accrual property income of the controlled foreign affiliate for its taxation year that includes that time is $5,000 or less, nil; and

(b) in any other case, the proportion of 100 that the fair market value at that time of the person's specified fixed interests in the trust is of the fair market value at that time of all specified fixed interests in the trust.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation; 94.2(4) — Effect of not providing information to Minister; 152(4)(b)(vii) — Three-year extension to reassessment deadline.

(3) Relief from double tax — If a trust is deemed under subsection (1) to be at a particular time in a taxation year of the trust (referred to in this subsection as the "trust's year") a controlled foreign affiliate of a person, in computing the amount to be included under subsection 91(1) in the person's income for a taxation year (referred to in this subsection as the "beneficiary's year") in which the trust's year ends, there may be deducted an amount not exceeding the part of the trust's foreign accrual property income for the trust's year that may reasonably be considered as having been included in the part of the trust's income (computed without reference to subsections 104(6) and (12)) for the trust's year included in computing the person's income under subsection 104(13) for the beneficiary's year.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation; 94.2(4) — Effect of not providing information to Minister.

(4) Demand for information — If the Minister sends a written demand to a taxpayer requesting additional information for the purpose of enabling the Minister to determine the fair market value of interests in a trust for the purpose of determining the application of subsections (1) to (3) to the taxpayer in respect of a taxation year, and information that may reasonably be considered to be sufficient to make the determination is not received by the Minister within 120 days (or within any longer period that is acceptable to the Minister) after the Minister sends the demand, in applying this section to the taxpayer for that taxation year the fair market value of those interests is deemed to be the fair market value as reasonably determined by the Minister based on the information provided by the taxpayer to the Minister at or before the time the demand is sent and other information the Minister considers is reasonable.

Application: The August 27, 2010 draft legislation (Part 1 — NRTs), s. 8, will add s. 94.2, applicable to taxation years that end after March 4, 2010, except that if subsec. 94(3), as amended, applies to a trust for a taxation year that ends before March 5, 2010, then s. 94.2 shall apply to each beneficiary under the trust for a taxation year of the beneficiary in which the earlier taxation year of the trust ends and, for those earlier taxation years, s. 94.2 shall be read as follows:

94.2 (1) Where,

(a) at any time in a taxation year of a trust that is not resident in Canada or that, but for subsection 94(3), would not be so resident, a person beneficially interested in the trust (referred to in this section as a "beneficiary") was

(i) a person resident in Canada,

(ii) a corporation or trust with which a person resident in Canada was not dealing at arm's length, or

(iii) a controlled foreign affiliate of a person resident in Canada, and

(b) at any time in or before the taxation year of the trust,

(i) the trust, or a non-resident corporation that would, if the trust were resident in Canada, be a controlled foreign affiliate of the trust, has, other than in prescribed circumstances, acquired property, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, from

(A) a particular person who

(I) was the beneficiary referred to in paragraph (a), was related to that beneficiary or was the uncle, aunt, nephew or niece of that beneficiary,

(II) was resident in Canada at any time in the 18 month period before the end of that year or, in the case of a person who has ceased to exist, was resident in Canada at any time in the 18 month period before the person ceased to exist, and

(III) in the case of an individual, had before the end of that year been resident in Canada for a period of, or periods the total of which is, more than 60 months, or

(B) a trust or corporation that acquired the property, directly or indirectly in any manner whatever, from a particular person described in clause (A) with whom it was not dealing at arm's length

and the trust was not

(C) an inter vivos trust created at any time before 1960 by a person who at that time was a non-resident person,

(D) a testamentary trust that arose as a consequence of the death of an individual before 1976, or

(E) governed by a foreign retirement arrangement, or

(ii) all or any part of the interest of the beneficiary in the trust was acquired directly or indirectly by the beneficiary by way of

(A) purchase,

(B) gift, bequest or inheritance from a person referred to in clause (i)(A) or (B), or

(C) the exercise of a power of appointment by a person referred to in clause (i)(A) or (B),

the following rules apply for that taxation year of the trust:

(c) for the purposes of subsections 91(1) to (4) and sections 95 and 233.4,

(i) the trust shall, with respect to any beneficiary under the trust the fair market value of whose beneficial interest in the trust is not less than 10% of the aggregate fair market value of all beneficial interests in the trust, be deemed to be a non-resident corporation that is controlled by the beneficiary,

(ii) the trust shall be deemed to be a non-resident corporation having a capital stock of a single class divided into 100 issued shares, and

(iii) each beneficiary under the trust shall be deemed to own at any time the number of the issued shares that is equal to the proportion of 100 that

(A) the fair market value at that time of the beneficiary's beneficial interest in the trust

is of

(B) the fair market value at that time of all beneficial interests in the trust, and

(d) in computing the foreign accrual property income of the trust for that taxation year, there may be deducted such portion of the amount that would, but for this subsection, be the foreign accrual property income of the trust as may reasonably be considered as having been included in computing a beneficiary's income under subsection 104(13) for a taxation year in which that taxation year of the trust ends.

Technical Notes (Sept. 10, 2010): New section 94.2 sets out rules regarding a taxpayer's interest in a non-resident trust that is an exempt foreign trust under paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in new subsection 94(1).

Specifically, subsection 94.2(1) provides that the trust be treated for purposes of subsections 91(1) to (4) and sections 94 and 233.4 as a controlled foreign affiliate (CFA) of the taxpayer if the taxpayer is a resident beneficiary under the trust that holds a "specified fixed interest" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) in the trust, and the taxpayer either has contributed "restricted property" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) to the trust or holds specified fixed interests that (together with the interests of certain other persons) represent at least 10% of the total fair market value of all specified fixed interests in the trust. As a result, the taxpayer will be required to include in computing their income an amount as required by section 91. For this purpose, the following additional rules apply:

- subsection 94.2(2) deems the taxpayer to own shares of the capital stock of the CFA and provides rules for determining the taxpayer's participating percentage of those shares;
- subsection 94.2(3) allows the taxpayer an offsetting deduction to the extent that a source of income to the trust that is included in the trust's foreign accrual property income ("FAPI") for a year is also included in the part of the trust's income for that year that is included in the taxpayer's income under subsection 104(13) — in these circumstances, the taxpayer may reduce the taxpayer's subsection 91(1) income inclusion (otherwise determined) by the amount determined under subsection 94.2(3); and
- the Minister may demand additional information from the taxpayer to determine the fair market value of interests in the trust and, if the information is not received in a timely manner, the fair market value of the interests is deemed to be the fair market value as reasonably determined by the Minister having regard to certain available information.

Unlike the income computation of a taxpayer holding shares in a foreign corporation where the income inclusion is computed on a share by share basis, the amount to be included in the income of a taxpayer holding an interest in a foreign trust is based on the taxpayer's participating percentage in the trust, aggregating all of the taxpayer's interests in the trust. This difference is required because not all interests in a trust are segregated into separate securities (i.e., units or "shares").

Subsection 94.2(1) also applies for the purpose of section 233.4, thus ensuring that the reporting requirements in respect of foreign affiliates apply in respect of non-resident trusts that are foreign affiliates because of section 94.2.

Section 94.2 will not apply to a Canadian resident beneficiary under a trust — even where all interests in the trust are specified fixed interests — where there is no connected contributor to the trust (i.e., in which circumstances the beneficiary would not be a "resident beneficiary").

The definitions in subsection 94(1), and the application rules in subsection 94(2), apply for purposes of section 94.2. Of particular note are the definitions "beneficiary", "contribution", "exempt foreign trust", "resident beneficiary", "restricted property" and "specified fixed interest", and the extended contribution rules in paragraphs 94(2)(c) and (n) to (u).

New section 94.2 applies to taxation years that end after March 4, 2010. However, if new subsection 94(3) applies to a trust (either because of the general application of that provision for the 2007 to 2010 taxation years, or because of a valid election by the trust under the coming-into-force provision for new section 94) for a taxation year that ends before March 5, 2010, section 94.2 will apply — by preserving as a transitional section 94.2 the contents of previously enacted paragraphs 94(1)(a), (b) and (d) and subsection 94(4) — to each beneficiary under the trust for a taxation year of the beneficiary in which that earlier taxation year of the trust ends.

Definitions [s. 94.2]: "amount" — 248(1); "arm's length" — 251(1); "beneficiary" — 248(25); "beneficiary's year" — 94.2(3); "controlled foreign affiliate" — 94.2(1), 95(1), 248(1); "exempt foreign trust" — 94(1); "foreign accrual property income" — 95(1); "Minister", "person", "property" — 248(1); "resident" — 250; "resident beneficiary", "restricted property" — 94(1); "share" — 248(1); "specified fixed interest" — 94(1); "taxation year" — 95(1), 249; "taxpayer" — 248(1); "trust" — 104(1), 248(1), (3); "trust's year" — 94.2(3); "written" — Interpretation Act 35(1)"writing".

95. (1) Definitions for this subdivision — In this subdivision,

"active business" of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer means any business carried on by the foreign affiliate other than

(a) an investment business carried on by the foreign affiliate,

(b) a business that is deemed by subsection (2) to be a business other than an active business carried on by the foreign affiliate, or

(c) a non-qualifying business of the foreign affiliate;

Related Provisions: 95(1)"income from an active business" — What income included; 248(1) — Meanings of "active business" and "business".

History: The definition "active business" in subsec. 95(1) amended by 2007, c. 35, subsec. 26(1), applicable as described in the History at the end of s. 95. The definition formerly read:

> "active business" of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer means any business carried on by the affiliate other than
> (a) an investment business carried on by the affiliate, or
> (b) a business that is deemed by subsection (2) to be a business other than an active business carried on by the affiliate;

The definition "active business" added to subsec. 95(1) by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 46(3), applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates of taxpayers that begin after 1994 except that, where there has been a change in the taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, the new definition applies to taxation years of such foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that end after 1994, unless

(a) such foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation; or

(b) the first taxation year of such foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time that that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation of such foreign affiliate.

"antecedent corporation" of a particular corporation means

(a) a predecessor corporation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1)) in respect of an amalgamation to which subsection 87(11) applied and by which the particular corporation was formed,

(b) a predecessor corporation (within the meaning of subsection 87(1)) of the corporation (referred to in this definition as the "first amalco") that was formed on an amalgamation of the predecessor corporation and another corporation, where

(i) shares of the capital stock of the predecessor corporation that were not owned by the other corporation, or by a corporation of which the other corporation is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation, were exchanged on the amalgamation for shares of the capital stock of the first amalco that were, during the series of transactions or events that includes the amalgamation, redeemed, acquired or cancelled by the first amalco for money,

(ii) the first amalco was a predecessor corporation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1)) in respect of an amalgamation to which subsection 87(11) applied and by which the particular corporation was formed, and

(iii) the amalgamation referred to in subparagraph (i) occurred in a series of transactions or events that included the amalgamation referred to in subparagraph (ii),

(c) a corporation that was wound-up into the particular corporation in a winding-up to which subsection 88(1) applied, or

(d) an antecedent corporation of an antecedent corporation of the particular corporation;

Related Provisions: 248(10) — Series of transactions or events.

History: The definition "antecedent corporation" in subsec. 95(1) added by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 25(1), applicable to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after October 2, 2007. However,

> [2009, c. 2, para. 25(6)(c)] if the taxpayer elects in writing in respect of all of its foreign affiliates and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's "election day", the amendment also applies to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that begin before October 2, 2007 and after the date chosen by the taxpayer under paragraph (d) below; and
> (d) to be valid, an election must include the identification by the taxpayer of its choice of one of the following dates:
> (i) December 31, 1994,
> (ii) December 20, 2002, or
> (iii) February 27, 2004.

For purposes of the above [and for new 95(1)"calculating currency", "designated acquired corporation", "specified person or partnership", "specified predecessor corporation", 95(2)(f)-(f.15) and 95(2.6)], the taxpayer's "election day" is the later of the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which this amendment is assented to, and the day that is one year after that day.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5), any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take into account this amendment.

"calculating currency" for a taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer means

(a) the currency of the country in which the foreign affiliate is resident at the end of the taxation year, or

(b) any currency that the taxpayer demonstrates to be reasonable in the circumstances;

Related Provisions: 261 — Functional currency reporting.

History: The definition "calculating currency" in subsec. 95(1) added by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 25(1), applicable on the same basis as 95(1)"antecedent corporation".

"controlled foreign affiliate", at any time, of a taxpayer resident in Canada, means

(a) a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that is, at that time, controlled by the taxpayer, or

(b) a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that would, at that time, be controlled by the taxpayer if the taxpayer owned

(i) all of the shares of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate that are owned at that time by the taxpayer,

(ii) all of the shares of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate that are owned at that time by persons who do not deal at arm's length with the taxpayer,

(iii) all of the shares of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate that are owned at that time by the persons (each of whom is referred to in this definition as a "relevant Canadian shareholder"), in any set of persons not exceeding four (which set of persons shall be determined without reference to the existence of or the absence of any relationship, connection or action in concert between those persons), who

(A) are resident in Canada,

(B) are not the taxpayer or a person described in subparagraph (ii), and

(C) own, at that time, shares of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate, and

(iv) all of the shares of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate that are owned at that time by persons who do not deal at arm's length with any relevant Canadian shareholder;

Related Provisions: 17(15)"controlled foreign affiliate" — Application of definition to loan by corporation to non-resident; 94.2(1) — Non-resident trust deemed to be controlled foreign affiliate for certain purposes; 94(3)(a)(x) [proposed] — Application to trust deemed resident in Canada; 95(2.01), (2.02) — Shares held through holding companies, partnerships and trusts; 128.1(1)(d) — Foreign affiliate becoming resident in Canada deemed to have been controlled foreign affiliate; 233.4(4) — Reporting requirements; 248(1)"controlled foreign affiliate" — Definition applies to entire Act; 256(6), (6.1) — Meaning of "controlled"; Canada-U.S. Tax Treaty:Art. XXIX:5(a) — U.S. "S" corporation may be deemed to be CFA.

History: The definition "controlled foreign affiliate" in subsec. 95(1) amended by 2007, c. 35, subsec. 26(1), applicable as described in the History at the end of s. 95. The definition formerly read:

"controlled foreign affiliate", at any time, of a taxpayer resident in Canada means a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that was, at that time, controlled by

(a) the taxpayer,

(b) the taxpayer and not more than four other persons resident in Canada,

(c) not more than 4 persons resident in Canada, other than the taxpayer,

(d) a person or persons with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length, or

(e) the taxpayer and a person or persons with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length;

Paras. (c) to (e) of "controlled foreign affiliate" in subsec. 95(1) substituted for para. (c) by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 71(1), applicable to taxation years commencing after July 13, 1990. Para. (c) formerly read:

(c) a related group of which the taxpayer was a member;

"designated acquired corporation" of a taxpayer means a particular antecedent corporation of the taxpayer if

(a) the taxpayer or another antecedent corporation of the taxpayer acquired control of

(i) the particular antecedent corporation, or

(ii) a corporation (referred to in this definition as a "successor corporation") of which the particular antecedent corporation is an antecedent corporation, and

(b) immediately before the acquisition of control or a series of transactions or events that includes the acquisition of control, the taxpayer, the other antecedent corporation or a corporation resident in Canada of which the taxpayer or the other antecedent corporation is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation, as the case may be, dealt at arm's length (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) with the particular antecedent corporation or the successor corporation, as the case may be;

Related Provisions: 248(10) — Series of transactions or events.

History: The definition "designated acquired corporation" in subsec. 95(1) added by 2009, c. 2, subsec. 25(1), applicable on the same basis as 95(1)"antecedent corporation".

Proposed Addition — 95(1)"designated liquidation and dissolution"

"designated liquidation and dissolution", of a foreign affiliate (referred to in this definition as the "disposing affiliate") of a taxpayer, means a liquidation and dissolution of the disposing affiliate in respect of which

(a) the taxpayer had, immediately before the time of the earliest distribution of property by the disposing affiliate in the course of the liquidation and dissolution, a surplus entitlement percentage in respect of the disposing affiliate of not less than 90%,

(b) both

(i) the percentage determined by the following formula is greater than or equal to 90%:

A/B

A is the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the time at which it is distributed, of a property that is distributed by the disposing affiliate, in respect of shares of the capital stock of the disposing affiliate, in the course of the liquidation and dissolution to one particular shareholder of the disposing affiliate that was, immediately before the time of the distribution, a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer

exceeds

(B) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount owing (other than an unpaid dividend) by, or an obligation of, the disposing affiliate that was assumed or cancelled by the particular shareholder in consideration for a property referred to in clause (A), and

B is the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at the time at which it is distributed, of a property that is distributed by the disposing affiliate, in respect of shares of the capital stock of the disposing affiliate, to a shareholder of the disposing affiliate in the course of the liquidation and dissolution

(B) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount owing (other than an unpaid dividend) by, or an obligation of, the disposing affiliate that was assumed or cancelled by a shareholder of the disposing affiliate in consideration for a property referred to in clause (A), and

(ii) at the time of each distribution of property by the disposing affiliate in the course of the liquidation and dissolution in respect of shares of the capital stock of the disposing affiliate, the particular shareholder holds shares of that capital stock that would, if an annual general meeting of the shareholders of the disposing affiliate were held at that time, entitle it to 90% or more of the votes that could be cast under all circumstances at the meeting, or
